PREFACE.

In presenting this Digest to the Profession and to the Public, the Compilers venture to hope that they have, in some measure, supplied a long-felt want.

It will be seen that the book follows very closely on the lines of "Fisher's Digest," although in some parts of the work, such as "Land Acts," "Lunatic," "Mining," "Transfer of Land," and "Justices of the Peace," the headings have been arranged according to the points decided, and to the arrangement and subdivision of the Statutes affecting such subjects. The heading, "Practice and Pleading," includes many cases which are not so useful under the Judicature Act of 1883, and Rules, as under the old system; but the Compilers have felt it their duty to make the book what it professes to be, viz., a Digest of all the cases; and they venture to hope that they have kept the cases decided under the different systems perfectly distinct, and to think that points of practice and pleading decided under the old system will still, in many instances, be found useful. As to cases decided under Statutes which have been repealed or re-enacted, small footnotes have, in most instances, been inserted, to draw attention to the present Legislation on the various subjects.

The frequent use of cross references may be considered rather cumbrous and undesirable, but the Compilers have found by actual test that different persons will look under different headings for the same information; and they must give as their reason for filling up so much of the work with cross references—a wish to accommodate, as far as possible, all who may refer to it. Great inconvenience has been occasioned by the inability of the printers to keep set up more than two or three sheets at one time. This has in nearly every instance prevented a reference to the column in the cross reference, when the abstract of the case itself has come in a later part of the work than the reference. In several instances, too, the case itself has after some consideration been put under a different sub-heading from that fixed at the time of the reference; for this reason indulgence must be asked for the large number of corrigenda which relate, as will be seen, almost exclusively to cross references. Attention is directed to the Addenda, where a few cases and cross references, inadvertently omitted from the body of the work, will be found.

The Compilers believe that the gentlemen connected with the various Reports digested will have no reason to complain of any unfair use of head-notes, for in every instance an endeavour has been made to obtain the abstract of the case without reference to the head-note.

Grateful acknowledgment is made of the invaluable suggestions offered to the Compilers by several members of the Profession, and by Mr. Schutte, the respected Librarian of the Supreme Court. It cannot be hoped that the arrangement of the work will be found perfect; but it is hoped that, as a reward for long and arduous labour, the work will be found generally useful.

"Abattoirs Stat." No. 356, Secs. 7, 8, 27, 28, 41—Dues.] — L. was sued in the Police Court, Geelong, by T., the Town Inspector for Geelong, for dues on the slaughtered cattle in a slaughter-house owned by him, within a mile of Geelong. The Geelong Abattoirs were leased to one W. Held, that under Sec. 41, T. and not W. was the proper person to sue; that in Sec. 7 the words "and in every such last mentioned, &c.," should be read "but every such last mentioned, &c.;" and that L. was liable to pay the dues to the Town Council of Geelong. Lowe v. Tweedale, 3 V.R. (L.,) 225; 3 A.J.R. 110.

Being in possession of a Skin with Defaced Brand —"Abattoirs Statute," Ssc. 16.]—The "brand" mentioned in Sec. 36 of the "Abattoirs Statute," which section imposes a penalty upon any one having in his possession a skin from which the brand has been defaced, is a fire-brand upon the skin itself, and not a mere surface brand upon the wool. *Smith v. 1. GENERAL PRINCIPLES AND WHO MAY BE COMPELLED TO ACCOUNT.

E., M., and L. entered into a Government Railway Contract. In this L. acted as a trustee for R. G., N. G., and J. W. By articles of partnership L. was as such trustee to receive $\frac{1}{4}$ of the entire profits, E. and M. each $\frac{1}{10}$. By Indenture R. G., N. G., and J. W., assigned their joint and several estate to trustees upon trust for their creditors. By deed, March, 1860, executed between E., M., and L., R. G., N. G., and J. W. and their trustees, W. W. and the Bank of N. S. W, the partnership between E., M., and L., was dissolved, and a fresh partnership established between W. W. and L., in which L. represented N. G., R. G., J. W., and their trustees, and certain funds were assigned to the trustees for payment of certain scheduled debts; and it was provided that L. should give to E. and M. respectively, bonds conditioned for payment of a sum of money equal to $\frac{1}{10}$ of net profits of the contract within three months after the completion of the contract, and that the completion of the contract meant the time when certain retained percentages should become payable by Government, i.e., twelve months after the Railway was opened for traffic. By deed, July, 1861, between same parties, J. W. was to take L's. place in the partnership of W. W. and L., and J. W., as a personal liability of his own, but not so as to render other parties liable or to interfere with existing liabilities, was to give the bonds mentioned in Indenture, March, 1860. The bonds given by L. were given up by E. and M. and cancelled. The Railway was opened 1st April, 1862. On 6th December, 1862, E. and M. filed bill against R. G., N. G., J. W., their trustees, and W. W., praying for an account, for a declaration that certain entries and charges in partnership books were improperly entered and charged, and certain bills of exchange wrongfully accepted, and certain moneys wrongfully applied. Held that bill was filed before time had arrived entitling plaintiff to an account; that the alleged improper entries and charges, acceptance of bills and misapplication of moneys, could have no effect in the only account in which the plaintiff was entitled, viz.:—an account of the entire profits of the contract, deducting outlay from receipts; that plaintiff was entitled to an account against J. W. only, and that the accounts in that case would be of such a complicated nature that it was a fit subject for an account in Equity. Reference to Master to take an account of the net profits. Evans v. Guthridge, 2 W. and W. (E.,) 83.

Sale of Wool—Release of Debt.]—Defendants advanced to plaintiffs a sum of £694 18s. 9d. on a shipment of wool to England. After the advance plaintiffs found it necessary to call a meeting of their creditors. A composition of 6s. 8d. in the pound was offered, but ultimately the creditors, including the defendants, consented to release their debts on payment of 10s. in the pound, the defendants being creditors for about £600, besides the £694 18s. 9d. advance, and also lending a sum to enable them to pay the composition to the other creditors. The wool shipped had been sold, and, as plaintiffs believed, had realised a large profit over their debt to the defendants. They therefore sought for an account. The defence was that the defendants obtained the wool not merely as security, but that it had been actually assigned to them. There was some evidence of such an arrangement, but not enough to prove a concluded bargain to that effect. Accounts ordered—the defendants to be charged with interest upon the balance in their hands after satisfaction of the sum of £694 18s. 9d., at the same rate as they were entitled to interest upon such sum. Thomas v. Goldsborough, 1 A.J.R. 113.

2. REOPENING SETTLED ACCOUNTS.

Upon what Terms granted.]—Where a defendant through poverty is unable to attend in the Master's office when accounts are taken against him, this is no ground for permitting him to reopen those accounts, and if relief be given him it will only be upon payment both of the costs of the account and of the application. Kendell v. Thomson, 1 W.W. and A'B. (E.,) 141.

What are, and what are not, Settled Accounts—Course of Dealing between Trustees and their Agent.]—A testator, after expressing his confidence in M., directed his trustees to employ him as their agent and solicitor. M. was so employed, and furnished accounts from time to time to the acting trustee, including charges for commission as agent, and costs as solicitor. The costs were taxed exparte, and allowed him in account without investigation. In 1867, at the instance of a cestui que trust objecting to M.'s account, an order for re-taxation was obtained, and had been partly acted upon, when M. died. A suit was instituted in 1869, against M.'s administrator, seeking an account of his receipts. Held, that the course of dealing did not amount to a conclusive settlement of accounts, that the recommendatory words in the will were material in considering the effect of such dealing as to such settlement, and account directed, limited by consent to items for costs. Phelan v. Macoboy, 1 V.R. (E.,) 85; 1 A.J.R., 3. Confirmed on appeal: sub nom. Macoboy v. Phelan, 1 A.J.R. 52.

Partnership—Ship.]—Plaintiff and defendant were partners in a ship called the "T." The "T." was lost and insurance moneys recovered; the plaintiff and defendant then purchased the "R. P.," plaintiff advancing most of the money and defendant being credited with a sum of £537 due to him from former transaction and with £18 a month as wages. The "R. P." made several voyages, and accounts to December, 1869, were made up, by which it appeared that defendant was credited with £1068. The plaintiff then advanced nearly £2000 for repairs and outfit, and ship made several voyages at great profit as plaintiff alleged, until July, 1871, when she was sold for £2500. £1831 of this was remitted to the plaintiff for purchase-money and £420 for profits, defendant claiming to retain a large sum as his own. Bill by plaintiff for accounts. Defendant in answer denied that he was part owner of the "R. P.," and therefore not liable for losses, and that his wages were to be paid him irrespective of losses. and he alleged that accounts were signed by him without his understanding them, and claimed a re-opening of accounts as to the "T." Held, that the former accounts having been settled could not be re-opened, and account decreed of receipts and disbursements by defendant, giving him credit only for payments actually made, and account of profits. Smith v. Knarston, 3 A.J.R. 94.

3. Directing Accounts to be Taken.

Simple Account within Rule 19 of Cap. VI. of Supreme Court Rules]—T. and S. dissolved partnership, and referred differences to arbitration. The arbitrator employed an accountant, who struck a balance, to which the parties did not object, but no award was made. T. and S. jointly deposited with a bank an acceptance in favour of the firm for a debt owing at the dissolution. After dissolution T. renewed the acceptance without consulting S. T. then discounted the whole acceptance and left the colony. S. assigned his interest in the acceptance to a third person. The person to whom T. had discounted the acceptance sued the acceptor when the acceptance was overdue. S. filed a bill against T. and the person to whom he had discounted the acceptance, and the acceptor was restrained from paying to such person more than half the acceptance, and the acceptor accordingly paid half to him and half to S.'s assignee. T. was never served with the bill in this suit. T. on his return filed a bill against S. and his assignee, praying an account of the partnership at its dissolution, and that if S. or his assignee had received more than was due to S. of the partnership assets, he or his assignee should be directed to pay to T. what should be found due. Evidence was given of the balance struck by the accountant. Held, that T. was not estopped by the decree in the previous suit, and that the matter was one of "simple account" within Rule 19 of Cap vi. of the Supreme Court Rules, and decree made in favour of T. without a reference. On appeal, Held, that Rule 19 contemplated the case of an ordinary bill for account; that to bring a case within this Rule a special prayer in the bill is not necessary, though the proceedings may, if the plaintiff choose, be framed to meet the case, and appeal dismissed. Taylor v. Southwood, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 29.

Under Supreme Court Rules, Cap. vi., Rule 19, an account was taken at the hearing of a suit for redemption. Bulling v. Bryant, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 121.

Supreme Court Rules, Cap. VI., Rule 19.]—Where the evidence was unsatisfactory and by no means conclusive, and not unlikely to be, at all events, to a certain extent, rebutted, a decree for a specific sum under the Supreme Court Rules, in place of a decree for an account, should not be made. Tuckett v. Alexander, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 87, 94.

Quære, Whether Rule 19, Cap. 6, of the Supreme Court Rules, should be held to apply to the case of a Defendant who has not defended the suit; as this point was overlooked, and not argued, in Taylor v. Southwood, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 29.—Ibid.

See S.C. UNDER INSOLVENCY—FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCE.

4. Practice.

Co-defendants not interested in accounts which only affect one defendant—Parties—Costs.]—Where a plaintiff in a suit, the main object of which was accounts, has no rights as to account except against one defendant, the other parties should be kept before the Court, so that the account may determine that defendant's rights against them for any sums he may have to pay to the plaintiff and also to give him facilities for access to books and papers, but plaintiff was made to pay costs of all parties defending up to and inclusive of hearing. Evans v. Guthridge, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 83.

"Four-day Order" for Filing.—Where a defendant in a suit for an account, failed to bring in his accounts in the Master's office, within the time limited for that purpose by the Master, the Court, on the ex parte application of the Plaintiff, granted a "four-day order" for the filing by the defendant of his accounts. Cronan v. Edwards, 5 W. W. & A'B. (E.) 15.

In Master's Office—Right of cestuisque trust to.—In a suit by cestuisque trusts against trustees, the cestuisque trusts are entitled to have accounts taken in the Master's Office, although they were furnished with accounts before the summons was issued, and the answer had accounts attached to it. Snaith v. Dove, 4 A.J.R., 140.

"Statute of Evidence" No. 197, Secs. 7, 8, 10—Affidavits—Appeal.]—Before making an order under Act No. 197, Secs. 7 and 8, which require that accounts should be filed, the Master-in-Equity should, before directing accounts to be filed, give the respondent an opportunity of answering, by way of affidavit, or viva voce evidence, the statements in the affidavit on which the summons was based. Since the Act does not indicate the manner of evidence in the office, affidavits are not the most fitting evidence before the Master. Affidavits in support of a summons under Sec. 7 should be explicit, referring to defects in certain accounts presented, and showing definitely a demand for proper accounts and a refusal. An appeal will lie against an order of the Master under Sec. 7, rejecting viva voce evidence tendered in answer to affidavits on which summons was based, and directing accounts to be filed. In re Wharton, ex parte Smith, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 260.

Cost of Accounts—When Plaintiff in Error.]—On taking accounts in a suit, it was found that the defendant was right as to the amount due. Held, that the plaintiff should not have the costs of taking the accounts. McPherson v. Hunter, 2 A.J.R., 36.

Of taking Accounts—Finding in Defendant's favour—Accounts necessitated by Defendant's conduct.]—When the result of taking accounts in the Master's office in a partnership suit, was substantially in the defendant's favour, but the proceeding had been necessary on account of conflicting statements by him as to the amount due (the matter being within his knowledge.) Held, that the costs thereof were properly imposed upon him. James v. Greenwood, 2 A.J.R., 41.

Of Decree—When Defendant made no Tender of Sum Due.]—When accounts had been taken, and it was found that the defendant was right as to the sum really due, but he made no tender of that sum, he was not allowed the costs of the decree. McPherson v. Hunter, 2 A.J.R., 36.

In taking accounts under a decree it is entirely for the chief clerk to direct what parties shall bring in accounts; Molesworth, J., refused to interfere with his discretion in this respect. Bell v. Clarke, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 283, 305; 6 A.L.T., 127.

ACT OF GOD.

What is not.]—See Davis v. Bull, post under MINING.—Claim.

When a Defence.]—Where the law creates a duty or charge, and the person is unable to perform it by reason of the Act of God, he is excused from performance; but if a person contracts to do a certain thing, and it becomes impossible by reason of the Act of God, he may be liable in damages for its non-performance. Connor v. Spence, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 243, 259.

If a ship owner enter into a special contract to carry goods in a particular ship, and the ship be damaged by the Act of God, but the damage done is such that she could be made capable of resuming the voyage, though, from an economical point of view it might be unwise to do so, the ship owner is liable in damages for non-performance of his contract, though semble that if the ship or the goods were totally destroyed by the Act of God the ship owner would not be liable for such non-performance. Ibid.

ACTION.

1. GENERALLY.

When maintainable.]—No action lies on an Order or Rule of Court to pay money. Gregory v. King, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 92.

Assumpsit—Against heir on whom lands have descended for money payable as price of goods sold and delivered to ancestor.]—Where A. was indebted to plaintiffs for money payable as price of goods sold and delivered to A., and A.'s lands descended on B. his heir. Held that assumpsit would lie against B. for such amount due on an account stated between plaintiffs and A. in his lifetime. M'Ewan v. Moncur, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 273.

Cause of Action — Action when maintainable.] M., a sharebroker, declared against B. and C., sharebrokers, to recover damages for that the defendants conspired to dissolve the Stock Exchange, of which plaintiff and defendants were members, "for the purpose of injuring the plaintiff of his just rights," and for that "in furtherance of the said conspiracy, they said to W. sharebroker, these words—'Do you know that fellow?" (meaning the plaintiff,) 'Beware of him; he has given a lot of trouble' (meaning he was not fit to be trusted.") Held on demurrer that the declaration disclosed no cause of action. Moorhead v. Brown, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 143.

Against whom maintainable.—Detention of Ship.] —H sold a ship to W. Before the sale the master had been employed by H., and after the sale by W. The sale was effected in the China Seas by an agreement entered into by the master in pursuance of an authority given by H, and by the agreement it was stipulated that after the sale the vessel was to be sailed as W.'s, though still registered in the name of H., and so to continue till the whole of the purchase money was paid. After the sale the master was employed by W., and while in such employ he brought the vessel to Sydney; but, on receiving a message from H., whom he had appointed agent of the vessel, brought the vessel to Melbourne, and in consequence W. lost the opportunity of obtaining valuable freight in China. W. sued H. for detention. Held, that though H. might have been guilty of improper conduct in offering the advice he did to the master, the latter was a free agent, in W.'s employ, and could have adopted or rejected the advice as he saw fit; and that no action for detention would lie against H. Wilson v Holmes. 1 V.R. (L.,) 53: 1 A.J.R., 117.

Money Recovered in—What is.]—Money paid between the parties in settlement of an action, is not money "recovered" in the action; and costs are part of the damages recovered. Day v. Union G. M. Coy., 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 11.

When Maintainable.]—Where the cause of action is the same, the plaintiff cannot sue in a second action in a Court of Law for that which he had the opportunity of recovering, and which, but for his own fault, he might have recovered in a former action; and, e converso, in matters arising out of contract, the cause of action being the same, and not the subject of cross action or set-off, a defendant who has had an opportunity given him to raise and has passed over a substantial ground of defence in an action brought against him, is concluded by the judgment in that action, and cannot make the omitted ground of defence the subject of an independent action; and this principle is not affected by the fact that the two actions were brought in separate Courts, and that the plaintiff in the second action seeks to recover unliquidated damages. Hurst v. Bank of Australasia, 2 V.R. (L.,) 217; 2 A.J.R., 123.

Who may Maintain.]—Semble, that the person named by an Act of Parliament as the person to whom moneys are to be paid, is the proper person to sue in an action to recover such moneys. Roebuck v. Mayor &c., of Geelong West, 2 V L.R. (L.,) 189, 194.

On Covenant to Pay—Demand.]—An action may be maintained on a covenant to pay a sum certain on demand, without any previous demand. Nicholson v. Merry, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 65.

Actionable Wrong—Immorality.]—The owner of a boarding house sued a boarder for damages arising from loss of boarders through defendant's committing adultery in such boarding house. Judgment for defendant, there being no appearance for plaintiff. Hill v Power, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 400; 1 A.L.T., 169.

When maintainable — Building contract — Satisfaction of Employer — Question for Jury.] — Defendant, a contractor for making a tank and well, invited tenders for the brickwork and puddling of a tank, and accepted the plaintiff's tender for the brickwork only (the puddling being left for the contractor to do himself.) The contract and specification provided that "during the building of brickwork and erection of tank, the contractor shall keep the tank clear of water, and shall be responsible for tank and well being water-tight;" the work was also to be done in a substantial manner, to the satisfaction of the defendant. Held that to justify a verdict for the plaintiff, the jury must be satisfied on three points:—That the parties had entered into the contract alleged; that the work had been duly executed in conformity therewith; and that the defendant, as a reasonable person, ought to have been satisfied with that execution. Smith v. Sadler, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 5.

When maintainable—Debt arising out of a felony—Duty to prosecute.]—Semble, that where money has been stolen, it is not the duty of the person from whom it is stolen to take criminal proceedings before taking civil proceedings to recover the money. Foster v. Green, 3 A.L.T., 97.

2. Notice of.

"Customs Act 1857" No. 13, Sec. 227.]—Notice of action under Sec. 227 of Act No. 13 must be proved in an action against a customs officer for detinue and trover of goods which he would not deliver up until duties imposed only by resolution of the Legislative Assembly had been paid, and for refusing to sign a "free entry" of such goods unless the duties were paid, where the duties were demanded by the defendant virtute officii, and he had a bonâ fide belief that he was doing his duty. The duty of deciding as to the existence and honesty o the belief devolves on the Court and not on the jury. Stevenson v. Tyler, 2. W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 179.

1. GENERAL PRINCIPLES AND CONSTRUCTION OF ADMINISTRATION ACTS.

Administration Act 1872, Sec. 14—Does not Apply to Estates of Persons Dying before its Date.]—On a rule nisi for a mandamus to compel the Registrar of Titles to register as proprietors of certain land executors, who were also devisees in trust under a will made in 1861, but not proved till 1872, Held that Sec. 14 of the "Administration Act 1872," which did not come into operation till 1873, did not apply to such a case, but only to the case of persons dying after the Act came into operation, and rule nisi discharged. Regina v. The Registrar of Titles ex parte Grice, 4 A.J.R., 92.

Under Intestates' Real Estate Act, Secs. 4, 6—Effect on Conveyance made Previously to Rule to Administer.]—By the operation of Sec. 6 of the "Intestates' Real Estate Act" No. 230, under which section the title of the person to whom a rule to administer real estate of an intestate has been granted under Sec. 4 is referred back to the time of the death, a conveyance of the land made by the heir-at-law of the intestate previously to the obtaining the rule to administer is nullified. Slack v. Winder, 4 A.J.R., 188.

Intestatee' Act (No. 230,) Sec. 4—Property partly Disposed of by Will—No Next of Kin.]—A testator left a will dated August, 1874, by which he made a specific devise and bequest to his wife for life, and left the rest of his property to his trustees and executors upon trust for sale (postponing the sale of that portion in which widow had a life estate till after her death) but making no farther disposition of the residue. The trustees realised the whole of the estate, the sale of which was not postponed, and held the proceeds. The testator left a widow but no next of kin. Held on information that the widow was entitled to a moiety of the entire residue besides her life estate specifically devised and bequeathed, and that as to other moiety the Crown was entitled to what represented personal estate, and the trustees to what represented converted real estate and unconverted real estate subject to widow's life estate. Attorney-General v. McPherson, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 270.

Act No. 427, Sec. 6.]—The Act is not retrospective, so that the administrator of an intestate who died before the Act came into force, and before a Crown grant was issued in respect of such land, cannot maintain ejectment. Edmondson v. Macan, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 422.

Administration Act 1872 (No. 427.) Sec. 9—Sale after Payment of Debts.]—Where real property is distributable under Act No. 427, Sec. 9, and all the debts have been paid, if all parties interested consent to a sale, the Court will decree the executor to sell and divide the proceeds, but if one party insist on a division of the real estate quâ real estate the executor must divide it accordingly. Dodgson v Clare, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 137.

Act No. 230, Sec. 4.]—A. died intestate in 1853, leaving W. his heir. W. died intestate in 1868, and a rule to administer A.'s estate was obtained in 1878. Held that A.'s real estate was distributable as to beneficial ownership under Act No. 230 between the widow and next of kin of A. Archibald v. Archibald, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 180.

Mortgagees—5 Vict., No. 17.]—Where during the pendency of a creditor's suit, instituted by mortgagees against the heir and administratrix of an intestate, the administratrix sequestrated the estate, and the official assignee was substituted as a defendant instead of the administratrix. Held that there was nothing in the Act 5 Vict., No. 17, to take away the preference of the mortgagees as specialty creditors. Australian Trust Company v. Webster, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 148.

Simple and Specialty Creditors—Who are.]—Australian Trust Company v. Webster.—See under INSOLVENCY—JURISDICTION.

Estate overrun with Rabbits—Motion for leave to spend Money in exterminating them, out of Income and Annuity charged on Estate.]—P. was entitled to an annuity of £500 charged on the T. estate, which was devised by the will of the owner in fee in strict settlement subject to the annuity. The estate, a sheep-station, was infested with rabbits in such numbers that if they were not exterminated the estate would, in a few years, become unprofitable, or £10,000 would have to be spent in clearing it. Under these circumstances the executors of the will moved for leave to spend £1300 during the course of three years, to be taken half out of P.'s annuity, and half out of the income of the estate. Held that the Court could not make such order. Brown v. Abbott, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 129.

Semble, that if it were shown that the property would be totally destroyed if the money were not expended in exterminating the rabbits, the Court could order part of P.'s annuity to be applied in such extermination. Ibid.

For other cases see under DISTRIBUTIONS STATUTES OF.

2. SUITS AND ACTIONS FOR.

By Mortgagee—Legal and Equitable.]—Plaintiff was legal and equitable mortgagee respectively of different portions of real estate of a deceased intestate, and as such instituted a creditor's suit against the intestate's personal representative and infant co-heiresses. Decree made for an account of the mortgage debts respectively, interest and costs; on non-payment within three months, for a sale of the equitably mortgaged premises; infant defendants declared trustees for the purchaser, under the decree, and plaintiff directed to convey the equitably mortgaged lands to such purchaser, for the interest of the infants therein; the plaintiff within the term assigned to sell under the power of sale in the legal mortgage; and in case proceeds of all these sales insufficient to pay plaintiff's principal, interest, and costs, then general accounts directed of the intestate's real and personal estate. Collyer v. Corcoran, 1 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 16.

Plea of Sequestration of Estate by Administratrix.]—To an administration bill by a mortgage creditor on behalf of himself and all other creditors, against the administratrix and heir of an intestate, the administratrix pleaded that before suit instituted she had sequestrated the personal estate of the intestate, whereby all such personal estate became and was vested in the official assignee, and prayed to be dismissed from the suit. Held per Chapman, J., that as the whole estate passed out of her, she was no longer a necessary party; per the Full Court, that the plea was no answer to the bill, and that it must be overruled. Fairbairn v. Clarke, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 333.

Sale of Realty for payment of Debts.]—A testator died in 1867, leaving realty and personalty to trustees, who were also appointed executors, for the benefit of his wife and children; the personal estate was insufficient for payment of debts. In a friendly administration suit by beneficiaries a decree was made authorising money to be raised for payment of debts by mortgage of the real estate, leaving it to the Master's discretion to insert a power of sale or not. Stodart v. Stodart, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 59.

Advertisements for Next of Kin.]—In an administration suit advertisements for next of kin are not necessary when the next of kin can be otherwise ascertained. Certificates of births, deaths, and marriages are not necessary for proof of kindred which may be established by other evidence. Mulloy v. Mulloy, 1 V.R. (E.,) 167.

Interlocutory Application—For Sale of Real Estate.]—Where a motion was made by the plaintiff in an administration suit, for sale of the business of the intestate, and the land on which it was carried on, and the administratrix defendant objected to the sale and opposed the motion; although it was admitted that the sale would be beneficial, the motion was refused with costs. Graham v. Graham, 2 V.R. (E.,) 145; 2 A.J.R., 104.

Injunction and Receiver granted.]—An administratrix, upon obtaining administration, formed a partnership to carry on the intestate's business, and allowed the partners to exercise control over the assets employed in it. Shortly after obtaining administration, and without any necessity for sale, she advertised real estate to the value of about £13,000 for sale for cash. On bill by persons out of the colony alleging themselves to be the sons, and only next of kin, of the intestate, and that the defendant was not the widow of the intestate as she pretended to be, injunction granted ex parte to restrain sale and a receiver granted on motion. Graham v. Graham, 2 V.R. (E.,) 145; 2 A.J.R., 100.

Excess of Expenditure over Receipts of Estate—Refusal of Power to Raise Money, but Grant of Order to wind up.]—On further directions where it appeared that executors had properly incurred debts in managing the estate, the Court would not sanction the borrowing of a sum of £2500 to pay off existing debts, but granted an order to wind up the estate. Farrell v. Evans, 3 A.J.R., 71.

Motion for Direction of the Court Before Decree.]—An application by administrators after the institution of a suit respecting the property in their hands but before decree, for the direction of the Court as to the manner of investing the property will be refused. Attorney-General v. Huon, 4 A.J.R., 107.

Motion to Dismiss Bill—Costs.]—A creditor who held a current promissory note not due at institution of suit, but which was paid at maturity brought an administration suit which was registered as a lis pendens. Motion to dismiss bill refused because plaintiff was entitled to carry suit to a hearing to determine question of costs, and without costs because the lis pendens had been used vexatiously. O'Reilly v. Egan, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 1.

Priority of Suits—Creditor's Suit—Decree—Second Suit—Stay of Proceedings.]—It is generally a matter of course, where a decree in one administration suit has been obtained, to stay all others; and that, although the decree in the first suit may be collusive, in the sense of the executor having facilitated it; and there is no authority to show that the impugning a plaintiff's demand in a first suit, is a reason for letting a second proceed. Per Molesworth, J., Michaelis v. Cooney, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 63.

Blending of Realty and Personalty—Defendant occupying Realty a Trustee.]—The real and personal estate of a person dying in 1867, are so far blended as to liability and beneficial ownership that they should be included in one suit. On appeal affirmed, but an inquiry as to the title of certain real estate directed in the Master's office, it not being clear whether this land belonged to the deceased or to the defendant. Dryden v. Dryden, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 74. On appeal, Ibid, 153.

Bill for Administration—Equity Pleading Rules, No. 7.]—A bill for administration, under Rule 7 of the Equity Pleading Rules, should seek it generally, and not partially. Broomfield v. Summerfield, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 174.

Foreign Assets—Receiver Pending Taking of Accounts.]—A decree was made for administration against D., who was administrator in Victoria and Tasmania, and the accounts were proceeded with in the Master's office. Pending the accounts, the plaintiff moved for a receiver over the Tasmanian assets, on the grounds of inconsistencies in D.'s accounts, his incapacity to manage the property, and danger to the assets. Held that the Court had jurisdiction to make such an appointment; but motion refused on the ground of the difficulties that might arise therefrom, and the complexity that would be added thereby to the taking of the accounts. Dryden v. Dryden, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 202.

Person Not Heard of for Many Years—Inquiries by Whom to be Made.]—In a suit for execution of trusts of a will one of the beneficiaries had not been heard of since 1855. Inquiries were directed by advertising in newspapers circulating in the part of Scotland where he was born, such inquiries to be made by the administrator c.t.a., since plaintiffs in the suit were interested in preventing a discovery. Low v. Moule, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 10.

Plaintiff Ceasing to have any Interest in Suit—Stay of Proceedings—Further Prosecution of Suit by Persons found Entitled as Next of Kin but not Parties to Cause.]—The Attorney-General filed a Bill against defendants creditors who had obtained administration of an intestate's estate, claiming property on behalf of Crown and administrator. The Master in his report found that certain persons were entitled as next of kin, and thereupon the Attorney-General intimated he would not proceed farther in the suit. The Master (under Order 56 of Orders in Chancery, 1828) committed prosecution of the proceedings under the decree before him to the next of kin. Motion by defendants for stay of proceedings in Master's Office. Held that in order to enable next of kin to prosecute suit and have carriage of decree, a supplemental suit was not necessary; but such might be obtained by order upon motion, and motion for stay of proceedings refused. Subsequently an order was made upon motion giving the next of kin the carriage of the suit, but a motion for payment into Court of moneys in defendant's hands, before such order obtained was held to be irregular. Attorney-General v. Huon, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 119; 1 A.L.T., 26.

Payment out—Creditor's Suit.]—In a suit for administration by one creditor, no other creditors having proved, on motion for payment out of a sum of money in Master's report found as the balance after satisfying a secured creditor, order made, the executrix being through her contumacious conduct not entitled to her costs, upon terms of its concluding the suit. Martin v Keane, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 290; 1 A.L.T., 75.

Undefended Suit—Order for payment of Balance due.]—In an undefended suit by ten cestuisque trustent against the administrator and other cestuisque trustent, the Court made a decree without reference for the payment to them by the administrator of their share of the balance appearing by the accounts filed by him to be in his hands, and of their costs of suit, without prejudice to the rights of the other cestuisque trustent. Buggy v. Buggy, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 134.

Decree on further Directions—When made.]—Where in an administration suit it had been referred to the Master to inquire and report as to the estate of the deceased, and as to any outstanding debts and liabilities, and, on the suit coming on for further directions, the plaintiff asked for a decree in accordance with certain minutes of decree to which all the parties had consented, Held, per Molesworth, J., that when a decree is pronounced in such a suit it becomes the property of all the creditors, and not merely of the parties to the suit, and that the decree would not be granted as asked, unless the Master advertised for creditors and none appeared. Case to stand over, to allow the Master to make the inquiry. Orton v. Prentice, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 258.

Personal Representative must be a Party.]—The Court will not entertain an administration suit until there is a full personal representative before the Court, and the obtaining letters of administration without the letters being taken out does not constitute such a representative. McLachlan v. McCallum, 1 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 110.

Wherever the Court has to administer an estate and the plaintiff can raise a general administrator, a mere administrator ad litem is not sufficient. In the goods of Corcoran, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 117.

Persons claiming Adverse Title in a Chattel Real.]—In a suit against an administrator for the proceeds of a chattel real taken by him as the estate of the deceased, he cannot insist that a person, not a party, claimed that chattel real by adverse title, except perhaps to have some indemnity provided; and such person so claiming is not a necessary party. G. and M. were partners in a station property; it was agreed that M should buy G.'s interest for £500 cash and £2000 payable in bills, further secured by a mortgage from M. to G. of the whole. Some station agents advanced the £500, and took a mortgage over M.'s interest. G. died and his brother A. G. took out administration. A. G. died, and Mrs. A. (sister to G.) took out administration de bonis non to G. and administration to A. G. During the partnership G. and M. applied for a Crown Grant of a pre-emptive section of 640 acres; the money for this was found by the station agents, and included in their mortgage. M. became insolvent. Held in an administration suit against Mrs. A., that M.'s official assignee and A. G.'s heir, though they might claim some interest in the proceeds of the pre-emptive section received by A. G., were not necessary parties. Gordon v. Allan, 3 A.J.R., 95.

Who must be—Next of Kin.]—An administrator of real estate and one of the next of kin, brought a suit for administration against the administrator of the personal estate. Held that the next of kin were necessary parties, as the greater part of relief sought could only be obtained in a suit in which they were before the Court, and the plaintiff had a complete remedy at law as to partial relief sought. Dryden v. Dryden, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 4.

Mortgagee of Plaintiff.]—The plaintiff in an administration suit mortgaged his share of the estate. Held that the mortgagee was a necessary party. Cleary v. Macnamara, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 221.

Supreme Court Rules, Cap. V., Rule 7.]—Supreme Court Rules, Cap. V., Rule 7, by which certain members of a class may sue on behalf of themselves and others, does not include the case of a suit by one of the next-of-kin of an intestate against the administrator. Ibid.

Next of Kin.]—One of the next of kin of an intestate filed a bill for administration on behalf of himself and all others, the next of kin, and stated in his bill the names of the others, alleging some to be within, and some without the jurisdiction. Held that the other next-of-kin within the jurisdiction, and the representatives within the jurisdiction of deceased next-of-kin, were necessary parties. Ibid.

Executor not Proving.]—The executor named in a will, to whom leave is reserved but who does not prove the will, is not a necessary party to a suit to administer the trusts of the will. Dredge v. Matheson, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 266; 1 A.L.T., 73.

Residuary Legatee—Pecuniary Legatees—Supreme Court Rules, Cap. V., Rule 7.]—Suit by creditor of a residuary legatee against executors for administration and to enforce a charge on his share. Held pecuniary legatees under will were not necessary parties, being sufficiently represented by the executors, and that a contingent residuary legatee in remainder whose interest under will has been disposed of by a codicil is not a necessary party: Rule 7 of Cap. V., does not apply to assignees or mortgagees of legatees. Bank of New South Wales v. Strettle, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 293; 1 A.L.T., 83.

(c.) Costs.

In a creditor's administration suit an infant defendant who is in fact represented by a solicitor nominated by the plaintiff creditor is not allowed costs otherwise than between party and party. Colley v. Colley, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 111.

Specific Devisees—Deficient Fund.]—In a creditor's suit against trustees, executors, and specific devisees, where there was a deficient fund Held that the specific devisees only were entitled to costs as between party and party, the plaintiff, executors, and trustees being only entitled to costs as between solicitor and client. Dight v. Mackay, 6 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 163.

In What Cases—Exceptions to Report—Costs of Suit for Recovery of Title Deeds—Real and Personal Representatives—Costs Party and Party.]—In a suit by the real representative against the personal representative of an intestate for administration, plaintiff had excepted to Master's report on three points, the first being that the plaintiff's costs in an equity suit for the recovery of title deeds relating to intestate's property had not been allowed, this exception was overruled, the Court finding no evidence of the propriety of this suit; as to another exception it was allowed, and no order was made as to third. Held that plaintiff and defendant were each to abide their costs of exceptions; and as to the general costs of suit, (it appearing that each had made unfounded claims against the other as being entitled to distribution, that the defendant had made false statements of the state of the family in his affidavit to obtain administration, and had taken possession of property before obtaining administration, that the defendant had deferred the duty of realising and brought the case on to a second hearing) that each was entitled to costs out of the estate as between party and party only. Mulloy v. Mulloy, 3 A.J.R., 7.

Of Plaintiff going into Evidence.]—Suit by next of kin of an intestate for administration, and for accounts, the administrator having refused to account but having subsequently filed his accounts in the ecclesiastical jurisdiction and having by his answer submitted to account. The suit having gone on to evidence, Held at the hearing that if plaintiff had not gone into evidence the defendant would have been liable for costs up to the answer, but as plaintiff had gone into the evidence he was not entitled to his costs up to the hearing, but the whole costs must be reserved until after the taking of accounts. Maher v. O'Shea, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 136.

Foreign Assets and Administrator—Person seeking Administration.]—In a suit for administration, plaintiff, pending the taking of accounts in the Master's office, moved for a receiver over the foreign assets, alleging discrepancies in the accounts of D., who was administrator both in Victoria and Tasmania, his incapacity to manage the property, and danger to the assets. The motion was refused, but Held that since D. had not answered the allegations against him, he must abide his own costs, and that, although the plaintiff had failed in his motion, his costs must be costs in the cause, the application being properly brought for protection of the property. Dryden v. Dryden, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 202.

Of Plaintiff Beneficiaries.]—Where, in a suit for the administration of a testator's estate, by his beneficiaries against the representatives of his surviving trustee, the bill alleged improper investments, and non-investments of the estate, and the decree found that there had been such non-investments. Held that as no demand for accounts had been made from the surviving trustee, and the suit was amicably framed, and the bill did not pray for costs, the plaintiff should not be allowed costs of suit; that the surviving trustee having confused the affairs of the estate and occasioned the suit, no costs should be allowed his representatives. Sichel v O'Shanassy, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 250.

Costs of Obtaining Administration—Jurisdiction to direct Payment out of Estate.]—The Supreme Court, in its ecclesiastical jurisdiction, has jurisdiction to direct payment out of the estate of administrator's costs in obtaining administration. Where litigation occurred between the administrators and M., claiming under a will subsequently propounded, Held, it was the duty of the administrators to protect the property, and they were entitled to their costs of litigation with M., in opposing such will. Administrators are entitled to their costs of obtaining administration in priority out of the assets. Attorney-General v. Huon, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 30; 2 A.L.T., 130.

Plaintiff and Defendant each partly successful—Non-filing of Accounts by Administrator.]—In an administration suit the defendant, administrator of personalty, insisted upon the illegitimacy of the plaintiff. In the suit the plaintiff's legitimacy was established, and defendant proved his right to certain land, which right plaintiff denied. Held per Molesworth, J., that each was to abide his own costs down to hearing and proceedings in Master's office with reference to the land; per the Full Court, that defendant was entitled to receive out of estate his costs as to the proceedings with reference to the land and subsequent costs, and that plaintiff was entitled out of estate to the costs respecting the land. Dryden v. Dryden, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 166; 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 177 .

Where the defendant neglected to file accounts, and thereby in great measure occasioned the suit, Held that he should pay the costs of taking accounts in the suit. Ibid.

Of Executor behaving outrageously.]—Where an executor, a defendant in an administration suit, had executed a deed delegating all his powers to his co-executor, and subsequently revoked the deed and acted under the dictation of one of the cestuisque trustent, Held per Molesworth, J., that he was not entitled to his costs out of the estate, but should be left to abide his own. Leahy v. Lightfoot, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 344; 4 A.L.T., 109.

Costs out of the Estate—Executors allowing one Executor to Manage Estate and not filing Accounts.]—In an administration suit the bill alleged that the executors had allowed one of their number to manage the estate without interference by them; that he had mixed the moneys of the estate with his own money, and that as accounts had not been filed it was necessary to institute the suit. No loss had however been suffered by the estate, and the executors had received no allowance or commission for their expenses and trouble. Held that the executors should not be allowed their costs out of the estate. Semble that if they had applied for an allowance for expenses, &c., the Court would have allowed it. Butcher v. Martin, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 260; 6 A.L.T. 113.

General Rule—Exception.]—The general rule in administration suits is that the costs should come out of the estate; though there are some instances in which the costs will be restricted to some part of the estate. Where the costs of any special inquiry not for the benefit of all the parties are trifling, the Court will not depart from the general rule, but will order costs to be paid out of the whole of the estate. Pfeil v. Thorogood, 10 V.L R. (E.,) 117.

Executors Mismanaging Estate.]—Where executors, though not acting wilfully or perversely, had been guilty of great negligence through which loss resulted, and the persons interested in the estate brought a suit seeking to make them liable and for account. Held that the executors should pay the costs of the suit. Upon appeal by the executors, the decree was varied in one or two particulars, and by way of set-off the costs of the appeal were ordered to be paid by the respondents. Graham v. Gibson, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 43; 3 A.L.T., 106.

Person Submitting to be before the Court when there is a Doubt as to whether he is a Proper Party.]—In an administration suit, a defendant, as to whom there was some doubt whether he were a proper party, but who did not appeal from a decree keeping him before the Court, was not allowed his costs of suit. Ibid.

As between Solicitor and Client.]—In an administration suit the Court will not allow costs as between solicitor and client to all parties, but only to the trustees or executors, and not even to them, where the suit has been caused by their mismanagement of the estate. Fraser v. Cameron, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 202.

Interlineation in the jurat—Common Law Procedure Statute 1865, Sec. 379—Instruments and Securities Statute, Sec. 56.]—An affidavit filed under the "Instruments and Securities Statute," No. 204, Sec. 56, verifying the residence and occupation of the attesting witness to a bill of sale is not an affidavit "read or made use of in any matter depending in Court," within Sec. 379 of the "Common Law Procedure Statute, 1865," and so the fact that there is an interlineation or erasure in the jurat of such an affidavit will not render it invalid. Smith v. Martin, 3 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 35.

Erasure in jurat—No Evidence that it was made before Affidavit sworn.]—Where there was an erasure in the jurat and no evidence that it was made before the affidavit was sworn the Court declined to consider its contents. Regina v. Foster ex parte Molyneux, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 294; 3 A.L.T., 23.

2. FILING.

Time of.]—Affidavits upon a motion may be filed up to opening of motion, notwithstanding that motion has stood over on account of Court being unable to hear it on the day fixed in the notice. Adelaide Steamship Company v. Martin, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 45.

3. PRACTICE RELATING TO.

Using—After Decree—Costs.]—Affidavits made after decree may, in certain cases, be used on hearings subsequent to decree, as affecting the imposition of costs; e.g., to show that the amount had been tendered and refused. Where they merely allege that reasonable offers of compromise were not accepted, they should not influence the decision as to costs. Jamieson v. Johnson, 2 V.R. (E.,) 26; 2 A.J.R., 7.

Using—Filed after Motion.]—Answering affidavits filed after the opening of a motion for injunction cannot be read on the motion. Davis v. Wekey, 2 V.R. (E.,) 172.

Admissions—Statements contained in Affidavits.]—A bill set out statements made in affidavits sworn by the defendant in other judicial proceedings, and did not expressly negative their truth. Held that the truth of such statements was not to be taken as admitted for the purposes of the demurrer. Jardine v. Hoyt, 2 V.R. (E.,) 152; 2 A.J.R., 129.

Using.]—An affidavit containing an erasure not initialled by the Commissioner cannot be used in Court. Regina v. Templeton, ex parte Jones, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 24.

See S.P. as to Interlineation. Blamires v. Dunning, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 18.

But see S. P., Jansen v. Beaney, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 167, where it was Held that it is not absolutely necessary for an interlineation in the body of an affidavit to be initialled before being used in Court.

Interlineation — Initialling — Affidavit of Time when Interlineation was Made.]—It is not absolutely necessary that the Commissioner, before whom an affidavit to be used in a cause in Court was sworn, should initial an interlineation in the body of the affidavit, and in answer to a summons to set aside an affidavit on the ground that such an interlineation was not initialled by the Commissioner, an affidavit may be filed that such interlineation was not made after the affidavit was sworn. Jansen v. Beaney, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 167.

Affidavit sworn Abroad—Not Intituled—Defect how Cured.]—An affidavit sworn abroad before a Commissioner of the Supreme Court, verifying the execution of a power of attorney to a person to apply for letters of administration, but which affidavit is not intituled in any Court or matter, may be used, and the defect cured by making it an exhibit to a formal affidavit of the applicant under the power. In the Estate of Downing, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 49.

Taking Affidavit — Notary — Commissioner of Court.]—Where the execution of a power of attorney made in England was attested by a notary and not before a Commissioner of the Court for taking affidavits, the Court held that that was a matter which affected the Court only, and could be overlooked as a mere disrespect, and that the parties could not be affected by the irregularity. In re Chaplin, 1 A.L.T., 128.

Using with a View to Costs.]—On further directions an affidavit of facts occurring subsequent to the decree may be used on the question of costs Murphy v. Mitchell, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 140, 141; 2 A.L.T., 26.

1. Liability of Owner for Injuries by.

Vicious Bull—Negligence—Scienter.] — F., a mounted constable, went to a sale of M.'s stock on M.'s land. It was proved that F. had seen previously a notice "Beware of the Bull." The bull was offered for sale and M. declared in F.'s hearing that it was quiet. It was sold and turned out into a paddock on the fence of which F. was sitting. F. overheard remarks as to the animal's vice by people near him, and while crossing the paddock was injured by the bull. The jury returned a verdict with damages in favour of F. Rule nisi for a nonsuit. Held that F. had wilfully incurred an unnecessary risk and brought on himself the injuries inflicted. Rule absolute. Per Privy Council that there was evidence to go to jury in support of plaintiff's case, and that nonsuit was wrong, and that the finding of the jury was not so far against the weight of evidence as to justify sending the case to a new trial. Nonsuit set aside. Verdict entered for plaintiff. Forbes v. M'Donald, 3 V.R. (L.,), 185; 3 A.J.R., 78. On appeal to P.C., 5 A.J.R., 85.

Vicious Horse—Scienter.]—A defendant owned a vicious horse, and knew of its vice. The plaintiff and defendant owned adjoining lands, and defendant had fenced his half, but plaintiff had omitted to fence. Defendant's horse trespassed on plaintiff's land and kicked one of his horses. Held that defendant was liable. Leyden v. Coram, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 94.

Kicking Horse—Injury Done on Owner's Land.]—The owner of a vicious horse, knowing it to be so, is liable for injuries done to persons on a piece of open land accessible to the public on which the owner has licenee to turn his horse loose. And apart from the owner's knowledge, he is liable if he turn a horse loose on such land so negligently as to endanger the safety of persons crossing it. Southall v. Jones, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 402; 1 A.L.T., 98.

Injuries Done by Dogs.—See Doyle v. Vance, post column 28 under (3) Dogs.

Injury done by Trespassing Horse to Child sent to drive it off.]—A horse trespassed on land of M., whose wife, M. being absent, directed a child to drive it away, and the child while doing so received a kick in the mouth. Held that the child might be regarded as the agent of the owner of the land, acting under his instructions in driving off the horse, and could recover against the owner of the horse. Waugh v. Montgomery, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 290; 4 A.L.T., 77.

2. CONTAGIOUS DISEASES.

Scab—"Scab Act 1862," No. 143, Sec. 5.]—The words "when required by the inspector so to do" in Sec 5 refer only to the words immediately preceding them, viz., "or alter his brand," and do not relate to the earlier enactment in the section requiring all owners to brand. The obligation to brand is unconditional and not dependent on a previous requirement by the inspector. McCrae v. Woodward, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 113.

The information for breach of Act must be laid before justices in the name of the inspector. Where the information was laid in the name of an owner principally injured the Court granted an order to prohibit execution of the conviction. In re Taylor, ex parte Nalder, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 116.

"Pleuro-Pneumonia Act," No. 136—Act No. 123.]—The "Pleuro-Pneumonia Act," No. 136, did not continue the former Act No. 123, but expired with it. Stick v. Hudson, 1 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 5.

Information for Keeping Scabby Sheep Without a License—Scienter.]—Magistrates dismissed an information under the Scab Act charging the defendant with keeping scabby sheep without a license, and stated an appeal case for the opinion of the Supreme Court. On the appeal the information was not before the Court, and the case as stated did not deny either knowledge by the defendant that his sheep were infected, or circumstances from which that knowledge might have been inferred. The Court refused to dismiss the appeal on the ground that it was necessary that a scienter should be alleged, and declined to consider how far it was bound to entertain the point then made for the defendant, and not previously made before the magistrates; holding that the information not being before the Court, it was sufficient that the case, as stated, did not necessarily negative knowledge by the defendant of his sheep having been affected, or circumstances from which that knowledge might have been inferred. Shaw v. Phillips, 3 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 155.

An application for a scab-licence, made after the inspector has come upon the station for the express purpose of examining the sheep, is too late.—Ibid.

Scab—Act No. 231, Secs. 3, 15.]—G. was in charge of certain sheep which were scabby. He was summoned by the inspector and pleaded that the sheep were only in his charge temporarily, and belonged to several butchers whose names he offered to give. The justices dismissed the case. Upon appeal Held that G. being "in possession or charge" under Sec. 3 of the Act was liable. Riley v. Gray, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 217.

Scab—Appointment of Inspector—How Proved.]—The appointment of a scab-inspector and his having acted as such may be proved by his own parol evidence. Goldie v. Allen, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 82.

Scab—Evidence of Ownership of Scabby Sheep.]—On a proceeding against F. for having scabby sheep, a document signed by his overseer, and which was as follows:—"I hereby declare that there are depasturing on the Kangaroo Flat Paddock, 3,800 sheep, which I admit to be scabby, the same being in my charge, the property of F.," was held inadmissible as against F. Ibid.

Scab—Evidence of Infection—"Scab Act," No. 231, Sec. 22.]—Sec. 22 of the "Scab Act," No. 231, which provides that if any one sheep in a flock is proved to be infected with scab, all the sheep in such flock shall be deemed to be so infected, is to be construed as only establishing a presumption, capable of being rebutted by evidence, that the whole flock is so infected, and not as making the presence of one infected sheep conclusive evidence on that point. Spurling v. Macartney, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 166.

Scab—Information for not giving Notice of.]—An information alleged that F., on November 17th, on becoming aware that certain sheep of his were infected with scab, omitted to give notice to the inspector. Held that the information did not mean that F. only became aware of the sheep being infected on the 17th November; but that on the 17th November, being aware, he did not give notice. Flower v. Stephen, 2 V.R. (L.) 13; 2 A.J.R., 19.

Scab—"Scab Act 1870," Sec. 15.]—Section 15 of the "Scab Act 1870," No. 370, as to the publishing of the inspector's address in the Government Gazette is directory only and not mandatory. Ibid.

Scab—"Scab Act," No. 370, Sec. 47—Scab Brand on Sheep—No Evidence of Actual Infection.]—Where sheep were found running in a badly fenced paddock and not under care of a shepherd, and were branded with the scab brand, but the complainant could not state whether the sheep were actually infected on the day of seizure, the justices were of opinion that the words "deemed to be infected" were insufficient to satisfy Sec. 47 of the Act, and dismissed the summons. Held that the evidence was all in the direction of a breach of the Act, and that the justices, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, should have convicted, for that purpose amending the summons if necessary. McKenzie v Coutts, 3 A.J.R., 112.

Scab—Power to Increase Amount of Conviction.]—Justices had fined A. at the rate of one shilling per head of sheep for an offence under the "Scab Act," the number of sheep being then given as 700, and the amount of conviction being accordingly fixed at £35. It was afterwards discovered that there were 780 sheep, and the amount was accordingly increased to £39. Held that the decision was in strict accordance with the facts proved. Rule to quash order discharged. Regina v. Akehurst, ex parte Gavel, 3 A.J.R., 119.

Scab—"Scab Act," No. 370, Secs. 25, 26.]—Sec. 26 is ancillary to Sec. 25, and provides the penalty for not branding and keeping branded sheep within Sec. 25. Stirling v. Collins, 3 V.R. (L.,) 162; 3 A.J.R., 70.

Act No. 370, Sec 67.]—L. had caused scabby sheep to be driven by his servant into a clean district without a written authority from the Inspector. Held that he was as liable under Sec. 67 as if he had driven them himself. Stirling v. Little, 3 V.R. (L.,) 180; 3 A.J.R., 73.

Scab—"Scab Act," No. 370, Sec. 49—Notice to Person across whose Run Scabby Sheep were driven.]—It is incumbent where the person who supports a prohibition to a conviction for driving scabby sheep across the run of a person owning 500 sheep on that run, without notice, to prove that the person across whose run the sheep were driven did not own 500 sheep. Regina v. Puckle, ex parte McIntosh, 4 A.J.R., 21.

Scab—"Scab Act," No. 370, Sec. 33—Notice of Disease.]—A notice to the Scab Inspector of the existence of a "doubtful" sheep on a run is not a sufficient notice within Section 33 of the "Scab Act" to entitle the owner to a protection for dipping, or to cover actual disease which appeared subsequently to the dipping. Ker v. McWilliam, 4 A.J.R., 22.

Scab—Answer to Permission to Dip—"Scab Act," No. 370, Sec. 30.]—J. was fined for not giving notice of the existence of scab in a flock of sheep when he became aware of it. The sheep were not actually infected with scab, but J. had dipped the sheep, his run being at the time in a quarantine district. J. had forwarded a letter to the inspector requesting permission to dip, but had received a reply that the request had been "laid before the board," but that the board had refused to grant the application. Sec. 30 of the "Scab Act" enacts that if an answer to a permission to dip is not received within seven days, the owner of the sheep may dip them without their being considered infected. On appeal by J.—Held that the reply that the board refused the application was not an answer within the meaning of Sec. 30, and appeal allowed. Jones v. Stephen, 4 A.J.R., 75.

Scab—"Scab Act, 1870," No. 370, Sec. 29—Notice—Amount of Fine.]—Where McC., the owner of a large number of sheep, was summoned for not giving notice of his sheep being infected, and the magistrates finding that twelve of the number only were actually infected, fined him for that number only. Held that by Sec. 29, the fact that one sheep was infected, was conclusive evidence of the whole number being infected, and that the fine should have been based upon that assumption; that notice given three years before, and a licence issued, were not a protection under the section. McWilliam v. McJoll, 5 A.J.R., 13.

Scab—Driving Infected Sheep into Clean District.]—A person who undertakes to send sheep by train from a place outside a clean district into such district, and who does not accompany them or send any one with them, and who signs a ticket for their carriage, is not liable to a penalty under Sec. 67 of the "Scab Act 1870" for driving such sheep into a clean district, since the offence is not committed till the sheep have crossed the boundary of the clean district, and at the time the sheep in the above case crossed, the defendant was not driving, conducting or conveying them, nor had he charge of them. Matthews v. Elligett, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 49.

Poisoning.]—See Regina v. Puckle, ex parte White, 2 V.R. (L.,) 63; 2 A.J.R., 57, post under Offences (Statutory.)

Registration of—"Dog Act," No. 239, Secs. 3, 9.—Owner.]—In cases where no injury has been done by a dog the person to be held owner must have had the dog in his custody and control, and evidence that a dog unregistered has been harboured by or permitted to live on the premises of a person does not make such person the owner so as to be liable for non-registering it. Skene v. Allen, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 179; 1 A.L.T., 12.

Injuries Done by—Liability of Owner.]—The owner of a dog is responsible for any damage fairly resulting from a trespass by that animal on the land of auother, even in the absence of its owner. Doyle v. Vance, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 87; 1 A.L.T., 167. Sub. nom., Vance v. Doyle.

V.'s dog trespassed on D.'s land, and ran barking after a mare belonging to D., and so frightened her that she attempted to jump a fence, but fell and broke her neck. V. was not present at the time of the occurrence. Held that V. was liable for the value of the mare. Ibid.

4. Cruelty to Animals.

What is—"Police Offences Statute, 1865," Secs. 3, 23.]—Hunting a tame dog with a pack of hounds is sufficient to constitute the offence of committing cruelty to animals within the meaning of the "Police Offences Statute, 1865," Secs. 3, 23. Anderson v. Wilson, 4 A.J.R., 153.

5. Other Points.

Shooting Goats Trespassing—"Pounds' Statute," No. 478, Sec. 18.]—B.'s goats were trespassing on W.'s land, and W. shot at them and wounded one, which did not die until nine days afterwards. Held that W. was protected under Sec. 18 of the Act. Bagshaw v. Wills, 5 A.J.R., 115.

ANNUITY.

Chargeable on Real Estate.]—A testator bequeathed to his widow an annuity of £400, payable out of the rents of his real estate, and directed it to be charged in equal proportions on the corpus of the respective shares of his five children in such real estate, and declared such shares to be specific portions of real estate described as to each child by name. Held that the widow was entitled to five annuities of £80 each, to be a charge upon such shares respectively until paid. Johnston v. Brophy, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 77.

Permanent or for Life.]—A. by deed poll executed a declaration of trust, stating he held certain property upon trust inter alia to pay B. "a sum of £100 per annum," and by will he confirmed this deed poll. Held that B. took a perpetual annuity of £100 per year. McKinnon v. McInnes, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 253.

Devise of Lands subject to Charge—Devise in Codicil of Part of Lands free of Charge—Destruction of Charge.]—A. and his son J., being entitled to a station in the proportion of two-thirds and one-third respectively, obtained a Crown grant to them jointly of a pre-emptive section thereof. A. died, by his will devising the station and all pre-emptive sections thereof to J. and two brothers in equal shares, subject to their executing a mortgage of the station to secure a fund to provide an annuity for their sisters. J. in A.'s lifetime assigned his interest in the section to A., and A. by a codicil devised the section absolutely to J. The station property exclusive of the section being inadequate for the mortgage to be raised, owing to sales of sheep, &c., by A., Held that the station property was not chargeable with the annuities. Howitt v. Smith, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 277; sub. nom. Hewitt v. Smith, 1 A.J.T., 73.

I. To Privy Council.

From Insolvent Court—Appealable Amount.]—Where a rule nisi obtained by a creditor for £288 to expunge proof of a debt by another creditor for £50,000 was discharged. Held by the Full Court, reversing Molesworth, J., that an appeal would lie. Ex parte Rolfe, in re Rutledge and Co., 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 51.

Leave to Appeal to Privy Council—Act 15, Vic. No. 10, Sec. 33.]—An order confirming the Master's Report is one by which the rights of the parties may be ultimately determined and concluded, and therefore under Act 15, Vic. No. 10, Sec 33, an appeal to the Privy Council lies against such an order. Heape v. Hawthorne, 2 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 76.

Decision by which the Merits are Concluded—What is—"Supreme Court Act," 15 Vic., No. 10, Sec. 33.]—An order granting a rule absolute for a new trial is not a "decision by which the merits of the case may be concluded" within the meaning of "The Supreme Court Act," 15 Vic., No. 10, Sec. 33, which allows an appeal to the Privy Council from a decision concluding the merits of a case; but refusing such a rule is a "decision" by which the merits are concluded within the meaning of the section. Crooks v. Ormerod, 3 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 132.

Plea—"Final Judgment, Decree, Order, or Sentence."]—In a suit by information by the Attorney-General at the relation of the B. Company, and bill by the B. Company against the P. Company, seeking an injunction and account of gold, the defendants put in a plea traversing the incorporation of the plaintiff company. This plea was allowed by Molesworth, J., but overruled by the full Court. On summons for leave to appeal to the P. C.—Held that a judgment on a plea does not "conclude the merits of the case" within the meaning of 15 Vic., No. 10, Sec. 33, because an answer may be put in: That where no account has been directed, and where it is problematical whether any money will be found due by the defendants to the plaintiffs, the fact that if an account were directed there would be a dispute as to property worth £1000 will not authorise an appeal. Leave refused. Attorney-General v. Prince of Wales Company, 6 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 4.

From Order Refusing Motion for Injunction.]—Per Molesworth, J. "The meaning of the Act 15 Vic., No. 10, is that before an appeal can be allowed the Court must do something by which the rights of the parties may be concluded; not merely intimate an opinion upon an interlocutory application, which being applied to the case at the hearing would determine the rights of the parties. The Court must do some curial act which would determine the rights of the parties." Motion for leave to appeal to the Privy Council from an order refusing a motion for an injunction dismissed with costs. Melbourne and Hobson's Bay Railway Company v. Mayor of Prahran, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 228, 238.

Interlocutory Injunction.]—Where an order sought to be appealed from is an interlocutory one, and the result of such appeal may or may not be final, inasmuch as there are other questions involved than those which the interlocutory application deals with, the Court will not give leave to appeal. Davis v. The Queen, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 106.

From Primary Judge.]—On motion for leave to appeal to the Privy Council from the decision of the Primary Judge, within the fourteen days allowed for an appeal to the Full Court, Held that the Act 19 Vic., No. 13, sec. 5, gives the right to appeal to the Privy Council without an appeal to the Full Court. Davis v. The Queen, 1 V.R. (E.,) 33; 1 A.J.R., 22.

Leave to appeal will not be granted against the refusal of an order nisi to quash on certiorari an order for commitment of an attorney for misbehaviour at Petty Sessions. Regina v. Mollison, 3 V.R. (L.,) 3.

Appeal to Privy Council—From Primary Judge—"Final Judgment Order or Decree."]—There may be an appeal direct to the Privy Council from the Primary Judge. The allowance of a demurrer is not generally conclusive, and therefore it is not the subject of appeal. But if the judgment even on demurrer is final leave will be given to appeal, but if a demurrer is for want of parties it is not final, and leave will be refused. Woolley v. Ironstone Hill Lead G.M. Company, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 237.

Against an order placing shareholders on list of contributaries for the amount of £2300 each an appeal lies. In re Cognac Company, Dwyer and Kelly's case, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 146.

An appeal does not lie against an order overruling a demurrer, because nothing is concluded by such order. Longstaff v. Keogh, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 189.

Order Overruling Plea.]—Since an order overruling a plea is so conclusive that the same defence cannot be raised at the hearing, an appeal to the Privy Council lies from such an order. Brougham v. Melbourne Banking Corporation, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 202.

Appeal from Interlocutory Decree.]—A motion, by a defendant, for leave to appeal to the Privy Council, was supported by an affidavit in general terms, that the interlocutory order sought to be appealed from was in respect of a matter in issue above the value of £500. The order affirmed a decree, which directed an account; and the amount payable by the defendant depended upon the result of the account. There was no affidavit by the plaintiff that the amount in issue was under £500. Held, that if the decree had been final, leave to appeal would have been granted; but that being only interlocutory, defendant would be entitled to raise the whole question of its liability, upon an appeal from the decree on further direction; and motion dismissed without costs. United Hand-in-Hand and Band of Hope Company v. National Bank of Australasia, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 198; 2 A.L.T., 72.

From Order Discharging Rule Nisi to Rescind Order of Judge for Delivery of Bill of Costs.]—Leave was granted to appeal to the Privy Council against an order of the Court discharging a rule nisi to rescind an order of a judge for delivery of a bill of costs; it being sworn and not denied that the sum involved exceeded £500. Re Duffett ex parte McEvoy, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 160.

Ejectment—Appeal by Unsuccessful Defendant.]—In an action of ejectment, where the lease would expire before the appeal could be decided, the Court allowed the unsuccessful defendant (tenant,) to appeal on the terms that the plaintiff be allowed to issue execution, on giving security for carrying out the decision of the Privy Council, and for paying to the appellant the mesne profits, after deducting rent, &c., the amount to be ascertained by the prothonotary, if the parties could not agree upon it. The appellant to pay the costs of the action when execution issued, the plaintiff giving security to refund them if the appeal should be allowed, and the appellant to give security for £400 for the costs of the appeal. Poole v. Halfey, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 317.

Value of Subject Matter.]—Upon application under the Orders in Council for leave to appeal to the Privy Council, the value of the matter in issue is a fact to be tried and controverted, and upon which both sides are to be heard. Kettle v. The Queen, 3 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 141.

From Judgment on Demurrer—Claim £500 but Not yet Tried.]—Leave refused. See M'Kinnon v. Board of Land and Works, 3 A.J.R., 47.

Appealable Amount—Incidental Effect of a Decree.]—Where a decree was made in a suit for specific performance of an agreement to give a right-of-way by which a right-of-way was granted, the owner of an adjoining lot refused to give the defendant a right-of-way over a certain piece of land (alleged by the defendant to be worth to himself £500,) because of the defendant being unable to give to the said owner a certain right-of-way in consequence of the said decree. On motion for liberty to appeal to the Privy Council against the decree, Held that the incidental effect of a decree upon other property of the defendant not directly affected by the decree could not be taken into account in making up the appealable amount, and motion refused. Wakefield v. Parker, 6 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 322; N.C., 40.

Matter "Indirectly" Involving a Claim or Demand Relative to Property of the Value of £500.]—A company was fined £10 by a Justice's Order, and the Supreme Court affirmed the order. An application for leave to appeal to the Privy Council was granted on the uncontradicted affidavit of the company's secretary that the case "indirectly" involved a claim or demand relating to property of the value of £500. Bendigo Waterworks Company v. Thunder, 1 V.R. (L.,) 123; 1 A.J.R., 103.

From Order as to Compulsory Sequestration—How Amount Determined.]—The value of the debtor's estate, and not the amount of the petitioning creditor's debt, is the standard by which the amount of the matter in issue is to be measured on an appeal to the Privy Council, under Sec. 33, of No. 10, from an order granting or refusing compulsory sequestration. In re M'Donald, 2 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 12; 2 A.J.R., 131.

But where the property could be recovered by the assignee only by a litigation, which the Court thought must be unsuccessful, leave to appeal refused.—Ibid.

Direct from Primary Judge—Appealable Value—Amount of Security—Mining under a Street.]—By a decree made by the Primary Judge an injunction was granted restraining defendants from mining under a street ad medium filum viae. The plaintiff not being satisfied with this, applied for leave to appeal direct to Privy Council. The affidavit of the appellant stated value of the right sought to be £500. The affidavit of the respondent did not deny this, but stated that such a right could not have a definite value. Held that as no affidavit had been made specifically stating that the value of right was not £500, leave would be given, and the security was entered as £300, the case being not a heavy one. The Extended Hustler's Freehold Company v. Moore's Hustler's Freehold Company, 5 A.J.R., 154.

Amount in Issue of the Value of £500.]—Leave to appeal to the Privy Council, under the Orders in Council of June 9th, 1860, will not be granted where the matter in issue is of the value of £500, and there is nothing else involved. Gardiner v. McCulloch, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 128.

Interest on Judgment.]—Interest upon the damages awarded in an action is not to be considered as part of the sum in issue for the purpose of obtaining leave to appeal to the Privy Council under the Orders in Council of June, 1860. McSwain v. McMillan, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 271.

Amount in Issue—Award of £6000—Difference in New Award, £220.]—Arbitrators had made an award of £6000 as the purchase money of a business, and the award was referred back to the arbitrators by order of the Court, and the amount awarded by the new award was less by £220 than the sum awarded by the former one. On an application for leave to appeal to the Privy Council against the order referring back the award—Held that the matter in issue was not the value of the business, but the difference between the two valuations of the arbitrators, and this being under the appealable amount, leave was refused. In re Armstrong and Culley, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 178.

Security for Costs—By the Crown—15 Vic., No. 10, Sec. 33—Act, No. 241.]—Under 15 Vic., No 10, the Court must require security for costs all cases; and under the "Crown Remedies and Liabilities Statute, 1865," No. 241, the Crown is in the same position as a subject as to the right and liability to security for costs. Davis v. The Queen, 1 V.R. (E.,) 33; 1 A.J.R., 22.

Staying Proceedings Pending an Appeal to Privy Council—Costs.]—On motion for leave for defendant to appeal to the Privy Council, and that all proceedings to execute the decree or enforce payment of the costs might be stayed pending such appeal. Ordered that taxation would continue, but that no execution or process for the recovery of costs should be taken if the defendant brought the amount into Court within one month after taxation. Semble. If the amount be brought into Court, the Court will direct that it may be taken out by plaintiffs on giving security to refund the amount so taken out in the event of the decree being varied or reversed as to costs by the Privy Council. Larnach v. Alleyne, 2 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 39.

Security—Against Crown.]—Upon leave being given to appeal against a decision in favour of the Crown the Court is bound by the Orders in Council, if the decree be carried into execution, to require that the Crown shall enter into security for the due performance of the order of the Privy Council on the appeal. Kettle v. The Queen, 3 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 141.

Security for Costs.]—In giving leave to appeal to the Privy Council the Court has no jurisdiction to dispense with security for costs, but has merely a discretion as to the amount. Goodman v. Boulton, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 86.

Staying Proceedings.]—Execution of conveyances, and delivery of possession, come within the words "performing any duty" in the Act 15 Vic., No. 10, Sec. 33, and in the Order in Council relative to appeals to the Privy Council, as to which proceedings may be stayed, pending an appeal to the Privy Council. Goodman v. Boulton, 5 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 86, 101.

Several actions were brought under Act 241, and judgments obtained against the Crown, but the Supreme Court refused leave to appeal except upon the terms of the Attorney-General paying the amounts of the verdicts with costs, and absolutely refused leave in two of the cases where the amount recovered was less than £500. Held per Privy Council, upon petition that leave to appeal should be given without the terms of finding security for the costs of the appeal or the other terms imposed, the appeals to be consolidated. In re Attorney-General, L.R. 1 P.C., 147.

Act 15 Vic., No. 10—Time for Perfecting Security.]—Leave to appeal was given by the Court on terms of giving security within three months for the costs of the appeal. A bond was approved of by the Master and filed as of record, but such bond, owing to objections by defendant's solicitors as to competency of sureties, was not filed within the three months. Thereupon the Court revoked the leave to appeal already given. Held per Privy Council, upon petition, that plaintiffs were at liberty to appeal upon lodging in the Colonial Office the sum of £300 as security for the costs of the appeal, liberty being given to the plaintiffs to apply to Supreme Court of Victoria to cancel the bond lodged there. Webster v. Power, L.R. 1 P.C., 150.

Issuing Execution pending Appeal—Restitution.]—Where a rule nisi for leave to appeal to the Privy Council has been obtained, if execution be issued before the return of the rule, a Judge in Chambers may order restitution to be made. Munro v. Sutherland, 4 A.J.R., 169.

Security for Costs—Failure to Give Security within the Three Months Provided in 15 Vic., No. 10—Absence of Master During Vacation—Supreme Court Rules, Chap. 1, Sec. 15.]—The defendant C. obtained an order on October 20, 1873, for leave to appeal to Privy Council, and did not give the security until February 11, 1874, alleging the intervention of the Long Vacation, December 23—February 1, and the absence of the Master during that time. On motion to set aside the order Held that in the case of an appeal time runs during the vacation, and that Supreme Court Rules, Chap. 1, Sec. 15, only applies to ordinary proceedings in the Victorian Court, and not to proceedings under Imperial provisions. Order made rescinding order of October 20, 1873. Johnson v. Colclough, 5 A.J.R., 66.

Stay of Proceedings—Security—Receiver.]—On motion for leave to appeal under the Orders in Council either execution of order appealed from may be stayed simply, or execution may be allowed to go, the respondent giving security to perform such order as Privy Council may make. A receiver may be appointed upon a substantive cross motion by the respondent. Johnson v. Colclough, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 31.

15 Vic., No. 10, Sec. 33—Stay of Proceedings.]—On motion for leave to appeal against a decision of Mr. Justice Molesworth in a case respecting the forfeiture of mining shares, a consent order was drawn embodying terms on which plaintiff (the respondent) should be allowed to deal (pending appeal) with shares to which decree declared him entitled. M'Lister v. Garden Gully Company, 5 A.J.R., 170.

Security for Costs.]—Semble, that the Master cannot, when considering the security to be given, entertain the question of the probability or improbability of success. Newey v. Garden Gully Company, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 26.

Staying Proceedings — When Granted.] — On motion for leave to appeal to the Privy Council, the Court can only stay execution of the judgment, upon the applicant giving security, or allow execution to be carried out, the respondent giving security. The Court has no power to impose terms on the appellant, notwithstanding that, by a decree in another suit almost similar in its facts, the Privy Council has virtually decided against him. Ibid.

Staying Proceedings.]—On leave being granted to appeal against an order placing two shareholders on the list of contributories to the amount of £2,300 each, such order being obtained by one creditor only, stay of proceedings will not be ordered unless all parties interested, including the official liquidator, are heard. In re Cognac Company, Dwyer and Kelly's case, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 146.

Accounts.]—Proceedings will not be stayed pending an appeal on the ground that the decree directed accounts to be taken which in the event of an appeal being allowed would have to be taken on a different footing. White v. London Chartered Bank, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 174.

Staying Proceedings — Security.] — When an appeal is pending to the Privy Council from an original decree, and no stay of proceedings is obtained thereon, and an order on further directions is made, the Court will not stay proceedings until security be given to refund, so as to preserve the subject matter of the suit until the appeal to the Privy Council has been disposed of. The United Hand-in-Hand and Band of Hope Company v. National Bank of Australasia, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 173.

Time for Appealing—15 Vic., No. 10, Sec. 33.]—Where an application for leave to appeal had been made within the thirty days prescribed by the Act, and had been adjourned and referred to another judge, and was finally heard beyond the period of thirty days. Held that the application having originally been made within the thirty days, the provisions of the Act were sufficiently complied with, and leave to appeal given. Attorney-General v. Prince of Wales Company, 6 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 4.

Payment of Deposit—Suing in forma pauperis.]—On motion to appeal to Privy Council, the deposit not having been paid, Held that the payment of deposit was a condition precedent, even although the appellant was suing in formâ pauperis, and appeal struck out Merry v. Hawthorn, 6 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 329.

Appeal not Prosecuted.]—Defendants obtained leave to appeal to the Privy Council upon giving, within three months, security for the costs of the appeal; execution for recovery of plaintiffs' costs of suit being stayed until they gave security for refunding such costs if so ordered by the Privy Council. The appeal was not proceeded with, and no security for costs given by the defendants. After the lapse of the three months, order made revoking the leave to appeal, and giving liberty to the plaintiffs to proceed for their costs, notwithstanding the former order. The Mayor, &c., of Ballarat v. the Bungaree Road Board, 1 V.R. (E.,) 166.

Taking Bond for Security off File.]—A plaintiff obtained leave to appeal to the Privy Council on the usual terms as to security for costs, &c., and allowed two years to elapse without moving in the appeal. He applied to take off the file a bond which he had given as security for the repayment of costs. Held that the Court had no power to grant the application, the case being no longer in the Court, or within its jurisdiction. Goldsbrough v. McCulloch, 1 V.R. (L.,) 192; 2 A.J.R., 1.

6. Practice.

Leave to Appeal—Bond for Performance of Terms—Alteration in—Time for taking Objection—Power of Supreme Court to Rectify.]—Where a rule for leave was obtained to appeal to the Privy Council on certain terms, and two sureties entered into a bond for the due performance of those terms by the appellant; and where the rule and bond were subsequently, without the knowledge or consent of the sureties, but with the knowledge of the appellant's attorney, drawn up with an additional provision extending the liability of the sureties, and the bond was executed by them under the impression that it was in accordance with their original undertaking, and no notice or knowledge of the alteration reached the sureties till notification of the result of the appeal arrived in Victoria; Held that the time within which the sureties could take objection to the alteration should be considered to run from the time when the news of the result of the appeal reached Victoria; and that there was power in the Court to rectify the mistake by ordering the bond to be cancelled on payment of the amount for which the rule ought properly to have been drawn up. Bateman v. Moffatt, Moffatt v. Hearn, 1 V.R. (L.,) 107; 1 A.J.R., 97.

Making Privy Council Order as to Costs an Order of Court—Notice to Respondent.]—Motions by petitioners (all similar in effect) that order of Privy Council as to costs may be made an order of Supreme Court. Held it was necessary to serve respondent with notice of motion and it would be better to move for taxation of costs. On application being renewed Ordered that order of Privy Council be made an order of Court, and that costs of appeal be referred to be taxed. McMillan v. The Queen, Winter v The Queen, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 253.

Costs of Preparing Transcript—Jurisdiction of Court.]—The costs of an appeal to the Privy Council, up to the order for leave to appeal are in the cognizance of the Court, and should be taxed by the Master. All subsequent costs, inclusive of the costs of preparing the transcript of the case for transmission to the Privy Council are, if not beyond the jurisdiction of the Court, certainly not within the scope of the present (April 16th, 1878,) rules of Court. Blackwood v. Mayor, &c., of Essendon and Flemington, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 99.

Costs—Taxation—Costs Prior to Transmission of Case—Leave to Appeal.]—The costs prior to the transmission of a case for appeal to the Privy Council may be taxed on the rule giving leave to appeal. Urquhart v. McPherson, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 290.

Summons in Chambers—15 Vic., No. 10, Sec. 19—Right to Begin.]—The party supporting the summons has a right to begin on a summons in Chambers under the Act 15 Vic., No. 10, Sec. 19. Re Duffett, ex parte McEvoy, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 160.

Rule to Rescind Order for Leave to Appeal.]—Where defendants had obtained liberty for leave to appeal, and had paid the £500 required into Court, on rule nisi by defendants to rescind the order, Held that Court had no jurisdiction, and rule discharged. Byrnes v. Clough, 2 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 17.

Adding Costs of Appeal to Judgment of Supreme Court.]—Allowing the successful party to a petition against the Crown, which has gone on appeal to the Privy Council, to add the costs of the appeal awarded by the Privy Council to his final judgment, is not a violation of the principle restraining the Supreme Court of Victoria from interfering with a case after an appeal to the Privy Council, since that would be the most efficacious mode of giving effect to the judgment on appeal. Regina v. Dallimore, 3 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 131.

Two Orders.]—Leave was given under 15 Vic., No. 10, to appeal and the security was perfected, and the appellants moved for leave to appeal, having given the security required in the former order. Molesworth, J., made the second order, intimating that his granting the order did not prove that it was necessary. In re Armytage, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 41.

II. To Full Court.

Except by consent the Court will not hear an appeal from a decree unless the decree be drawn up. Waddell v. Patterson, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 43.

Objections to Form of an Appeal.]—Objections to form of an appeal should be heard by Full Court and not by Primary Judge. Harrison v Smith, 6 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 182.

The Full Court will in certain instances control the exercise of discretion by the Primary Judge. Learmonth v. Bailey, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 191.

For Facts—See S.C. under Practice and Pleadings—Bill.

Will—Mental Capacity—Questions of Fact.]—In an appeal from a judgment of Molesworth, J., in which he decided that there was not sufficient evidence to show that a testator knew what he was doing, and that the will was invalid, Held that the Full Court in a case of this nature, in which the principles of law are very intelligible, and in which the real question is one of fact, will not disturb the judgment of the Primary Judge unless it is manifestly and unquestionably wrong. In the will of Wolff, 1 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 21.

Equity Appeal Sittings—Court cannot take General Business.]—The Full Court sitting for the hearing of Equity appeals will not entertain any other business than such appeals, and consequently will not hear a motion to turn over a prisoner in the sheriff's custody for contempt. Sturgeon v. Murray, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 41.

Appeal from Discretion of Judge—When Court will Disturb.]—The Appellate Court retain a controlling power in all cases in which a Judge has a discretion vested in him by a statute which does not declare his decision to be final. The Court will not exert that power, and overrule the Judge's decision, merely because it does not agree with him in opinion as to the grounds on which his discretion has been exercised, unless there is no evidence to support his decision; or it appears that the Judge has been misled by false evidence; or that injustice will be done through the mistaken exercise of his discretion. Merry v. The Queen, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 135.

Where the defendants desired to have a commission to examine a person who was a most important witness for the defence, and no other witness could serve as a substitute for him upon certain questions on which the defence mainly rested, and there were no means by which such person could be compelled to come to Victoria and submit himself for examination there; Held that the case came within the third of the above exceptions, and an order refusing a commission was reversed on appeal, although a former commission obtained by some co-defendants, employing the same solicitor, had been allowed to expire without any evidence being taken under it. Ibid. S.C. 6 A.L.T., 14.

From Judge in Chambers—19 Vic., No. 13, Sec. 4.]—An appeal lies to the Full Court from an order of a Judge sitting in Chambers, the functions of the single Judge being by the Act subject to an appeal to the Full Court. In re Kingsland, 6 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.) 10, 13; N.C., 33.

From Exercise of Discretion of Primary Judge.]—In a suit by an assignee of plaintiff's rights under a decree, the plaintiff having refused to prosecute the suit, the assignee moved, upon notice to the plaintiff and the defendants, for conduct of the suit and for an order on the plaintiff to attend in the Master's office for taking accounts. The Primary Judge refused the application. On appeal, Held that in the absence of precedent, and upon a mere matter of practice, the discretion of the Primary Judge would not be revised on appeal, and appeal dismissed with costs. Watson v. Kyte, 2 V.R. (E.,) 61; 2 A.J.R., 6, 41.

Opinion Given by Judge under Sec. 61 of Statute of Trusts.]—An appeal does not lie against the opinion of a judge given under Sec. 61 of "Statute of Trusts 1864" No. 234. In re Isaac Folk, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 55.

From Order upon Further Directions.]—An order on further directions declared debts, legacies, funeral and testamentary expenses, &c., payable proportionately out of reversionary realty and personalty; and gave liberty to the trustees to sell the reversions, subject to the life estates. The trustees declined to exercise the liberty, and a subsequent order was made directing an absolute sale forthwith. From this second order the trustees appealed. Held that the appeal was too late; it should have been brought against the order on further directions. Attorney-General v. M'Pherson, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 51.

For Costs.]—As a general rule, an appeal for costs will not lie; yet, where in a suit, in substance for redemption, but in form charging the mortgagee with improper dealings with the mortgaged property, with a fraudulent disposition of it, and retention of the proceeds, the mortgagee had been decreed to pay the costs; Held that such mortgagee was, under the special circumstances of the case, justified in appealing. The question of costs, as considered by the Court of Appeal, must be considered as a question of principle and not of discretion, and the Court of Appeal will not interfere with decision of Primary Judge in matters of costs, except under peculiar circumstances. United Hand in Hand &c., Company v. National Bank of Australasia, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 173, 191.

See also Dryden v. Dryden, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 177, 181; 4 A.L.T., 25, under heading COSTS—Of and against particular persons.

Costs — Discretion of Primary Judge.] — An appeal will not lie from the discretion of the Primary Judge in allowing or disallowing costs out of the estate to a person unsuccessfully attempting to obtain probate. In the Will of Abel, 4 A.L.T., 92.

For costs.]—Where an executor, who was nominally a defendant, acted with the plaintiffs, and was virtually a co-plaintiff, and the plaintiff failed in the object of the suit, Held per the Full Court, that he was not entitled to appeal on the ground that his costs were not allowed him out of the estate, unless he appealed from the whole decree made, and succeeded in establishing that he had been right throughout in his view. Leahy v. Lightfoot, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 344; 4 A.L.T., 109.

Judge in Chambers—Refusal to grant Commission —19 Vic., No. 13, Sec. 5]—An appeal lies, under Sec. 5 of 19 Vic., No. 13, to the Full Court from a decision in Equity of a Judge in Chambers, refusing to grant a commission to examine witnesses abroad. Merry v. The Queen, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 135.

Semble.—That the mere fact of any particular ground of appeal being included in the notice of appeal is not to bind the Court to take notice of it, if it be not opened or alluded to in argument. Trainor v. the Municipal Council of Kilmore, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 293, 307.

"Opposite Party"—Who is]—A co-defendant is not an "opposite party," so as to render it necessary to serve him with notice of appeal, especially when he has not appeared at the hearing. London and Australian Agency Company Limited, v. Duff, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 19, 26.

What Grounds Sufficient.]—Where a bill has been dismissed with costs, a notice of appeal, stating as the only ground—that the Judge dismissed the bill, with costs, whereas he ought, having regard to the evidence, to have made a decree, as prayed—is sufficient. The Creswick Grand Trunk Gold Mining Company, Registered, v. Hassall, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 49, 75.

"Notice of intention" without word "desire."]—The Act 19 Vic., No. 13, Sec. 5, prescribes no particular form of notice of appeal, and "Notice of intention," without using the word "desire," is sufficient. Harrison v. Smith, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 182; 1 A.J.R., 78.

A notice of appeal where deposit money was not paid, and case not set down for hearing, was set aside on motion for irregularity. Patent Composition Pavement Company v. Mayor, &c., of Richmond, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 50, 55.

Notice of Appeal—Signature—Corporation.]—A notice of appeal is sufficiently "signed by the person giving the same," if it be under the seal of a corporation appealing. Melbourne and H.B.U.R. Company v. Town of Richmond and Borough of Sandridge, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 81.

A notice of appeal given by a corporation, was sealed with the corporation seal, but the seal was not attested by the secretary and directors. There was an express provision in the Articles of the Association that proceedings requiring signing should be signed. Held that the notice was sufficient. Victoria Sugar Company v. Borough of Sandridge, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 83.

Right of Appeal when it runs from—Death of Party before Judgment.]—Where a party to a suit dies after judgment reserved, and the decree is subsequently made, the right of appeal runs from the date of the Court pronouncing the decree, and the court will not ante-date it. Colonial Bank of Australasia v. Pie, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 186.

Deposit—Consolidation of Appeals.]—Where a decree has been made on further directions, and an order overruling exceptions to Master's Report, on motion for leave to appeal from both without payment of second deposit, Held that the Court had no power to waive the condition precedent as to the deposit for the second appeal. Australian Trust Company v. Webster, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 99.

"Semble the acceptance of a cheque for the £50 deposit money is a sufficient compliance with the Act 19 Vic., No. 13; if the clerk accepts the cheque he does it at his own peril to make it good." Harrison v. Smith, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 182; 1 A.J.R 78.

Two Defendants Answering Separately Joining on Appeal—One Deposit.—19 Vic., No. 13, Sec. 5.]—Where two defendants, who have answered separately, join on an appeal, under Sec. 5 of the Act 19 Vic., No. 13, only one deposit of £50 is necessary. Merry v. The Queen, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 135, 139.

In appeals it is the practice in the Supreme Court that the appellant should begin. Taylor v. Southwood, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 29, 32.

Where no Appearance for Appellant.]—In an appeal in Equity where there was no appearance for appellant, the Court dismissed the appeal, so as to obviate any difficulty which might arise in the event of an appeal to the Privy Council, and held that it was not proper in such a case merely to strike out the appeal. Graham v. Graham, 3 A.J.R., 89.

Return of Deposit.]—Where there was no appearance for the respondent upon an appeal, and the appeal was dismissed, order made that the £50 deposit should be returned to the appellant. Leahy v. Lightfoot, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 344, 355; 4 A.L.T., 109.

Staying Proceedings Pending a Judgment Reserved.]—An appeal to the Full Court having been heard, and judgment reserved, Held by the Full Court (dissentiente Molesworth, J.) that proceedings for recovery of costs under the decree be stayed pending the delivery of judgment, notwithstanding that there was no notice given of the motion for such order. Larnach v. Alleyne, 2 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 39.

How far a Stay to Proceedings—Further Directions.]—An appeal to the Full Court against a decree confirming Master's Reports was pending when suit came on for hearing on further directions. Held that it was no bar to the hearing and case heard. The Attorney-General v. Boyd, 3 A.J.R., 127.

Order rescinding an Order of Full Court.]—Where the Full Court had made an order in an application in the cause, and had directed certain issues to be sent to a jury, which were found in favour of the plaintiffs, and the Primary Judge had made an order rescinding the order of the Full Court so far as it related to the impounding of certain proceeds of a mine, the plaintiffs intending to appeal from the order of the Primary Judge, moved for a stay of proceedings on the order of the Full Court, Held that on the point submitted to the jury their finding was conclusive for the purposes of the interlocutory applications, and motion for stay of proceedings refused. Learmonth v. Bailey, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 85. Affirmed on appeal, Ibid, 239.

Appeal from Order directing Issues—Issues to be tried before Appeal could be heard.]—At the hearing of a case an objection for want of parties was overruled, and order made directing issues to be tried at the next sittings at nisi prius, on August 2nd. The defendants lodged appeals, on the grounds that the objection for want of parties was improperly overruled; that plaintiff had no ground for relief in Equity; and that no issues ought to have been directed, or, if any, that they should have been in the form of the issues presented in the bill and answers. The next sittings to hear Equity appeals was not till September 1st. Mr. Justice Molesworth, while holding that the objection for want of parties was good, and that though issues should have been directed it was doubtful if they had been presented in the proper form, nevertheless refused to allow a stay of proceedings, on the ground that, inasmuch as if the appeal were successful the trial would go for nothing; he would not prevent the plaintiff from going on at his own risk, if he were desirous. White v. Hoddle, 1 A.L.T., 203.

Usual Rule at Law—Departure.]—A suit in a Court of Mines for defining boundaries at the hearing turned out not to be a case for defining boundaries, but one in which one party denied the other's right in toto, and should therefore have been dismissed. The Judge did not dismiss it, and a question of fact having arisen, which was deemed material and could only be determined by an issue, an issue was framed, and tendered in a form which could decide nothing conclusively on the point. No objection to the form of the issue was made by the Judge, but he rejected it as if no issue at all would avail, and dismissed the suit. The Judge's direction was wrong as to the question of fact. Upon appeal to the Full Court, Held, that though the suit might have been dismissed by the Judge of the Court of Mines as wrongly framed, yet as the case had miscarried on two other points which arose, but were not argued, the appeal should be dismissed; but being dealt with not on the points principally dealt with in the case, but on the other points appearing but not argued, the usual rule of dismissing an appeal with costs should be departed from, and no costs allowed. Banks v. Granville, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 158.

The general rule is that the successful appellant is entitled to his costs, unless there are special circumstances to deprive him of them. Solomon v. Miller, 2 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 135.

Where an appellant is partly successful the rule in the above case holds good. Learmonth v. Bailey, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 34.

When a bill has, on the ground of the misconduct of the defendant, been properly dismissed without costs, if the plaintiff appeal and fail, the appeal will be dismissed with costs. Mogg v. Lord Raglan and St. Arnaud G. M. Company, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 138.

Demurrer—Overruled by Straining of Pleading.]—Where a demurrer is overruled and equity discovered by straining the pleading, in such a case the general rule that a successful party on an appeal is entitled to his costs will not be followed, and order will be made without costs. United Hand and Band Company v. National Bank of Australasia, 5 V.L.R., (E.,) 74.

Appeal Partly Successful.—Where in an appeal against an order of the Primary Judge upon exceptions to Master's Report, the appellant succeeded on one ground only out of four, each party had to abide his own costs. Attorney-General v. Huon, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 30, 46.

When necessary.]—Where a plaintiff had succeeded upon one branch of a motion, but had failed on the other, and the defendant appealed from that part of the motion upon which Plaintiff had succeeded, held, that to enable the Court to entertain the question as to the plaintiff's rights upon the part of the motion upon which he had failed, it was not necessary for him to lodge a cross appeal. Wolfe v. Hart, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 125.

Variation—How Obtained.]—A respondent may, without lodging a cross appeal, ask to have the decree altered. On an appeal the whole decree is open. Attorney-General v. Lansell, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 155, 169.

Appeal on Facts.]—Per Holroyd, J. The reason of the rule against appeals on facts does not apply to a case where one of the appellate Judges has, as Primary Judge, taken the evidence, though the case is heard by another. McClure v. Marshall, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 84, 92.

III. From Master in Equity.

Evidence — Demeanour of Witnesses.] — Upon appeals from the Master to the Primary Judge, or from the Primary Judge to the Full Court, on questions of fact, the appellate Court should not regard the prior tribunal as having any larger means of information by observing the deportment of witnesses or the like. But, per Barry, J. (in the Full Court,) where the Master, having seen the witnesses and attached weight to their demeanour, has found upon a question of fact, there must be a strong case made out by the other side to warrant a reversal of the finding, and his decision should not be disturbed on mere inference. Dryden v. Dryden, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 148.

APPEARANCE.

See PRACTICE AND PLEADING.

APPORTIONMENT.

Rent Due at Date of Death—Not Apportionable.]—A testatrix left all her property to trustees upon trust to receive the rents and profits of two houses and to pay thereout to A. an annuity, and left the residue to B. for life. The houses were let to tenants, by agreements in writing for terms of years, rent payable monthly, on the 11th and 23rd respectively of each month. The testatrix died on the 11th of a month. Held, that the rent due on the 11th, as well as that due on the 23rd, accrued due after the testatrix' death, that there should be no apportionment, and that B. was entitled to the whole of each month's rent. In re Thomas's Will, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 25.

APPRENTICE.

"Master and Apprentice Stat. No. 193," Secs. 6, 17—Indenture not Signed by Father.]—McP. had been apprenticed to H. with the consent of his father as alleged in the indenture, which was not signed by the father. McP. absented himself, and was sentenced to solitary confinement by the Justices therefor. Held, that if McP. was not under twenty-one the Act did not apply, and if he was under twenty-one, the father's signature was necessary. Order absolute for a prohibition. Regina v. Templeton, ex parte McPherson, 3 A.J.R., 106.

Liability of Master for Neglect to Instruct—Indenture not under Seal—"Master and Apprentice Statute, 1864," No. 193, Secs. 3, 15.]—Sec. 3 of the "Master and Apprentice Statute 1864," No. 193, defines a "Master" as any person to whom any child shall be bound apprentice by indenture. When there is no indenture binding the apprentice, the master is not liable under Sec. 15 of the Act for neglecting to instruct the apprentice. Stead v. Gould, 4 A.J.R., 115.

The Contract.—Whether Necessary to be in Writing.]—The "Master and Apprentice Statute," No. 193, Secs. 9 and 10, requires that an Indenture of apprenticeship must be in writing, but that is only for the purpose of the summary jurisdiction of Justices. Apart from the Statute of Frauds the contract need not be in writing, except for purposes of the above-mentioned jurisdiction. Welshman v. Robertson, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 124.

Substituted Agreement.]—Where an agreement is required by the Statute of Frauds to be in writing, any agreement in substitution for it must also be in writing, but where there is a subsequent agreement referring only to the manner in which such contract is to be performed, such subsequent agreement need not necessarily be in writing. Ibid.

Amendment of Deed.]—Though the Court does not readily alter the language of a Deed, it will, to effect the intention of the parties, alter "himself" to "him" in a covenant by a father "to put himself apprentice to, &c." Ibid, p. 128.

Determination of Agreement—Death of One of Two Joint Masters.]—Where an apprentice is jointly bound to two partners, the death of one of the partners and the consequent dissolution of the partnership determines the apprenticeship. Beaver v. Fox, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 4.

Master and Apprentice—Covenants to Learn and to Teach—Dependent Covenants.]—B's. son was bound to F. for five years by articles of apprenticeship to learn a trade, in which F. covenanted to teach B's son the trade. After being three years in F's. service, during which time B's. son had not been taught anything, he deserted. On an action by F. for desertion and breach of covenant, Held, per Stawell, C.J., and Williams, J., that the covenants were dependent, and that F.'s failure to teach for the three years already passed was a good defence to the action; per Higinbotham, J., that the covenants were independent. Fletcher v. Buzolich, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 348.

Master and Apprentice—Breach of Covenant to Teach—Right of Father to Sue.]—Where a father is not a party to the indenture of apprenticeship by which his son is bound, but is merely a surety for the performance of its covenants by his son, he is not the proper party to sue for a breach of the covenant to teach. Buzolich v. Fletcher, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 356.

APPROPRIATION.

OF PAYMENT.]—See PAYMENT.

ARBITRATION AND AWARD.

1. SUBMISSION.

Construction — "Cause of Action or Matter in Difference"—Detention of Deeds.]—Plaintiff lodged with defendant certain title-deeds as security for a loan, which was repaid; but the deeds were not returned. Disputes occurred between the parties over a contract in respect of which the loan was made, and plaintiff and defendant agreed to refer "all matters in difference, and all actions and causes of action" to arbitration. No demand for the deeds was made before the submission to arbitration. Plaintiff sued in detinue for the deeds. Held, that before demand of the deeds there was no wrongful detention so as to form a "cause of action or matter in difference" within the reference to arbitration. Timewell v. Virgoe, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 147.

Order of Reference—Amendment.]—Where an order for reference of a suit to arbitration had been made, the Court sanctioned an amendment of it by inserting a clause providing that the death of any party should not abate the proceedings. Tomkins v. Cuningham, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 142.

2. EFFECT OF AGREEMENT TO REFER.

When it Amounts to an Admission.]—A contract for the sale of a station, stock, &c., contained a provision that any deficiency in the number of sheep should be allowed to the purchaser at the rate of 5s. per head; and also a provision that all matters in dispute should be referred to arbitration. On mustering the sheep the purchaser found that there was a very large deficiency, and it was agreed to refer to arbitration what should be allowed per head for the sheep deficient. The arbitrator allowed more than 5s. per head for the sheep deficient. Held that sending the matter to arbitration operated as an admission that the deficiency was such that more than 5s. per head should be allowed to the purchaser for the deficiency in number. Ryan v. Broughton, 2 V.R. (L.,) 49; 2 A.J.R., 39.

Covenant to Refer Partnership Disputes to Arbitration—What is a Partnership Matter.] — See Walker v. Born, post under COVENANT.

Reference to Arbitration under Partnership Deed—What is Included.]—See Gough v. Farrington, post under PARTNERSHIP—The Contract.

3. MAKING AGREEMENT TO REFER A RULE OF COURT.

Practice.]—Where originals of submission are produced signed, the submission may be made a Rule of Court by side-bar application in Term as well as in Vacation. See under name ARBITRATION, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 251.

How and When made a Rule of Court.]—Where a submission provided that application to make it a Rule of Court should be made to the "Supreme Court of Victoria," such an application may, even in Term, and when the Full Court is sitting in banco, be made to a single Judge sitting in Equity; and when an award has been made, the award, as well as the submission, should be made a Rule of Court. M'Meckan v. White, 1 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 165.

When Award Made Within Terms of Submission it Cannot be Re-opened.]—Where a submission to arbitration has been made a Rule of Court, and where the award has been made within the terms of the submission, neither of the parties can re-open the same question by a suit in Equity, though the award itself was not made a Rule of Court until after the filing of the bill, and the fairness of such award was impugned. Crooke v. Swords, 5 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 136.

Effect of.]—Where the matters in dispute in a cause are referred to arbitration by the order of a Judge, such order giving power to deal with the costs of action, reference and award, and being afterwards made a Rule of Court, the parties have no power to vary the terms of the reference by an agreement between themselves. Cudmore v. McPherson, Brooks v. McPherson, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 208.

Costs.]—The successful party is entitled to the costs of making an order of reference a Rule of Court, where it is necessary for the purpose of enforcing the award. Ibid.

4 Staying Proceedings and Enforcing Agreement to Refer.

"Common Law Procedure Stat.," No. 274, Sec. 266—Arbitrator not an Indifferent Person.]—A clause in a contract provided that all disputes touching or concerning the work to be done, materials and other incidents of a similar nature, were to be referred to and settled by the decision of the Inspector-General. The contractors sued for certain breaches of the contract. The defendants obtained an order under Sec. 226 of the "Common Law Procedure Stat." staying proceedings and enforcing the agreement to refer. The plaintiffs then moved to rescind the order on the ground that the matters could not be properly referred to the Inspector-General, as he was a member of the defendant Board, and had already done acts hostile to plaintiffs' interests. Held, that the breaches were disputes within the clause, and that as the contract referred such disputes to the Inspector-General the plaintiffs could not complain. Application refused. Evans v. Board of Land and Works, 5 A.J.R., 182.

Act No. 274, Sec. 266—Invalid Award Already Made.]—A contract contained an agreement to refer. An award had been made in favour of the defendants, which was invalid through a defect in its form, and defendants had taken no steps to rectify it. Plaintiffs then sued on the contract. After action commenced defendants obtained an order nisi, under Sec. 266, staying proceedings in the action. Held, on motion to rescind the order that, so long as the award remained, one of the essentials of the jurisdiction to make the order was wanting, viz., the Judge making the order could not be satisfied that no sufficient reason existed for not proceeding to refer, and no further reference could be insisted on. Martin v. Board of Land and Works, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 117; 1 A.L.T., 107.

Costs—Power of Judge to Award—"Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," Sec. 266.]—In making an order under Sec. 266 of the "Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," staying proceedings in an action, the Judge has no power under the section to make any order as to the costs of the arbitration. Farrell v. Imperial Fire Insurance Company., 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 116; 6 A.L.T., 10.

5. When Arbitration is a Condition Precedent to a Right of Action.

A clause in a contract for stevedoring, which stipulates that all matters in dispute arising touching the agreement should be referred to arbitration, and prohibits an action being brought in respect of the matters actually submitted, is a collateral and independent agreement, and an award thereunder is not a condition precedent to a right of action except (per Privy Council) as regards such sums as under the agreement are not payable until the amount thereof has been ascertained by such award. Locke v. Collins, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 40. Affirmed on appeal to P.C. L.R. 4 App. Ca., 674.

See also cases under Work and Labour.

6. Award.

Validity of—Interest.]—Where an award was to the effect that H. should indemnify W. against all debts, demands, &c., of the late firm of H. and Co. against W., Held that there was a difference between indemnifying and giving security, and that the award was valid. An award that one of the parties give up the deeds deposited with the arbitrator is not too indefinite, as they might easily be identified. Where a sum awarded was made payable "forthwith," Held that, as no mention was made of a demand, a demand was unnecessary, and that interest might be recovered at the rate of eight per cent. from the day of publication. Hancock v. Woolcott, 5 A.J.R., 80.

Validity of.]—Where the arbitrators have stated matters which they need not have stated, but, upon the face of their award, they have not stated anything which conclusively shows that the sum awarded is wrong, it is not open to the defendant, upon a bill of exchange given for part of the sum awarded, to impeach the award on the ground that the award is wrong, since that would be in effect to hear an appeal from the decision of the arbitrators. Anderson v. Stewart, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 75.

Validity of—Evidence—Misrecital.]—If an award contain a wrong recital of the submission that is immaterial. Where an arbitrator, an expert, made an award upon an inspection of certain leasehold premises—the subject matter—such inspection having been previously made professionally on behalf of one of the parties without taking other evidence, his award was upheld. In re Backhaus & Steele, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 184; 1 A.L.T., 11.

Finality of Decision.]—There is a difference between a case where an arbitrator must award that different acts are to be done by several parties, and a case in which all the matters in dispute resolve themselves into money claims. In the former case the arbitrator must award specifically, in the latter he may award generally the amount to be paid by one or more of the parties, such amount being a balance struck in favour of one or other of the parties after all the items have been considered. Upon the settlement of partnership accounts between B., of the one part, and C. and others of the other part, an award that so much was due to B. by C. and the others was held to be valid and sufficiently final. Mixner v. Blair, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 191.

Finality.]—The decision of an arbitrator, in the absence of fraud or corruption, is binding on the parties, both as to matters of law and matters of fact, unless some mistake appears on the face of the award, or in some paper accompanying it, or, perhaps, by the affidavit of the arbitrator. Anderson v. Stewart, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 75.

Finality.]—Where an arbitrator having power to state a special case valued certain machinery in two alternatives, one as a going concern, the other as material for removal, subject to the opinion of the Court as to how it should be regarded, such award is not bad as wanting in finality. Chrysolite Hill Company v. Sandhurst and St. Arnaud Chrysolite Company, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 242; 1 A.L.T., 37.

If the party entitled to the money agrees to accept the lesser sum, in such a case the Court will not refer back the award to the arbitrators to state facts which would enable the Court to answer the questions. Ibid.

What may be Included in—Breach of Promise—Expenses for Journey taken at Other Party's Request.]—In an action for breach of promise to marry, with a second count for money paid in respect of a voyage undertaken by the lady at the request of the defendant, the defendant pleaded that it had been agreed under seal that it should be referred to arbitration to determine what damages the defendant should pay to the plaintiff for the breach of promise, and that the arbitrators might take into consideration all matters that would be proper for consideration by a jury, and that it had been admitted to the arbitrators that the voyage was undertaken at defendant's request, and that the defendant had paid the amount awarded, and that the arbitrators had considered the expense of the voyage in making the award. Held that the plea was bad, because the damages in respect of the voyage were not cognisable by the arbitrators, the claim being a distinct and independent cause of action, and that the award should not have included the amount, and judgment for plaintiff. Khull v. Haddon, 4 A.J.R., 35.

Enforcing Award—Practice.]—An action in the County Court was referred to arbitration, and an award made. The party in whose favour the award was made, at a subsequent sitting of the County Court, applied to have a verdict entered for the sum awarded. No leave to do so was contained in the agreement to refer; but the County Court Judge ordered a verdict to be entered. Upon appeal, Held that no such verdict could be entered, but that the proper course was to take a verdict subject to the reference, or to make the liberty to enter a verdict one of the terms of the reference. Dart v. Machin, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 54.

Attachment for Disobedience of—Service of Rule of Submission.]—The Court overruled an objection on a rule for an attachment for disobedience of an award, that a copy of the rule making the arbitration a Rule of Court was not served upon defendant when payment was demanded. Bateman v. Bateman, N.C., 11.

When Enforceable by Attachment.]—Where the enlargement by the Judge of the time for making the award has not been made a Rule of Court, the award is not enforceable by attachment, and the person in whose favour it has been made is left to his remedy to sue on the award. Re Hancock and Woolcott, 4 A.J.R., 155.

Referring Back Award—Arbitrators Misled.]—A contract was entered into for the sale of the goodwill of a business together with the stock-in-trade, which was to be taken at cost price, the prices to be fixed by three arbitrators. The arbitrators fixed the prices and made their award, and the purchaser entered into possession, and sold some of the stock and brought more into the business. Some months afterwards the purchaser applied to refer back the award on the ground that some of the articles had been greatly over-valued, and in support of his application produced affidavits by two of the arbitrators that they had been misled by certain cipher marks of prices marked on certain of the stock. The affidavit of the third arbitrator contradicted the statements of the other two as to their having been misled, and stated that they ascertained the value of the goods independently of the marked prices. Held, that the award should be referred back to the arbitrators so far as regarded articles which had not been sold since the former award, which should be produced, and as to the prices of which the arbitrators, or any two of them, had been misled. In re Armstrong and Culley, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 178.

Rule Nisi to Refer Back—Service—Joint Party.]—Service on one of two persons, who constituted a joint party to an arbitration, of a rule nisi to refer back the award is sufficient. Ibid, p. 180.

Referring Back Award—Omission of Damages.]—Where the matters in issue in two actions against the same defendant were referred to arbitration by Rule of Court, and the parties afterwards agreed as to the amount of damages, but the arbitrators, by mistake, omitted such damages in drawing up the award, so that there was nothing for the taxing order to operate upon, the Court made absolute a rule to refer the award back to the arbitrators for amendment. Brooks v. McPherson, Cudmore v. McPherson, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 154.

Referring Back Award—To Correct Errors—Costs.] Where a first award is referred back to correct an error, the party who succeeds is entitled to costs of the first award, so far as that has not been rendered wholly useless. Ibid, p. 208.

Setting Aside.]—An award which should have been made by three arbitrators, but was in fact only made by two, the third being completely ignored, was set aside. Cain v. Cain, 3 A.J.R., 122.

Setting Aside—Misconduct of Umpire.]—See in re Fowler and Sinnot and in re Bailey and Hart, post columns 54, 55.

Setting Aside—Excess of Authority in Awarding Costs.]—In a reference to an arbitrator, there was no power given to award costs, but the arbitrator did award costs. Held that the direction to pay costs being separable from the rest of the award did not vitiate it, and the award was not to be set aside on that ground. In re Bailey and Hart, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 311; 5 A.L.T., 102.

Award not Dealing with all Matters Submitted.]—An award showing on its face that the arbitrator has not dealt with all the matters submitted to him will be set aside on that ground. In the matter of Husbands and Husbands, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 208; 6 A.L.T., 60.

A reference to arbitration by C. and H. recited that "there were disputes between the parties relative to claims made by C. to an account, and to certain rights as a partner" of H., and that C. claimed, "either as such partner or otherwise, to recover from H. a sum of money, and an account," and referred all matters in dispute. The award found that C. was indebted to H. in a sum named, but did not mention the question of partnership. Held that the award did not deal with all the matters in dispute; and award set aside. Ibid.

Application to Set Aside—9 and 10, Will. III., Cap. 15, Sec. 2—"Judicature Act 1883," No. 761, Sec. 13—Supreme Court Rules, 1884, O. 64, Rule 14.]—Although Sec. 13 of Act No. 761 abolishes Terms for the purpose of carrying on the business of the Court, yet it provides that they shall still be used as a measure for determining the time within which any act is required to be done, and rule 14 of Order 64 makes special provision for the time within which applications to set aside awards are to be made, the object of the rule being to substitute "the last day of the sittings of the Full Court" for the last day of Term in 9 and 10, Will. III., Cap. 15, Sec. 2. Under the joint application therefore of the Stat. of Will. III., "the Judicature Act," and the rules, an application to set aside an award must be made to the Court, or the Full Court, at some time before the last day of the sittings of the Full Court next after the award has been made. Ibid.

Continuance of Action after—For Claim Already Considered.]—Declaration for money payable by the defendant to the plaintiff for money paid and expended by plaintiff for the defendant at his request, in making a voyage. Plea—That it had been agreed under seal to refer to arbitration the damages defendant should pay plaintiff for breach of promise: that the arbitrators might take into consideration in assessing damages matters that would be proper for a jury to consider; and it was admitted to the arbitrators that the voyage was taken at defendant's request, and that a sum had been awarded, which defendant had paid, and that the expense of the voyage had been considered in making the award. Replication—That plaintiff had not been allowed to state the amount of the expenses of the voyage, or the circumstances under which defendant requested her to take it. Held that the replication was bad, on the ground that if the claim could have been treated as the subject of damages it ought to have been so treated, and in that aspect it was immaterial whether it was or was not included in the award, because no action can be maintained for the recovery of further damages in respect of a cause of action for which damages have already been given by arbitration, unlike the case where "all matters in difference" are referred, in which case matters in difference not brought before the arbitrator may be subsequently sued for; and that, in this instance, the specific matter of damages for breach of contract having been submitted, and an award having been given on it, no further claim on it could be maintained. Khull v. Haddon, 4 A.J.R., 35.

7. Arbitrators and Umpires.

Delegation of Functions—Discretion—Remission.] An act involving discretion cannot be delegated by an arbitrator. Levy v. Farrell, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 10.

The delegation by an arbitrator of the preparation of a mortgage to a conveyancer is not warranted. Ibid.

When the preparation of a mortgage had been delegated by an arbitrator to a conveyancer, the award was remitted to the arbitrator to direct the contents of the mortgage. Ibid.

Appointment of.]—Where a proviso in a lease provided for a submission to arbitration, and that one arbitrator might proceed alone in default of appointment of a second, and that the award shall be made a Rule of Court, Held, that the appointment of an arbitrator must be part of the submission, and that such appointment must be made in writing, and such writing ought to form part of the rule. In re Backhaus and Steele, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 184; 1 A.L.T., 11.

Misconduct of Umpire—Setting Aside Award.] Certain matters were referred to two arbitrators. These being unable to agree the matters were referred to an umpire. The umpire, after the close of the arbitration, called for the attendance of the arbitrators who had been examined as witnesses on either side, before him, and consulted one in the absence of the other. He then made his award in favour of the defendant, whose arbitrator he had so consulted. A rule nisi was obtained to set aside the award and the answering affidavits of the umpire and the arbitrator stated that the reason for sending for the arbitrators was to explain to them his views, and so to allay the dissensions between them. Rule discharged. In re Fowler and Sinnot, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 320; 1 A.L.T., 49.

Appointing Umpire Without Express Authority—Act No. 274, Sec. 269.]—Where a submission provided in Clause 27 that the award of the arbitrators should be final and gave them no power to appoint an umpire, but they did so appoint, Held, that Clause 27 did not mean that there should not be an umpire, and that Sec. 269 of the Act No. 274 applied and gave them the power they had exercised. In re Bailey and Hart, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 311; 5 A. L. T. 102.

Misconduct—Partiality—Refusal to Stats Case.—Act No. 274, Sec. 21.]—It was sought to set aside an award on account of the partiality and misconduct of an umpire, based upon several instances in which he seemed to have shown partiality towards one of the persons, and his refusal to state a case under Sec. 21 of Act No. 274 for the opinion of the Court upon a difficult point of law, and deciding it in that person's favour. Held that the 21st Section of Act No. 274, was permissive, and not compulsory, and though it is desirable that the clauses should make the statement of a case compulsory, yet the refusal did not constitute legal misconduct; and though the instances of partiality, taken collectively, raised a suspicion, yet they did not necessarily lead to the inference of partiality such as is necessary to make them a good ground for setting aside an award. Ibid.

8. Costs.

Reference under 21 Vic., No. 38, Sec. 24—Subsequent Trial by Jury—Board of Land and Works.]—The Board of Land and Works, having occasion to take land for a railway, disputed with the owner the amount of compensation to be paid. Eventually it was agreed to refer the matter to arbitration, and by the reference the costs were to be in the discretion of the arbitrators. The arbitrators awarded a certain sum and costs to the owner. The Board, being dissatisfied with the amount, applied under Act No. 38, Sec. 24, for a trial by jury, and the jury awarded a less sum than that awarded by the arbitrators. Upon a special case the question was, whether the owner of the land was entitled, under these circumstances, to recover the costs of the submission, reference and award. Held, per Stawell, C. J., and Williams, J., that, the Act being silent as to costs, the award as to costs was still binding by the agreement of the parties, and that the owner could recover them; but per Barry, J., that the costs were gone completely. Fenton v. Board of Land and Works, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 22.

Taxation of.]—An attorney's clerk sued for salary, and the defendant pleaded a set-off for a delivered bill of costs. There was a submission to arbitration and one of the terms was "Costs of action, reference and award to abide the event of the award." The arbitrator awarded a balance to the plaintiff, deeming a certain portion of the plaintiff's claim, and also a certain portion of the defendant's set-off proved. On such award the Prothonotary gave the plaintiff costs, holding that the "event of the award" was in the plaintiff's favour. The Court refused to review the taxation. Woolcott v. Wisewould, 1 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 129.

Taxation—Discretion of Taxing Officer.]—If the taxing officer proceeds on a right principle the Court does not interfere with his discretion, even where it might be disposed to take a different view. He cannot treat any part of the award as a nullity till it is set aside by the Court. Cudmore v. McPherson, Brooks v. McPherson, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 208.

Fees of Counsel.]—There is no rule as to the cost of an arbitration, that counsels' fees are not to be allowed unless previous notice has been given. Ibid.

Of Setting Aside Award.]—When the ground upon which an award was set aside was not mentioned in the notice of motion to set it aside, the application to set aside was granted without costs. In the matter of Husbands and Husbands, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 208; 6 A.L.T., 60.

ARCHITECT.

Action to Recover Fees in Respect of Plans.]—M. employed F. to prepare plans for the erection of a store, such store not to cost more than £4000 for erection. F. prepared plans, but such that a building could not be erected in accordance with them for less than £6000. Various alterations were made with a view to bring the plans within the limit, but unsuccessfully, and the project of building the store was abandoned. F. sued M. for his fees in respect of the plans, and recovered a verdict. On rule for a new trial Held, that F. was not entitled to succeed, and rule made absolute. Flannagan v. Matc, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 157.

ARMY AND NAVY.

"Military and Naval Discipline Act 1870," Sec. 2—Infant.]—An infant may, under Sec. 2 of the "Military and Naval Discipline Act 1870," No. 389, even without his parent's consent, enter into an agreement to serve; and an application by an infant's mother for his discharge from service as a "boy" on board a ship of war was refused. In re Hayes, 4 A.J.R., 34.

"Military and Naval Discipline Act 1870," Sec. 4—Habeas Corpus.]—On a return to a writ of habeas corpus by which the officer in charge of the ship was required to bring up the body of the infant in question, and show cause why he was detained on board, it did not appear on the face of the returns that the infant so detained was an infant, and so that an objection that he could not take the oath of fealty could not be maintained. It did not appear on the face of the return, moreover, that the officer who administered the oath had authority under Sec. 4 of the Act to administer it; but there being no doubt as to his jurisdiction, an amendment was allowed. The Court moreover held that the engagement to serve was one for the benefit of the infant. Ibid, p. 77.

"Military and Naval Discipline Act 1870," Secs. 3-5—Commissionsd Officers.]—Commissioned officers appointed under Sec. 5 of the "Military and Naval Discipline Act 1870," are not subject to the provisions of the Act as to fines or any other punishment, except dismissal, though persons engaged under Secs. 3 and 4 are subject to the provisions of the Act as regards fines, &c. Regina v. Sturt, ex parte Johnson, 4 A.J.R., 78.

Wrongful Dismissal from Forces—Action against the Crown.]—The contract to serve the Crown in the colonial military or naval forces is unilateral, and implies no corresponding obligation on the part of the Crown to continue the employment; and a petition against the Crown cannot be maintained for wrongful dismissal from such forces. Flynn v. The Queen, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 208; 2 A.L.T., 21.

29 and 30 Vic., Cap. 109, Secs. 19, 23, 50—Re-arrest by Commodore on a Charge of Desertion after Discharge of Prisoner on Habeas Corpus from Custody for Offence of Absence without Leave.]—A bandsman on one of H.M. ships of war was arrested and put into custody for the offence of being absent without leave, under Sec. 23, and was discharged on habeas corpus: he was re-arrested under a charge of desertion, under Sec. 19. Holroyd, J. (in Chambers,) being of opinion on the evidence that the second warrant was not issued for the same offence as the first, dismissed a motion for attachment for contempt of Court. *Regina v. ASSIGNMENT.

Equitable—Revocation.]—C., by writing, directed P. and another to hold moneys on trust, to pay the interest to his wife for life, and the trustees consented to act on such directions, and made payment accordingly till the commencement of an action by C. against the trustees for money had and received. C. alleged that before suit he had revoked the directions to the trustees. Held that the equitable assignment was complete; and that C. could not afterwards revoke the directions or sue for the money. Cowper v. Plaisted, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 88.

Equitable Assignment—Right of Assignee to Sue Third Party Directly in Equity.]—Per Stephen, J., that equitable assignments are not confined to assignments of choses in action, but if third party is under liability to assignor and assignor refuses the use of his name in action at law by assignee, the assignee may sue third party directly in Equity. Ross v. Blackham, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 220.

Equitable Assignment—Government "H" Order—Notice.]—F., who had undertaken some Government contracts, was in the habit of giving Government "H" orders to a bank as security for advances before and after upon the entire amount payable to him. These orders were in form regulated by Gazette, August 24, 1858, and were in blank, the bank filling up the blank to the extent of the amount payable. In an interpleader suit, which was brought by Board of Land and Works against the bank, who claimed as a security the sum due by Government to F., and against E. and G., who claimed the sum due as the official assignees of F., who became insolvent in November, 1874, Held affirming Molesworth, J., that a presentment of the order by the bank, and an oral request for payment did not apprise the Government of an equitable assignment, but was merely a request for payment, that the right to the contract money was in the apparent possession of F. at the date of his insolvency, and vested in E. and G. as trustees of the insolvent estate. Quære whether such an order filled up in blank would operate on moneys earned after its date. Quære per Full Court whether such notice should be given to the Contracting Department of Government, to the Treasurer, or to both. Board of Land and Works v. Ecroyd, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 304; 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 45.

By Operation of Law—Sheriff's Sale—"Land Act 1865," Sec. 22.]—A bargain and sale by the Sheriff of the leasehold interest held by an execution debtor under the "Land Act 1865,"

No 237, is an assignment by operation of law which the Board of Land and Works is bound to register under Sec. 22 of the Act. Regina v. Board of Land and Works, 2 V.R. (L.,) 151; 2 A.J.R., 87.

I. OF DEBTS.

Foreign Attachment—"Common Law Procedure Statute" Sec. 225.]—Upon an application to set aside a writ of foreign attachment the affidavits showed that defendant had his place of business in Melbourne, and he had no other place of residence. While he was abroad in Sydney an action was commenced against him, and a writ of foreign attachment issued. Held that the circumstances were sufficiently suspicious to justify the writ, and application refused. Synnot v. Ray, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 70.

"Common Law Practice Act," Sec. 179—Construction—Surplus in hands of Sheriff after Sale.]—The surplus in the hands of the Sheriff after a levy and sale by him under an execution, are not "monies of the judgment debtor in his hands," which can be attached by a second judgment creditor, under the "Common Law Practice Act," Sec. 179. Per Stawell, C.J.—"I think that the Act only applies to cases in which the money, or goods to be converted into money, has been placed in the hands of one person by another; and, where the person has received them by the express or implied consent of the debtor, then only is he a garnishee within this Act. In all cases of agency and bailment the Act will apply, and has been held to apply." Oriental Bank v. Grant, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 16.

Writ of Foreign Attachment When Issued—What may be Attached Thereunder.]—A writ of foreign attachment may be issued in an action in the Supreme Court on a judgment recovered in the Court of Vice-Admiralty; and the separate property of one defendant may be attached on such a writ for a joint debt of himself and other defendants. White v. Glover, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 40.

Debt Accruing Due—Money Due on Contract—Assignment.]—G. contracted with a Borough Council to construct a drain, under an agreement which provided that payments at the rate of 50 per cent. on the work done should be made to the contractor and the balance on completion of contract. G. received the 50 per cent. on the work he had done. He then assigned to R., whom the Council accepted as contractor. H., a creditor of G., sought to attach moneys in the Council's hands. Held, that the debt was not one existing or accruing due to G., and that G. having assigned all his interest, H. could not be in any better position than G. Judgment for defendant. Harkness v. Mayor, &c., of Maryborough, 3 A.J.R., 26.

On Foreign Judgment—Irregularity—Waiver.]—As a rule no attachment can be granted under a foreign judgment unless a rule or summons to show cause has previously been granted; but where an order had been obtained for attachment under a foreign judgment, and no rule or order to show cause had been taken out, but the plaintiff had slept on his rights and allowed two months to elapse without taking any steps to set aside the attachment, Held, that he had waived the irregularity and could not have the attachment set aside. Main v. Kirk, 1 A.J.R., 155.

Assignment of Debt Before Attachment Issued.]—Where an assignment of the garnishee's debt had been made by the judgment debtor before attachment was issued, the Court set aside the attachment. Cohu v. Strachan, 5 A.J.R., 38.

Foreign Attachment—Appearance after Judgment.]—Where after judgment had been signed in default and foreign attachment issued, defendants moved for leave to defend the action, and to set aside the attachment; the Court directed that defendants might plead to the declaration in the action, the trial to take place in the usual way, but no proceedings to be taken on the record beyond verdict and trial without special leave. Croaker v. Baines, N.C., 16.

Foreign Attachment—Act No. 274, Sec. 221—Appearance and Pleading Without Entering into a Bond.]—A writ of foreign attachment was issued against D. D. afterwards appeared to the declaration, and pleaded without entering into a bond. Held, per Stawell, C. J., and Stephen, J. (dissentiente Barry, J.) that there was nothing in Sec. 221 to deprive D. of his common-law right to appear and plead without entering into a bond. Fogarty v. Dennis, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 479.

Garnishee Disputing Liability—Defence—"Common Law Procedure Statute 1864," Sec. 204.]—Where a garnishee denies his liability, and proceedings are taken under Sec. 204 of the "Common Law Procedure Statute 1864," to compel payment of the amount of a judgment debt, the only question between the judgment creditor and the garnishee is, whether the latter owes money to the judgment debtor, and he cannot impeach the validity of the judgment obtained by the plaintiff; nor is the insolvency of the debtor since the attachment of the debt any defence to him, since the service of the order nisi to attach the debt operates as a charge, so as to make the judgment creditor a secured creditor under Sub-sec v. of Sec. 65 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871." Watson v. Morrow, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 134; 1 A.L.T., 167.

Foreign Attachment—Writ Addressed to Garnishee in Wrong Name—Practice.]—Where a writ of foreign attachment was addressed to the garnishee in the wrong name, Holroyd, J., held that looking at Sec. 211 of the "Common Law Procedure Statute, 1865," which provides that the garnishee must be named in the affidavit, he would not allow the writ to be amended, but that the application must be commenced de novo. Bailey v. Barclay, 6 A.L.T., 66.

Effect of a Consent Order—Costs—4 Vic., No. 6, Sec. 5.]—C. sued S. a foreign debtor, and issued a writ of foreign attachment to N. as garnishee, who held valuables of S. attaching such to a certain extent. P. sued S., and issued another writ. The parties agreed that N. should sell and hold proceeds, subject to attachment to meet the claim in each action with costs, and that N. should write to S. and learn if he admitted claims, and if so, N. should pay; but, if not, that S. should be at liberty to appear and defend each action, N. retaining sufficient proceeds to satisfy judgments. This agreement was embodied in a consent order. U. then sued S. and obtained a writ, subject to the order supposed to exist, and referred to in the consent order, and attaching the "residue" of the valuables in N.'s hands. On summons by U. calling upon S., N. and other plaintiffs to show cause why the whole of the valuables in N.'s hands should not be attached to satisfy U.'s claim. Held, that the consent order was informal and invalid; but as it embodied a bonâ fide agreement, supported by consideration, and as U.'s order recognised the claims in the preceding actions, those claims were protected by Sec. 5 of Act No. 6, and U.'s order could only be enforced subject to such claims as far as the actual debts were concerned, but not as to costs, which were prospective, and could not then be the subject of a bonâ fide claim or lien. Udall v. Stevens, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 203.

Foreign Attachment—Return to Writ—Non est Inventus—No. 274, Secs. 211, 214.]—A return to a writ of foreign attachment in the words "He cannot be found," instead of "Non est inventus," as prescribed by Secs. 211, 214 of the "Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," is a sufficient compliance with the Act. Wilson v. Threlkeld, 3 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 158.

Foreign Attachment—Affidavits of Cause of Action—No. 274, Sec. 211.]—Under Sec. 211 of the "Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," separate affidavits in support of a writ of foreign attachment need not be made, one of the cause of action, and another that the cause arose in Victoria; but the two statements may be, and should be when convenient, made in the same affidavit. Ibid.

Foreign Attachment—Order for Sale—Application by Garnishee Necessary—Consent—No. 274, Sec. 217.]—By Sec. 217 of the "Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," if the garnishee be desirous of disposing of goods attached in his hands, he must make an application to the Court or a Judge for that purpose, and semble, that an order to sell made without such application is ultra vires, and that an order made by consent of the garnishee without such application should be set aside. Ibid.

Foreign Attachment—"Common Law Procedure Statute," No. 274, Sec. 215—Damages for Sale of Goods by Garnishee.]—W. purchased tea from T., a Sydney merchant. Some of the parcels arrived, but as they did not correspond with the tea purchased, W. brought an action and recovered damages. W. issued a writ of foreign attachment, and the teas sent to Melbourne were attached. When so attached they had got into the hands of A., a creditor of T., and the writ of attachment was directed to A. as garnishee. A Judge's order, directing A. to sell part of the tea and hold the proceeds subject to the attachment, was set aside. After this A. sold the tea, shipping it to Sydney. Subsequently another order was made to the same effect, ante-dated to the date of the former order. Summons, under Sec. 215 of the Statute, calling upon A. to show cause why he should not pay damages for removal of the property attached. The summons being adjourned to Court, Held, it appearing from affidavits that the tea did not belong to T., but to another Sydney merchant, T. selling them only as broker, that W. had suffered no damage and the garnishee was not liable. Summons dismissed. Wilson v. Threlkeld, 4 W.W. and A'B. (L.,) 173.

Affirmed on appeal, where the Privy Council held that it was essential that the property should belong actually and not constructively to the defendant in the action, and that being satisfied of that fact, the granting an issue to try the question of property, or making an order against the garnishee in respect thereof, is a matter for the discretion of the Court. Wilson v. Trail, L.R. 3, P.C. 33.

Garnishee—Crown Cannot be.]—The provisions of the "Common Law Procedure Act 1865," No.

274, as to garnishees do not apply to the Crown, or to public officers, in respect of moneys due by the Crown to the judgment debtor. Aitken v. Godkin, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 216.

Recovering Moneys Erroneously Paid by Garnishees.]—An action may be maintained by garnishees who have paid over to judgment creditor moneys which they erroneously believed to belong to the judgment debtor, and who, after payment, have discovered their mistake, and have obtained the setting aside of the garnishee proceedings against the judgment creditor for money had and received to their use, and may recover the amount. Beauchamp v. Nathan, 5 W. W. & A'B (L.,) 219.

Affidavit—"Common Law Procsdure Statute," Sec. 201.]—On an application by a bank to attach a debt in the hands of third persons, the affidavit, under Sec. 201 of the "Common Law Procedure Statute," began, "I, B., Inspector of the —— Bank, make oath, &c." On objection that the affidavit did not appear to be made by the judgment creditor or his attorney. Held (in chambers) that the objection was fatal and order discharged. London Chartered Bank v. Webb, 1 A.J.R., 119.

Foreign Attachmsnt—"Common Law Procedurs Statute," No. 274, Ssc. 224.]—A judgment creditor, who has obtained a writ of foreign attachment, has only an inchoate right, it may be rendered complete by levy; such a levy to perfect title against an official assignee of the debtor who becomes insolvent after the writ is issued, is necessary under Sec. 224 of the "Common Law Procedure Statute." Lauratet v. McCracken, 3 V.R. (L.,) 41; 3 A.J.R., 35.

See S.C. under INSOLVENCY—Effect of.

Foreign Attachmsnt—"Common Law Procsdurs Statute 1865," Ssc. 225.]—A writ of foreign attachment will not be set aside merely because it is addressed to a bank as garnishee instead of to the inspector. If a writ is wrongly addressed, it will not bind the property. Synnot v. Ray, I. V.L.R. (L.,) 70.

II. OF PERSONS.

For Debt and Costs—Barrsd as to Costs by Liquidation.]—In an order for payment of debt and costs, the costs are incidental to the debt, and therefore when the enforcement of a decree for the debt is prevented by a liquidation, there can be no attachment for the coste, though they were not provable under the liquidation. England v. Moore, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 48, 54; 1 A.L.T. 172.

For Non-Payment of Debt and Costs—Will not be Granted after Liquidation.]—The "Insolvency Statute 1871," No. 379, Sec. 150 (xi.,) forbids any suit or action against a debtor whose affairs have been liquidated, and therefore, since a suit must be carried on in order to obtain an attachment against a defendant for non-payment of his debt and costs, if such debtor before the order has entered into liquidation by arrangement with his creditors, such attachment will not be granted. England v. Moore, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 48; 1 A.L.T., 158.

For Non-Payment of Costs—Defect in Decree Cured by Subpœna.]—Where a decree directing payment of costs does not specify any time for payment, such defect is cured by the issue of a subpœna, and attachment may issue. Forbes v. Clarton, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 200.

For Non-Paymsnt of Costs—Attorney under Power Demanding Payment.]—A subpœna for the payment of costs to the plaintiff having issued, he executed a power of attorney to a person, H. J. B., to demand and receive payment. Upon the affidavit of the attorney of a demand by him, under the name of H. B., and refusal to pay, an attachment was issued and the defendant was arrested. Upon motion to turn him over, an objection that the power of attorney was directed to H. J. B., and the demand was made by H. B., i.e, not the person authorised to receive payment, was overruled, and it was held that a demand by any agent of the principal bearing the subpœna was sufficient. Ibid.

Non-Payment of Costs undsr Interlocutory Order.]—Where in an interlocutory order nothing is said about time of payment of costs, the presumption arises that they are to be paid when finally taxed; but where an interlocutory order directing a postponement of the action ordered payment of costs already incurred "when taxed," and costs were taxed and a demand was made, Held that the party to whom costs should have been paid was entitled to enforce payment by attachment before final taxation. Robertson v. Mohabeer, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 482.

In What Cases—For Non-Payment of Costs—"Act for Abolishing Imprisonment for Debt," Sec. 2.]—Semble, that the "Act for Abolishing Imprisonment for Debt," No. 292, Sec. 2, does not affect the power of the Court to issue an attachment for disobedience of an order to pay costs. In re Sandilands, ex parte Browne, 4 V.L.R. (L.) 318.

The Acts for abolishing imprisonment for debt do not affect the power of the Court to issue an attachment for disobedience of a rule ordering payment of costs. Ex parte Dalton, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 417.

Semble, that the Court will not grant an attachment, after the applicant has had resort to a purely civil remedy, as, for instance, by obtaining a rule to show cause why the money should not be paid, or by issuing execution. Ibid.

For Non-Payment of Costs—Subpœna.]—A writ of attachment for non-payment of costs may issue from the office upon the mere production of the subpœna for costs, and an affidavit of its service and of demand and non-payment, and no order of the Court for its issue is necessary. Evans v. Guthridge, 1 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 49.

Discharge from.]—A party should only be discharged from an attachment for non-payment of costs, upon paying, as well as the costs endorsed upon the writ of attachment, the costs of the certificate upon which the subpœna for costs was based, the subpœna itself and of the attachment. Ibid.

Subpœna for Attachment.]—The Supreme Court Rules do not abolish the power of arrest under subpœna for costs, and the Court will issue an attachment for their non-payment. Blake v. Watson, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 139.

Costs — Ecclesiastical Suit — Attachment.]—Where costs in an ecclesiastical suit were not paid pursuant to the decree, an order absolute in the first instance for attachment granted. Cawley v. Cawley, 6 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 41.

An attachment will be granted for non-payment of arrears due under a decree for alimony pendente lite. Hunter v. Hunter, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 123.

How Enforced.]—The proper course to enforce payment of costs by attachment, is to proceed by subpœna.

But Semble, payment may be enforced under "Supreme Court Rules," Cap. 6, Rule 43, although no time is fixed by the original order, if a time within which payment is to be made be fixed by a subsequent order. Pokorney v. Ditchburne, 1 V.R. (E.,) 16.

The whole costs as taxed, and as named in the prothonotary's allocatur, amounted to a certain sum, including sheriff's costs. Rule for attachment refused where the sheriff's costs had been demanded separately, and also the amount of taxed costs. Held that the sum named in the allocatur should be demanded with a statement that it included all. Commercial Bank v. McDonald, 3 A.J.R., 29.

Discharge from Arrest—5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 3.]—A defendant in custody under an attachment for non-payment of costs, voluntarily sequestrated his estate, under 5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 3. On motion for his discharge from custody, Held, that the attachment was a "process against the person," within the meaning of the 5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 30, and that the defendant must be discharged. Laing v. Campbell, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 372.

For Disobedience of Order to Pay Alimony—Not Dissolved on Ground of Inability.]—An attachment for disobedience of an order to pay alimony will not be dissolved on the ground of inability. If the inability arises from want of means, the proper course is to apply to the Court, on notice to the other side, to have the order set aside. Campbell v. Campbell, 5 W. W. & A'B., (I. E. & M.,) 59.

For Breach of Injunction.]—An injunction was obtained against a defendant company restraining it, its manager, directors, workmen and servants from (inter alia) permitting sludge to flow over plaintiff's land. On motion for attachment for breach, Held that the utmost such an injunction means is, that if they caused the sludge to flow, they should accompany it by some precaution to prevent the flowing of the sludge; and that in working out an injunction of that nature, there is no contempt on the part of individual members or servants unless there is evidence of their doing what they are commanded not to do; but that the company should pay their costs of resisting the motion. Subsequently the Court being of opinion that the injunction was disobeyed, granted a motion for sequestration. Seal v. Webster-st. G.M. Company, 5 W. W & A'B. (E.,) 129.

Rule Nisi for Against Administrator not Filing "Three Months'" Inventory.]—A rule nisi had been granted calling upon an administrator to show cause why he should not be attached for not filing inventories within three months of the grant of administration, and since the rules were taken out the inventories had been filed upon affidavit, but no time had been given for examination of them. The inventory of the real estate was accepted as correct, but that of the personal estate only set out what the administrator had received, and did not state that this comprised all the personalty. The order made by the Court was rule absolute, with costs; disallow cause; no attachment to issue. In re Dowling, 1 A.J.R., 14.

Non-Payment of Amount Under an Award.]—No attachment will lie for non-payment of an amount found due under an award where the award contains no order to pay such amount. Fowler v. Walker, 1 A.J.R., 35.

Contempt of Court—Preparing Conveyance by Unauthorised Person.]—Upon a rule nisi for attachment for contempt of Court in preparing a conveyance by an unauthorised person, such a rule should precisely apprise the respondent of the subject of the complaint, especially as a simpler proceeding is provided under Sec. 13 of Act No. 33, and a second application based upon the same affidavits was refused, the first not having failed merely for a defect in the jurat or title. In re Heron, 5 A.J.R., 161.

Evasion of Service of Rule Nisi—Motion for Rule Absolute.]—A defendant had disobeyed an Order of the Court as to payment of a certain sum within a specified time, and had evaded service of the rule nisi. Motion for rule absolute without rule nisi. Held, that considering the other orders that had been made in the cause no such order would be made, but order for rule nisi made to be served on defendant's solicitor and returnable in a week. Punch v. Punch, 3 A.J.R., 43.

Arrest—Escape and Re-capture—Date of Return.]—A writ of attachment for non-payment of costs directed the Sheriff to bring up the person arrested on 17th June, 1875, or on the first day on which the Supreme Court should sit in Equity next after the arrest. On the morning of 17th June the person escaped and was re-arrested on 3rd July. On habeas corpus for his discharge on the ground that the writ had lapsed before the re-arrest—Held that the writ was not in proper form, as it did not follow Cap. 6 of "Supreme Court Rules," Rule 42, in directing production upon the "next day in Term, or on the next day on which the Court shall sit in Equity out of Term after such arrest, or as soon afterwards as possible"—that its force expired on 17th June, and it afforded no justification for the subsequent re-arrest. Prisoner discharged. In re Wall, 1 V.L.R, (L.,) 246.

Rule for Returnable on a Holiday.]—A rule for attachment returnable on a holiday was discharged with costs. In re Dryden, 3 A.J.R., 42.

"Common Law Procedure Statute," No. 274, Sec. 80—Writ Returnable on a Holiday.]—A writ returnable on a certain day in Term is void when such a day is one of the holidays fixed by Sec. 80 of the Act No. 274. Merry v. Nicholson, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 299.

In connection with the same case a rule absolute was granted in the first instance on the last day of Term for the issue of another writ of attachment tested of the date of issue and not of the date of the issue of the void writ. Evans v. The Queen, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 336.

Writ of Attachment—Rule for Not Discharged unless Terms of Order Complied With.]—A Rule of Court was made for the payment of a sum of money to the prosecutor, who executed a power of attorney to his solicitor or his clerk to receive the money. The money was not paid, and a rule was made absolute with costs for the issue of a writ of attachment, unless the defendant should pay the sum due and the costs of the rule to the prosecutor or his solicitor. Subsequently to this rule the defendant paid the sum due to the solicitor's clerk, under the first rule. Held that this was no payment so as to make the writ for attachment no longer operative. Re Phelps, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 37; 1 A.L.T., 152.

Duty of Sheriff under Writ.]—The duty of the sheriff under writ of attachment, ordering him to attach a defendant, "so that you may have him before us" on a certain day, is to arrest the defendant, lodge him in the gaol nearest to the place of arrest, unless the Court order otherwise, and there keep him until directed by the process of the Court to bring him up. Ibid.

Defendant Applying for Discharge—Matter Between Defendant and Prosecutor—Objections—Turning Over.]—If a defendant who has been arrested on a writ of attachment have himself brought before the Court on an application to be discharged, he cannot take any other exceptions to the regularity of the writ than he could have taken had he applied the day after his arrest for discharge on the ground of such irregularity; and when a defendant has so brought himself before the Court, the matter is then one entirely between him and the prosecutor, and not between him and the Sheriff, and he must be turned over as of course to the gaoler, unless he can show that the whole proceedings are void ab initio, or that he has purged his contempt. Ibid.

For Non-Compliance with Decree—Practice.]—Where a decree was made directing defendant to transfer a mining share to plaintiff, and deliver up the scrip to him, with a duly executed transfer endorsed thereon, within one month, and such decree was served personally upon the defendant, who failed to comply therewith. Upon motion for attachment, Held that a demand should have been made on defendant to comply with the decree, and there could be no contempt till such a demand was made. An order was made, however, directing defendant to hand in the scrip, duly endorsed, to the office of the plaintiff's solicitor, at an hour named, and upon affidavit of non-compliance attachment to issue. Filler v. Stephens, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 144.

For Contempt—Heading of Rule for Attachment.]—A rule to attach a person in contempt or to turn him over to the custody of the gaoler is not invalid for being irregularly headed "Re Reg. v. ——," instead of "Reg. v. ——;" or because the costs of the rule are not endorsed on the writ. These irregularities merely form matter for objections which may be waived by delay in applying to the Court or a Judge. Re Phelps, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 164; 2 A.L.T., 4.

Person Decreed to Pay Money Becoming Insolvent.]—An order on ex parte motion will not be made for attachment of a defendant who has failed to pay money ordered by a decree when such defendant has subsequently become insolvent. Notice of motion is necessary in such a case. Lane v. Loughnan, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 19; 2 A.L.T., 134.

Writ of—"Supreme Court Rules," Cap. VI., Rule 42—Wrong Date.]—Where a writ of attachment directed that defendant should be brought before the Court on the 26th day of June, or on the next day after the arrest on which the Court should be sitting, June being put in in error for May, and Sheriff brought up prisoner on 26th May. Held, that prisoner should be turned over without prejudice to any application he might wish to make to the Court. In re Givan, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 52.

Refusal to Execute Conveyance—Time to be Fixed in Order Nisi.]—An attachment for refusal to sign a conveyance directed by an order under further directions was refused on ground that order nisi did not fix a time within which conveyance was to be executed. Order made on subsequent motion, appointing a time, and directing an attachment to issue on non-compliance with the order. Cameron v. M'Namara, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 17.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL.

1. When he is a Necessary Party.
2. When he Represents the Crown.
3. Costs of and Against.

1. When he is a Necessary Party.

Mining on Private Property—Rights of Shareholders and Directors inter se.]—Where a Mining Company was mining on private property alienated from the Crown, and a suit was brought to enforce the liabilities of directors to the shareholders, Held, that as to enforcing liabilities between shareholders and directors, it was not right that either should be embarrassed by the fact that both were liable to be treated as trespassers by the Crown, and that the Attorney-General was not a necessary party. Reeves v. Croyle, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 302.

Held, per Molesworth, J., that in a suit by bill and information, seeking an injunction to restrain persons from mining on another's private property, the Attorney-General of Victoria, and not the Attorney-General of England nor the Commissioners of Crown Lands, is the proper officer to file the information, and that the Constitution Act, though it transferred the management of Crown property to local authorities, does not transfer the remedy for encroachment upon it, and those rights can only be enforced by the law officers of the Crown, and that the Attorney-General is the proper person to enforce such rights in Victoria. Attorney-General v. Gee, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 122.

Joinder of Attorney-General with a Municipal Corporation and an Owner of Private Property to Restrain Mining.]—Where the Attorney-General, a Municipal Corporation, and an owner of private property joined in an information and bill to restrain mining, Semble, per Molesworth, J., the Attorney-General, a Municipal Corporation, and the owner cannot join for different injuries—the one complaining of the removal of the gold, the other of the injury to the streets, and the third of injury to his property. Attorney-General v. Rogers, 1 V.R. (E.,) 132, 139; 1 A.J.R., 120, 149.

Landlords and tenants may join in a suit for injury to the soil, and the Attorney-General as representing the Crown may join in the suit for an injunction and account. Attorney-General v. Boyd, 3 A.J.R., 18, 99, 130.

The Attorney-General and freehold owners may join in a suit to restrain a trespasser from mining for gold on the land. Attorney-General v. Lansell, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 155, 172; 3 A.L.T., 141.

Motion for Inspection.]—Semble, in a suit for encroachment by Attorney-General and licensees if the encroachment is admitted, a motion for inspection, to which the Attorney-General is not a party, will not be granted. Ibid.

Licensees from Owner Mining on Private Land—Encroachment—Suit for Account of Gold Taken.]—Where plaintiff and defendant held licenses from the owner of private property to mine on his land, and defendant had encroached, on bill by plaintiff seeking inter alia an injunction restraining defendant from driving for or taking gold or auriferous earth from plaintiff's part of the land, and for an account of gold already taken, Held that since the Attorney-General was not made a party the injunction and account could not be granted. Astley United Gold Mining Company v. Cosmopolitan Gold Mining Company, 4 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 96.

Mining Suit—One Applicant for a Lease Suing Another for Trespass.]—The Attorney-General is not a necessary party to a suit of trespass instituted by one applicant for a mining lease against another who has an expectation of a lease. Robertson v. Morris, 7 V.L.R. (M.,) 1; 2 A.L.T., 109.

Sale of Crown Lands.]—In a suit to restrain the sale of Crown lands the Attorney-General, as representing the Crown, is a necessary party. Palmer v. Board of Land and Works, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 80.

For facts see S. C. post under Crown.

Injunction Against Nuisance.]—A municipal corporation, charged with the care and management of streets, suing for an injunction to restrain mining under a street upon the ground of expenses incurred in keeping down nuisance occasioned by subsidence of the street may in that aspect sue alone, and the Attorney-General is not a necessary party. Mayor, &c. of Ballarat v. Victoria United G.M. Company, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 10.

2. When he Represents the Crown.

In a suit by bill and information against a private person to set aside a sale of Crown lands to him on the ground of mutual mistake as to the value of improvements on the land, the Attorney-General is the proper person to represent the Crown; he has the right and duty to do all acts done by usage by an officer of the same name in the mother country. Semble, there is no distinction between proceedings to protect unalienated Crown property, and to set aside improper alienations; it is not necessary for the Attorney-General to prove his appointment. Attorney-General v. Belson, 4 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 57.

His Right to Represent the Grand Jury.]—See Regina v. Patterson, post CRIMINAL LAW—Practice and Procedure—Jury.

3. COSTS OF AND AGAINST.

When entitled to.]—Where the Attorney-General was a necessary party to a suit respecting charities, though he rendered the Court no assistance, the Court allowed him his costs. Treacy v. Watson, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 96; 5 A.L.T., 201.

For other cases see under COSTS—Of and Against Particular Persons.

AUCTION AND AUCTIONEER.

Entries by Auctioneer's Clerk—Sufficiency within "Statute of Frauds."]—At a sale by auction where the auctioneer's clerk acts as amanuensis and writes down the names of the purchasers, the names of the purchasers should be called out by the clerk to show that he was aware of the person to whom the goods were knocked down. Moss v. Cohen, 3 V.R. (L.,) 205; 3 A.J.R., 104.

Agent for Purchaser—Entry of Purchaser's Name in the Sale-Book by Auctioneer's Clerk.]—An entry by the auctioneer's clerk of a person's name to whom goods are knocked down at an auction sale is not a sufficient signature by the agent of a purchaser to satisfy the "Statute of Frauds." Pratt v. Rush, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 421.

Auctioneer's Clerk—How far he Binds a Purchaser by Entering his Name in a Sale-Book.]—See Service v. Walker, under SALE—OF GOODS—post.

Agent for Purchaser—Sale of Land—Revocation of Authority.]—Certain land was sold by auction, and D. had it knocked down to him. The auctioneer's clerk entered D.'s name as purchaser in the contract for sale. D. was asked to sign the contract, which he refused, and afterwards repudiated the sale. Six months after auction, but before action, the auctioneer signed the contract of sale as agent for D., the purchaser. The vendor sued D. on the contract, and recovered a verdict. On rule nisi for a nonsuit, Held, that the auctioneer became the purchaser's agent directly the hammer fell, and as such had authority to sign the contract on his behalf, but that such authority was revocable, and was in this case actually revoked. Rule absolute. Ecroyd v. Davis, 3 V.R. (L.,) 228; 3 A.J.R., 114.

Sale by—Warranty of Title.]—An engine was put up for sale in the vendor's presence, a third person B. put in his claim to it, and the auctioneer said he had a guarantee from the vendor. R. purchased it, but B. recovered possession of it in an action of trover. In an action by R. against the vendor, Held, there had been an express warranty of title. Robbins v. McCulloch, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 20.

Sale "as Agents of Vendors"—Commission—Costs.]—An auctioneer, M., sold certain land under conditions of sale, which provided for the purchaser paying a deposit to M., "as agent for the vendor." Held that M. was entitled to commission. The vendors could not make title, and the purchaser sued M. for a return of the deposit, and succeeded, getting certain costs. Held that M. could not recover from the vendors the costs paid to the purchaser or his own costs, because he had not raised a proper defence, i.e. that he was not a stakeholder, to the action. McMillan v. Read, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 284.

Effecting Sales Without a License—Partners—License to One Partner—"Sales by Auction Statute 1864," Sec. 18.]—An unlicensed partner in a firm, which has the word "auctioneers" painted up on its business premises, is liable to the penalty imposed by Sec. 18 of the "Sales by Auction Statute 1864," for having words painted on his premises which led to the belief that he was an auctioneer, not being a licensed auctioneer, though all sales by auction are conducted by the partner who has a license. Ex parte Mills re Alley, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 316; 4 A.L.T., 80.

Commission—Sale by Owner.]—W. put certain property into B.'s hands for sale by auction, and without formally withdrawing it from sale by B. W. sold it to a purchaser not introduced by B. Held, that B. was not entitled to a commission. Bliss v. Withers, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 32.

Commission — Sale under Decree.]—Where a decree was made for the sale of real estate under the direction of the Master, the proceeds of sale to be paid into Court to abide the order of the Court, Held, that the auctioneer should retain his commission out of the proceeds before paying into Court, and pay the net proceeds into Court. McMillan v. Houston, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 168.

AUDIT AND AUDITORS.

Of Accounts of Road District—Special Auditors—"District and Shires Act," No. 176, Sec. 164.]—Special auditors appointed under the Act No. 176, Sec. 164, for a certain Road District, were required to make a special audit of the accounts of the Board. At the audit, which was held in December, they had submitted to them the balanced accounts of the two complete months of October and November, which had elapsed since the last general audit for the year ending 30th September. Not finding what they required in the accounts submitted to them, the auditors called for the accounts of the year ending 30th September, and, no objection being made, specially audited the accounts for the whole fourteen months. On suing in the County Court for their fees for the fourteen months, the Judge held that they were only entitled to payment for the two months of October and November, not being competent to re-audit the accounts of the previous twelve months already audited by the general auditors under Sec. 162 of the Act. On appeal, Held, that the decision was right, and appeal dismissed. Rucker v. Moorabbin District Road Board, 3 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 101.

Applicant for Mandamus to Compel Shire Council to Pay Fees for Special Audit—Smaller Amount Awarded than that Sought.]—An applicant for a mandamus to a shire council compelling them to pay him the fees of a special audit, is entitled to his costs notwithstanding that a smaller amount has been awarded him than that sought. Regina v. Shire of Pyalong, 4 A.J.R., 124.

Mandamus to Borough Council to Compel Payment of Audit Fees—"Local Government Act 1874," Sec. 519.]—The Council refused to grant a Mandamus (questioning Regina v. Shire of Pyalong, 4 A.J.R., 124,) to compel a municipal body to pay fees for auditing its accounts, pointing out that there was a remedy by arbitration under Sec. 519 of the "Local Government Act 1874." Regina v. Mayor, &c., of Collingwood, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 46.

BAIL.

In Criminal Matters—Estreatment.]—M., being convicted of embezzlement was sentenced, but several points were reserved, and pending the decision of such points, execution of the sentence was respited. M. and two sureties entered into a recognizance before a Justice of the Peace, conditioned that M. should "appear at the next Court of General Gaol delivery, to be holden at Melbourne, on the 7th of September, or whenever thereto required." No Court of Gaol Delivery sat in Melbourne on the 7th September, because the Court was sitting in Banco for Michaelmas term. M. appeared, however, and the points reserved were argued, and judgment was reserved. On the 30th September the case was called on for judgment, but M. did not appear, having absconded. The Court accordingly did not deliver judgment, but permission was given for an application to be made at the next Ballarat Circuit Court for an order requiring his sureties to produce him, and an order was made at such Circuit Court for M.'s appearance at the next General Gaol delivery at Melbourne on the 16th October. It was served at M.'s residence on his wife, and also on the sureties. M. did not surrender himself on the day named, and an application was made to the presiding Judge at Criminal Sessions to have the recognizances estreated, which was referred to the Full Court. Held, that M. having appeared to receive sentence in the terms of the recognizances, which did not require him to render himself, and no Court having sat on the day upon which he was to appear, the recognizances could not be estreated. Regina v. Moore, 2 V.R. (L.,) 190; 2 A.J.R., 115.

When Granted or Refused]—After conviction and sentence for conspiracy, questions of law were reserved, and the prisoners were let out on bail; but judgment was given for the Crown on the questions reserved, and immediately afterwards a rule nisi for a new trial was obtained, on the ground that the verdict was against evidence, and that the jury had acted partially. An application that the prisoners should go again on bail was refused. Regina v. Nathan, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 317.

BAILMENT.

Deposit of Scrip as Security for Debt—Rights of Pledgee.]—Generally speaking, a pledgee of chattels has a right to reimburse himself by a sale, but this sale should not be to the pledgee, or to a trustee for him, and should, according to American authorities, be by auction. R. deposited scrip for 130 shares with N. to secure payment of a debt within a month. R. made default, and N. advertised the scrip for sale by auction. At this sale N. bought the shares in, and stated he would allow redemption within a week, and took an I.O.U. from R. in part payment, which proved valueless. N. afterwards, without further notice to R., sold the shares to S., as trustee for M. On a bill by R. against M. and N.'s official assignee to set aside the sale to M., and for redemption of the shares and transfer, Held that after the attempted auction sale, R. and N. resumed their former positions of pledgor and pledgee, and that the sale to M. was an improper sale. Declaration that plaintiff was entitled to redeem. Ryan v. Macintosh, 4 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 8.

Pledge—Sub-Pledge.]—Certain mining scrip was pledged to B., as security for certain advances, and was sub-pledged by B. to a bank to secure an overdraft. The pledgor then tendered to the bank the amount of B.'s advances. Held that the pledgor was entitled to have the property restored. Colonial Bank v. Mitchell, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 12.

Selling Bread Without Weighing It—"Bakers' and Millers' Statute 1865," Sec. 11—Sale by Servant.]—A baker is liable to the penalty imposed by Sec. 11 of the "Bakers' and Millers' Statute 1865," for selling bread in his shop without previously weighing it in the presence of the customer, though the sale may, in fact, have been made by his servant. *Regina v. Evidence of Banker's Books—Act No. 620, Secs. 4, 8.]—A defendant Bank may, under Sec. 4, prove the entries in books by secondary evidence of the copies, and need not, under Sec. 8, require the production of the originals. Oriental Banking Corporation v. Smith, 1 A.L.T., 76.

Post-dated—Liability of Banker Paying before Due.]—A post-dated cheque is a bill of exchange for the number of days for which it is post-dated; and a banker paying such a cheque before the date upon it may become liable to his customer for negligence. Hinchcliffe v. Ballarat Banking Company, 1 V.R. (L.,) 229; 1 A.J.R., 169.

Consideration for—Cashing]—Cashing a cheque for the convenience of the holder is a purchase of the cheque, if there be funds to meet it, when presented with due diligence, and does not render the holder, who delivers it to the person cashing it without endorsing it, liable thereon, and does not furnish a consideration for a subsequent endorsement of it by him. Campbell v. Connor, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 297; 2 A.L.T., 46; sub. nom., Connor v. Campbell.

When not a New Drawing.]—Where a cheque which had been cashed and presented by the person cashing it was dishonored, and the person cashing it thereupon brought it back to the person for whom he had cashed it, and, without informing him of the presentment and dishonor, requested him to endorse it, Held, that such endorsement was not a new drawing. Ibid.

In Due Time—Notice of Dishonour.]—In the case of a Bill of Exchange the time for presentment is clearly fixed; but, assuming the solvency of all the parties, in the case of a cheque there is no limitation for presentment, short of the six years of the Statute; and, when there is also no insolvency, notice of dishonour may be given within any reasonable time. Hutton v. Glass, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 163.

"Instrument and Securities Statute," No. 204, Secs. 33, 34, 35.]—To an action by the bearer of a cheque against the maker it was pleaded, that before and at the time the plaintiffs became the bearers, and before and at the time of its presentment, the cheque bore across its face two transverse or parallel lines and was a duly crossed cheque within the meaning of Act No. 204. Held, on demurrer to the plea by Stawell, C. J., and Barry, J. (dissentiente Williams, J.,) that it was quite consistent with the plea that when the cheque left the drawer it was not a crossed cheque, and that irrespective of legislation the lines were not a material part thereof; and that under Act No. 204, the lines were not a material part of the cheque, and that the plea was no answer to the declaration. Judgment for plaintiffs. Golden Lake Company v Wood, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 170; N. C. 2.

Cheque Improperly Filled In—Essential Features of Chequss.]—The statement in the body of a cheque is the dominant and essential mode of expressing the essential element of a valid complete instrument, viz., the sum of money, and until this portion is filled in, the instrument is incomplete, and a banker is not liable to an action at the suit of the customer for refusing to honour, on presentment, a cheque thus imperfect. Commercial Bank of Australia v. Hulls, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 110; 6 A.L.T., 9.

Crossed Cheques—Notice Not to Pay from Holdsr of Lost Cheque—Liability of Bank.]—The holder of a crossed cheque, dated 20th April, lost it on that day. The 21st and 22nd were bank holidays. On the 23rd, before the bank opened, the holder gave notice of his loss, and required the bank not to pay it. A customer of the bank, on the 24th, brought in the cheque to be carried to his account, and the bank disregarding the holder's notice credited the customer with the amount of the cheque, considering themselves only bound by a direction from the drawer. On an action in the County Court, the Judge held the bank liable to make good the cheque to the holder, and gave him a verdict for the amount. Upon appeal, Held erroneous, and appeal allowed with costs. Colonial Bank of Australasia v. Hunter, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 236.

Notice of Dishonour.]—Notice of dishonour of a cheque to the drawer is necessary. Knowledge of dishonour is not enough. Clarke v. McLean, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 275.

For cases of Bank's liability for dishonouring cheques. See post under Liability of Bankers, &c.

Liability of Bank for Paying to Wrong Person—Gross Negligence.]—M., on August 4th, 1869, paid £60 into a bank and received a deposit receipt in the following terms:—"Fixed deposit receipt, No. 7,196, the ——— Bank, Melbourne, 4th August, 1869, £60. Period, six months, repayable 4th February, 1870. Received from No. 7,196, the sum of £60 sterling, to be placed to his credit for six months fixed on deposit account with this bank, bearing interest during that period at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum, and in the terms detailed by the depositor in his paid-in voucher of this date. This receipt must be produced when this money is called for." Across the receipt was written the words "not transferable." The deposit voucher referred to was signed by M., and was as follows: "4th August, 1869. Paid into the ——— Bank the sum of £60 sterling, for which I have received a deposit receipt; and I agree that, in consideration of the bank taking charge of the amount, the deposit shall not be withdrawn except on giving up this receipt, and that the possession of the same by the bank shall be conclusive evidence of my having, or some person on my behalf, having received the amount therein expressed. Paid-in Voucher No. 7,196. James McConkey." M., when paying in the money, signed his name "James McConkey" in a book, so as to give the bank a specimen of his signature. Another person stole the receipt from M., and got it cashed at the bank, writing across it a signature purporting to be M.'s, but which was unlike M.'s, and wrongly spelt, as follows:—"James McCornkey." The bank, however, took no notice of the difference, and M. sued them for the amount. Held that the clause in the deposit voucher as to the possession of the receipt by the bank being conclusive evidence that M., or some one on his behalf, had received the money, only shifted the burden of proof, and made it incumbent on M. to prove gross negligence on the part of the bank; and that he had done so, and was entitled to recover. Colonial Bank v. McConkey 1 A.J.R., 91.

III. Powers and Liabilities.

Taking Real Security for Present Advances—Violation of Charter.]—Where a bank's Act of Incorporation prohibited the taking a mortgage of real estate to secure a present advance, and only authorised taking land as security for any debt incurred previously and not in anticipation or expectation of such security, and the bank took over from another bank an existing debt, and took a mortgage as security for it, and the debt having increased, subsequently took a second mortgage of the same land to secure the aggregate amount, Held, per Molesworth, J., following National Bank v. Cherry (L.R. 3 P.C. 299,) that the mortgage was not in respect of advances made in expectation or anticipation and therefore was valid. Upon appeal affirmed, and Held that the transaction was not a violation of the bank's charter. Droop v. Colonial Bank, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 228; 2 A.L.T., 90. On Appeal, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 71; 3 A.L.T., 13.

Power to Advance on Security of Land.]—Where a bank had taken an equitable mortgage of lands under the "Transfer of Land Statute" to secure further advances, a decree was made for sale of such lands, although advances on security of land might be in contravention of the bank's charter. London Chartered Bank v. Hayes, 2 V.R. (E.,) 104; 2 A.J.R., 60.

"Colonial Bank Act," 19 Vic., Secs. 1, 3, 12, 13—Lsass of Land for Non-Banking Purposss.]—The Colonial Bank obtained a lease of land, with an option of purchase. Bill by bank for specific performance of contract for sale. There was evidence that the bank contemplated to lease the land when purchased for other than banking purposes. Held, that under Secs. 1, 3, 12, and 13 of the "Colonial Bank Act," the purchase of the land and the contract for purchase were illegal unless for banking purposes. Colonial Bank of Australasia v. Buckland, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 29; 4 A.L.T. 143.

Lien on Bill of Exchange—Specific Appropriation.]—In an action by the endorsees of a bill of exchange against L., the acceptor, it appeared that the defendant accepted the bill at three months, on 28th July, 1869, and that one K. had drawn the bill and placed it in a bank for collection, endorsing it in blank. K. had three months previously assigned his estate for the benefit of creditors (including the bank,) and before the assignment K. had agreed that all bills lodged should be held as security against his overdraft. After the assignment, both when the bill was drawn and when it fell due, K.'s account was overdrawn. The bank advanced to one C., a sum to enable him to purchase K.'s estate from the trustees, and among other security that C. gave was an acceptance of his own that did not fall due till June, 1870; and in K.'s pass-book was an entry that the bill sued on was held as security for C.'s acceptance. Held, that the specific appropriation in the pass-book did not debar the bank from applying L.'s bill in payment of K.'s overdraft, and that they could sue L. as endorsee. Commercial Bank v. Lawrence, 1 A.J.R., 119.

Purchase of Shares in a Mining Company—Act of Incorporation—Authority of Manager—Corporate Seal.]—E. deposited 550 shares in the G. Mining Company with a bank as security for his debt to the bank, and subsequently made a statutory assignment in favour of his creditors. The G. Company applied for a lease, and during the application stopped work, by which it incurred a forfeiture of the claim. S., a previous director, resigned his directorship, opposed the application for a lease, and took out a summons to enforce the forfeiture; the Warden dismissed this summons, and S. appealed. Pending the appeal S. agreed to withdraw his proceedings for forfeiture, and to an amalgamation of the G. Company with the A1 Company in consideration of receiving eighty shares in the amalgamated company and of the bank's undertaking to pay the calls on E.'s share. On 14th June, 1867, M., the manager of the bank, signed an undertaking to see all calls paid. On 11th June, 1867, E.'s trustees sold the shares by auction, when they were bought by H. and the other plaintiffs, as nominees for the bank and in trust for the bank. S., to whom the bank's undertaking was first known in July, 1867, repudiated the letter of 14th June, as not binding on the bank, and prosecuted the appeal. On 26th June, S. wrote to M. consenting to the amalgamation, and undertaking to assign to all the shareholders in the G. Company, except E. and those claiming through him, shares equivalent to those previously held by them. S. wrote afterwards, stating that his undertaking was conditional on the success of the appeal, if unopposed. The appeal was unopposed, and S. was successful. The two companies were amalgamated, and S. distributed the shares according to the letter of 26th June, excluding the bank, and retained for himself the shares in the new company representing E.'s 550 shares in the G. Company. On a bill by the bank and its nominees, into whose names E.'s shares had been transferred, Held by the Full Court, reversing Molesworth, J., (1) that the purchase of the shares by the bank was not a violation of the Act of Incorporation under the circumstances; that though the bank had no power to traffic in shares as an investment of its funds, yet lending money on the security of these shares was part of legitimate banking business, and the Court would not interfere with the bank respecting the management of securities or the method of making those securities most available: (2) that the undertaking of 14th June was within the scope of the manager's authority, and did not require the corporate seal, for the bank could not be regarded as likely to repudiate an undertaking for such an object: and (3) that the forfeiture of the mining claim had been brought about by unfair means; that a shareholder must treat all his co-shareholders alike, and must not treat some as partners in an undertaking and others as not; and that the defendant S. was a trustee for the bank of shares in the amalgamated company representing E.'s 550 shares in the G. Company. Harrison v. Smith, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 182. Decision of Full Court affirmed on appeal to the Privy Council. See Smith v. Harrison, 3 A.J.R., 44.

For Dishonouring Customer's Bill — Reasonable Time to Ascertain whether Account is in Credit.]—A banker is not liable to pay his customers' bills after banking hours; and, therefore, the time to be allowed for ascertaining what payments have been made into a customer's account should only be reckoned till 12 o'clock on Saturdays, and not till the departure of the clerk to the clearing house. Troedel v. Colonial Bank of Australasia, 1 A.J.R., 99.

Whether Relationship of Banker and Customer Exists.]—R.'s father had remitted to a bank certain moneys to be paid to R. by monthly instalments. An accumulation of these instalments took place at one time, and R. went to the bank, saw the manager, showed certain cheques running over a series of four or five months (the holder of these being present at the time,) and asked whether those cheques would be paid, and he was told, "Yes, if you draw no other," and these cheques were paid. Afterwards, and without any communication with the bank he drew a cheque for a less sum than the amount of the instalments which was paid, and subsequently drew another cheque, which was dishonoured. On an action for the dishonour, Held that the relation of banker and customer did not exist, and that the permission given by the bank was only as to a certain sum, and did not authorise its continuance. Rule absolute for nonsuit. Robinson v. Oriental Bank, 3 V.R. (L.,) 177; 3 A.J.R., 74.

For Dishonouring Cheques.]—A bank was under an arrangement made with S. to receive a certain sum of money, out of which it was to pay off a promissory note given by S. to a third person and the balance was to be paid to S. S. drew a cheque upon the bank for the balance, which the bank refused to honour. Held, that the arrangement did not constitute the relationship of banker and customer between S. and the bank, and that the bank was not liable for the dishonour. Stewart v. Bank of Australasia, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 240; 5 A.L.T., 77.

For Dishonouring Customer's Bill When Cheques Paid In to Meet It—Reasonable Time for Ascertaining Sufficiency of Cheques.]—M. kept an account at a bank for two years. An acceptance was given by M. which fell due on a Sunday, and therefore, according to custom was to be met on the Saturday preceding. On the Friday before M. paid in certain sums in cheques and cash, and on the Saturday, about twenty minutes to twelve, he paid in, in cash and cheques, a sum, which assuming the cheques to be good was, with those paid in on Friday, more than sufficient to meet the bill. All the cheques were drawn on banks in Melbourne. By the practice of the clearing house cheques paid in late on Friday are not sent to be cleared till Saturday at 12.30 p.m., and the clearing on that day is not effected till 1 p.m. and the cheques do not come back to the banks on which they are paid till Monday following. The bill was presented and dishonoured shortly before 12 on Saturday, and the bank made no inquiries as to whether the cheques would be met. As a fact they were all met, and in M.'s pass-book, under date the Friday the bill was presented, he was credited with the sums paid in on that day. The ledger-keeper told M. that town bills would be treated as cash, and that town cheques paid in on Saturday would meet bills due that day. The acceptance as returned had on it the words "effects not cleared." The jury returned a verdict for M., the judge having directed them that it was the duty of the bank to make inquiries before dishonouring the bill. On rule nisi for a new trial, Held that it was unnecessary to decide whether the judge's direction was right, since the entry in the pass-book afforded very strong evidence that M. had to his credit funds sufficient to meet the bill, and rule for a new trial discharged. MacDermott v. Bank of Australasia, 4 A.J.R., 37.

Agreement that Bank should Hold the Proceeds of Bills Held as Security till Bills under Discount had been Paid.]—M'C., the plaintiff, was in the habit of discounting bills with the defendant bank. By an agreement, the manager was in the habit of taking the longer dated bills, and holding them as security for the shorter dated ones, and of putting the security bills when paid to the plaintiff's credit. On one occasion (in September) the security bills were paid, but the proceeds were not placed to McC.'s credit, and at this time a cheque of his was dishonoured. M'C. sued the bank for the dishonour and obtained a verdict. On rule nisi for a nonsuit, Held, that the agreement being that the bank should hold the proceeds of the security bills till all bills under discount had been paid they were not bound to place the proceeds of the September bills to the plaintiff's credit. Rule absolute. M'Cooey v. Bank of New South Wales, 5 A. J. R., 23.

Agreement as to Advances—Verbal Agreement—Subsequent Deed.]—A bank verbally agreed to advance to a customer, A., £1 per acre on Crown leasehold property (319 acres) so soon as he obtained leave to mortgage the lease as a security from the Governor-in-Council. A. obtained leave, and executed a mortgage to secure repayment of £150 then due, and all sums which the bank might (but without any obligation for it to do so,) advance to A. A., at the time of the verbal contract, owed £150 to the bank, and sued the bank for dishonouring a cheque given by A., believing that the bank had agreed to advance £169 besides as under the agreement and deed. Held that the verbal agreement was inconsistent with the mortgage deed by reason of the words in brackets, and that A., in executing the mortgage which contained a condition inconsistent with the verbal promise had precluded himself from enforcing such promise. Rule absolute for verdict for defendant. Abbott v. Commercial Bank, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 366; 1 A.L.T. 57.

Agreement by Banker Under a Mistake—Excessive Damages—Previous Loss of Mercantile Character by Customer.]—A banker verbally agreed with a customer, D., to allow him an overdraft to a certain amount, but by mistake the banker, in a letter purporting to embody the terms of such agreement, really agreed to allow an overdraft to a larger amount. The banker did not withdraw the letter. D. sued the bank for dishonouring a cheque, and proved some special damage, and the jury awarded heavy damages: it was proved that D. had previously lost his mercantile reputation by allowing previous cheques of his to be dishonoured. Held that the banker was bound by the terms of his letter, and that although the damages seemed excessive, owing to D.'s loss of character, yet, as he proved special damage, the verdict could not be disturbed. Doria v. Bank of Victoria, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 393; 1 A.L.T., 97.

Damages—Farmer, what Damages Entitled to—Trader.]—A farmer is not a trader, and has therefore no mercantile character, and cannot recover more than nominal damages for the dishonouring of his cheque, unless he prove special damage, or that he has a mercantile character. Bank of New South Wales v. Milvain, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 3; 5 A.L.T., 167.

Liquidator—Winding-up Order Set Aside—Act No. 409, Secs. 89, 187.]—A company was ordered to be wound up, and plaintiff, the manager, was appointed liquidator, and as such paid into the defendant bank money to the credit of the company in liquidation. Afterwards an order was made setting aside the winding-up order, and the directors of the company wrote to the bank requiring them to hold all moneys paid into the bank to the credit of H. on behalf of the company. H. afterwards presented a cheque which was dishonoured. Held that H. could not sue for the money in his individual capacity, as the money was paid in by him as liquidator, and he could not after the last order draw upon the account as liquidator. Rule absolute to enter verdict for defendant. Macdougall v. Bank of Victoria, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 230; 3 A.L.T., 6.

Statute of Limitations.]—To a declaration for dishonour of a cheque, the defendant bank pleaded that it did not receive any moneys of the plaintiff's, applicable to the payment of the cheque within six years before presentment, or within six years before suit. Held, a good plea on general demurrer. O'Ferrall v. Bank of Australasia, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 119; 5 A.L.T., 20.

For Act of Branch Manager—Waiver of Promissory Note.]—A manager of a local branch of a bank has power, in the ordinary course of his business as manager, to waive verbally, for consideration, the liability of the maker of a promissory note held by such manager as security for the account of a customer at such branch. Bank of Australasia v. Cotchett, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 226, 237.

For Promises of a Defaulting Manager.]—See Blackwood v. Rourke, post under Customers' Accounts.

For Act of Manager.]—The authority of a bank manager, as between the bank and the public, in the absence of any express announcement to the contrary, extends to a waiver of the liability of any party to a bill or note of which the bank is holder. Colonial Bank v. Ettershank, 4 A.J.R. 94, 185. Affirmed on appeal to the Privy Council, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 239.

For Acts of Manager—Manager who was also Executor Acting Fraudulently—Bank not Liable.]—An executor, who was also manager of a bank, signed a cheque payable to bearer, and a deposit slip, for the purpose of transferring moneys of the estate, lying in the bank. He sent these documents to his co-executor for his signature, and on the documents being returned, misappropriated the money. Held, that since the fraudulent executor must be joined as co-plaintiff in an action against the bank, the latter was not liable at law for the moneys; and Semble, that even if the fraudulent executor were not estopped from suing, the bank would not be liable at law for such fraudulent act of the manager. Nichol v. London Chartered Bank of Australia, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 324.

Loss of Securities through Theft of Clerk—Negligence.]—L. deposited with a bank £10,450 worth of debentures for safe keeping, these being kept in a strong-room, deposited in a box, the keys of which L. kept, and he often examined the box. The key of the strong-room was kept by F., a clerk in the bank. F. left the bank in July, 1864, having been in the bank's service eight years, and having borne a good character. Later in July, L. discovered that the debentures had been stolen from the box sometime between April and July, and evidence was given to show that F. had stolen the debentures. L. brought an action against the bank manager for the loss, and the declaration contained two counts; one alleging a bailment for hire, the second bailment without hire. The jury found for the bank on the first count, for L. on the second, damages £10,450 on that count. Rule nisi for a nonsuit, Held that, as negligence involves the non-performance of a duty, and that duty, though affected by the special facts of the case, must be determined by the Court, and not by the jury; that the bank as being only gratuitious bailees were only bound to take ordinary care, and that there was no actionable negligence, F. not being known to the bank to be a dishonest servant. Rule absolute for a nonsuit. Lewis v M'Mullen, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 1. Affirmed on appeal to P.C. (sub. nomine,) Giblin v. M'Mullen, L.R. 2, P.C., 317.

IV. Customers' Accounts.

Husband and Wife.]—A wife having property settled to her separate use for life, with remainder as she should, notwithstanding coverture, by deed or will appoint, with remainder to her executors or administrators, opened two accounts with her bankers, a private and an administration account, and directed the bankers, by the joint letter of herself and her husband, to consider any overdraft on her private account secured by the administration account. The administration account was subject to the trusts of the settlement. At her death the private account was overdrawn. Held that she had contracted so as to bind her separate estate, and that the bankers had a lien on the administration account in respect of the overdrawn private account. London Chartered Bank of Australia v. Lempriere, L.R. 4 P.C., 572; 42 L.J.P.C., 49; 29 L.T., 186; 21 W.R., 513.

Public Company—Personal Liability of Directors.]—Two of the directors of a company, by a letter to the company's bankers, notified that their manager had authority to draw cheques on account of the company. These two directors did not form a majority of the directors so as to bind the company. Although the company's account was overdrawn at the time, to the knowledge of the two directors, the bankers honoured the manager's cheques on the authority so given. In an action by the bank against the two directors for advances made on the faith of the letter, Held, and affirmed on appeal to the Privy Council, that there was an implied warranty on their part that the manager had authority to bind the company, and that they were personally liable to the bank to the extent of the sums overdrawn by the manager subsequently to the date of their letter of authority. Cherry v. Colonial Bank, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 177; L.R. 3 P.C., 24.

How far Liable for Promise of Manager—Overdraft.]—C., a bank manager, indebted to R., a customer of a bank, promised to pay £150 of this by placing it to R.'s credit and letting R. draw against it. C. was convicted of defalcations in his accounts, and shortly afterwards R.

was informed that his account was overdrawn, C. having paid in no money to his credit. On an action against R. for the overdraft, Held that C.'s promise did not bind the bank so as to remove R.'s liability on his overdraft, per Barry and Fellows, JJ., because C. exceeded his authority; per Stephen, J., because C. could not bind the bank without making proper entries in the bank books, or at all events giving a cheque to R. Blackwood v. Rourke, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 201.

Extent of Power—Overdue Acceptance.]—The authority of a bank to pay a bill of exchange accepted by a customer payable at the bank, continues after the maturity of the bill until countermanded by the acceptor. Wine v. Bank of New South Wales, 4 A.J.R., 78.

Deposit—Liability to pay—Loss of Receipt.]—When money has been lodged with a bank on the condition that it is not to be withdrawn except on production of the deposit receipt, and the depositor has lost the receipt, the bank is not entitled to withhold the amount of the deposit, since the production of the receipt is not a condition precedent to the depositor's right to recover. The non-production is, however, a breach of contract, for which the bank could recover damages, such damages would, however, from the nature of the case, be merely nominal. Dunlop v. London Chartered Bank, 4 A.J.R., 154.

Deposit—Specific Appropriation—Authority of Teller.]—If a teller of a bank, though he have no authority to receive deposits except in the ordinary way of banking, receive a deposit subject to special conditions as to the manner of its appropriation, which special conditions it was his duty to have communicated to the manager, and the bank retains the deposit, the bank will be deemed affected with notice and bound by the special conditions, not because it is answerable for all the acts of the teller, but because that officer received the deposit subject to a condition of which it was his duty to have informed the manager. Chamberlain v. English, Scottish and Australian Chartered Bank, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 45.

C., not having previously had an account with a certain bank, and not knowing that they were the holders of his promissory note, which was made payable at another bank, went to the bank and told the receiving teller that he wanted to pay money into the bank. On being asked if he wished to open an account, C. replied that he wished to pay money in to meet cheques drawn by him. C. paid in the money, and some of the cheques mentioned were afterwards honoured, but the rest, owing to the bank using C.'s money to pay the note, were dishonoured. The teller did not inform the manager of the conditions under which C. paid in his money. On an action for dishonouring the cheques, Held that the bank was liable, since it was the teller's duty to have informed the manager of the conditions. Ibid.

Cheque Deposited by Way of Security—Pre-existing Debt—Consideration.]—L. drew a cheque upon the Bank of Victoria, payable to bearer, and the plaintiff bank became the holders. The plaintiff bank sued L. upon the cheque. L. pleaded that he drew the cheque for S.'s accommodation, and that S. became the bearer without any consideration, and on terms of giving security for repayment thereof; that S. was a customer of the plaintiff bank's, and was indebted to them for an overdraft, and that the cheque was deposited with and kept by the bank as security, and that the bank did not after the deposit of the cheque give S. any further credit whatsoever. Held, on demurrer to the plea, that a pre-existing debt without further forbearance or advance before dishonour of the cheque did not give the bank the right to sue, and did not place the bank in any better position than S., who could not have sued on the cheque. Judgment for defendant. English, Scottish and Australian Chartered Bank v. Levinger, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 208.

Upon What.]—A banker may have a lien upon title deeds of his customer deposited with him in the ordinary course of his business as banker; but not over deeds deposited with him for safe custody only. Dale v. Bank of New South Wales, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 27.

Bill of Exchange Endorsed to Bank.]—A bill of exchange was drawn by R., upon and accepted by W., endorsed by R. to the bank, and offered by R. to the bank for discount. R.'s account being overdrawn, the bank refused to discount the bill, and R. left it in the bank and drew a cheque, by which he proposed to increase his overdraft, and got further advances on the security of the bill. Held that the Bank had a lien upon this bill, notwithstanding the fact that it was found in the "Bills for Collection" ledger, and, having property in it as endorsees, they had a right to sue W. Bank of Australasia v. Walters, 2 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 89.

Bills Left for Collection.]—Per Stawell, C. J. The deposit of a bill with a blank endorsement for collection, followed by an advance upon it, would constitute a complete endorsement for value transferring the property to the bank. Per Barry, J. An advance upon the general credit of a customer would establish a lien on all bills in their hands at the time. Colonial Bank v. McDonald, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 214; 1 A.L.T., 21.

Evidence of Advances.]—The deposit of a bill was proved by the drawer, and the advances were proved by the bank manager and the drawer. The defendant gave as evidence a statement by a travelling inspector in an affidavit in support of proof of a debt in the insolvent estate of the drawer that the bank had no security for the amount. Held that this statement as to a conclusion of law did not contradict the positive statements of fact made by the bank manager and the drawer. Ibid.

Promissory Note Deposited for Collection—Set off.]—A. to secure an overdraft of B.'s gave to the defendant bank a promissory note for £2500. The bank, on B.'s insolvency, recovered payment of the note, and received a dividend out of the insolvent's estate for B.'s overdraft, which exceeded £2500. An overdue and unpaid promissory note of A.'s for £800 was deposited for collection with the bank by executors of a deceased customer of the bank indebted to it. Bill by A. to enforce payment by bank of a sum of £326, being the proportionate amount as on the note of £2500 of dividends received by bank out of B.'s estate. Held and affirmed that there might be a set off in equity, but in the absence of other evidence as to the consideration for the note of £800 the bank was not entitled to a lien on that note, and could not sue on it, or set it off against the £326 claimed. Ford v. London Chartered Bank, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 328; 1 A.L.T., 66, 117.

On Securities—Government "H" Order.]—A Government "H" order deposited with a banker is not a security of a customer deposited on which bank can claim a lien, but is merely an authority given to bank for collection. Board of Land and Works v. Ecroyd, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 304.

For facts see S.C., Equitable Assignment, ante column 58.

An agreement in writing by a customer that, in consideration of a bank discounting and allowing an overdraft, it should have a lien on all securities belonging to him which might be in its hands for discounts and overdrafts gives no more than an ordinary banker's lien, and "securities" mean no more than securities given to a customer and lodged by him, not securities given to bank by him. Per Molesworth, J. White v. London Chartered Bank, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 33.

Bankers have a general lien on all securities deposited with them as bankers by a customer, unless there be an express contract or circumstances showing an implied contract inconsistent with the lien. And the bankers having acquiesced in the finding of the first Court that securities deposited with them were in respect of specific sums, and not on the general account, and not having objected thereto in their grounds of appeal to the Supreme Court, were precluded from raising that question in their appeal to the Privy Council. London Chartered Bank v. White, L.R., 4 App. Cas., 413.

Simple interest is only allowed on such a specific amount as to a mortgagee, notwithstanding any banker's custom to the contrary, per Privy Council, affirming Molesworth, J., and Full Court [3 V.L.R. (E.,) 33, 168.] Ibid.

Bankers improperly or without title retaining moneys overpaid to them as mortgagees are chargeable with interest thereon, per Privy Council. Ibid.

BARRISTER-AT-LAW.

Calling to the Bar—Rule 9, Cap. 2, of "Suprsme Court Rules."]—Per Stawell, C.J. There is a marked distinction in the Rule 9 of Cap. 2 of the "Supreme Court Rules" between the word "trade" and the word "business," and those who take upon themselves the responsibility of making declarations, putting their own interpretation on the Rules, must, if they afterwards find themselves to be wrong, take the consequences of so acting. In re Goslett, 1 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 161.

Calling to the Bar—Trade or Business.]—Rule 9 of the "Supreme Court Rules," which requires that every person applying to be admitted to practise as a barrister "must not be engaged in trade or business" during the next three years preceding the time he submits himself to be examined, strictly speaking excludes a candidate who during a period of three months in those three years had been clerical assistant of the accountant of the Victorian Railways. Ibid.

See also in re Spensley, post column 90.

Calling to the Bar—English Barristers—"Supreme Court Rules," Rule 10.]—The Court has power, under Rule 10 of the "Supreme Court Rules" of 3rd December, 1872, to admit a member of the English Bar to practise for a limited period before the expiration of the notice prescribed by the Rule in question. In re Vale, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 485.

Calling to the Bar—Decision of Board of Examiners.]—If no appeal has been made from the decision of the Board of Examiners, the certificate of the Board touching the compliance with the rules and the fitness of an applicant for admission to the Bar, will be received by the Court as conclusive, and acted upon accordingly. In re Shaw, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 509.

Calling to the Bar—Applicant Previously Admitted as Attorney in a Colony Where Professions are Amalgamated.]—Quære whether a person admitted in another colony, where the professions are amalgamated, "as a Barrister solely," does not, by afterwards obtaining admission there as an Attorney, surrender his qualification to be admitted to the Bar of Victoria. Ibid.

Calling to the Bar—Omission to Sign Roll-Book.]—A student-at-law who had complied with all the conditions for admission, but had inadvertently omitted to sign the roll-book as required by Rule 7 of Regulae Generales, December, 1872, was allowed to sign nunc pro tunc. In re Duffy, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 133; 3 A.L.T., 3.

Calling to the Bar.]—The Form of Certificate (A) in Schedule to Cap. 2 of "Supreme Court Rules" which would require an applicant to be 24 years old is in antagonism to the Rules which require him to be 21 years old when applying for admission and must yield to the Rules. In re Molesworth, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 190.

Calling to the Bar—Admission.]—Motions for admissions to the bar of gentlemen who have not been previously admitted elsewhere should be made on the last day of term. In re Anonymous, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 210.

Calling to the Bar—Practice on.]—Applications for the admission of colonial barristers, not previously called to the bar, should be made to the Full Court during term, unless there be some special reason for the application at another time. In re Verdon, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 82.

Calling to the Bar—Barrister of Queensland—Reciprocity.]—On the admission of a barrister of Queensland, not admitted elsewhere, the rule of August 10, 1878, providing for reciprocity applies, and his personal attendance under the General Rules of December, 1872, is not required. In re Lilley, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 121.

Calling to the Bar.]—A student-at-law having completed half his year of studentship, and being about to leave for England under certain favourable circumstances, was permitted under the circumstances to be admitted in his absence when the proper time arrived. In re Johnstone, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 335.

Calling to the Bar—Student-at-Law—Notice.]—Where a student-at-law was about to give the notice of his intention to apply for admission too soon, but was deterred from thus giving it by the advice of the Secretary of the Board of Examiners, and then omitted to give it at the proper time, the Board refused a certificate that he had complied with the rules, and on petition the Judges affirmed their decision. Ex parte Skinner, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 79.

Calling to the Bar.]—Where a student applying for admission had, in reliance upon his father's advice, who was in turn advised by a solicitor, failed to lodge the documents marked A. and B. in the Schedule to the Rules at the proper time, the Court, under the special circumstances of the case, allowed them to be lodged nunc pro tunc. In re Evans, 5 A.J.R., 184.

Student-at-Law—Who may be.]—A person in priest's orders, who has resigned and withdrawn from the ministry, and whose resignation has been accepted by the bishop, may be admitted as a student-at-law under the Rules of Court for admission to the Bar. In re Macartney, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 248.

Admission as Student-at-law—Issuing Certificate nunc pro tunc.]—Where a person had given his notice of intention to apply for a certificate of admission as a student-at-law, but had not followed it up by attending before the Board and applying for his certificate, supposing that he would have received some notice of the meeting of the Board, the Court held that they had no power to order the certificate to be issued nunc pro tunc. Ex parte Ferguson, 4 A.J.R., 29.

Authority of Counsel to Compromise an Action—Collateral Claim.]—As between a client and his adversary the only modes of withdrawing a counsel's authority to compromise are (1) by withdrawing the brief delivered—a grave and inadvisable step—and (2) by the client giving notice to his adversary that he has withdrawn from his counsel all authority to compromise. Where the declaration claimed damages for the future contingent liability of the plaintiff's land being covered with water, and so becoming depreciated, Held that the pleadings fairly apprised the defendant of such a claim, and such future damages were not a matter collateral to the main cause of action, but were fairly in issue and within the authority of counsel to compromise in respect of them, although not legally recoverable if resisted. Manson v. Shire of Maffra, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 364; 3 A.L.T., 32.

Authority of Counsel to Consent to Verdict.]—Jones v. Hodgson, post under NEW TRIAL—On what grounds granted.

Limit of Right to Comment on Conduct of Opposing Counsel.]—Challacombe v. Wiggins, post under NEW TRIAL—On what grounds granted.

Barrister a Member of Parliament.]—A barrister a member of one house of Parliament may plead before a committee of the other house. Harbison v. Dobson, 2 A.J.R., 51.

Disbarring — Obtaining Admission by Improper Means—Knowledge—Suspension.]—On motion to disbar S., on the grounds that he had followed a trade or business within three years before he applied for examination as a candidate for admission to the bar, and that being so disqualified for admission, he obtained admission to the bar by improper means, it appeared that S. was during part of the three years preceding his application the proprietor, printer and publisher of a newspaper, and collected the debts of the paper, and printed for gain matters not essential to the owning, printing and publishing of the newspaper; and that he was also on the list of the members of the Melbourne Stock and Share Exchange. Before admission he swore the necessary affidavit that he was not during the three years engaged in any "trade or business." Held that he had followed a trade or business, and was disqualified as to the portion of the three years during which he did so; that the Court was not satisfied he had obtained admission with knowledge of his disqualification; and that the case was met by suspending him from practising for twelve months. In re Spensley, 1 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 173.

Fees.]—See COSTS.

BASTARD.

Evidence of Paternity.]—The only evidence corroborating a mother's statement was that the child was born on 13th December, 1864, and that the putative father, on 16th March, 1864, drove her home in a cart, and was seen in her company on that day, but not afterwards. Held that there was not sufficient corroboration in a material particular. Phillips v. Tomlinson, 2 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 92.

Order for Maintenance—Merely Personal.]—A bastardy order is merely personal, and cannot be made after the death of the father; and there cannot be a supplemental order upon the representatives of the father, after the original order has expired. Regina v. Sturt, 5 W.W.& A'B. (L.,) 174.

Maintenance—Warrant of Commitment for Not Finding Security for.]—A warrant of commitment for not finding security for payment of maintenance of a bastard, must recite service of the order on which it was based, upon the defendant. Regina v. M'Cormick, ex parte Brennan, 4 V.L.R., (L.,) 36.

Complaint for Maintenance—Dismissal—Second Complaint.]—If a complaint before justices for maintenance of a bastard has been dismissed for want of sufficient evidence to corroborate the statement of the mother, a fresh complaint may be entertained by other justices when sufficient evidence is procured, and the decision of the first justices may be regarded not as a decision but as in the nature of a nonsuit. Ibid.

Maintenance Independent of Affiliation Orders—Form of Order.]—An order of Justices on a father for the support of his illegitimate children, should recite that the children are without means of support, and that the father is able to maintain them, or to contribute to their maintenance. Moran v. Connors, 1 V.R. (L.,) 105; 1 A.J.R., 107.

Act No. 268, Secs. 30, 31—Order for Maintenance.]—An order for maintenance of a bastard which follows the form given in Act No. 267 ("Justices of Peace Statute") is sufficient, and need not be made contingent upon the life of the child, but the order is bad in so far as it gives costs to the mother who was not the complainant, and requires security to be given for payment of the amount of costs awarded. Regina v. Bindon, ex parte Fitzpatrick, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 3.

Act No. 268, Sec. 40—Quashing Bastardy Order.—Per Macfarland, J. (in General Sessions,) under Sec. 40 the Court of General Sessions has jurisdiction to quash, confirm or vary a bastardy order whether an appeal as to it was entered or not. Order quashed. Ludgrave v. Belcher, 5 A.L.T., 72.

"Neglected and Criminal Children's Act" No. 216, Secs. 24, 25, 27—"Parent."]—Rule nisi granted to quash an order of a magistrate by which W. was ordered to pay 5s. a week towards the maintenance of an illegitimate child at the Industrial Schools, on the ground there was no complaint in writing on which to found it, and that W. was not the "parent" within the meaning of the Act. Regina v. Gaunt, ex parte Ward, 3 A.J.R., 29.

Custody of Illegitimate Children.]—A putative father has no right to the possession of an illegitimate child. Habeas corpus refused. In re Bates, 1 V.L.R., (L.,) 178.

BILLS OF EXCHANGE AND PROMISSORY NOTES.

1. Parties to.

Drawer not Capable — Acceptor Estopped from Objecting.]—The acceptor of a bill of exchange cannot be permitted to object to the capacity of the drawer. Coombs v. McDougall, 4 A.J.R., 25.

A mining company, incorporated under the Act No. 409, drew a bill on M., who accepted it, and afterwards raised the objection that the company had no power under the Act 409 to draw bills of exchange. Held that M. could not be allowed to raise the objection. Ibid.

2. Form and Stamping of.

Bill of Exchange—What is—Contingency.]—A document as follows:—"Six days after the ship Childers clears the Port Philip Heads, pay John Dynan or bearer the sum of £5 sterling, provided he proceeds to sea in the above vessel.—E.," is not a bill of exchange, and cannot be sued upon as an agreement by a third person to whom it has been delivered for value, on the ground of want of privity of contract, and of consideration. Baker v. Efford, 4 A.J.R., 161.

Promissory Note—What is—Uncertain Sum.]—An instrument as follows:—"I promise to pay the sum of £49 13s. 4d., and costs, for value received," is not a promissory note, being for an uncertain sum; and cannot be made such by striking out the costs in the particulars of demand; nor is such an instrument evidence of a contract, or on an account stated. Bentley v. Jamieson, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 145.

Promissory Note—When Not Negotiable.]—A promissory note containing a promise to pay an impossible payee, "or order," is payable to bearer; but a note which does not mention payee, order, or bearer is not negotiable. McDonald v. Moffatt, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 193.

Date.]—A date is not a material part of a bill of exchange, and may be proved by parol evidence. Regina v. Gurnett, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 28.

Psriod of Payment in Blank.]—Semble a bill of exchange in which the period of payment is left blank is payable on demand, at any rate it is negotiable, and may be sued upon two months after having been drawn. M'Lean v. Nichlen, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 107.

When Bill May be Deemed Stamped—"Stamp Duties Act 1879," Sec. 57.]—A bill of exchange in the hands of a bona fide holder may be deemed to be duly stamped, and within the protection of Sec. 57 (iv.) of the "Stamp Duties Act 1879," if, when such holder received it, it had a proper stamp cancelled in the initals of the acceptor, and a date a few days subsequent to the date of the drawing. Whitty v. Dunning, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 324; 2 A.L.T., 61.

Act, No. 645, Sec. 47—Cancellation of Stamp.]—If the name or initials of any one of the persons signing the note are written across the stamp with the date, in such a way as to preclude its use for any other document, there is a sufficient cancellation within Sec. 47. Per Holroyd, J. It is for the persons disputing the valid cancellation, in a case where the person whose signature appeared as the last of three signatures cancelled the stamp, to prove that he was the first to sign. Harriman v. Purches, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 234; 5 A.L.T., 76.

Act No. 645, Sec. 51—Guarantee.]—Semble a guarantee to pay an amount of money is not one which requires to be stamped under the Act. Croft v. Grimbly, 5 A.L.T., 89.

3. Consideration for.

Bill Given for Debt Provable in Insolvency.]—D. owed T. £12, and became insolvent, and, after sequestration, gave T. a bill of exchange for the debt, which was provable on the estate. Held that there was sufficient consideration for the bill. Tulk v. Davies, 2 A.J.R., 114.

Accommodation Note—For Shares in a Company.]—K. gave the P. Company a promissory note for 100 shares in the company. K.'s note, with a number of others, was lodged with a bank, which had the account of the P. Company, which was overdrawn at the time of the action. For K. it was urged that the note was merely an accommodation note, and that the P. Company had given him no consideration for the note. It appeared that at the time K. applied for the shares the prospectus contained certain provisions with regard to the issue of land-warrants, which were altered before the note matured; but K. had signed the deed of association as for 320 shares at the time he gave the note, and the deed contained the altered provisions. Held that the note was connected with the shares, since K. signed the deed, and that it was for him to show that the shares had no connection with the note; and rule to enter a verdict for K. discharged. Commercial Bank v. Keith, 1 A.J.R., 131.

4. Acceptance and Presentment for.

Foreign Bill—Duty of Agent.]—A bill must be presented within a reasonable time, which is a mixed question of law and fact—and in determining that question, not the interests of the drawer only, but those of the holder must be taken into account, and the bill need not be sent for acceptance by the very earliest opportunity, though it must be sent without improper delay. Where a foreign bill of exchange (Tasmanian) was received in Melbourne for collection by the defendant bank as agent for the plaintiff bank, on Friday, 8th February, at 12 o'clock, and was left with the drawers at 2 p.m. on the same day. On Saturday (9th) one of the drawees wrote an acceptance for the firm on the defendant, and gave it to a clerk for delivery, and the clerk mislaid it, and on the agent calling at 11.30 a.m., as business closed that day at 12 noon, he was told to call on Monday (11th.) The agent called on Monday and was told to call on Tuesday; the acceptance made on Saturday had been cancelled. Held, and affirmed on appeal to the Privy Council, that the agent need not have presented till the Saturday (i.e. the day after its receipt,) and had till Monday to obtain an acceptance or refusal to accept, and if not accepted to give notice of dishonour. Bank of Van Dieman's Land v. Bank of Victoria, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 178; N. C. 1; L.R. 3 P.C., 526; 40 L.J. P.C., 28.

Per Privy Council. The object of the transmission of a bill from principal to agent being to obtain the acceptance and payment of the bill, or if not accepted to guard the rights of the principal against the drawer, the duty of the agent must be measured by these considerations, and the agent ought not to prese unduly for acceptance, provided he obtains acceptance or refusal within the time which will preserve the rights of the principal against the drawer. Ibid.

Where a drawee has written his name on the bill with the intention to accept, he is at liberty to cancel the acceptance before the bill is delivered, or (following a dictum of Mr. Justice Byles) "at least before the fact of acceptance is communicated to the holder." But Held on the facts that the draft, though accepted in writing, was not delivered as an acceptance, nor was anything which could be regarded as equivalent to a delivery having taken place communicated by a duly authorised agent. Ibid; 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 192.

5. Transfer and Endorsement.

Contract for Endorsement—Release of Acceptor—Law Merchant.]—F. Z. and Co., being indebted to a bank and pressed for payment, agreed to give as security a bill of exchange drawn by them, accepted by C. and Co., and endorsed by G. This bill was drawn, and accepted, and endorsed twice by the drawers, G., after delivery of the bill to him, writing his name as endorser between the two endorsements signed by the drawers. It was placed in the bank for collection and dishonoured. G. sued M'L., one of the partners of C. and Co., on the bill and obtained a verdict of £2500 damages. Rule nisi to enter a verdict for defendant on grounds (1) that there was no such endorsement as would enable G. to sue; (2) that G. had waived his right to sue C. and Co. as acceptors. Held that as F. Z. and Co. had endorsed and delivered the bill to G., he was entitled to sue, but that the jury having found that G. promised to release C. and Co., and bills of exchange being governed by the Law Merchant, G.'s verbal renunciation of all claims was as full a discharge as a release under seal. Rule absolute. Glass v. McLeery, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 159.

Transfer of Overdue Bill—Rights of Holder.]—If a person takes an overdue bill he is just in the same position as the worst of the previous holders would be in if he were to sue—that is, any defence available against a prior holder would be available against him. Webster v. Tulloch, 2 A.J.R., 57.

Endorsement—When it Constitutes Endorsee Holder—Qualified Endorsement.]—The last endorsee of a promissory note, obtained an advance from a bank, and handed over the note, among others, as security for the advance. The advance was paid off, but there was a general balance due by the endorsee to the bank, for which the bank sued on the bill, claiming that it was given for the general balance. The jury found that it was given merely for the advance, and the Court held that this being so, since the advance was repaid, the delivery and endorsement to the bank did not make the bank the holders of the note as against the endorsee. Bank of New South Wales v. King, 2 A.J.R., 75.

Promissory Note—Maker Estopped from Denying Power of Payee to Endorse.]—The directors of a mining company registered under No. 228, and the manager obtained an overdraft from the plaintiff bank upon depositing promissory notes of the shareholders. The defendant (a director) gave his promissory note payable to the company or order, and it was endorsed by two directors (the defendant being one,) the manager, and with the seal of the company, and handed to the bank. There was no other consideration but the above-mentioned accommodation. The bank sued the defendant on the note. Held that the defendant could not deny the capacity of the payee to endorse. Judgment for plaintiff. Bank of Victoria v. Brown, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 47.

Endorsement of Over-Due Accommodation Promissory Note by Payee.]—If a promissory note is given to a person for his accommodation, on the understanding that it is only to be used for the accommodation of such payee, and not to be put into circulation except for such accommodation, and after having been put into circulation for such accommodation it returns at maturity to the hands of the payee, the note is spent, and a subsequent endorsement by him for value to a third person confers no right of action by such endorsee against the maker; in other words, the endorsee takes it subject to the agreement. Wrixon v. Macoboy, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 359; 2 A.L.T., 60.

Equities Affecting Transfer of Over-Due Bills—Accommodation Bill—Agreement not to put into Circulation.]—An accommodation bill of exchange accepted subject to an agreement that it shall not be put into circulation, is taken by a holder for value after maturity subject to such agreement. Wrixon v. Macoboy, 2 A.L.T., 60.

6. Payment.

When Necessary—Demand.]—There is no necessity, in order to charge the acceptor, to present an unqualified general acceptance for payment, and bringing an action on such an acceptance is a sufficient demand. Lillies v. Harty, 2 A.J.R., 83.

What Amounts to.]—A bill of exchange was drawn by R. upon and accepted by H. When the bill arrived at maturity it was dishonoured, and the endorsee (a bank) debited it to the account of R., whose account at the bank was then only in credit to the extent of 16s. 6d. The bill was never paid by R. or H. Held that debiting the account at the bank did not amount to payment, and that the acceptor was not discharged. London Chartered Bank v. Hickey, 2 A.J.R., 83.

7. Renewal.

Time for.]—The request for renewal should be made as promptly as possible; when one bill has matured the other should be ready to take its place, or the holder should be apprised as quickly as possible of the acceptor's intention to ask for a renewal. Per Barry, J., the request for renewal should be made before the first bill is presented. Rowan v. Mitchell, 3 V.R. (L.,) 20; 3 A.J.R., 31.

8. Notice of Dishonour.

To Whom Given—Drawer and Endorser having Assigned his Estate.]—L. drew and endorsed a bill in favour of A. L. afterwards assigned his estate to trustees, by a creditor's deed, upon trust for his creditors. The bill was subsequently dishonoured, and A., without giving notice of dishonour to L. or the trustees, sought to prove on the estate in respect of the bill. Held that notice of dishonour should have been given to the trustees, and that A. could not prove. In re Levy, 2 V.R. (E.,) 33; 2 A.J.R., 11.

Waiver of.]—A., after the dishonour, executed the creditors' deed. Held that A., as the holder of the bill for which the trustee was liable, having lost his right to resort to him by not giving notice of dishonour, neither the assignor nor trustee could revive the liability as against other creditors. Ibid.

Waiver—What is.]—An acknowledgement that the amount of a bill is due by an endorser seems not to be a waiver of want of notice of dishonour, but admissible evidence that it has been given. In re Levy, 2 A.J.R., 11.

Omission to Give.]—The inability of the acceptor of a bill of exchange to pay it affords no excuse for the omission to give notice of hishonour. Ibid.

Notice Given by Holder to his Immediate Endorser and Communicated to Drawer.]—Action by holder against drawer and endorser. Verdict for plaintiff. It appeared that notice of dishonour was given by plaintiff to his immediate endorser, and that by him it was communicated to the drawer. Held on rule nisi for nonsuit to be a sufficient notice; notice of dishonour by any one party to the bill enuring to the benefit of the holder. Commercial Bank v. Ashton, 5 A.J.R., 78.

Duty of Agent—Foreign Bill.]—Where a bill (Tasmanian) was dishonoured in Melbourne on Monday, February 11th, and notice of dishonour was sent to Tasmania on Tuesday, though it might have been sent on Monday by a mail leaving on that day, Held that although it was received as soon as if it had been sent on Monday, the agents in Melbourne had not used due diligence, but that the agents had not been so negligent as to entitle the principal to substantial damages, Bank of Van Diemen's Land v. Bank of Victoria, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 178, N.C. 1; affirmed on appeal by Privy Council, 3 L.R., P.C., 526; 40 L.J., P.C., 28.

Excuse for Delay in Giving Notice.]—A declaration in an action on a bill of exchange set out that a bill of exchange was made by plaintiff and directed to B.; that, in consequence of an agreement between plaintiff, defendant, and B., that B. would assign chattels of equal value to amount of the bill to defendant, the defendant would endorse the bill to plaintiff as surety for the due payment, that defendant had received and retained the chattels, that plaintiff endorsed to defendant, and that defendant re-endorsed to plaintiff in consideration of the agreement, and that bill was dishonoured. Held on demurrer that in order to excuse want of notice to endorser, he must, as between the acceptor and himself, be primarily liable; that the assignment being by way of security only did not relieve the acceptor or make it incumbent on the endorser to meet the bill in the first instance. Demurrer allowed. Judgment for defendant. Rees v. Martin, 5 A.J.R., 77.

Misdescription in—Executors.]—There are two requisites which are indispensable to a good notice of dishonour, viz., a description of the bill, and an intimation of its having been presented for payment and dishonoured. A bill of exchange was endorsed to the defendant and L., the executors of a will, by them endorsed to the defendant, who endorsed to the plaintiff. The bill was by the plaintiff placed in a bank for collection, and the bank gave notice of dishonour to the executors, describing the bill as placed by them and not by plaintiff for collection, and intimating its dishonour. The plaintiff sued the defendant as his immediate endorser upon the bill. Held that as the defendant had not proved he was misled, the description of the bill, though erroneous, was sufficient, and that defendant was liable either personally or as executor. Billson v. Hood, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 125.

9. Actions on.

Parties Liable.]—The endorser of a bill of exchange cannot be sued as such unless the bill has been endorsed to him. W., a drawer, sued M., the endorser, on a bill of exchange. M. demurred on the ground that it was not alleged that the bill was accepted or endorsed by the drawer. Judgment on demurrer for defendant. Wood v. M'Mahon, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 282.

Right of Action—How Transferred.]—A bill of exchange drawn by the plaintiff on the defendant, and accepted by him, and made payable to a bank, but not "or order," was dishonoured and sent back to the plaintiff. Held, that the return of the bill unpaid to plaintiff transferred to him the right of action on the bill, without endorsement; and that he might sue upon the original consideration for which the bill was given, as the dishonouring of the bill remitted the parties to their original rights. Bateman v. Connell, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 203.

Procedure on—"Instruments and Securities Statute" No. 204, Sec. 24—Writ against Several Defendants—Affidavit of Service.]—A writ of summons had issued against the drawer and acceptor of a bill, and judgment by default was signed against the acceptor. Held, that under Sec. 24, the affidavit of service being entitled (? intituled) s against both defendants, the judgment was regular. Judgment set aside. Maritime Mercal Credit Company, v. Christie, 5 A.J.R., 5.

Payment of Money Out of Court—Act No. 204, Sec. 20—Insolvency of Defendant.]—In an action on a bill of exchange, the defendant obtained leave to defend under Sec. 20 upon paying money into Court. Plaintiff recovered a verdict, and defendant moved for a rule nisi for a new trial, which was refused, and, on the next day, became insolvent. Judgment was afterwards signed. Held, that the action having been tried, and plaintiff having recovered a verdict, he was entitled to have the money paid out to him. Playford v. O'Sullivan, 5 A.J.R., 115.

Per Stephen, J. (in Chambers.)—After leave is given to appear and defend, the action is at large, and the defendant may plead any defence he desires (even though such defence was not disclosed in his affidavit.) English Scottish and Australian Chartered Bank v. Lavars, A.L.T., 63.

Application for Leave to Defend—"Supreme Court Rules 1884," Order 38, Rules 23 and 24.]—Per Higinbotham, J. (in Chambers,) Rules 23 and 24 of Order 38 of the "Supreme Court Rules 1884," apply to applications under the "Instruments and Securities Statute 1864," and the copy of the writ and summons should not be annexed to the affidavit or referred to in the affidavit as annexed, but must be referred to as an exhibit, and as such must be certified to by the commissioner before whom the affidavit is sworn under Rule 24 of the same Order. London Discount Bank v. Prendergast, 6 A.L.T., 19.

Practice under "Judicature Act"—Order 20, Rule 1, (a,) (c)—Order 26, Rule 1—Appendix C., Sec. 4—Act No. 204, Sec. 19, Sch. 2.]—If a writ is endorsed according to the form given in Sch. 2 of Act No. 204 ("Instruments and Securities Statute,") it is a specially endorsed writ within the meaning of Appendix C., Sec. 4 "Supreme Court Rules 1884," requiring a statement of defence. Woodwin v. Heanchain, 6 A.L.T., 160.

Payment into Court.]—Defendants in obtaining leave to defend had paid money into Court. Barry, J. (in Chambers,) ordered that this sum be held by the Prothonotary as if paid in under a plea of payment. Young v. Dellar, A.L.T., 87.

Made and Accepted on Sunday.]—A bill of exchange made and accepted on a Sunday, if not in the ordinary course of business, is not bad. Walsh v. Hosking, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 35.

Pleading Set-off.]—Where there is a set of bills accepted by the defendant, to whom the plaintiff is indebted, the plea of set-off should not be raised till the last bill of the set is due. Nisbet v. Cox, 4 A.J.R., 115.

Equitable Plea—Contemporaneous Agreement not in Writing.]—To a declaration by the endorsee against the acceptors of a bill of exchange, the acceptors put in a plea on equitable grounds that before drawing the bill it had been agreed that the bill was not to be paid unless the acceptors should recover a similar amount from a third person, and alleged that, though judgment had been recovered against such third person, the acceptors had received nothing thereunder. The plea did not allege the agreement to be in writing. Held a good plea, and that there was no occasion to allege that the agreement was in writing. Waxman v. Barnard, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 238.

Prior Agreement to Refer to Arbitration—Set-off.]—M., as endorsee of a bill of exchange, sued G., the endorser. G., as an equitable plea, alleged that, as to part of the amount, £4000, under a prior agreement in pursuance of which the bills were given, matters in dispute had been referred to arbitration, and an award was made by which M. was to pay H., the acceptor, a certain sum of money, viz., the above-mentioned sum of £4000; and that H. claimed and offered to set-off the said sum. M. demurred to this plea on the ground that it did not show circumstances in which a Court of Equity would grant a perpetual and unconditional injunction. Replication (1) that an award had been made before the award stated in the plea (5) traversing the set-off claimed by H. Demurrer to replication. Held that the plea was good; that there was an absolute and unconditional answer in Equity to the part of the declaration pleaded to, and the fact of there being no such answer to the whole cause of action did not affect its validity; that there might be several awards and arbitrations. Judgment for defendant on all the demurrers. Murphy v. Glass, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 199; affirmed on appeal to Privy Council, L.R., 2 P.C., 408.

Agreement as to Payment of a Promissory Note.]—Plaintiffs sued on a promissory note made by defendants in favour of plaintiffs. Defendants pleaded on equitable grounds that after the note became due, and before action, it was agreed between the plaintiffs and defendants and the other makers of the note who were defendants' partners, that one of the other makers should give the plaintiffs a note for the same sum instead of the original one, provided that such other note should be paid when due, that the plaintiffs had taken such note which had been duly paid at maturity. On demurrer, Held that though several objections to the plea might possibly be sustained before a Judge in Chambers, yet the plea, being in effect that the Plaintiffs had been paid through another channel, afforded on general demurrer a substantial defence on equitable grounds. Ettershank v Curr, 2 V.R. (L.,) 88; 2 A.J.R., 74.

Equitable Plea—Bill of Exchange—Firm Accepting—Notice of Retirement.]—One of the defendants in an action on a bill of exchange by the endorsee against a firm which had accepted the bill, pleaded on equitable grounds that before acceptance he had retired from the firm, and that the endorsement to plaintiff was made when the bill was overdue. Held bad because it did not allege notice of the retirement to the previous holders. Webster v. Tulloch, 2 A.J.R., 57.

Plea of Payment.]—In an action against the acceptor, the defendant pleaded that he had given a lien to the plaintiff over certain shares, and that he was to retain the dividends thereon, and that he did retain them, and that the proceeds were more than the amount of the bill. Demurrer to plea. Held that the plea amounted to a plea of payment, there being an agreement to give and take certain things, directing the application of the thing to be done. Saunders v. Matthews, 5 A.J.R., 83.

Plea that Consideration Wholly Failed.]—To a declaration on a bill of exchange, the defendant pleaded an agreement by which the consideration wholly failed. Held, on demurrer to plea, that the plea should have alleged that there was no other consideration. Demurrer allowed. Peck v. Willison, 5 A.J.R., 121.

Note Made in Favour of Dissolved Firm.]—Semble, that it does not lie in the mouth of the maker of a promissory note to aver that the payees of the note, formerly members of a dissolved firm, were fictitious persons, when he was thoroughly aware of the dissolution, and of the circumstances attending the making of the note. Paterson v. Hughes, 2 V.R. (L.) 148; 2 A.J.R., 96.

Presumption of Drawer's Liability—What Will Rebut.]—Unless there is some written document or substantial fact to rebut the ordinary presumption that a man, when he gives a bill, means to pay it, the holder must be held to recover on it. Kong Meng v. Peters, 1 A.L.T., 136.

Endorsement after Maturity—No Consideration—Promise to Accept Composition.]—To an action by endorsee of a promissory note against the maker, the latter pleaded—(1) that the note was endorsed to plaintiff after it became due—(2) that plaintiff gave no consideration for it—(3) that, before the note was endorsed, the payee promised to accept a composition on the amount due. Held, no defence to the action. Breading v. Doria, 2 A.L.T., 6.

Alteration.]—After the issuing and acceptance of a bill of exchange by A., the name of A.'s wife was added as a joint acceptor with A., without the consent of the drawer. Held, a material alteration, notwithstanding that at the time of the wife's name being added, and thenceforward, she was a feme covert. Oriental Bank v. Beilby, 1 V.R. (L.,) 66; 1 A.J.R., 81.

Alteration.]—A material alteration in a bill of exchange or a promissory note is one by which the instrument is made to operate differently, to speak a different language. Luth v. Stewart, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 383; 2 A.L.T., 78.

A drawer of a bill sent it to another person for endorsement before he himself had done so; such person endorsed and returned it; the drawer then endorsed, and subsequently the words "without recourse" were inserted in the bill before the endorsement of the drawer's name. Held a material alteration; but that, since it was merely carrying out the intention of the parties to the bill that the drawer should not be sued by such person, it did not vitiate the bill or prevent the drawer from suing him, even though his consent was not asked to the alteration, the jury finding that he must have known that he was intended to be held liable. Ibid.

Forgery — Evidence to Sustain — Ratification—Estoppel.]—K.'s signature was forged to a promissory note of which he was alleged to be the maker, and after dishonour, K. said that the signature was his, and had made the same statement as to a previous forged note held by the same holder. Held that there was no evidence by which an estoppel could be proved or a ratification inferred. Semble, that had K. previously paid a forged note and thereby misled an innocent holder, the case would have been different. Kernan v. London Discount and Mortgage Bank, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 279.

Forgery—Admission as to Other Bills.]—A statement by an acceptor resisting payment of a bill on the ground of alteration by forgery after acceptance, that other bills similarly altered were "all right and would be paid," is no admission of liability on the bill on which he is being sued. Levinger v. Fitzgerald, Johnston v. Fitzgerald, 4 A.J.R., 138.

Forgery—Alteration after Acceptance—Evidence—Questions for Jury.]—K. drew bills upon F., who accepted them, and they were subsequently endorsed to the plaintiffs. The bills were drawn upon graved forms, in which a ruled space was left in the body of the bill after the words "sum of," for the insertion of the amount. K. wrote in the ruled space what was supposed to be "one Hundred" and some odd pounds, beginning the first word with a small letter. Before this the letter "F" was subsequently inserted, and the amount in figures altered correspondingly, thus making the bills appear to be for £400 and odd pounds. Skilled witnesses could not determine whether this was done before or after the acceptance was written across the bill, but defendant swore that it was done after acceptance, and the jury accepted his version, and found in addition that any person using due and ordinary diligence could have, from the appearance of the bill, discovered the alteration, and that it was not negligence or want of caution on the acceptor's part to accept bills drawn with a space before the amount which began with a small letter, and brought in a verdict for the defendant. On application for a new trial or to enter a verdict for the plaintiffs, Held that the jury were at liberty to disregard the evidence of the skilled witnesses as regards the respective dates of the alterations and acceptance, and to act upon the evidence of their own senses; that if there could be any doubt at all about the matter, the question whether it were negligence or want of caution on the part of the acceptor to accept bills drawn as described, was entirely one of fact for the jury, and not of law for the Court, but that such a question should not even have been left to the jury; and application refused. Ibid.

Discharge.]—All the makers of a bill of exchange being primarily liable, giving time to one does not discharge the others. Colonial Bank v. Ettershank, 4 A.J.R., 94, 185.

Waiver.]—Waiver may be by an absolute, unconditional renunciation by the holder, though unaccompanied by satisfaction or any solemn instrument, and is a question for the jury. Ibid.

As to what was held to amount to a waiver see Colonial Bank v. Ettershank, 4 A.J.R., 10, 45, 94, 185, affirmed on appeal to the Privy Council, 4 V.L.R. (L.) 239.

Waiver — Proof — New Trial.]—On a plea of waiver to an action on a promissory note, the fact of waiver must be clearly proved, and if the jury find in favour of the plea, on evidence unsatisfactory to the Court, a new trial will be ordered. Bank of Australasia v. Cotchett, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 226.

10. Other Points.

Promissory Note—Evidence of Account Stated.]—A promissory note is evidence of an account stated between the maker and the payee; but not between the maker and an endorsee. Paterson v. Hughes, 2 V.R. (L.,) 148; 2 A.J.R., 96.

Accommodation Bill—When Negotiable.]—An accommodation bill in the hands of the original person for whose accommodation it was given is negotiable both before and after maturity, and before and after the death of the accommodation acceptor. Clough v. Gray, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 225.

BILL OF SALE.

Statutes—"Instruments and Securities Statute 1864," No. 204, Part vii.

"Instruments and Securities Statute Amendment Act 1876," No. 557.

1. Definition of.

Bill of Sale or Absolute Sale.]—A document as follows:—"Sold to J. (certain property,) total price, £58 10s. . . . received payment, M. Witness J.M," is not a bill of sale. Jones v. Rede, 2 A.J.R., 17.

2. What Require Registration.

Act No. 204, Sec. 56—Act No. 557, Sec. 1—Possession Remaining in the Vendor.]—Under the two Acts the term "bill of sale" is to be construed according to their policy to include written instruments in the form of sale notes, receipts, &c., really intended as securities where the possession remains in the so-called vendor. S. signed a sale note to the following effect: "I have this day sold to B. my carts, &c., for the sum of £55, to be paid for at any time before" —a certain date. B. wrote out a cheque and paid for them at once. S. retained the possession of the carts, &c., for a time, but B. seized them the day before S.'s insolvency. Held that the sale note required registration as a bill of sale, and, being unregistered, S.'s trustee in insolvency was entitled to the goods. In re Shaw, 9 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 16; 5 A.L.T., 107.

No Change of Possession—"Instruments and Securities Statute 1864," Secs. 56, 63.]—B. was claimant of goods seized by an execution creditor under a bill of sale, whereby B. had possession of furniture in a hotel prior to the seizure of it by the creditor under the Justices' order. The bill was as follows:—"Memorandum of agreement entered into this —— day of —— between C. M., of ——, publican, and B., whereby the said C. M. sells to the said B. that public house known as the ——, situated in the main street, ——, with all the furniture, fixtures and fittings therein, for the sum of £ ——, £ —— in hand paid, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged; an acceptance of this date, payable three months after date, granted by the said B. to the said C. M.; and two further acceptances for £ — each, also of this day's date, payable the first six months after date, and the second nine months after date, receipt of which acceptances from the said B. is acknowledged by the said C. M., and the said C. M. hereby undertakes to give up immediate possession of the aforesaid house and premises, with all furniture, &c., to the said B., and also to apply to the magistrates to have the license transferred from him, the said C. M., to the said B. (Signed) C. M., B." The license was not transferred, nor was there any change of possession. Held that this was not a sale in the ordinary course of the trade or business of a publican, but a transfer of all that C. M. had; and that, there having been no change of possession, the bill was void for want of registration. Wangaratta Brewery Company v. Betts, 1 A.J.R., 79.

Deed of Assignment—Property in Assignor.]—If under a deed purporting to be a deed of assignment for benefit of creditors, but not so in fact, any part of the property is allowed to remain in the apparent possession of the would-be assignor, such deed requires registration. Port v. London Chartered Bank, 1 V.R., (L.,) 162; 1 A.J.R., 146.

Sale Note Upon an Auction—Debtor Left in Possession.]—A sale note given on a sale at auction by a bailiff, under an execution, need not be registered as a bill of sale, though the judgment debtor be left in possession of the goods. Barnard v. Mann, 2 V.L.R., (L.,) 140.

Assignment of Stock-in-Trade in Trust—Immediate Possession.]—W., being sued by a Bank on an overdue promissory note, and being also indebted to M., who, however, was not pressing him for payment, made an arrangement with M. and the Bank whereby, in consideration of a further small advance from M., and M.'s forbearing to sue W. for a reasonable time, and also obtaining from the Bank a forbearance to sue W. on the overdue note, W. executed an assignment to M. of nearly all his stock-in-trade in trust, to sell and pay M. and the Bank rateably, and hand over the surplus to W. if there should be any. Immediate possession was given to M. Held that M.'s taking possession dispensed with the necessity of registering the assignment as a bill of sale. Cohen v. McGee, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 543.

Over Stock on a Farm—"Instruments and Securities Statute 1864," Sec. 63.]—Sec. 63 of the "Instruments and Securities Statute 1864," which excludes from the definition of "personal chattels" "stock upon any farm which by virtue of any covenant or agreement ought not to be removed therefrom," does not apply to a covenant in a stock mortgage not to remove the stock. It applies only to a covenant or agreement existing prior to the stock mortgage. Such a mortgage is a bill of sale requiring registration within the meaning of the Act. Teague v. Farrell, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 480; 2 A.L.T., 98.

Absolute Sale—Contemporaneous Parol Understanding as to Redemption—Act No. 557, Sec. 15.]—A contract purported to be an absolute sale of certain goods. Attached to this was a contract of the same date, under seal, for the letting and hiring of the same goods from the purchaser to the vendor, which was not filed as a bill of sale. There was also a contemporaneous parol undertaking that the vendor should have the goods back if he paid the purchaser off. Held that the contract did not come within Sec. 15 of Act No. 557, as there was no sale free from the proviso for redemption, and for the contract to be valid it required filing under Part VII. of Act No. 204. Rosel v. Stephens, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 379; 5 A.L.T., 142.

Act No. 204, Secs. 56, 63—Act No. 557, Sec. 15—Deed of Hiring.]—An arrangement was made between the plaintiff company and the defendant that goods to be supplied to the plaintiff should be divided into three lots, of which one lot was bought by the plaintiff and the other two were to be hired to the company, the plaintiff giving as security three contracts of hiring covering all the goods. Afterwards, in April, 1879, a fresh deed of hiring was drawn up, similar in other respects to the former ones, but declaring that the whole of the goods belonged to the defendant. Held, that the deed of April, 1879, was so far in its nature a bill of sale that it required registration under Acts No. 204 and 557, and that the intended estoppel in the deed did not prevent the hirer from showing the real nature of the transaction, i.e., that it was a bill of sale. Per Barry, J., that the admission in the deed of April, that the goods were the defendant's and not the company's, must be taken as evidence that there was a contract for the sale, which ought to have been in writing and registered with the deed. Oriental Hotel Company v. Thomson, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 485.

Memorandum of Transfer when Necessary—Bill duly Filed.]—It is unnecessary to file or register a memorandum of transfer from the grantee to another person of a duly filed bill of sale. Marr v. Mayger, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 494.

Act No. 557, Secs. 15, 16—Consideration.]—In an action for detinue and conversion the defendant as a defence produced a contract of sale from the plaintiff, and a contract of letting and hiring, which were not filed in the manner provided by Sec. 16 of the Act. It appeared also that no proper consideration was given. Held, that the defence was bad. Verdict for plaintiff. Howse v. Glowry, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 280.

Receipt for Purchase Money with Inventory Attached—Act No. 557, Sec. 1.]—S. purchased a piano from A., and paid for it. Subsequently he sold his furniture, including the piano, to G., but remained in possession. Upon this sale the following document was given:—"6th August, 1878. Received from A. £250, being in full for purchase of household furniture and effects set out in inventory, hereunder written. [Here followed the inventory.] S." Held that this document required registration under the Act No. 557, Sec. 1. Glen v. Abbott, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 483.

3. Possession of the Goods.

Possession in Grantor until Default of Payment—Property in Grantee—Unauthorised Sale by Auctioneer at Grantor's Direction before Default Made—Auctioneer Liable for Money Had and Received in Action by Grantee.]—See Lockhart v. Gray, post under Money Claims; and see cases under preceding heading.

Until Default.]—Where the grantor of a bill of sale transfers his property in the goods to the grantee, but subject to his right of redemption, although it be not specifically stated in the instrument, the grantor has clearly reserved to him a special property in the goods until he makes default in payment, and has therefore a right of action for seizing and selling the goods before that event arises. Frith v. Maritime General Credit and Discount Company, 2 V.R. (L.,) 165, 168; 2 A.J.R., 111

Successive Grantees.] — As between two grantees of the same goods the property is absolutely and indefeasibly vested in the first grantee if the condition be not performed by the grantor, and no action will lie by the second grantee against the first for negligently and carelessly selling the goods described in the securities of both at an undervalue. Frith v. Maritime General Credit and Discount Company, 2 V.R. (L.,) 165, 168; 2 A.J.R., 111.

Possession Taken and Sale Made on Default.]—In 1869, B. and Co. sold a timber-yard to S., payment for which was made partly in cash, partly by bills extending over a long period. S. gave a bill of sale to secure the bills, which was not registered, and which provided that S. was to furnish monthly accounts. In May, 1872, default was made in furnishing the accounts and in payment, and B. took possession and sold to W. Another creditor of S.'s recovered a judgment against S., and issued execution. B. paid off this judgment debt. S. sequestrated his estate, and Sharp, the official assignee, turned W. out of possession. W. brought an action against Sharp, in which a verdict was given for defendant. A rule nisi for a new trial, on the ground of the verdict being against evidence, was discharged, the Court refusing to disturb the verdict, which evidently was based upon B.'s act in paying the judgment debt being inconsistent with his former possession. Williams v. Sharp, 3 A.J.R., 80.

4. Property Passing By.

Growing Crops—Absolute Conveyance—Purchaser without Notice.]—G. by deed absolutely conveyed to W. a crop of wheat growing on his farm, this deed was duly registered as a bill of sale. Afterwards G. sold to M. part of this crop, M. having no notice of W.'s title to the wheat. Held that the property being absolutely in W., G. had no title to confer upon M. Mueller v. White, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 92.

Goods Referred to in the Schedule.]—The body of a bill of sale contained a provision that it should comprise all goods, &c., "described, or comprised, or mentioned, or referred to, in or by the schedule" annexed, "and now standing in and upon" the premises, or used by the mortgagor in his business. The schedule contained an inventory of several goods, but did not mention others, and concluded with the words:—"Together with all such goods and chattels as may for the time being be in or upon the said premises." Goods were seized which were not mentioned expressly in the schedule, but which were on the premises. Held that where a schedule was referred to in the body of a bill of sale for the purpose of furnishing detailed particulars of the articles over which the bill of sale purported to give security, it has to be regarded merely as an inventory, and could not enlarge the operation of the deed. But where the deed itself declared that it was intended to pass not only the property described but also that referred to in the schedule, the bill was not impaired by the schedule, and the words of the deed were not restricted to the articles enumerated, and that the goods seized were comprised in the bill. Gibbes v Rolls, 2 A.J.R., 113.

A bill of sale comprised all chattels mentioned in the schedule upon certain premises at A., or otherwise used by the grantor in connection with his business in a tenement in Melbourne, and all goods brought upon the said premises, or used in connection with the said business, in addition to or substitution of the chattels mentioned in the schedule. The grantor removed to C., and acquired other chattels apart from those mentioned in the schedule. Held that the last mentioned chattels did not pass under the bill of sale. Smith v. Leroy, 5 A.J.R., 174.

Future Property.]—The defendants as trustees were the assignees under a bill of sale of all the plaintiff's property, present and future, on their premises and elsewhere. This property, according to the deed filed as a bill of sale, included "spirits, &c." Certain spirits which were not in existence at the time of the execution of the bill (nor were the materials from which they were made in the possession of the plaintiffs) were sent away from the premises to a bonded store before the defendants took possession of the premises. Held that such spirits were comprised in and passed to the defendants under the bill of sale. Victorian Beetroot Sugar Company v. Sherrard, 5 A.J.R., 105.

After Acquired Property — Evidence as to.] — Where a bill of sale purports to include after acquired property, the holder must adduce evidence of some act of affirmance by the grantor respecting such after acquired property. Dunlop v. Tutty, 2 V.R. (L.,) 14; 2 A.J.R., 35.

After Acquired Property—Demand—Waiver.]—Under a bill of sale which declared that all chattels to be thereafter brought upon the premises should form part of the security, and which gave a power to seize on default after demand in writing, the grantee seized after default, but without such demand. Held, that the seizure was illegal, and did not vest the after acquired property in the grantee. Cohen v. Oriental Banking Corporation, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 278; 1 A.L.T., 198.

Goods Seized Under an Illegal Distress.]—A bill of sale is paramount to a faulty distress, and a person claiming under a bill of sale will have a better title than a person who has seized the goods comprised in the bill of sale under a prior distress which is invalid. Regina v. Templeton, ex parte Allen, 4 A.J.R., 70.

5. Successive Bills of Sale.

Registered Bill Passing Property Comprised in Prior Unregistered Bill.—"Instruments and Securities Statute," Sec. 56.]—A debtor executed a bill of sale over all his property, but the bill was not registered. He afterwards executed another bill of sale to the same persons over a greater part of the same property, and this bill was registered. Certain creditors obtained a judgment against the assignor, and seized part of the property comprised in the registered bill. On an interpleader issue it was contended that the registered bill was void, as the assignor had no property on which it could operate at the time of executing it. Held that the registered bill was valid as against the subsequent execution creditor. Hedrich v. Commercial Bank, 1 V.R. (L.,) 198; 1 A.J.R., 155.

6. Fraudulent.

Duty of Justices as to Evidence.]—Where a bill of sale has been executed and filed, Justices on an interpleader summons should admit evidence which is tendered with the object of showing that the bill was not properly executed, and that no consideration was paid, and that the bill was within the mischief of 13 Eliz., Cap. V., as given to hinder, delay and defraud creditors. Dunlop v. Tutly, 2 V.R. (L.,) 14: 2 A.J.R., 35.

See also Insolvency—Fraudulent Conveyance.

Description of Attesting Witness—"Clsrk."]—In a bill of sale the attesting witness was described as "of S—— street, Melbourne, pawnbroker's clerk." In the affidavit he described himself as of "B—— street, Emerald Hill, clerk." There was no allusion in the affidavit to the person who had attested the bill of sale—nothing to identify the attesting witness of the bill of sale with the person who made the affidavit. Held that the description of "clerk" in the affidavit was insufficient. O'Donnell v. Goldstein, 4 A.J.R., 85.

Act No. 204, Sec. 56—Affidavit.]—An affidavit verifying the residence and occupation of the attesting witness to a bill of sale as follows:—"I reside at Geelong, and am a law clerk." Held sufficient under Sec. 56. Douglass v. Simson, 6 W.W. & A.B. (E.,) 32.

Act No. 204, Sec. 56.]—An affidavit of verification contained a description of the attesting witness, "of Kerang, in the Colony of Victoria, storeman," and there was evidence that he could be easily found by that description. Held that it was sufficient. O'Donnell v. Patchell, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 360.

On Same Sheet of Paper—Separately Initialled.]—Where a bill of sale and the verifying affidavit are upon the same piece of paper, the affidavit need not be separately initialled by the Commissioner before whom it was sworn. O'Donnell v. Goldstein, 4 A.J.R., 85.

Bill of Sale on Several Sheets.]—A bill of sale, forming one continuous document, was written upon 11 pages; the affidavit of verification was upon the 12th, or outer page, and the interior pages were stitched together, forming an instrument like a conveyance. Held, that the affidavit was sufficient, and that it was not necessary that the different pages should have any mark to identify them. London Chartered Bank v. Kirk, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 266.

"Instruments and Securities Statuts," No. 204, Sec. 56, et seq.]—At the hearing of an interpleader summons before Justices, a bill of sale was put in, and on the back of it was endorsed the affidavit of filing, but with the blanks therein not filled up. Held that the bill of sale so endorsed was no evidence, there being nothing to connect the copy filed in the Registrar's office with the original bill produced before the Justices. Baird v. Forrest, 3 A.J.R., 22.

Interlineation Unattested.]—An interlineation in an affidavit verifying a bill of sale, not initialled by the Commissioner, does not invalidate the registration, although such affidavit could not be used in court. Blamires v. Dunning, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 18.

When Unnecessary—Seizure under Bill within Twelve Months from Registration—Act No. 557, Sec. 13.]—A bill of sale, by which chattels were mortgaged, dated July 12th, 1879, was filed on the 29th of that month, and registration was renewed on the 19th July, 1880. The grantee, on February 22nd, 1881, assigned the chattels comprised in the bill to a third person, who at once took possession of them, the grantor having made default. Disputes arising as to some of the chattels, an action was instituted more than twelve months after the 19th of July, 1880. In the action the bill was tendered in evidence, but objected to on the ground that the registration had not been renewed within twelve months after the 19th of July, 1880, under Sec. 13 of the Act No. 557. Held that the objection was untenable. Pettit v. Walker, 8 V.L.R (L.,) 72; 3 A.L.T., 118; sub nom. Walker v. Pettit.

Annual Affidavits—Stating Amount Incorrectly—Bill Void—Act No. 557, Sec. 13.]—Where a bill of sale has been properly registered, but the subsequent annual affidavit, required by Sec. 13 of the Act No. 557, states the amount due upon the bill incorrectly, the effect is to render the bill absolutely void as a bill of sale, as between the immediate parties to it, as well as between all others. Black v. Zevenboom, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 473; 2 A.L.T., 96.

Annual Affidavit—By Whom Made—Act No. 557, Sec. 13.]—The annual affidavit required by Sec. 13 of the Act No. 557, to be made and filed in order to keep alive a bill of sale, must be made by the person entitled to the benefit of the security, and cannot be made by his attorney under power. Martin v. Blamires, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 498.

"Instruments and Securities (Bills of Sale) Statuts," No. 557, Sec. 13—"Manager."]—The word "manager," in the Act No. 557, Sec. 13, means, with reference to a banking corporation, either the head manager at the head office, wherever situate, or the manager of the branch bank at which the debt is due. An inspector in Melbourne of a bank having its head office in New South Wales, is only an "officer" within that section, and, if he make the affidavit of renewal of a bill of sale, must depose of his own knowledge to the facts. Bank of New South Wales v. Jones, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 253.

"Able to Depose of His Own Knowledge."]—Quære, whether the words, "able to depose of his own knowledge," in the Act No. 557, Sec. 13, apply to the antecedent word, "manager," as well as to "other officer." Ibid.

(c) Consideration for.

What Sufficient—Agreement to Advance Money.]—On an interpleader summons to try the right to goods seized under an execution, and over which a bill of sale has been given, it appeared that the consideration for the bill was—not the actual payment of, but an agreement to advance money, Held, that this was a sufficient consideration, and that the person claiming under the bill was entitled to the goods. Harrison v. Moore, 2 V.R. (L.,) 69; 2 A.J.R., 56.

See also, for remarks upon consideration Howse v. Glowry, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 280.

Act No. 557, Sec. 15—What Must be in Writing—Consideration.]—The 15th Sec. of Act No. 557 requires that the real contract between the parties must be in writing, and the real contract is not in writing if the writing do not truly state the consideration. The consideration is not truly stated if it is stated to be the advance by the purchaser of a certain sum, when in reality the transaction is merely the discharge by the vendor of past debts, due to the purchaser to the amount of such sum. Bruce v. Garnett, in re Riedle, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 126; 6 A.L.T., 13.

Attesting Witness—What Description Sufficient.]—The description of an attesting witness to a bill of sale as "managing law clerk," without stating whose clerk he is, is a sufficient description. O'Connor v. Paul, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 97.

Description of Attesting Witness.]—In an affidavit accompanying the registration of a bill of sale the attesting witness was described as "W.T.P., of Swanston-street, in the City of Melbourne, Law Clerk." Held, a sufficient description. Treacey v. Balderson, 2 V.R. (L.,) 3; 2 A.J.R., 15.

Attesting Witness—Description—Affidavit—Act No. 141, Sec. 2.]—The affidavit did not in the swearing part contain a description of the occupation of the attesting witness, but it did in its heading; and it did not swear to the truth of facts stated in the attestation clause, where a sufficient description of the occupation of the witness was given, but swore only to "truth of the copy" of attestation clause set out in the affidavits. Held, that the description in the heading was not sufficient, and that there being no description in the binding part, or in any document so referred to and incorporated into the affidavit as to make the facts appearing in the document part of the facts sworn to by the affidavit, the Act was not complied with. McCulloch v. Harfoot, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 267.

Attesting Witness—Description—Act No. 141, Sec. 2.]—The attestation clause in a bill of sale was witnessed by "H. C. C., Solicitor, Melbourne," and the signature was merely "M. B." In the affidavit filed the residence and occupation of M. B. were set out, but it did not either expressly or by reference to the attestation clause above mentioned set out the residence and occupation of H. C. C. In the heading of the affidavit H. C. C. was described as "gentleman, Melbourne." Held that the requirements of Sec. 2 of Act No. 141 had not been complied with. Nathan v. Naylor, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 263.

"Instruments and Securities Statute," No. 204, Sec. 56—What Requisits.]—The "Instruments and Securities Statute," No. 204, Sec. 56, must not be read as requiring that there shall in every case be an attestation of the execution of a bill of sale, but only that wherever there is such an attestation there shall be filed a true copy of it, and an affidavit containing, among other matters, a true description of the residence and occupation of the attesting witness; and under the "Statute of Evidence," No. 197, Sec. 55, it is not necessary that an attesting witness should be called to prove the execution of an instrument the validity of which is not dependent upon attestation. Smith v. Martin, 3 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 35.

Description of Attesting Witness.]—The verifying affidavit of an attesting witness to a bill of sale, began "I, A. S., clerk to Messrs. B. & T., of 107 Collins Street West, in the City of Melbourne, do make oath and say——." There was no further description of the witness in the affidavit, but the attestation clause of the bill of sale contained a similar description. Held, that this was a sufficient description of the witness, though he was only described as deponent. Cohen v. Oriental Banking Corporation, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 278; 1 A.L.T., 198.

Act No. 204, Sec. 56—Time for Registering—Antecedent Verbal Agreement.]—The time for registration in Sec. 56 runs from the execution of the written bill of sale, and not from the time of an antecedent verbal agreement to assign. O'Donnell v. Patchell, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 360.

Contract of Sale Not Registered under Act No. 557.]—Where a contract of sale of chattels is not registered as a bill of sale under the Act No. 557, if such contract is invalid the remedy is at Law, and not in Equity. Davey v. Bailey, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 240.

Caveat Against Registration—Creditor, Who is—"Bills of Sale Act," No. 557, Sec. 7.]—A caveator, in his affidavit in support of his caveat against registration of a bill of sale, alleged that one

H., the mother of W., the intended grantor of the bill of sale, was entitled to dower from certain real estate which W. had entered into possession of as heir-at-law; that the caveator had advanced moneys to H., and had taken a mortgage of her dower rights as security; and that W. had received certain sums as net rents, one-third of which the caveator claimed as such mortgagee. On these facts the caveator claimed to be a creditor of W. within No. 557. Held, per Cope, J., that the caveator was not a creditor within the meaning of Sec. 7 of No. 557, since there was no privity between him and W., the caveator being like a mortgagee out of possession; and caveat ordered to be removed. In re Caveat of Mitchison, 1 A.L.T., 124.

8. Seizure Under.

Before Default—Parol Extension of Time.]—A mortgagor by bill of sale of chattels is not guilty of default so as to make the title of the mortgagee absolute, by non-payment at the time mentioned in the bill, if the mortgagee has agreed by parol to extend the time for payment. Frith v. Maritime General Credit and Discount Company., 2 V.R. (L.,) 165; 2 A.J.R., 111.

On Demand.]—A. borrowed from B. £200 for three months, at interest at 10 per cent. per annum, and granted a bill of sale of all his furniture to B., conditioned to be void on payment on demand of £200 and interest at 10 per cent. per annum. On the same day A. gave to B. his (A.'s) acceptance at three months for £205. During the currency of the acceptance B. demanded payment of the £200, and interest to the time of such demand; and, on non-payment, seized the furniture under the bill of sale, and advertised its sale. A. then tendered to B. £200 and interest, conditionally on the bill of sale and acceptance being given up, which was refused. A. then filed his bill against B. for an injunction to restrain the sale, and for rectification of the bill of sale, and obtained an ex parte injunction. On motion to dissolve the injunction, Held that the defendant should not be allowed to take the acceptance and use it as his own, and at the same time enforce immediate payment under the bill of sale; that although the plaintiff did not make a strictly legal tender, there had been a substantial, proper, and adequate offer of payment, and one sufficient to induce the Court to interfere by injunction and restrain the sale. Murphy v. Martin, 1 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 26.

After Demand—Further Notice.]—Where a mortgage of chattels, by way of bill of sale, is made payable on demand, with a power of sale on default, and a demand of payment has been made, no further notice to the mortgagor, before sale, is requisite. United Hand-in-Hand and Band of Hope Company v. National Bank of Australasia, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 61.

9. Priority.

After Acquired Property.]—An action was brought in detinue to recover a billiard table, and plaintiff obtained a verdict. It appeared that the billiard table formed part of the furniture of a hotel in defendant's occupation, but previously owned by B.; that B. had given a bill of sale over the furniture, including after acquired property, to W. The table was brought on to the premises after the first bill of sale. B. then gave a second bill of sale over the table to the plaintiff, and W. sold the furniture to the defendant. Held on rule nisi to enter verdict for defendant that before W. had done any act to acquire a title at law, the plaintiff acquired the property; that there were two equities, and in a court of law that which is clothed with the legal title must prevail, and rule refused. Henry v. Miller, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 293.

Parol evidence of a prior bill of sale and of its satisfaction is no answer to the claim of a holder of a bill of sale which is produced. Ford v. Parker, 5 A.J.R., 169.

10. Other Points.

Bill of Sale Subject to Defeasance not Comprised Therein—"Instruments and Securities Act," No. 204, Secs. 57, 56, 63.]—W., more than 60 days before his insolvency, executed and registered a bill of sale in favour of L. S., W.'s official assignee, sued L. for the goods, and at the trial it appeared that though absolute in form, it had been made subject to a verbal condition of defeasance on repayment, so that it was really a mortgage to secure a debt of the ostensible purchase-money of the apparent absolute sale; and that W. had for a time left the premises and then returned, and remained apparently as occupant, and had been supplied with goods by L. to carry on business as before. The jury gave a verdict for defendant. On rule nisi for a new trial, Held that under Sec. 57 it was void as subject to a defeasance not upon its face; and that it was void at common law under Secs. 56 and 63 as being made in order to give "false apparent possession" and "collusive credit;" or on the view that, if the jury had found "apparent possession" to have changed from assignor to assignee, the finding was against evidence. Rule absolute. Simpson v. Luth, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 143.

"Instruments and Securities Statute," No. 204, Sec. 57.]—Where an agreement was made after a bill of sale was executed, to the effect that grantor of bill was to have goods back on repayment of money, and such agreement was not endorsed on the bill, Held that the agreement being made after execution distinguished it from Simpson v. Luth, and that bill of sale was valid. Gane v. McGrane, 3 A.J.R., 22.

Illegal in Part—Independent Clauses.]—Illegality, apart from fraud, only vitiates that part of a document which is declared illegal, not other independent clauses contained in the same document. Tidyman v. Collins, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 478.

If, therefore, a bill of sale be null and void by failure to file the prescribed affidavit of renewal, the grantee may recover the debt from the grantor, upon an independent covenant to pay contained in the same deed. Ibid.

Bill Given as Collateral Security for Payment of Rent Under a Lease.]—A bill of sale given as collateral security for payment of rent under a lease is not limited to the rent actually due, but is valid for the currency of a lease as against an execution creditor. Sweeney v. Shepherd, 3 A J.R., 49.

Construction — Licence to Break in and Seize Chattels in Default of Payment.]—A licence contained in a bill of sale for the grantee to break and enter the grantor's premises and to seize the goods secured in default in payment, is an essential part of the instrument, regarded as a bill of sale, and is avoided with the instrument itself if the latter becomes void. Black v. Zevenboom, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 473, 479; 2 A.L.T., 96.

BOARD OF LAND AND WORKS.

1. When a Necessary Party.

Sale of Crown Lands.]—Per totam curiam—A suit to restrain the sale of Crown Lands is defective if the Board of Land and Works is not a party. Semble, the substantial rights of the Crown to waste lands have been ceded to the Board of Land and Works by Statute; the sale and disposition of them have been entrusted to the Board; the Board is the sole agent as regards these lands, and the Crown could not move in the matter of selling them without the Board. Davis v. the Queen, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 106, 127.

Contract—Position as Agent for Crown.]—The Board of Land and Works has been constituted for the express purpose of giving it an independence of action, and although its corporate acts are for the benefit of the Crown, the maxim Respondeat Superior is not applicable so as to exempt the Board from liability on a contract which it has made; the Board may be sued by the contractor, and it is not necessary for him to bring his action against the Crown by petition. Young v. Board of Land and Works, 3 V.R. (L.,) 110, 118; 3 A.J.R., 54, 77.

Suit Against the Crown — Board of Land and Works.] — E. L. & M. in July, 1858, contracted with the then members of the Board of Land and Works on behalf of the Government, for the construction of a railway. In December, E. L. & M. became partners. In 1860 they dissolved, L. becoming liable to E. and M. for shares of profits, L. and W. to complete the contract. E. M. & L. assigned to H. and others the percentages retained by the Government upon trust, and to W. their interest under the contract. Moneys became due under the contract for breaches and deviations before and after the dissolution, and the Government retained a percentage on moneys payable until completion. Actions were commenced in the names of E. M. & L. and others, against the Queen to recover these percentages, and for relief as to breaches. In 1870 the actions were compromised, and C. purporting to act as M.'s attorney, consented to a discontinuance and settlement for £60,000, and to entry of satisfaction on judgment for that sum. A release, to which the Board was a party, was also executed by H. and others, releasing the Queen and the Board from all actions under the contract. M. petitioned against the Board, H. and others, to have the release set aside, and accounts taken under the contract, the compromise and release having been entered into without his consent and against his protest. The Board demurred on the ground (inter alia) that it was not a necessary party. Held, that the Board was rightly made a party, as it deals as an agent for the Crown. Merry v. The Queen, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 7; 1 A.L.T, 137.

2. Rights, Powers, Duties, and Liabilities of.

Sale of Crown Lands.]—See Palmer v. Board of Land and Works, under Crown—Privileges and Prerogatives.

Under Land Acts.]—See under Land Acts.

For Improper Construction of Works.] — Although the Board is a public body, discharging statutory duties, it is liable for the improper execution, either by the Board or its agents, of works constructed in discharge of those duties by which injury is occasioned. Victorian Woollen and Cloth Manufacturing Company v. Board of Land and Works, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 461; 3 A.L.T., 65.

"Amending Land Act, 1865," No. 237, Sec. 22—Liability of Board of Land and Works for Tort.]—McK. brought an action against the Board for not registering the transfer of a lease under Sec. 22 of Act No. 237. Held, on demurrer to the declaration, that although the plaintiff had paid a fee, and although the Act authorised certain things to be done on payment of fees, a contract was not thereby created, but that the Board was liable as in tort. Judgment for plaintiff. McKinnon v. Board of Land and Works, 3 V.R. (L.) 70; 3 A.J.R., 41.

Railway Platform Insufficiently Lighted—Friend of Passenger—Tort.]—The Board of Land and Works is liable, in an action of tort, for injuries occasioned to the friend of a passenger, whom he accompanied to the train, by the neglect to sufficiently light the platform, if the practice has been to allow friends of passengers to accompany them to the train. Sweeney v. Board of Land and Works, 4 V.L.R. (L.) 440.

Public Officers.]—As regards the Government Railways, the Board of Land and Works are not public officers, but merely a body of trustees, one of whom is a public officer for the time being, and to all of whom is entrusted the property belonging to the railways, on which they carry on the business of carriers for hire, the carrying on of such business forming no portion of the Government service. Ibid.

The mere fact that the Board of Land and Works are trustees, or receive no profit from the performance of their trust, will not exempt them from liability for acts of negligence committed by them in the execution of their trust. Ibid.

3. Costs.

No. 344, Secs. 49, 50—No. 392—Infant Owner of Land.]—An infant was entitled to a piece of land which the Board of Land and Works required for a railway, and which the Board took, and an order was made appointing the receiver, appointed by the Court in suit, a special guardian for purpose of selling and conveying land to Board. On motion as to costs, Held that the Board was not liable for any costs under the Acts, except the costs of conveyance, which may be obtained by going before the Master under Secs. 49 and 50. Hunter v. Hunter, 5 A.J.R., 2.

16 Vic., No. 39—Acts No. 59, Sec. 2, No. 96, Secs. 1, 12—"Public Works Statute 1865," No. 289, Sec. 5—Lands Compulsorily Taken—Costs of Petition as to.]—A board called the "Commissioners of Sewers," &c., was incorporated under 16 Vic., No. 39. This board compulsorily took land, paying purchase-money into Court. Under powers of No. 59, Sec. 2, a proclamation was made by Governor-in-Council, dissolving the board and transferring their rights, powers and liabilities to the Board of Land and Works. By Sec. 12 of No. 96, all the property, rights, &c., of the Commissioners of Sewers were vested in the Board of Land and Works, and Sec. 1 incorporated the Board of Land and Works. No. 289, Sec. 5, vested in the reconstituted Board of Land and Works all the rights, powers, liabilities, &c., of the existing board. Held that Board of Land and Works were liable to pay the costs of a petition for payment out of Court of purchase-moneys, and also of a disentailing deed necessarily executed. In re Bear's Estate, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 53; 2 A.L.T., 153.

Act No. 617.]—The Act No. 617, vesting in the Board of Land and Works the undertaking, &c., of the Melbourne and Hobson's Bay United Railway Company, does not transfer to the Board any of the liabilities of the Company; and the Board is not liable to pay the costs of a petition for payment out of Court of moneys paid in in respect of land compulsorily taken by the Melbourne and Suburban Railway Company under "Land Clauses Consolidation Act 1845." In re Thompson, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 213; 4 A.L.T., 1.

BONDS.

Breach—Setting Out.]—In an action against sureties in a bond for payment of any sum of money that might be recovered in a certain action, under the declaration, the declaration in the action on the bond contained no averment that the money was recovered under the declaration. Held, that the words "under the declaration" were material to be alleged in the breach. Day v. Union G. M. Company, 2 V.L.R., (L.,) 11.

Assignment of Breaches, 8 & 9, Will. III., Cap. 11, Sec. 8.]—A bond secured the payment of a certain sum due for principal and interest upon a mortgage of even date after default in payment of such principal and interest on a certain date. The plea averred payment of such sum according to the conditions, and the replication merely joined issue. Held, upon demurrer to the replication that the bond was substantially a bond to secure payment of a principal sum by instalments, and therefore within 8 and 9, Will. III., Cap. 11, Sec. 8, and that it was necessary that replication should assign breaches of condition. Demurrer allowed. Miller v. Tripp, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 12.

BUILDING SOCIETY.

1. CONSTITUTION AND RULES.

Rules — Effect of Long Continued Departure from.]—The rules of a building society must be strictly adhered to, and are binding on the members and all persons claiming as or through members, and as between a society and its members a long continued course of dealing at variance with the rules is of no validity, and length of time cannot validate it. Watson v. Bendigo Building Society, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 26; 5 A.L.T., 174.

Rules Providing for Arbitration.]—The rules of a building society provided that all disputes between the society and a member should be referred to arbitration. The society sued D., a borrowing member, in ejectment for default in his payments as a mortgagor. Held that the rules were no bar to the action; to render them such it must be established by strict proof that there was a dispute between the Society and the defendant quâ member. Delaney v. Sandhurst Building Society, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 189; 1 A.L.T., 13.

"Building Societies Act," No. 493, Secs. 2, 12, 22, 27, 38—"Acquiring" Land—Rule ultra vires.]—The M. Society framed a new rule authorising the board to "acquire freehold or leasehold estate, or take leases or under-leases, and, where deemed expedient, erect buildings on any freehold or leasehold, for the time being, held by the society, and to sell or lease the same respectively." The Registrar refused to register this rule as being ultra vires. Held, on summons under Sec. 38 of the Act, that nothing in the Act gave the society power to take land on lease or build; the only power given being to buy, sell, and mortgage freehold or leasehold land, and that such rule was ultra vires. In re Metropolitan Permanent Building Society, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 86; 3 A.L.T., 26.

2. REGISTRATION.

"Building Societies Act 1874," No, 493, Secs. 2, 4, 38—Refusal to Register—Similarity of Names—Existing Society.]—The Registrar was summoned to uphold the grounds of his refusal to register a society on the grounds that in his opinion the proposed name nearly resembled the name of an existing society, the Registrar relying on Sec. 4 of the Act. The existing society was registered after the Act 493 came into force, and it was contended that it was not an "existing society" within meaning of Sec. 2, and therefore Sec. 4 did not apply. Held that "existing society" does not strictly mean a society existing at time of passing of Act, inasmuch as the purpose of the Act was to prevent any registered society from bearing a name too closely resembling that of another society then existing, whether registered before or after the passing of the Act, and that the Court would not interfere to supplant the opinion of the Registrar when he has formed a real and genuine one. Summons dismissed. In re Fourth South Melbourne Building Society, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 54; 4 A.L.T., 182.

Act No. 493, Secs. 7, 8, 9—Practice—Proof of Registration and Rules.]—The notification in the Government "Gazette" is sufficient proof of registration and incorporation of a building society under Sec. 8, but the rules must be proved by the production of the originals. Sandhurst Building Society v. Delaney, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 234.

A society sued D. on the covenant in a mortgage deed. The new rules of the society, made since the passing of Act No. 493, were not properly proved. Held that the plaintiff society was not entitled to recover anything due under the rules since registration under the Act. Ibid.

3. POWERS AND LIABILITIES OF DIRECTORS AND OFFICERS.

Secretary—Excess of Power.]—Where the committee of a building society authorised its secretary to place lands, of which the society was mortgagee, in the hands of an auctioneer for sale, Held, that the secretary had no power in himself to retract or suspend the authority given to the auctioneer without a resolution of the committee to that effect. Ross v. Victorian Permanent Building Society, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 254, 264; 4 A.L.T., 17.

Secrstary—Power of.]—The secretary of a building society must be held to have authority to answer questions connected with property in the society's possession asked by persons interested in such property, and to receive notices in respect of it binding on the society. Hollowood v. Fourth Union Building Society, 2 A.L.T., 95.

4. Powers and Liabilities of Trustees.

Trustees Selling Property—Not Precluded from Suing for Unpaid Instalments.]—The trustees of a building society gave notice to a contributing member, whose monthly instalments in respect of certain property were in arrear, that they intended to sell the property in respect of which the instalments were so in arrear, and also sued the member personally for the unpaid instalments. Held that the trustees were not precluded, by selling the property, from suing the member. Clendinning v Broadbent, 4 A.J.R., 157.

Ejectment by Trustees—Title.]—A certificate of title in the name of the trustees of a building society personally, and not as trustees for the society, is sufficient to enable them to maintain an action of ejectment as trustees of the society. Clendinning v. Garrick, 4 A.J.R., 120.

5. Powers and Liabilities of Society.

Paying Deposit to Married Woman—Liability to Husband.]—A building society which pays a deposit made with it at interest by a married woman is not protected in making such payment from the liability of paying it again to the husband, although the society give him notice that they intend to pay the wife, unless he obtains an order from a Judge under Sec. 12 of the "Married Women's Property Act." Griffiths v. Victorian Permanent Building Society, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 259; 2 A.L.T., 34.

6. Relation between Societies and their Members.

Mortgages—Sale of Mortgaged Property—Buying-in.]—The trustees of a building society have power to authorise the buying-in by their agents of property mortgaged to the society for an advance, and sold in default of payment. Wynne v. Moore, 1 A.J.R., 156.

CAPIAS.

1. Capias ad Satisfaciendum.
2. Capias ad Respondendum.

1. Capias ad Satisfaciendum.

Ca. Sa.—Writ not Abolished by "Imprisonment for Debt Act," No. 284.]—Although Act No. 284 provides that "no persons shall be arrested under a writ of ca. sa. unless as hereinafter provided," it does not prevent the issue of the writ, it rather contemplates its issue. Proudfoot v. Mackenzie, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 144.

Writ of Ca. Sa.]—A writ of capias ad satisfaciendum is merely a writ of the Supreme Court and as such only has authority within the limits of the Colony.—Writ refused in the case of an absconder from bail who had gone to Sydney. Regina v. Robinson, 6 A.L.T., 141.

2. Capias ad Respondendum.

Setting Aside.]—On a rule nisi to set aside an order to hold to bail, the Court will not inquire into the cause of action on affidavits of the defendant, even where the affidavits show a greater value than that which plaintiff had sworn to in his affidavit. Smith v. Parnell, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 115.

Capias ad Respondendum—Affidavit in Support—"Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," Sec. 332.]—If an affidavit in support of an application for a ca. re. under Sec. 332 of the "Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," on the ground that the defendant is about to leave the colony, shows a debt divided into distinct and severable items, the Court may sever them, if necessary, so as to sustain the application. But if the several items are so mingled in one sum as not to be severable, and if any one of them cannot be sustained, such fault vitiates the whole, and an order to hold to bail ought not to issue, or ought to be rescinded. And great particularity is necessary to justify the arrest of the defendant. Ivey v. Cavanagh, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 274.

When, therefore, in an affidavit in support of a ca. re., besides the general claim for interest on the bulk sum of the debt, the debt itself was stated to be composed of several items, one of which was interest on other items, the particular item itself not being severable from such bulk sum, Held that the whole affidavit becoming, in consequence, insufficient, the ca. re. must be rescinded. Ibid.

Capias ad Respondendum—Affidavit in Support.]—An affidavit in support of a ca. re. must state facts and materials sufficient to satisfy the Judge that the action will probably be defeated if the defendant be not held to bail. Ibid.

Semble, that the mere fact that the defendant is about to depart upon a voyage in the usual course of his business is insufficient ground for holding him to bail. Ibid.

Capias ad Respondendum—When Issued.]—Per Holroyd, J. (in Chambers,) a writ of capias ad respondendum cannot be issued after judgment. Union Bank v. Rinderman, 6 A.L.T., 27.

Capias ad Satisfaciendum.]—A writ of capias ad satisfaciendum may be issued, but no one can be arrested on it. Ibid.

"Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," Sec. 339—Capias.]—The word "capias," in Sec. 339 of the "Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," refers only to a "capias ad respondendum." Ibid.

Where a defendant had been arrested on a writ of capias ad respondendum, issued upon a judgment debt, Held that the writ should be set aside and the defendant discharged. Ibid.

1. COMMON.

Lien — When Entitled to.]—M. carried a quantity of wool under contract with the lienor of the wool, and delivered it to the lienees, who did not pay him his freight. M. claimed a lien over the residue of the wool for a general balance owing to him and for his freight. Held, that he had not, as under a plea averring a carriage "for the lienees" at their request, a lien for his general balance, and that a contract with the lienees would not, in the circumstances, be implied; but that M. had, at common law, a lien upon the residue of the wool which was still undelivered, for its carriage. Goldsbrough v. McCulloch, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 154.

See S.C. under LIEN.

Liability and Duty of as to Delivery—Special Contract.]—F., a Chinaman, delivered to R. a case of opium to be carried to a certain place. F. signed the delivery note in Chinese characters, and R. signed the receipt note in English characters. F. could only speak English imperfectly and could not read English, and on the back of the delivery note there was a condition endorsed to the effect that R. would not be responsible for the safe delivery of any parcels containing goods over £10 in value, unless the value be declared and entered on the receipt and an extra price paid. The value was £180; this was declared, but the value was not entered on the receipt note. Held that as F. signed voluntarily, and it must be assumed he was aware of the contents of the delivery note in order to entitle him to sue he must show that he had complied with conditions. Fong Gaep v. Reynolds, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 80.

Liability for Non-Delivery within Reasonable Time—Notice—Consequential Damages.]—Consequential damages will be allowed against a common carrier for the non-delivery of goods within a reasonable time, when the carrier had express notice that unless the goods were delivered within a reasonable time, such consequential damages would ensue. Lambrick v. Bentwitch, 4 A.J.R., 73.

2. GENERALLY.

Licensed Carrier—Proof of Negligence by—"Licensed Carriags Statute 1864," Sec. 20.]—The disregard of the provieions of Sec. 14 of the "Licensed Carriage Statute 1864," No. 217, forbidding more than one person to be carried on the box of a coach, is not conclusive proof of negligence as against the owners of a vehicle in the case of an accident. Robertson v. Carmody, 1 V.R. (L.,) 6; 1 A.J.R., 24.

Unlicensed Carrier—Special Contract—Act No. 78.]—In an action for the value of work and labour done in the carriage and delivery of goods, the defendant pleaded that the work and labour was done by plaintiff "as a carrier by land for hire, within the Colony of Victoria," and that plaintiff had not a license "to carry on business as a carrier" under the Act No. 78. Replication that the work was done under a special contract. On demurrer to the replication, Held, that the Act No. 78 requires carriers generally to take out licenses, and is not limited to the class known to the common law as "common carriers;" and that though a "common carrier," who enters into a special contract for the carriage of goods, ceases to be a common carrier quoad such contract; yet a carrier, within the meaning of the Act No. 78, may enter into a special contract for carriage, and still continue a carrier quoad the subject matter of that contract; and that therefore plaintiff could not recover. Renwick v. McCulloch, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 48.

When Liable for Non-Delivery—Privity of Contract.]—Plaintiff took silk to a dressmaker to be made up, and instructed her to send the parcel home by a cabman. The parcel was delivered to the cabman by the dressmaker's servant, but the cabman did not deliver the parcel. The plaintiff was nonsuited in the County Court, on the ground that there was no privity between plaintiff and the cabman, and that the action would only lie at the suit of the dressmaker. On appeal, Held that if the action were for trover, plaintiff could sue, but that the cabman was not liable to plaintiff as a carrier, and decision upheld. Gwyatt v. Hayes, 2 A.J.R., 107.

CERTIORARI.

Where the Writ Lies.]—Certiorari does not operate on persons whose duties are merely ministerial, or whose functions are merely administrative, engaged in carrying into execution powers delegated to them by law. The writ will not lie, therefore, to bring up a regulation made by the Board of Education under the "Common Schools Act," No. 149, where such regulation possesses none of the characteristics of a judicial proceeding, for the purpose of having it quashed as being ultra vires; but the regulation must be attacked in some other manner. Regina v. Board of Education, 2 V.R. (L.,) 176; 2 A.J.R., 97.

Where the Writ Lies.]—Quære whether certiorari is the proper remedy for a prisoner who has been convicted, as he contends, irregularly. Regina v. Schreibvogel, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 92.

Where the Writ Lies—Appeal.]—Where appeal lies certiorari will not, unless the party who wishes to bring up the proceedings on certiorari can show that there has been a manifest and total want of jurisdiction or fraud. Regina v. Quinlan, ex parte Sampson, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 102; 6 A.L.T., 8.

In a mining partnership suit under Sec. 101, Sub-sec. vii. of the "Mining Statute 1865," the Judge of a Court of Mines at the hearing of a suit made a decree simply for the plaintiff, with costs; but no costs were taxed by the Judge at the hearing, as there should have been under Sec. 230 of the Statute in question. Afterwards the Clerk of the Court taxed the costs and drew up the decree, which was settled and signed by the Judge, and under it the costs to be paid by the defendants were fixed at £4 9s. The defendant had notice to attend at the drawing up of the decree, but did not do so. The defendant had the decree brought up on certiorari, and sought to quash it on the grounds that the Judge had acted wrongly in not himself taxing the costs of the decree, and that, under Sec. 230 of the Statute, the Clerk of the Court had no power to tax the costs. Held, that defendant might have appealed from the decree as settled, as containing more than the decree actually pronounced; but that, since the Judge had jurisdiction to settle the decree, an appeal was the proper remedy, and it could not be quashed on certiorari. Ibid.

Jurisdiction to Grant.]—When a certiorari is said to be taken away by statute, the superior Court is not absolutely deprived of the power to issue the writ; but its action as to the writ is controlled and limited, and it cannot quash the order removed on certiorari except upon the ground of manifest defect of jurisdiction in the tribunal that made the order, or of manifest fraud in the party procuring it. Matters on which the defect of jurisdiction depends may be apparent on the face of the proceedings or may be brought before the superior Court by affidavit, but must be extrinsic to the adjudication impeached. Colonial Bank v. Willan, 5 L.R., P.C., 417; 43 L.J., P.C., 39; 5 A.J.R., 53.

"Mining Statute 1865," No. 291, Secs. 244, 172—Winding-Up Order.]—The Courts of Mines stand to the Supreme Court in the relation of inferior Courts, but the power of issuing a certiorari in respect of any proceeding under Act No. 291 is taken away by Sec. 244. Ibid.

Courts of Mines—Jurisdiction of Supreme Court.]—An order had been made by the Court of Mines for the winding up of a company registered under Act No. 228. The order was regular upon the face of it, but the Supreme Court held that the petitioning creditor's debt was not proved, and that there was no foundation for the order, and quashed it on certiorari [Regina v. Bowman, ex parte Willan, 3 V.R. (L.,) 258; 3 A.J.R., 122.] Held, on appeal to Privy Council, that the order was within the provisions of Sec. 244 of Act No. 291, and although the Supreme Court had, notwithstanding the provisions of the section, power to issue a certiorari in the case of manifest defect of jurisdiction, or of manifest fraud in the person procuring it, yet the reason on which this order was quashed did not justify the exercise of the jurisdiction. Ibid.

Act No. 565, Sec. 36—Jurisdiction of Court.]—A Chairman of General Sessions fixed the valuation of certain property for rating purposes upon a wrong principle, as it appeared to the Court, and did not state a case. Upon a rule nisi to quash the return to a writ of certiorari issued upon the fiat of the Attorney-General, Held that certiorari having been taken away by the statute, the Court had no jurisdiction to consider the merits of the case, as the Chairman had jurisdiction to fix the valuation. Rule discharged. Regina v. Cope, ex parte Mayor of Essendon and Flemington, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 337; 3 A.L.T., 30.

Where the Writ Lies—Court of Mines.]—Certiorari will not lie to bring up a winding-up order made to wind-up a mining company, where the order is good on its face, showing no excess or defect of jurisdiction. The proper method of questioning the sufficiency of the materials upon which the order is made is by appeal. Regina v. Leech, ex parte Tolstrup, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 494.

Court of Mines—Winding-up Order.]—See Regina v. Hackett, ex parte Golden Gate Company, post under MINING—Company—Winding-up Order.

Court of Mines.]—A writ of certiorari will not issue to bring up to the Supreme Court the decision of a Judge of a district Court of Mines on the sufficiency of the service of a petition for winding-up a mining company. If the writ did issue it would be making the Supreme Court a Court of Appeal on a question of fact. Re New Ringwood Company, ex parte Smith, 4 A.L.T., 58.

Court of Mines—"Mining Statute 1864 Amendment Act," Sec. 23.]—A certiorari will not lie to a Court of Mines to quash a judgment on the ground that the Judge has refused to state a case or suspend his decree for ten days, as required by Sec. 23 of the "Mining Statute 1864 Amendment Act," No. 446, where the question n dispute is one of fact and not of law. Regina v. Dunne, ex parte Golden Fleece Old Chum Company, 4 A.J.R., 123.

Restraining Judge of Court of Mines from Taking Accounts after Decree.]—Regina v. Rogers, post under MINING—Practice—Jurisdiction of Court of Mines.

Mining Warden.] — Where a summons to appear before a warden was not signed by the warden, but was signed by the warden's clerk, not in the name of the warden (under No. 446, Sec. 14,) but in his own; but the defendants took no objection to this at the hearing, and the trial proceeded, and a verdict was given for the complainant. On rule for a certiorari, Held that if the objection had been taken at the hearing before the warden it would have been good, but that having allowed the trial to proceed, and having had an opportunity of being heard upon every point, they could not afterwards take the objection; and rule discharged. Regina v. Strutt, 4 A.J.R., 147.

County Court.] — Application for certiorari to remove a case from the County Court to the Supreme Court should be made to a Judge in Chambers. Gilmer v. Burmister, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 209.

County Court—Act No. 345, Sec. 121—County Court Judge Irregularly Granting a New Trial and Setting Aside Judgment.]—A County Court Judge possesses authority to set aside a judgment and grant a new trial as often as he likes, and even where he sets aside a judgment after a lapse of 16 years in an unusual way, and in violation of the rules, his disregard of the rules does not deprive him of his jurisdiction so as to justify the issue of a writ of certiorari. Regina v. Bindon, ex parte Cairns, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 93.

Where the Writ Lies—Court of Insolvency.]—The Supreme Court has no jurisdiction by certiorari over the Insolvent Court. In re Slack, 2 V.R. (L.,) 135.

Where the Writ Lies.]—Certiorari lies from a Military Court, though under the "Military and Naval Discipline Act 1870," the proceedings of such Court are lodged and recorded in the office of the Attorney-General. Regina v. Sturt, ex parte Johnson, 4 A.J.R., 78.

Where the Writ Lies.]—The proper remedy where the justices who adjudicated in a summary proceeding under Sec. 511 of the "Local Government Act 1874," for obstructing a person employed by a municipal council to remove obstructions from a road, are also members of the prosecuting council, is by certiorari, and not by prohibition; for a prohibition would imply that no justices could hear the case. Ex parte Scott, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 70.

Where Writ Lies—Not Required under "Justices of the Peace Amendment Act," No. 571, Sec. 4.]—It is not necessary, when it is desired to quash a proceeding under Act No. 571 ("Justices of the Peace Amendment Act,") Sec. 4, to bring up such proceeding before the Court by certiorari or otherwise. Regina v. Browne, ex parte Sandilands, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 138.

To Quash Justices' Order—Rule Nisi Omitting to State Objection—Act No. 267, Sec. 148.]—A rule nisi for certiorari to quash an order of Justices, discharged with costs, on the ground that the rule nisi did not, under Sec. 148 of Act No. 267, set out the objections to the order. Regina v. Sturt, ex parte Lloyd, 3 A.J.R., 22.

To Quash Conviction — Justice Exceeding his Authority—Act No. 267, Sec. 159.]—Although certiorari is taken away by Act No. 267, yet certiorari to quash a conviction where a magistrate exceeds his jurisdiction still exists. Hunter v. Sherwin, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 26, 32.

"Scab Act 1870."] — The Court granted a certiorari to quash an order of Justices convicting a person for driving scabby sheep into a clear district without the order of an inspector, where the summons had directed such person to appear at one place, and the case was heard at another in his absence. Regina v. Drury, ex parte Cullen, 4 A.J.R., 169.

And see generally as to Quashing Orders of Justices, post under JUSTICE OF PEACE—Prohibitions to and Quashing Convictions, &c.

Judge Interested.]—An order of certiorari had been obtained on the ground that a Judge in the Court below had persisted in hearing the case although he was interested in the question. Rule nisi to set it aside on ground that material facts had been concealed from the Judge who granted the order. Held that the fact that the applicant after knowing the Judge was interested went on with the case was not a material fact for setting aside order and rule discharged. Molloy v. Gunn, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 76.

Practice—Title of Affidavits—Writ of Certiorari upon Fiat of Attorney-General—Returns.]—A writ had been obtained upon a fiat of the Attorney-General, directed to the Court of General Sessions, &c., to remove all judgments, &c., in a certain appeal on a rating valuation. To this writ a return was made sending up a copy of the minute in the Court-book, and the Justices were ordered to make a further return, which was made, certifying that "after the coming of this writ and the return thereto, the paper writing annexed hereto, marked A, had come into their custody, and is returned according to the exigency of the writ." The return and the document were sealed with the seal of the Court. Held that the return was good. When the return to a writ is filed, the cause below being then in the Supreme Court, the affidavits and the rule to quash the return should be intituled "in the Supreme Court," but the affidavits and rule may be amended. Regina v. Cope, ex parte Mayor of Essendon and Flemington, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 337; 3 A.L.T., 30.

Fiat for Writ—Proof on Oath of Six Days Notice in Writing — 13 Geo. II., Cap. 18, Ssc. 5.] — Higinbotham, J. (in Chambers) refused an application for a fiat for a writ of certiorari where the applicant had not offered any proof upon oath, as required by 13 Geo. II., Cap. 18, Sec. 5, that six days' notice in writing had been given to the justices whose proceedings were sought to be quashed. Ex parte Sayers, 6 A.L.T., 24.

By Judge in Chambers.]—A Judge in Chambers can grant an order absolute in the first instance for a certiorari, and there is no sound distinction between the case of Justices and Wardens as to giving notice. Regina v. Carr, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 240; N.C., 59.

Rule Nisi Obtained in Vacation.]—Where a rule nisi for certiorari was obtained in vacation, and made returnable before the Court on the first day of Term, Held that the Judge in Chambers had no jurisdiction to grant such a rule. Regina v. McIntyre, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 42.

Order Nisi Made in Vacation—When Returnable.] —An order nisi for a certiorari granted in vacation cannot be made returnable in term, but must be made absolute in the first instance. Regina v. Pohlman, ex parte Thomson, 4 A.J.R., 154.

After the discharge of the order, a prohibition may be applied for if the application be made on proper materials. Ibid.

Superseding — Taking Return Off the File.] — Where a Judge had granted a writ of certiorari, notwithstanding that it was objected that the applicant had disentitled himself by delay, and the same objection was again taken on the return to the writ, on a rule to quash the order brought up, which was confessedly bad, Held that the objection as to delay could be taken on the rule to quash, and that the Court would in such a case review the discretion of the Judge who had granted the certiorari; and rule to quash discharged, and the return taken off the file. Regina v. Bowman, ex parte Garrett, 4 A.J.R., 177.

CHAMPERTY.

What Amounts to.] — In order to constitute Champerty it is not necessary that there must be a binding contract as between the parties, and that the contract must be such that, apart from its illegality, it would have been binding and valid; an honorary engagement is sufficient, and parol evidence is admissible to show the true state of facts and the illegalities. A suit was instituted by nine plaintiffs to recover ground as in the illegal occupation of the defendants, the plaintiffs having no title but miners' rights. It appeared that a solicitor was substantially the plaintiff in the suit, that he had paid the expenses of the suit and had bought miners' rights for the plaintiffs. Held that it was a claim in its inception and concoction based upon champerty and maintenance. Semble, where a plaintiff has originally a good right and makes a bargain with his solicitor savouring of champerty, he is not to be defeated of his rights in consequence of that bargain. Collins v. Hayes, 6 W. W. & A'B. (M.) 5.

What Amounts to.]—In a suit by a sole plaintiff to set aside a forfeiture of his shares in a mining company, other persons whose shares had been similarly forfeited contributed to the plaintiff's costs of suit, but without any agreement to share in the immediate result of the suit, Held that their identity of interest warranted them in so contributing, and that this did not amount to champerty or maintenance. Wood v. The Freehold United Quartz Mining Company, Registered, 1 V.R. (E.,) 168; 1 A.J.R., 173.

What Amounts to.]—An assignment by mortgagees of goods, at the time or lately the property of the mortgagors, and then in the custody of the warehouseman, of all their right and title to the goods, is not champertous. Ross v. Blackham, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 159.

What Amounts to.] — A mortgagor became insolvent, and his official assignee, in consideration of the mortgage debt, released the equity of redemption to the mortgagees. Upon obtaining his certificate, the mortgagor procured a conveyance from the assignee of all his interest in the insolvent estate, and brought a suit to set aside the release. Held there was no champerty in the mortgagor's purchase. Brougham v. Melbourne Banking Corporation, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 214, 226; 2 A.L.T., 81, 84.

What Amounts to.]—In a suit for forfeiture of a mining claim, the sole plaintiff admitted, upon being cross-examined, that another person had advanced money for the purposes of the suit, and was to have a share in the claim if plaintiff was successful. Held that this amounted to champerty or maintenance, and suit dismissed with costs. Mitten v. Spargo, 1 V.R. (M.,) 22; 1 A.J.R., 69.

What Amounts to—Maintenance.]—M. sued Y. for a bill of costs incurred in a suit A. v. B. Y. had advanced money to A., on security of her claims against B., and M. had for some time conducted the case, but refused to go further unless he received security. Y. gave the undertaking to pay the costs on which this action was founded. Held that Y. was interested in the suit of A. v. B., and was not guilty of maintenance; that there is a great difference between the mortgage of a right to litigate and the mortgage of an interest in a suit then existing, and that a person is able to mortgage his interest in an existing suit without being guilty of champerty. Morrison v. Young, 3 V.R. (L.,) 35; 3 A.J.R., 34.

CHARITY.

1. GIFTS TO.

When Valid.]—A bequest to trustees of property "to be employed in such charitable purposes as the trustees shall in their absolute discretion think fit," is not void from uncertainty. Sumner v. Sumner, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 261; 6 A.L.T., 111.

Semble, per Molesworth, J., that if the Court should hold that an application to purposes of private charity is illegal, it should prohibit the trustees from making such, not defeat the trust altogether. Ibid.

"Religious, Charitable and Useful."]—A testator bequeathed a fund to trustees upon trust to distribute it amongst "such one or more, to the exclusion of any other or others, of the various religious, charitable, and useful institutions in the Colony of Victoria," and in such shares and proportions as the trustees should in their absolute discretion think fit. Held that the words were not to be read as "religious or charitable or useful" in which case the gift would be bad, but the ordinary grammatical reading would be institutions which fulfilled each of the three conditions, and the gift was to be read as "religious and useful" or "charitable and useful," the word "useful" qualifying the preceding words, and that the gift was good. Attorney-General v. Wilson, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 215; 4 A.L.T., 14.

2. APPLICATION OF THE FUND.

Charitable Trust in Favour of Unincorporated Institutions—Scheme Imposed by Attorney-General—Representatives of Institutions.]—Where the Attorney-General appears as representing the public in a suit for the administration of the charitable trusts of a will, the Court will adopt any condition as to the payment of the money which he sees fit to impose; but where he imposes no conditions, and the institutions are incorporated, the Court will recognise the representatives of the institutions as being the persons entitled under the will, and will order payment of the money to the managers of the respective departments of the institutions named in the will. Treacy v. Watson, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 96; 5 A.L.T., 201.

Scheme Settled by Court.]—A subscription having been raised under the name of "The Taranaki Relief Fund," for the relief of the distress caused by the Maori rebellion, the amount subscribed was found to be in excess of the requirements, and a surplus remained in the hands of the treasurers of the fund. Upon an information by the Attorney-General, decree made for the administration of the fund. See decree for form of scheme. Attorney-General v. Lorimer, 3 W.W. & a'B. (E.,) 82.

3. JURISDICTION OF COURT OF EQUITY.

Charitable Trust.]—A number of persons, including the plaintiff, formed themselves into a society for charitable purposes, one of the rules of which was that there should be a community of goods and other property. Suit by plaintiff, on behalf of himself and all others, against the curator who had administered to the estate of K., the founder of the society, and the Attorney-General, seeking to restrain curator from selling land, and seeking to establish a trust, and for Court to settle a scheme. Quære, whether Court had jurisdiction at the suit of an individual member to interfere, but as no opposition was made by other members, a decree was made. Pratz v. Weigall, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 156.

CIVIL SERVICE.

"Civil Service Act," No. 160, Sec. 40—What Constitutes a Civil Servant—Retiring Allowances on Services Being "Dispensed with."]—M. was elected at a meeting of the Board of Agriculture to fill the office of Secretary; this appointment as such was approved by the Governor-in-Council. He was not classified under Sec. 8 of the Act, nor included in any list under Sec. 11. His salary was not voted separately by any Appropriation Bill, but was paid out of moneys granted annually to the Board. M. gave two bonds of fidelity, one reciting that he had been appointed to a certain office in the service of the Government, and in the other he was styled an employé in the Colonial Secretary's department in the capacity of Secretary to the Board. M. held office till the Board was abolished. Held, on special case, that he was not entitled to any retiring allowance under Sec. 40, that the Crown was not concluded by the recitals in the bonds, that M. was not a member of the Civil Service. Matson v. The Queen, 2 V.R. (L.,) 233; 3 A.J.R., 27.

"Civil Service Act," No. 160 — Superannuation Allowance—Service not Continuous.]—P. served in the Civil Service for three years previously to October, 1857, when his services were dispensed with, and he received three months' salary as a compensation for his want of sufficient notice, which was to be deemed a "bar to all future pecuniary claims." P. was afterwards appointed to another office from which he retired in October, 1880. Held that Sec. 44 did not imply that the service was to be continuous, and in estimating the rate of his superannuation allowance the three previous years of service were to be taken into account, the compensation only being a bar to claims in respect of his dismissal without notice. Payne v. the Queen, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 55; 2 A.L.T., 126.

"Civil Service Act," No. 160, Sec. 16—Compensation—Services Dispensed With by Change in Department.]—F. prior to the Act No. 552 held a post as Harbor Master. Upon the coming into operation of Act No. 552, F. was transferred to the Harbor Trust Commissioners under Sec. 40 of that Act, and continued to hold office as Harbor Master under such commissioners. Held that by the change in the department his services were dispensed with within the meaning of Act No. 160, Sec. 16, and that he was entitled to compensation therefor. Fullarton v. the Queen, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 181; 5 A.L.T., 64.

"Civil Service Act," No. 160, Sec. 16—"Dispensing with" Services.]—G. was in July, 1857, appointed Inspector of Denominational Schools at a salary of £600 per annum by the Governor-in-Council. In August, 1862, he agreed with Government to accept office temporarily under the Board of Education, and was in October, 1862, appointed by Governor-in-Council Organising Inspector under the "Common Schools Act" No. 149, passed 18th June, 1862. Section 2 of No. 149, dissolved the Denominational School Board. In September, 1862, the Governor-in-Council by proclamation pursuant to Section 1 of "Civil Service Act" No. 160, declared that that Act "should not apply to officers or other persons whose salaries were or had been paid out of a vote for education." G.'s salary had up to that date been paid out of the vote for education. Held (1) that G.'s services had been "dispensed with" within the meaning of No. 160, Sec. 16; (2) that the determination of G.'s appointment by the dissolution of the Denominational Board was a change in the department; (3) that the proclamation of September, 1862, was prospective, and did not deprive G. of rights acquired at the date of such proclamation. Geary v. The Queen, 2 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 50.

I. FORMATION, CONSTITUTION AND INCORPORATION OF COMPANY.

1. Prospectus.

What is.]—H. & H. sold eight mining leases to W. & B. for certain money down, promissory notes for more, and 11,200 paid-up £1 shares in a mining company to be formed by W. & B. for the balance, amounting altogether to the nominal value of £26,840. A company was formed by W. & B., and a prospectus issued by them, which stated the price in shares and money to be paid to H. & H. for the purchase of the shares as £36,640, consisting of 12,000 paid-up £1 shares, and 18,000 shares paid up to 10s., besides payments by cash and notes, and the shares were fixed in accordance with this sum, there being thus an excess of 800 paid-up shares, and 18,000 paid up to 10s. This excess of shares was appropriated by W. & B. to their own use. Held, that the prospectus was intended to mislead purchasers of shares in the company. Benjamin v. Wymond, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 3; 5 A.L.T., 153.

What is Consistent with Deed of Association Substantially Bearing out Prospectus.]—The prospectus of a company stated that the capital was to consist of £5,000 in £1 shares; that the company was projected with a view of purchasing the claim held by the F. Company, and that as it was estimated the issue of 4,000 shares would be enough to enable the proposed company to purchase the interest of the shareholders in the F. Company, to purchase and erect machinery, and defray working and other incidental expenses, only that number of shares would be then issued. The deed of association provided that there should be 2,500 shares, the whole of which should be money shares. The company began operations with only 2,475 shares, of which 1,289 were given to the old proprietors as compensation, leaving no more than 1,186 shares liable for calls. Held, that the deed substantially bore out the prospectus. Bowman v. Homan, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 390.

(c) Alteration.

When Shareholders Bound by.]—See Commercial Bank v. Keith, 1 A.J.R., 131, ante column 94. BILLS OF EXCHANGE.

2. Memorandum and Articles of Association.

Alteration of by Resolution—When Shareholders Bound.]—The Memorandum of Association of a banking company registered under "The Companies Statute 1864," provided for £5 shares. After £3 had been paid up, the company in general meeting resolved to write off £1 per share, and the subsequent quarterly returns under "The Companies Statute 1864," No. 190, and "The Banks and Currency Statute 1864," No. 194, stated £2 per share only as paid up. Upon winding-up, the liquidators sought to enforce the liability to the additional £1 per share. Held, that the writing off would not bind a dissentient shareholder, or shareholders generally, though individuals might assent and be bound; that there was no contract implied in the Statutes that shareholders are responsible if the returns furnished are not true. Application refused. In re Provincial and Suburban Bank, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 145.

Invalid if not in Accordance with the Terms of the Act.]—The provisions of the articles of association of a mining company and the regulations thereunder are invalid if not in accordance with the terms of the Act. Therefore when the articles of association of a company provided for elections of directors at half-yearly intervals, but provided that if meetings should not be held, the former directors should continue in office as if re-elected (so that they might possibly hold office for more than a year,) and the appointed period of election was afterwards departed from, and a director elected for a period beyond that appointed, and a whole board was elected at an intermediate half-yearly meeting prescribed for election of part only, Held that Section 39 of the Act No. 228, enabling rules to be made for election and annual retirement of directors impliedly prohibited any director from continuing for a longer period in office. Upon appeal, Semble, that if special notice had been given of the intention to elect the whole board that it would have been a valid election. Schmidt v. The Garden Gully Company, 4 A.J.R., 66. Affirmed on appeal. Ibid, 137.

3. Registration.

Registration of Members—Non-compliance with Secs. 24, 25 of the "Companies Statute 1864"—Several Offences.]—A non-compliance, extending over several days, with Sec. 24 of the "Companies Statute 1864," which requires a list of members and a summary to be forwarded at certain times to the Registrar-General, does not constitute a separate offence for each day so as to be incapable of being comprised in one summons and one conviction under Sec. 25 of the Act. Ex parte The Colonial Mutual Life Assurance Company, in re Bishop, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 287.

4. Proof of Registration and Incorporation.

Evidence of Registration—Estoppel.]—G., who had signed the deed of association of a mining company, was sued for calls. This deed recited the registration and incorporation. It appeared that the registration was defective. Held, that G. was not estopped by his signing the deed, its recitals being only primâ facie evidence: if it were proved aliunde that the deed was defective, such evidence might be adopted. Reeves v. Greene, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 87.

"Companies Statute 1864," Secs. 168, 169—Validity of Winding-up Order.]—A company was being wound up under order of Court on December 8th, 1864. Upon summons requiring that certain directors should appear and be examined, objections were taken against the validity of the winding-up order. It appeared that on June 9th, 1864, the Registrar-General published a notice that the company was "registered" under the Statute, and that on May 19th, 1865, a further notice appeared "That the company was on the 9th day of June, 1864, incorporated as a company limited by shares." Held, that the Gazette notice of June 9th was insufficient as a notice of incorporation, but that the retrospective effect of the Gazette notice of May 19th operated to validate previous proceedings, and the directors were required to submit to the examination. In re The Melbourne and Newcastle Minmi Colliery Company, 2 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 127.

Proof of Incorporation.]—In an action by a corporation the declaration described the corporation as the W., &c., Company, "Registered," the word "registered" being added to show that the company was incorporated under the Act. Held, that if the word were improperly in the declaration, the defendant should have applied to have it struck out, and if rightly, then the proper course was to traverse it; and that not being traversed it was admitted. Wellington Gold and Tin Mining Company v. Lambrick, 1 V.R. (L.,) 13; 1 A.J.R., 26.

Certificate Signed by Deputy-Registrar—"R. P. Statute," No. 213, Sec. 215—"Mining Companies Act," No. 409, Sec. 10.]—In a criminal information for embezzling monies belonging to a Mining Company it appeared that the certificate of registration was signed by the Deputy-Registrar. Held, that under Sec. 215 of Act No. 213, the certificate of registration was sufficient. Conviction affirmed. Regina v. Walter, 5 A.J.R., 25.

5. Amalgamation and Transfer.

Purchase of Shares to Increase Votes—When "intra vires."]—The committee of management of the A. Company entered into an agreement with the B. Company as to the compromise of a suit pending as to a certain piece of land, and the amalgamation of all the ground of the two companies, except the piece of land in dispute. Some of the shareholders brought a bill as on behalf of themselves and others to restrain the agreement, alleging that the agreement was ultra vires and invalid and prejudicial to the shareholders, and that shareholders in the B. Company had purchased shares in the A. Company to obtain votes, and enforce the agreement. On motion to dissolve the ex parte injunction obtained, Held, that it was competent for persons desirous of carrying a point, lawfully within the functions of the company to purchase shares in the market to increase their number of votes, and to reject committee men opposed to their views, and elect others in their place. Lee v. Robertson, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 374.

Amalgamation of Companies—Duties of Shareholders, inter se.]—Where two mining companies are on the point of amalgamation, and a shareholder in one of the original companies is prosecuting a suit in a District Court to have a mining claim forfeited, and promises to transfer to all the shareholders, except one, shares in the amalgamated company equivalent to their old shares in the original company, such shareholder must treat all the co-shareholders alike, and cannot be permitted to deal with one shareholder as if he were still his partner in the undertaking, and another as if he were not. Such shareholder will be treated as a trustee for the excluded shareholder of the shares in the amalgamated company, representing the charges held by the excluded shareholder in the original company. Harrison v. Smith, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 182, 212. On appeal to Privy Council, 3 A.J.R., 44.

See S.C., BANKER AND BANKING COMPANIES, column 79.

Distribution of Shares—Between Shareholders in the Two Companies.]—A bank was entitled to 550 shares in the G. G. Company, which had forfeited its title to a mining claim. S., who was also a large shareholder in the company, obtained possession of the claim, and, conceiving that the bank had not acted properly in several transactions connected with the company, refused to allow them any interest in the ground. To the other shareholders he allowed the same interest as they had in the old company. An amalgamation took place between the G. G. Company and the A1 Company, 2040 shares in the amalgamated company being allotted to the shareholders in the G. G. Company. In the Equity suit instituted by the bank the Court held that the bank were entitled to shares, as well as the other shareholders, and a decree was made referring it to the Master to ascertain to what number of shares they were entitled in the amalgamated company. The Master found that the bank ought to receive 550 shares, and reported accordingly, The bank excepted, on the ground that they ought to receive an interest proportionate to the 550 shares in the G. G. Company. S., in answer to this, said that only 1600 shares were distributed among the shareholders in the G. G. Company, 440 of the 2040 being given to him for his consent to the amalgamation, and the bank were not entitled to any share in the 440 shares so given. Held that this question was concluded by the decree, and that the bank were entitled to a rateable share of the 2,040 shares. Harrison v. Smith, 1 A.J.R., 22. Affirmed on appeal, p. 75.

Shareholdsr Repudiating—Share Regietsr.]—Two mining companies, B. and D., were amalgamated, on the terms that the shares in the B. Company should be increased, and the additional shares allotted to the shareholders in the D. Company. One of the shareholders in that company refused to assent to the amalgamation, and repudiated the shares allotted to him; but he was entered on the register of the B. Company as proprietor, but subsequently forfeited the shares, and they were sold, and his name removed from the register. Subsequently the plaintiff instituted an action for the recovery of these shares on the ground that they had been illegally forfeited. Held, that the amalgamation was not binding on him, and that he might have followed the property of company D. into the hands of the amalgamated company; but that he could not, under the circumstances, claim to be a shareholder in the amalgamated company, and to have his name put on its register of shareholders. Cock v. Lady Barkly Gold Mining Company, 8 V.L.R. (M.,) 51; 4 A.L.T., 115.

II. PROMOTERS AND DIRECTORS.

Liability for Secret Profit.]—H. and H. sold eight mining leases to W. and B. for certain money down, promissory notes for more, and 11,200 £1 paid-up shares in a mining company to be formed by W. and B., for the rest, amounting altogether to the nominal value of £26,840. A company was formed by W. and B., and a prospectus issued by them, which stated the price in shares and money to be paid to H. and H. for the purchase of the lease as £36,640, comprising besides the payments in cash and notes 12,000 fully paid-up shares, and 18,000 shares paid up to 10s. This excess of shares was appropriated by W. and B. to their own use. As to the 18,000 shares, they were issued in the names of H. and H., who signed transfers in blank of them, and handed them to W. to be dealt with as he thought fit. The remainder (800 fully paid-up shares) were issued directly to B., who divided them equally between himself, W., and one S., who joined in endorsing the promissory notes to H. and H. Held, that W. and B. were liable to the company for the surplus shares appropriated by them, and that the proper measure of the value of the shares appropriated by W. and B., who were constructive trustees, was the price they would have fetched in the market at the time they were appropriated, and not the highest price that might have been obtained for them up to the time of the suit being instituted. Benjamin v. Wymond, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 3; 5 A.L.T., 153.

1. Election.

Appointment of Directors—Construction of Rules.]—It was provided by a rule of a mining company "that an extraordinary meeting of the company shall have full power to rescind, cancel, alter, or vary any resolution passed at any meeting of the company, or by the board of directors if the matter or thing required to be done by any resolution shall not have been done at the time of calling the extraordinary meeting." Another rule provided "that the board of directors, consisting of five shareholders, shall be elected at each annual general meeting of the company . . . and the directors shall continue in office till the next annual general meeting of the company, when they shall retire from office." Held, that the appointment of directors arrived at by an annual general meeting could not be set aside by an extraordinary general meeting. Schaw v. Wekey, 1 V.R. (L.,) 205; 1 A.J.R., 161.

Election and Continuance in Office.]—A rule made by a majority of the shareholders of a mining company under Act No. 228, that the powers of the directors shall continue as long as there exists a quorum, is not inconsistent with the terms of Sec. 39 of that Act, although the number of directors may thereby be fluctuating; but a rule, that if general meetings for the election of directors be not held at the times appointed, the directors shall continue in office indefinitely, and be considered as re-elected, is ultra vires under Sec. 39. Schmidt v. The Garden Gully Company, 4 A.J.R., 137.

See also S.C., ante column 138.

Act No. 228, Sec. 23.]—Where an advertisement had been inserted in a local newspaper to the effect that the half-yearly meeting would be held on a certain day for the purpose (inter alia) of electing a full board of directors, six days before the meeting was held, Held, that such notice should have been a fourteen days' notice under Sec. 23, and that the meeting and election of directors were invalid, and that two directors elected previously, who had not retired from office, could not continue in office after such meeting, for the election of a full board, even if invalid, necessarily involved their retirement. M'Lister v. Garden Gully Company, 5 A.J.R., 152. Affirmed on appeal to Privy Council, L.R., 1 App. Ca., 39.

Election by Resolution.—Rescinding.]—When directors are elected by a resolution, the power to rescind resolutions does not include a power to rescind such election. [Schaw v. Wekey, 1 V.R. (L.,) 205, followed.] Aberfeldie Gold Mining Company v. Walters, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 116.

Mining Company—Election of Directors—Quorum—Extraordinary Meeting.]—By the rules an annual general meeting was to be held in July, and if within an hour of the time of meeting there was not a quorum present the meeting should stand adjourned for a week, and then if there was no quorum it should stand till next general meeting—old directors continuing. At the first general meeting, July 31st, there was not a quorum; but no one called attention to it, and the meeting elected two new directors. The manager then summoned a second meeting for August 7th, a week after the first meeting, and five directors were elected, two being among those elected at the first meeting, and summoned an extraordinary general meeting to confirm this, which was done. Differences existed between the directors, the two sets working independently. Motion for injunction to restrain the two common directors from acting. Held that the Court is disinclined to interfere in such a case by interlocutory injunction. Semble, per Molesworth, J., no one objecting to first meeting, and calling attention to fact that there was not a quorum, the election at that meeting was valid. At the hearing, Held by Williams J., that the election at the first meeting was invalid, and it appearing that the quorum at the meeting of August 7th was made up by the inclusion of shareholders, representing certain shares which were alleged to have been forfeited and sold to such shareholders, but the sale of which the Court held to be a sham, there was no proper quorum at the meeting of August 7th, and that the lawful directors were those holding office prior to the first meeting of July 31st. Old Welshman's Reef Company v. Bucirde, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 12, 115; 2 A.L.T., 129.

2. Qualification.

Non-Payment of Calls—Articlss of Association.]—Under articles 72 and 73 of articles of association of a company, it was provided that no person who was indebted to the company in respect of calls was eligible for the office of director, and that a director being so indebted at the day for payment, must vacate his office. W., a director, had given his promissory notes in payment of certain calls. Held that he was not qualified to be a director, nor in seeking re-election was he eligible for that office. Umphelby v. Wilkie, 5 A.J.R., 108.

See also Reeves v. McCafferty, post column 153.

3. Contracts and Profits made with and from Company.

Quære.—How far it would be open for a man, who is a director, or a person in any other fiduciary position, when there is a forfeiture of a mining lease committed from any cause, to resign his office, and take proceedings for the purpose of availing himself of that forfeiture, and obtaining the property for his own benefit, to the exclusion of his cestius que trustent. Semble, that such a course would not be open to him, and Held that a director, or any other person in a fiduciary position, who causes a forfeiture cannot avail himself of it. Smith v. Harrison (on appeal to the Privy Council,) 3 A.J.R., 44.

See also Australasian Boot Company v. Thomson, post column 145.

Contract for Commission.]—H., the plaintiff and a director of the defendant company, declared upon an agreement whereby the defendant company promised that, in consideration of H.'s guaranteeing a credit granted to the company by its bankers, they would give him a commission of 1 per cent. on the amount received from a contract; there were also counts for work done, and money had and received. Held, on a demurrer to a plea on equitable grounds, that upon the pleadings it must be taken as an action to recover profits, and that such a contract was against public policy, H. endeavouring to recover from his co-partners a commission for having done that which it was his duty as a co-partner to do. Hardy v. Phœnix Foundry Company, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 211; 3 A.L.T., 5.

4. Personal Liability of.

C. and M., two directors of a mining company, by a letter to the company's bankers, notified that their manager had authority to draw cheques on account of the company. C. and M. did not form a majority of the directors as required by the Act of Incorporation so as to bind the company. Although the company's account was at the time overdrawn, and that fact was known to C. and M., the bank honoured the manager's cheques on the authority so given them. The bank sued C. and M. for advances made on the faith of the letter. Held that there was an implied warranty on their part, and that they were personally liable to the bank. Judgment given to the extent of the sums overdrawn since the date of the letter. Colonial Bank v. Cherry, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 177.

Affirmed on appeal to Privy Council. L.R., 3 P.C., 24.

Joint and Several Promissory Note.]—To a declaration upon a joint and several promissory note, given by the directors of a mining company, the plea alleged that the note was given on behalf of the company, and set out the note in which were the words, "value received on account of the company." Held, on demurrer, that the directors had rendered themselves personally liable upon the note. M'Mullen v. O'Connor, 5 W.W.A'B. (L.,) 200.

Company Illegal under "Companiss Statute 1864," Sec. 4—Goods Sold.]—Where a sale of goods was established to the defendants as directors and manager of a company, and the defendants pleaded that the company had not been properly registered, and consisted of more than twenty members, and was, therefore, illegal under Sec. 4 of the "Companies Statute 1864," Held, that the sale having been established, and the Court not being seized of the necessary facts to decide that the partnership was illegal, the defendants ought not to be allowed to prove them, but should be held liable for the price of the goods. Masterton v. Blair, 2 V.R. (L.,) 19; 2 A.J.R., 16.

For Wrongful Acts.]—The directors of a mining company, in contravention of a rule in the deed of Association, declared dividends, not entirely out of profits, but to a certain extent encroached upon capital in order to do so; they also, in order to avoid sequestration under a pending equity suit, sold all the plant and property of the company at an undervalue owing to the haste of the sale—this sale being under a consent execution issued by a bank, to whom the company owed a bonâ fide debt, and the proceeds of the sale being divided between the company and the bank. They also sold the freehold land without the authority of the company in a general meeting; they kept no proper account of gold washed or calls received, and the books and papers of account under their control were lost. On a suit by the official agent (the company being wound-up) to make them personally liable, Held (1) that the plaintiff had no remedy against the directors for the declaration of dividends, the company having none, as it was not shown to be fraudulent; (2) that the directors were responsible for any loss arising from the hasty sale; (3) that the sale of freehold land was voidable, and the directors personally liable for the fair value of the land; (4) that the directors were liable for loss arising from gold and calls received by the manager, as to which no accounts were kept; but (5) that the manager alone was responsible for the loss of the books and papers, there being no evidence to fix the directors with that loss. Reeves v. Croyle, 2 V.R. (E.,) 42; 2 A.J.R., 13.

Retiring Directors.]—Where a bill was filed against the directors of a company, seeking to make them personally responsible for wrongful acts, and two of the directors had retired from the directory before the commission of any of the wrongful acts, except the payment of dividends out of an overdraft instead of out of profits; but they had not retired in the manner prescribed by the deed of association, the bill was dismissed against them with costs. Reeves v. Croyle, 2 V.R. (E.,) 42; 2 A.J.R., 13.

For False Representation of Secretary.]—Where directors of an incorporated company were sued in an action for conspiracy, for loss resulting from a false and fraudulent representation made by the secretary of the company by the procurement of the directors, Held that the directors were personally liable for the loss. Stevenson v. Bear, 2 V.R. (L.,) 220; 3 A.J.R., 23.

Breach of Trust—Managing Director Holding Bill of Sale over Plant, &c.—Sale Thereunder, and Purchase by Him in Name of Wife—Dealings with Company for his Own Advantage.]—Suit by company against T., a managing director, impugning certain acts of his in respect of the company. T. held a bill of sale over plant, &c., for certain money advanced by him, and bought the plant for a sum less than the money covered in the name of his wife, who had no separate property. The company was a boot manufacturing company, and the defendant was a boot and shoe manufacturer, and tanner, and bought materials for the company from himself, and boots for himself from the company. Held that sale of plant under bill of sale was unwarranted and void, and accounts decreed of defendant's transactions with the company, the defendant to be charged at company's option as to goods bought by defendant from the company either with sum allowed or with true market value, or with the wholesale price produced from same upon a re-sale, and to be allowed at company's option as to goods bought by company from defendant, either with sum charged or true market value, or price paid by defendant for same in case there was no alteration made in the process of manufacture by defendant. Australasian Boot Company v. Thomson, 3 A.J.R., 96.

Instituting Proceedings Outside Scope of Authority—Injury to Shareholders Not to Company—Malicious Prosecution.] — See Thurling v. North British Company, post under MALICIOUS PROSECUTION.

Liability under Secs. 24 and 25 of the "Companies Statute 1864"—Default Must be Wilful.]—A conviction against the directors and manager of a company for non-compliance with the provisions of Sec. 24 of the "Companies Statute 1864," in neglecting to forward a list of members, cannot, under Sec. 25 of the Act, be sustained unless such non-compliance were made wilfully and knowingly. Ex parte the Colonial Mutual Life Assurance Company in re Bishop, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 287. See S.C., ante column 138, under Registration.

"Companies Statute 1864," No. 190, Secs. 135, 149—Fraudulent Preference.]—In pursuance of a resolution of board of directors of a company, before winding-up, and to obtain accommodation, A, B, and C, directors, endorsed a promissory note upon the understanding that it should be protected as a first charge upon the assets. There were no assets to meet it when due. Subsequently C, by cheque drawn by A and D, another director, upon the funds of the company, paid the note. A petition for winding-up having been presented on preceding day (on which an order was afterwards made,) the liquidators applied, under Sec. 149 of Act No. 190, by summons, and Held, affirming Molesworth, J., that A, C, and D were liable to repay the amount of the cheque with interest. In re Provincial and Suburban Bank, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 343; 1 A.L.T., 117.

In Action of Deceit—Misrepresentation—Publication of Balance-sheet Not Finally Adopted.]—Directors of a company, who ought to know that the company is in an insolvent condition, but who nevertheless allow a balance-sheet, representing the company to be in a sound condition, to be circulated, although such balance-sheet may not be finally adopted, may be liable in an action of deceit at the suit of a person who has been induced by an agent of the company to purchase shares in it on the faith of the statements in such balance-sheet. It must, however, be shown that they knew, or, but for culpable negligence, might have known, that the statements in the balance-sheet were false; there must, in fact, be moral fraud. Paternoster v. Hackett, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 232; 2 A.L.T., 24.

In such a case the directors are liable if they made the statements in the balance-sheet, being indifferent or reckless as to their truth or falsity, although they may not have actually known them to be false. Semble, that if they made the statements believing them to be true, but with no reasonable ground for such belief, they would be liable. S.C., 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 396; 2 A.L.T., 77.

Payment of Manager's Costs of Litigation.]—Where directors advised and sanctioned the defence of a suit undertaken by the manager, in which litigation he incurred costs and paid him his costs out of the assets, Held that under the circumstances the manager was not a litigant on his own account, and that the directors were not personally liable for the costs so paid by them. Hardy v. Wilson, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 62; 4 A.L.T., 37.

On Bills and Notes.]—Two directors of a company signed a promissory note thus—"B.C.H., M.G., and J.W.G.Y., Secretary," and the seal of the company was impressed upon the face of the note. Held that the directors and secretary were personally liable, there being nothing to show that any other person or body was to be liable, the seal of the company not being sufficient for that purpose. Harriman v. Purches, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 234; 5 A.L.T., 76.

5. Effect of Acts of on Company.

Power to Bind Company.]—Where the incurring of a debt is not ultra vires of the directors under the statute or deed of the company, but where some mere preliminaries are omitted, then, inasmuch as the public are only supposed to be acquainted with the statute or deed, and not with the modus operandi, it must be assumed that all the preliminaries have been complied with. And where a board of directors of a mining company incurred a debt to a bank, without the consent of the general body of the shareholders, and by the Act No. 228, under which the company was registered, the directors were substantially the company, in that the whole management of the company was entrusted to them, and they had to conduct its affairs, so that speaking of the directors, practically and legally the company would be meant, Held that the money was received and the debt incurred by the company. In re Tyson's Reef Company, 3 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 162.

Power to Bind Company.]—A mining company, managed by a board of five directors, borrowed money from a bank on the drafts of the manager, authorised in that behalf by a meeting of the board at which less than a quorum were present, a fact of which the bank was aware. Subsequently a meeting of a quorum acknowledged the loan without any consideration for so doing. Held, distinguishing In re Tyson's Reef Company [3 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 162] on the ground of the bank's knowledge of the irregularity, that the company were not bound by the loan either as originally authorised by a board less than a quorum or as subsequently without consideration acknowledged by a quorum. Colonial Bank v. Loch Fyne Company, 3 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 168.

Overdraft Sanctioned by Quorum—Cheques Signed by One instead of Two Directors.]—Where a company was sued on an overdraft, and it appeared that the overdraft was sanctioned by a quorum of three out of one or other of two sub-boards of five instead of out of a single board of ten, as required by the deed, but that it was clear from the evidence there was only one board, and that two quorums of the same board were sitting at one and the same time at different places, and that, although the cheques were signed by one director, yet that the accounts of payments and receipts were received, examined, and passed by the board of directors; Held that there was sufficient sanction for the overdraft, and that the authority to draw the cheques was sufficiently proved. Bank of New South Wales v. Moyston Junction Company, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 234.

Wrongful Dismissal of Servant—Quantum Meruit.]—An agreement was entered into between C. and one of the directors of the defendant company deputed for the purpose by the other directors, whereby C. agreed to serve for a year as manager at a certain salary; this was not put into writing, though it was ratified by the other directors. Held that though the agreement lacked the formality to make it binding for more than a year, yet the directors could and did ratify the agreement so as to make it good as a quantum meruit. Clough v. London and Australian Agency Company, 4 A.J.R., 69.

Guarantee—Seal Not Affixed.]—The directors of a mining company gave a guarantee to a bank, headed "The New Ringwood Antimony Mining Company, Limited," and commencing "We the undersigned directors of the" above company, &c. Opposite the signatures of the directors who gave the guarantee was written "Directors of the New Ringwood Antimony Mining Company, Limited," but the seal of the company was not affixed to the guarantee. Held that, assuming the directors had power to give the guarantee, their styling themselves as "directors" was merely descriptive, and did not bind the company, since the guarantee did not purport to be executed by them as directors of the company. White v. Bank of Victoria, 8 V.L.R. (M.,) 8; 3 A.L.T., 90.

6. Ratification by Shareholders of Acts ultra vires of the Directors.

Acquiescence in Acts of Company.]—Acquiescence of individual shareholders in an incorporated company cannot amount to the acquiescence of the corporation; nor can a corporation by acquiescence validate an illegal transaction, or disentitle itself to relief in respect of it. The Creswick Grand Trunk Gold Mining Company v. Hassall, 5 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 49, 83.

7. Powers of Directors in Management of Company.

Power of Directors Holding Office Longer than Time Prescribed to Make a Call.]—The deed of a mining company registered under Act No. 228 provided that meetings should be held in February and August of each year, for the appointment of directors; if a quorum of shareholders was not present the meeting might be adjourned for a week, and that if no new directors were appointed at these meetings the old directors were to act till new directors were appointed at the first meeting in the following year. Certain directors who made the call sued on were appointed in February, 1866; in August, 1866, the meeting fell through for want of a quorum, and the adjourned meeting also fell through for the same reason. No meeting was held after that, and the call was made in August, 1868. Held that the directors could not hold office for longer than a year, whether a meeting was held or not, and the nonsuit of the County Court upheld. Barfold Estate Gold Mining Company v. Klingender, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 231; N.C., 25.

For other cases as to making calls see cases under Calls, post columns 157 et seq., and as to Forfeiture, column 153.

Sale of Shares—Employing Broker.]—The articles of association of a banking company provided that the directors should manage the business of the company, and out of the funds of the company pay all expenses incurred in getting up the company, and that the directors might commence and prosecute the business of the company as soon as 20,000 shares had been allotted, and the company registered. Held that the directors had power to authorise the manager to employ a broker to place the shares in order to fulfil this condition, and that the funds of the company were liable for the broker's expenses. Strong v. Land Credit Bank of Australasia, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 24.

Evidence of Validity of Resolutions to Satisfy Sec. 64 of the "Companies Statute 1864."] — The minutes of resolutions of directors for the making of calls and for winding-up a joint-stock company were entered in a rough scrap-book, which was used for roughly drafting such minutes before entering them in the regular minute-book, and were signed by the chairman. Held that such minutes were prima facie evidence, under Sec. 64 of the "Companies Statute 1864," of all the conditions precedent to the validity of such resolutions. Legal and General Life Assurance Company v. Gill, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 204.

Indemnifying Manager Against Costs of Suit to which the Company is Not a Party.]—The directors of a company have no right to indemnify the manager against the costs of a suit instituted by him in his individual capacity, to which the company was not a party and in which it was only indirectly interested. Hardy v. Wilson, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 289; 4 A.L.T., 175.

Payment to Officer of More than is Legally Due.] —It is within the limits of the powers of the directors of a company to pay to an officer of the company deserving of it more than they are bound to pay; and in the absence of special circumstances, e.g., improper motives, such payment is not such a grievance as would entitle the members of the company to ask for redress. Hardy v. Wilson, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 289; 4 A.L.T., 37, 175.

III. Shareholders' Meetings and Their Rights.

Business of Meeting as Advertised—Injunction—Proxies.]—An extraordinary meeting of shareholders in a mining company incorporated under Act No. 228 was held pursuant to an advertisement, specifying the business as "To decide as to the winding-up of the company," at which a resolution was passed empowering directors to realise the assets. Plaintiff, a shareholder, protested against this resolution, and handed in proxies of absent shareholders held by himself and others. The chairman refused to receive these, and on a division taking place the resolution was carried by a small majority, whereas if the proxies had been received it would have been lost. The property was then advertised for sale by public auction. On a bill by the plaintiff, on behalf of himself and other shareholders, to restrain the sale, Held that as rules of the company provided for the reception of proxies, they should have been received; that the advertisement only warranted a resolution to wind-up under the Act, and not a sale; that the meeting might have passed such a resolution to realise assets if proper notice thereof had been given; that the plaintiff having a right to oppose the sale, was not barred from relief by any laches in not convening a meeting to protest, four days only having intervened between the plaintiff's receiving notice of the proposed sale and the sale itself; but that though plaintiff could restrain the sale as under the vote of the meeting, he was not entitled to restrain any sale. Injunction restraining defendants from selling the lease, machinery and effects of the company as under the resolution, without prejudice to their general power to sell. Hick v. Havilah Gold Mining Company, 4 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 87.

Right to Impeach Rules.]—A shareholder is not estopped from impeaching the rules of a company by a statement in his scrip that the shares are held upon the terms of the articles of association and the rules of the company. Schmidt v. The Garden Gully Company, 4 A.J.R., 137.

Mining Company—Act No. 228, Sec. 39—Resolution by a Majority.]—Rules passed by a majority of shareholders in a mining company, but not by all, must be in accordance with the terms of Sec. 39 of Act No. 228. Ibid.

See S.P., M'Lister v. Garden Gully Company, 5 A.J.R., 152.

Vote—Neglect to Pay Calls.]—Semble, that a rule which provides that no shareholder shall be entitled to vote at any meeting unless all calls, interest, and expenses due by him have been paid, does not make a vote of such shareholder bad, unless it be objected to on being tendered. Aberfeldie Gold Mining Company v. Walters, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 116.

Meeting Irregularly Called.]—A rule of a company provided that if the manager neglected for four days to call a meeting after a requisition had been delivered, then a majority of the requisitionists might call a meeting. Held, that the act of the requisitionists in calling a meeting by a notice given within the four days, was not validated by the subsequent neglect of the manager to call a meeting. Ibid.

Notice of Meeting Under Act No. 228, Sec. 23.]—See M'Lister v. Garden Gully Company, ante column 142.

Notice of Meeting.]—Per Full Court, where a general meeting of a company is properly convened in accordance with the provisions of Act No. 228, Sec. 23, a shareholder has legal notice of the meeting, and stands in the same position as if fully cognizant of what was intended to be done thereat without actual knowledge having been brought home to him. Cushing v. Lady Barkly Gold Mining Company, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 108, 124; 5 A.L.T., 98.

IV. Contracts By and With Company.

Ultra Vires.]—As to acts of a company which are ultra vires, in the case of companies constituted by Act of Parliament, there is an element of public interest which forbids their exceeding their powers, even though all the shareholders agree; whereas companies constituted by deed of settlement may exceed their powers, provided all the shareholders agree. Lee v. Robertson, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 374, 386.

Contracts With—When Company Bound.]—To render a contract made by a person with a mining company binding on the company, it is only necessary for such person to read the Act of Incorporation, or the Deed of Association, and if he is satisfied that those have been complied with, and on the face of any document brought to his knowledge there is nothing to negative that compliance, he is not obliged to go further; but is entitled to assume that the directors have done that which they professed, and which they ought to have done. Anderson v. Duke and Timor Gold Mining Company, 1 V.R. (L.,) 203; 1 A.J.R., 161.

Duty of Person Contracting with Company.]—Persons dealing with a company are bound to see that the Act of Incorporation, or Deed of Settlement, authorises the transaction; they are not bound to inquire into the regularity of all the proceedings. Commercial Bank v. McDonald, 2 V.R. (L.,) 211; 2 A.J.R., 120.

V. Railway Company.

Act No. 269, Sec. 31—Hobson's Bay Railway Company.]—By the Act No. 269, Sec. 31, it was provided that the Hobson's Bay Railway Company should not be obliged to complete, use, or maintain a piece of railway called the "loop-line," and if not completely maintained and used within two years, the Crown land on which a part of it was constructed should revert to the Crown, and the company might sell the remainder on which the line had been constructed. The company completed and used for one purpose only, but not for general traffic, the portion of the loop-line constructed on private land, but no part of that constructed on Crown land. The portion used crossed a public street on a level, under an Act authorising the construction of the whole line. The municipal authorities threatened to remove the gates and rails on the part crossing the street. On bill for an injunction, Held by Full Court, affirming Molesworth, J., that the option given to the company applied to the whole loop-line, and was to be exercised or not as regarded the whole, and that the company having acted as it did, must be taken to have abandoned the loop-line altogether. Melbourne and Hobson's Bay Railway Company v. Mayor, &c., of Prahran, 6 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 228.

Compensation for Taking Lands.]—See under Lands Compensation.

VI. Capital.

Resolution to "Write Off" Part of Paid-up Capital—False Returns under "Companies Statute 1864" and "Banking Statute."]—A resolution passed at a meeting of the shareholders of a company incorporated as a limited liability company under the "Companies Statute 1864," to "write off" part of the capital account is ultra vires, and though individual shareholders may assent to such an agreement, the shareholders, as a body, have no power to bind dissenting shareholders. The shareholders will not be bound to such a resolution by their subsequent acquiescence in the balance sheets and the returns prescribed by the directors under the "Companies Statute 1864" and the "Banking Statute." Re the Provincial and Suburban Bank, 2 A.L.T., 47.

VII. Shares.

1. Allotment.

Formal Notice of—When Necessary.]—G. applied for shares in a company with a view of qualifying himself as a director. The form upon which he made his application requested the company to return his deposit (forwarded with the application) if the shares should not be allotted to him. The company allotted the shares, and G. subsequently sat as a director, but no formal notice of allotment was sent to him. Held, that no formal notice was necessary since the non-return of the deposit, G. never having asked for it or complained of its detention, was evidence that the shares were allotted; and that G.'s having sat as a director was further evidence on the same point. Legal and General Life Assurance Company v. Gill, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 204.

See also post under Mining—Company—Shares.

2. Issue.

Suit to Compel Issue of—Illegal Sale of Shares.]—The plaintiff was owner of ten shares in a company registered under 24 Vic. No. 109, which was registered subsequently under Act No. 228, on which registration original shares were each subdivided into four. Before this second registration the ten shares had been sold under a County Court execution to K. After the second registration the plaintiff applied to the company to execute a deed of settlement as holder of forty shares, and to have shares issued to him, but the company refused. Plaintiff filed a bill against the company to compel the company to permit him to execute a deed of settlement to issue certificates and to enter his name on the register, submitting that the sale under the County Court execution was invalid. K. was not a party to this suit. Held, that K was not a necessary party, and decree made, as prayed. Semble. Mining shares cannot be sold under a County Court execution. Eddy v. Working Miners' Gold Mining Company, 2 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 110.

3. Mortgage and Lien.

Mortgage or Sale.] — In October, 1861, the plaintiff, in consideration of £18 cash, and of a debt of £20 due by him to W. & W., gave a bill of exchange and a memorandum of sale of a mining share to W. & W., who gave him a written undertaking to return the share upon payment of the bill. After the bill fell due the plaintiff absconded, W. & W. then transferred the share (which was afterwards subdivided into eight shares) into their own names, paid calls in arrear and further calls, and took an active part in the management of the company. For about two years the shares were unsaleable, but at the end of that time they rose greatly in value, and W. & W. received about £1200 in dividends. The plaintiff then, hearing of the rise in value, returned from New Zealand, and applied to redeem. After his application, and notice in the newspaper cautioning purchasers, M. & K. respectively purchased from W. & W. Before the shares were transferred in the books of the company, the plaintiff filed his bill for redemption against W. & W. and M. & K. as purchasers with notice. Held that the original transaction was a mortgage, and that the plaintiff was entitled to redeem as against W. & W., an option of issues as to notice being given to M. & K. Niemann v. Weller, 3 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 125.

4. Forfeiture of.

Power of Company Registered under Act No. 228 to Make Rules as to—Sec. 39—Estoppel.]—In a company registered under Act No. 228, a rule was passed which purported to provide for forfeiture of shares on non-payment of calls. N. assented to this rule, and was a witness to the affixing of the seal to it. N. being absent from home when a call was made, the notice of call was not forwarded to him by an agent who received it; the call was unpaid, and N.'s shares were forfeited. Suit by N. to set aside forfeiture. Held that provisions for forfeiture are regarded as exceptional and to be strictly construed, and that Sec. 39 of Act No. 228, the only section which enabled the making of rules, did not authorise the company to make such a rule; that N.'s assent to the rule did not estop him from impeaching the validity of the rule, the principle of estoppel between individuals and an incorporated company not being the same as between individuals, but that N.'s conduct disentitled him to costs. Nolan v. Annabella Company, 6 W. W. & A'B. (M.,) 38; N.C., 19.

Validity of Forfeiture—Qualification of Directors.]—The rules of a mining company provided that three directors should form a quorum. At a meeting at which shares were declared forfeited, three directors only attended, one of whom had previously transferred all his shares. Held, that the forfeiture was valid, since the rule as to qualification only applied to the time of election. Reeves v. McCafferty, 1 V.R. (L.,) 190; 1 A.J.R., 153.

Validity—Appointment of Directors.]—A forfeiture of shares is not valid unless the directors of the company are respectively competent to make calls and declare forfeiture. Therefore, where the directors of a company had not been duly elected in compliance with the terms of Sec. 39 of the Act No. 228, Held, that the forfeiture of shares made by them was irregular. Schmidt v. Garden Gully Company, 4 A.J.R., 66. Affirmed on appeal. Ibid, 137.

It is not enough to forfeit a share that the calls which remained unpaid were made by de facto directors; the directors must be properly qualified. Ibid, 137.

See also McLister v. Garden Gully Company, 5 A.J.R., 152. Affirmed on appeal to Privy Council, L.R., 1 Ap. Ca., 39.

Validity.]—By the rules of a mining company it was provided that the manager should enter in the share register, opposite forfeited shares, the words, "Forfeited by a resolution of the Board of Directors." Held, that the mere omission to make the entry did not prevent the forfeiture, if other necessary requisites had been complied with. Reeves v. M'Cafferty, 1 V.R. (L.,) 190; 1 A.J.R., 153.

Notice — Impossible Day.] — The articles of association of a mining company provided that the directors might declare any share forfeited upon which any call was in arrear, provided that notice of the intention to forfeit was given by advertisement, and the call remained unpaid at the then next or any other meeting of directors. Calls being in arrear, notice was advertised by the company of the intention to forfeit "unless all calls be paid on or before Thursday, the 31st June." Thursday was, in fact, the 1st of July, Held that the notice was insufficient as fixing an impossible day, and forfeiture set aside. It was also provided that after forfeiture the manager should cause all forfeited shares to be sold by auction, and the proceeds be applied first in payment of arrears of calls and expenses, and the surplus, if any, paid to the shareholder. Semble, that a forfeiture, if regular, would, before sale, be complete so as to disentitle the shareholder to redemption; but that until sale he would be entitled to have the shares sold, and to have the benefit of the intermediate dividends and the price procured over the amount of the unpaid calls. Wood v. The Freehold United Quartz Mining Company Registered, 1 V.R. (E., 168; 1 A.J.R., 173.

Notice—Forfeiture.]—It was provided by the rules of a mining company that the forfeiture of shares should be confirmed by the next meeting of the company; that special meetings should be convened by notice stating the particular business to be transacted; and that no matter should be determined upon unless specially mentioned in the notice by which the meeting was convened. The forfeiture of shares of the plaintiff was confirmed at a meeting convened by an advertisement stating that the meeting was convened "to confirm forfeiture of certain shares." Held, that this notice was sufficiently specific, and the confirmation of the forfeiture good. Marshall v. Creswick Grand Trunk Company, 1 V.R. (M.,) 29; 1 A.J.R., 85

Notice of—Invalid.]—Where a company had power under one of its rules, on non-payment of a call, (1) to debit the shareholder's account therewith and with interest thereon at 15 per cent.; or (2) to proceed against him to recover it; or (3) to forfeit the shares; and the shareholder was served with notice that the directors would, at their option, proceed to forfeit and sell the shares for the amount due and 15 per cent. interest, Held, per Molesworth, J., such notice was bad, that there was no direct declaration of forfeiture, but a direction for sale, and that such declaration was necessary. Cushing v. Lady Barkly Gold Mining Company, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 108, 115; 5 A.L.T., 10.

Where directors met at a special meeting, "to deal with such shares as are in arrear of a certain call," and decided that those which were "in arrear should be sold by auction" on a certain day, Semble, per Molesworth, J., that a distinct vote of forfeiture was necessary to make a forfeiture. Ibid.

See also cases post under MINING—Company —Shares.

Delay—Invalid Forfeiture.]—Long delay in asserting his rights will not debar a shareholder from asserting his rights in respect of shares of which there has been an invalid forfeiture. Schmidt v. The Garden Gully Company, 4 A.J.R., 66. Affirmed on appeal, Ibid, 137.

Evidence of In Writing.]—The 12th Rule of a company provided that all transfers of shares in the company by or from any shareholder should be made in writing. B. was sued in Petty Sessions for calls as a shareholder. It appeared that B. had from time to time become the holder of thirty shares, and was entered as such in the register, and that B. had never transferred them or any of them as far as the register showed. As to fifteen of these shares a written authority was given to the manager by the original vendor; as to ten more, a similar written authority was given by the vendor after the sale, and as to the remaining five, they were transferred upon the verbal authority of the transferor. B. alleged that he had parted with twenty-five of the shares previous to action. The magistrates dismissed the case. Held on appeal that the Court would not presume that B. transferred any of his shares without better proof, and that there was evidence to go to the magistrates of B.'s liability for calls which he had not disproved. Reefs Gold Mining Company v. Bennett, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 79.

Transfer to Escape Payment of Calls.] — An absolute transfer of shares made to a third person, though made to avoid payment of calls, is not, per se, mala fide. Sleep v. Virtue, 2 V.R. (L.,) 29; 2 A.J.R., 20.

Issue of New Shares—Fraud—Liability of Transferee to Pay Calls.]—A resolution was passed at an extraordinary meeting of a mining company that the capital of the company should be increased by the issue of new shares, to be allotted to old shareholders. On the list of old shareholders which was handed to a person who accepted a transfer of six shares of the new issue, to show that the shares had been taken up, appeared the names of two dummies, but the list was not handed to him till after he had accepted the transfer. Held that this was not evidence of fraud that would invalidate the transfer, and that the transferee was not relieved from the liability to pay calls. Creswick Grand Trunk Company v. Rowell, 2 A.J.R., 35.

"The Companies Statute," Sec. 33, Schedule 2, Table A, Rule 10—Shareholder's Indebtedness—Rectification of Register—Transferee—Practice—Notice to Transferor.]—Motion by C. to compel a company to register him as owner by transfer of certain shares in company. One S. was a shareholder in the company and also its secretary. Prior to August 11th, 1873, S. was known by directors to be a defaulter in his accounts. On August 11th, 1873, though company alleged that S. was indebted to it in the sum of £1880, it gave S. a receipt for £980 "in full of all demands against him by company." S. transferred ten shares to C., July 24th, 1874, but company refused to register till balance of S.'s indebtedness was paid. Held that Sec. 33 includes as an alleged member a person requiring a transfer, and enables him to procure a rectification of the register, either against company or against transferor; that Schedule 2, Table A, Rule 10, enables a company to enforce a debt due to it by an officer by refusing to let him assign his shares, and is not confined to debts due to company in respect of shares, calls, &c., but that transferor should have notice of the motion. On the motion being renewed, supported by an affidavit that S. had gone to New Zealand a few weeks after his purchase of shares, and that it was impossible to serve notice, Held that release given on August 11th, 1873, was good, and the benefit of it enured to C. Motion granted. In re Gippsland Steam Navigation Company, ex parte Chuck, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 141.

Refusal to Register Transfer—Indebtedness.]—A provision in a company's rules (Schedule II., Table A, Article 10, of Act No. 190) provided that the company might decline to register any transfer made by a person indebted to it, and also that no member could transfer without first offering shares to directors of company for the purchase of such by them. Held (1) that this power to refuse to register only applied to a voluntary transfer, and not to a transfer in invitum, as where shares were sold by a bailiff of the County Court under execution; (2) that the indebtedness was an indebtedness quâ member as for calls, fines, &c., and did not apply to a member in the company's service who made default in his accounts; the Act did not intend to give the company as to debts outside the constitution of the company a preferential claim above all other creditors. In re "Companies Act," ex parte Trevascus, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 195; 1 A.L.T., 17.

Assignment by Blank Transfers.]—Assignments of shares in a mining company by blank forms of transfer, to be filled in by ultimate purchasers, are valid as between the parties thereto. Atkinson v. Lansell, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 236.

VIII. Executions By and Against Company.

Judgment Recovered by Company — Subsequent Winding-up—Suggestion on the Record—"County Court Statute 1869," Sec. 93.]—Where a company, which has recovered judgment in the County Court, is, after the judgment has been recovered, wound-up, a suggestion of the winding-up and of the appointment of the official agent must be entered on the record before judgment can be signed and execution issued in the Supreme Court under Sec. 93 of the "County Court Statute 1869," No. 345. Barfold Estate Gold Mining Company v. Davies, 2 V.R. (L.,) 154; 2 A.J.R., 97.

Collusive Execution—Effect of Sale.]—A collusive proceeding to execution upon the property of a company, and a sale thereunder to a new company organised for the purpose, is not operative in equity to pass the property though the object be honest; and such a proceeding is inconsistent with the rights, as well of the company as of dissentient shareholders. United Hand-in-Hand and Band of Hope Company v. National Bank of Australasia, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 206, 217, 218.

IX. Calls.

Notice of Making—Advertisements.]—The deed of settlement of a N.S.W. company provided that calls should be made "at such times and places as the directors may determine, by one or more advertisement or advertisements in one or more of the daily newspapers published at Sydney and at Melbourne respectively." Calls were made by one advertisement in a Sydney daily paper and one in a Melbourne daily paper, and by these advertisements one day was fixed for payment of the calls at Sydney, and another for payment of the calls at Melbourne. On action by the company in the Supreme Court of Victoria, the plea set up the defence that "no time" was fixed, because two different times had been fixed; and that different times could not be fixed for Sydney and Melbourne. Held, on demurrer, that the advertisements were in compliance with the deed of settlement, and judgment for the company. Melbourne and Newcastle Minmi Colliery Company v. Hodgson, 1 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 205.

Notice of.]—Where the rules of a company provide for publication of notice of calls by advertisement in certain newspapers, it is not sufficient if the notices are published in circulars. The directors are not at liberty of their own accord to substitute notice by circular for the one prescribed. Solomon v. The Collingwood Quartz Mining Company, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 128.

Mining Company — Notice of—When Bad.]—A notice of calls containing neither the time nor place when and where the calls are payable is bad. Clunes and Blackwood Company v. Coulter, 1 V.R. (L.,) 192; 1 A.J.R., 172.

Objection to Sufficiency of Notice, When Taken in Time.]—On an appeal from the County Court from a decision giving a verdict for calls on shares to the company, it appeared that there had been three cases by the company against shareholders, and in the first case, which was heard before the present one, an objection as to the sufficiency of the notice of the call was taken and overruled, and it was agreed that the result of the other cases should be dependent on the decision in the first, from which an appeal was made, but abandoned. Held, on appeal, that the objection as to sufficiency of notice having been taken at the proper time could be entertained on appeal, and the notice having omitted to state the time and place when and where the call was payable was held to be bad by the Court; and appeal allowed. Clunes and Blackwood Company v. Coulter, 1 A.J.R., 172.

Mining Company—Notice Unnecessary.]—It is not necessary for directors of a mining company to give notice of their intention of making a call before making it. Goldsborough Mining Company v. McBride, 3 A.J.R., 126.

Act No. 190, Sch. 2, Table A, Rule 4—Notice of Call.]—Where a shareholder promised to pay a call, Held that that was sufficient evidence of his having received due notice. Mount Brown Gold Mining and Crushing Company v. Hughes, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 383.

Making—When Made.]—Calls are made when the resolution is passed, not when the calls are payable. Where, therefore, a company's rules provided that "no call or calls shall exceed the sum of one pound per share, and there shall be an interval of one month between the making of any calls," and two calls were made at a meeting, but with an interval of one month between the time such calls were payable; Held that the two calls were made in contravention of the rules; and that it was doubtful whether two calls made at the same time, although made by two separate and independent resolutions, could be severed. Hodgson v. The Fermoy Gold Mining Company, 3 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 70.

Making.]—Where, by resolution of directors a call is made, but no time or place of payment therein fixed, none being required by the rules of the company, and the manager got verbal instructions from the directors fixing time and place, Semble, such subsequent verbal directions are not sufficient. Cushing v. Lady Barkly Gold Mining Company, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 108, 114; 5 A.L.T., 10.

Liability of Shareholder—Calls Made by Increased Number of Directors.]—H. verbally applied for shares in a company, offering to pay by bills at three and four months; this offer was accepted and carried into effect by H. accepting two bills drawn by him on the company, and by the company retaining the scrip during the currency of the bills. H. did not sign any application or articles of association, but his name was entered in the register as a shareholder. Six directors made the first call, that being the number fixed by a rule of the company, but by resolution the number was increased to nine, of which no notice was sent to the Registrar-General in accordance with Sec. 51 of the "Companies Statute 1864." Seven directors, three of whom had not been appointed originally under Rule 50, made other calls for which H. was sued by the company, pending the currency of the bills. The County Court Judge nonsuited the plaintiff company, Held that the registry was prima facie evidence of membership sufficient to prevent a nonsuit; that the form of application, though irregular, was sufficient, being accepted by the company; that Sec. 51 and Schedule A taken together made the act of the seven directors de facto valid. Appeal allowed. The McIvor Company v. Hughes, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 111.

Calls Made by Directors not Duly Elected—Shareholders not Liable.] — Highett v. Sun Quartz Mining Company, post under MINING—Company—Rules, &c.

Validity of Rules Giving Power to Make Calls.]—Where in an action for calls S. objected that the rules of the company under which power was given to make the calls sued for were not made at an extraordinary general meeting called in conformity with the "Mining Companies Act 1864," Held that S. having presided as chairman and signed the minutes of the meeting at which the resolution was passed, could not dispute those facts which he had thus admitted. Solomon v. The Collingwood Quartz Mining Company, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 128.

Second Payment to Official Agent of a Mining Company—When Calls Properly Made.]—B. was sued by R., the official agent of a mining company which had been wound-up, for calls. It appeared that a large amount of the 9th call was not paid up when the 10th, 11th, and 12th calls were respectively made. B. had paid his full amount of the 10th and 11th calls. The 11th call was for machinery, and was made after the works had stopped, and after the 12th call was made there would be still uncalled capital to be called up. The magistrate held that the 10th, 11th, and 12th calls were improper, and that the 12th call could only be paid to R., and ordered B. to pay a certain sum representing all the unpaid capital he was liable for after the 9th call. Held, on appeal, that the official agent was in no better position than the directors, and B. having been treated by the directors as having paid the 10th and 11th calls, he could not be compelled to pay them a second time to the official agent. Judgment to be reduced by the amount B. had paid on the 10th and 11th calls. Reeves v. Brown, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 87.

Payment—By Cheque—By Promissory Note.]—Payment by cheque (the payer having funds to meet it) is good payment of calls; but payment of calls by promissory note is not good payment. Umphelby v. Wilkie, 5 A.J.R., 108.

How far Payment of Evidence of Membership—Application for and Receipt of Calls by Agent of Company.]—When a plaintiff's title to shares in a mining company was denied by the defendants, it was held that the fact of a duly constituted agent of the defendants, having applied to plaintiff for a call, after payment of all the original calls, his payment of that call and the receipt thereof by that agent, formed sufficient evidence of membership as against defendants. Ogier v. Smith, N.C., 3.

Rules Made After Incorporation—Estoppel of Members of Company.]—Rules made by a mining company registered under the Act No. 228 after incorporation, unless made at an extraordinary meeting, are illegal, and calls made by virtue of such rules are invalid, and payment of them cannot be enforced. Sed quære, whether if all the shareholders in such a company, after its incorporation, signed a deed or articles of agreement embodying rules, they would be not be estopped from setting up the invalidity of the rules. Ballarat and Chiltern Gold Mining Company v. Cleeland. 1 V.R. (L.,) 183; 1 A.J.R., 142.

Mining Company—Act No, 228—Shareholder Not Signing Deed of Association.]—L. was sued for calls due on certain shares. L. had applied for shares and enclosed £30. 25 shares were allotted and the extra £5 was returned to him. L. did not sign the deed of association. Held that although the Act No. 228 does not contemplate a deed of association as essential, yet it appearing that both L. and the company contemplated the signing of a deed to constitute L. a member of the company, and that L. had not signed he had not become a shareholder so as to be liable for calls. Guiding Star Company v. Luth, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 94.

See also S.P., Farrar v. Bowman, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 150, post under MINING — Company — Calls.

Transferee Objecting to Validity of his Title to Shares.]—The directors of a mining company forfeited certain shares and sold them to J. J. retained the shares, but refused to pay the calls. The company sued him for calls. Held that J., having retained the shares, was liable for the calls, the Court not expressing any opinion as to whether the company had power to forfeit the shares, an objection raised by J.; and that the seal of the company appearing on the document appointing the solicitor would, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, be presumed to have been duly attached. Jones v. Star Freehold Company, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 223.

Company Unable to Raise Capital Agreed Upon—Impossibility of Object for which Company was Formed.]—In an action by a tramway company for calls, the defendant pleaded (2) that he had agreed, before the passing of the Act incorporating the company, to subscribe for shares in a company having certain capital, that the capital never was nor could be raised, and that only two-thirds of the number of shares agreed upon were subscribed for: (3) that at the time of making the calls the company was indebted for more than they could legally borrow, and that the calls were to pay such illegal debts; (5) that the time for completing the tramway had elapsed without the tramway being completed, and that the time had not been extended. Held that pleas (2) and (3) were bad, but that (5) was good. Sandhurst and Inglewood Tramway Company v. Morrow, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 277.

Calls Made in Respect of Increased Capital—Company may not Sue for.]—A1 Gold Mining Company v. Stackpoole, post under MINING—Company—Rules, &c.

Rules Imposing Fines on Non-Payment of Calls—Fine Set Off Against Dividend.]—A clause of the deed of association of a mining company provided that if any shareholder refused or neglected to pay a call at the time specified for payment, he should be fined sixpence per week so long as it remained unpaid; but no provision was made for enforcing payment of the fine. Held that the fine was not a penalty but a liquidated sum as for interest, and, being equally recoverable with a dividend, might be set off in a suit by the defaulting shareholder for recovery of a dividend payable to him by the company. Cotchett v. Hardy, 5 W. W. & A'B. (M.,) 59.

Agreement Not to Sue for—Validity.]—A rule of a company, after providing for forfeiture of shares on the non-payment of calls, proceeded—"and the parties hereto hereby specially agree that the company shall have no power or authority, and are hereby expressly barred from enforcing payment of any call or calls in any court of law, or in equity." Held that the agreement was binding, and that a shareholder who had paid a call under this rule when he might have avoided doing so, could not recover the amount, since, as the company could not recover the call from him, the payment was voluntary. Coulter v. Wardill, 1 A.J.R., 165.

Evidence of Registration of Company.] — See Reeves v. Greene, ante column 138.

Proceeding Before Justices—Act No. 228, Schedule—Act No. 267, Sec. 73.]—The Court held an objection, that there must be a separate complaint and order for each call, fatal in an appeal from an order made by justices for the whole amount. Ogier v. Ballarat Pyrites Company, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 245.

X. SUITS AND ACTIONS BY AND AGAINST.

Injunction—Parties.]—Where the act of a company, which is sought to be restrained, is such that the majority is not competent to bind the minority, one dissentient shareholder may obtain an injunction in a suit on behalf of himself and all other shareholders except the managing body, it is not necessary to obtain the consent of such shareholders to make them parties, and it is no answer to show that some agree with the directors in the act complained of. Lee v. Robertson, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 374, 387.

S.C. See COMPANY—SHARES.

Company Suing in a Name Different from its Registered Name.—A company was registered as the G.S.Q.M. Company. I. held certain shares in the company known to him as the G.S.G.M. Company, and the Company sued him under the latter name for calls. There was no proof that any other company was incorporated under the name sued under. Held, reversing the magistrates, that the variance between the names was fatal, and that there should have been a nonsuit. Iredale v. Guiding Star Gold Mining Company, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 198.

Action at Law by Members of a Company Against the Company—Special Agreement.]—B. and others, solicitors for and shareholders in a mining company, sued the other shareholders in an action for a bill of costs for work done in winding-up a gold mining company some years ago. It appeared that at a shareholders' meeting it was agreed in conversation that B. should undertake necessary proceedings, and by special agreement that B. should be entitled to sue the company for costs. On a rule nisi to enter a nonsuit, Held that there was evidence to go to a jury to enable them to infer that a special agreement had been made, taking the case out of the general rule that partners cannot sue their co-partners at law. Rule discharged. Bennett v. Solomon, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 227.

Frame of Suit—Sale by Resolution Ultra Vires.]—Where the property of an incorporated company has been sold under a resolution of the shareholders, which is ultra vires, the dissentient minority may properly institute a suit in the name of the company as plaintiff; and such a suit is the proper form of obtaining relief, and not a suit by some shareholders on behalf of themselves and all other shareholders except the defendants. The Creswick Grand Trunk Gold Mining Company, Registered v. Hassall, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 49, 79.

Frame of Suit—Action for Breach of Agreement to Take up Shares.]—Where R. was sued for breach of agreement to take up shares in a company by individual shareholders, it appearing that he had signed the memorandum of association, Held, that R. was not liable to the individual shareholders, though he might have been to the company. Nonsuit by County Court Judge, on the ground that the action should have been brought by the company, upheld. Lindsay v. Rowan, 5 A.J.R., 22.

By Director and Shareholder When there is a Corporate Body Able to Sue—Suit to Restrain Directors from Acting.]—An individual member of a company cannot take proceedings to restrain directors, even though they are disqualified by non-payment of calls, from acting until they have set the coporation in motion, and a suit by one director and shareholder for that purpose is improperly framed. Umphelby v. Wilkie, 5 A.J.R., 108.

Suit Against Company—By Shareholder on Behalf of Othsrs—Pleading.]—A member of a company complaining of a payment which the directors had made in excess of their powers, and suing on behalf of himself and other members of the company, must state distinctly whether he is one of a majority or a minority as regards the suit, and also that he was unable to get the company to institute proceedings. Hardy v. Wilson, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 289; 4 A.L.T., 37.

Such a member must generally show the impossibility of inducing others to join by a result of votes at a meeting duly convened for the purpose, or in which the point is specifically dealt with, the members generally expecting that it will be. Hardy v. Wilson, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 62; 4 A.L.T., 175.

Frsme of Suit—By Shsreholdar on Behalf of all Shareholders Except Defendants.]—Before instituting a suit on behalf of himself and all other shareholders in a company, except the defendants, the shareholder instituting it procured a meeting of the company, at which it was resolved that no action should be taken in the matter by the company. Held, that the plaintiff was not thereby precluded from suing on behalf, &c. Benjamin v. Wymond, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 3; 5 A.L.T., 153.

Delay in Bringing—Excuse for.]—The necessity of first endeavouring to induce a company to proceed in its corporate name to redress an injury to it, is an excuse for delay in the institution of a suit by one shareholder on behalf of himself and all other shareholders except the defendants. Ibid.

Suit Against Company—Nominal Plaintiff.]—In a suit against the directors and manager of a mining company seeking to make them responsible for certain wrongful acts, and to recover calls due on shares in their names, the person by whom the suit was, in fact, instituted, and who was responsible to the nominal plaintiff for the costs of it, was a creditor of the company, who before the institution of the suit had covenanted, for valuable consideration, not to enforce the personal liability of certain of the defendants in respect of the Acts complained of by the bill, and this was pleaded by the answers as amounting to a release. Held, that as the plaintiff on the record was discharging a duty to other creditors in prosecuting the suit, and his solvency was not questioned, he was entitled to maintain the suit. Reeves v. Croyle, 2 V.R. (E.,) 42; 2 A.J.R., 13.

Suit by Shareholder Impeaching Forfeiture—Amalgamation of Company—Necessary and Proper Parties.]—A shareholder in a mining company, whose shares had been forfeited and name removed from the register, brought a suit against the company impeaching the forfeiture, and seeking to have his name restored to the register. The answer of the company stated, and it was proved in evidence, that after the forfeiture the company had amalgamated with another company, and fresh shares had been issued to all the shareholders in the two companies, the old members of the defendant company accepting each one-third fewer shares than they had previously held. Held, that the present registered holders of the shares, representing the plaintiff's original shares, were necessary parties to the suit, and that it was not necessary that the defendant should set out their names, but it was sufficient if the answer unequivocally designated the class of persons who ought to be made parties. Cushing v. The Lady Barkly Gold Mining Company, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 108, 124, 125; 5 A.L.T., 98.

Suit Nominally in Name of Company—Costs.]—Where a suit was brought seeking interference of the Court as to management of the company, nominally in the name of the company, but really without the sanction of the company, and by the manager to work out his own ends, the bill was on that ground dismissed with costs. Old Welshman's Reef Company v. Bucirde, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 115; 3 A.L.T., 45.

Pleadings—Incorporation of Company—How Raised—Never Indebted—"Mining Companies Act," No. 228, Sec. 11.]—On a rule nisi to enter a nonsuit, it was argued that there was no evidence of due registration, the person who signed the certificate not having been proved to be a clerk of the Court of Mines (Act No. 228, Sec. 11), Held, that the plea of "never indebted" does not put in issue the incorporation of a Company, that that fact invites a special traverse. Bank of New South Wales v. Moyston Junction Company, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 234.

Action for Deceit—Misrepresentations in Prospectus.]—Action by shareholders against the directors of a company for misrepresentations in a prospectus. It appeared that a balance-sheet had been struck for June, 1881, showing profits of 12½ per cent., and the business then fell off and produced only 1½ per cent. profits for the last half. The prospectus was published and received by the plaintiff towards the end of 1881, and before the latter balance was struck. Held that there was no evidence of moral turpitude necessary to maintain an action of deceit. Per Higinbotham, J., that even if there were misrepresentations, the plaintiff was not misled by them, but by expectations founded on the announced intentions of the defendant, and that an action for deceit cannot be based upon a statement of intentions. Allan v. Gotch, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 371.

XI. WINDING UP.

Railway Company—"Joint Stock Company's Winding-up Act," 11 Vic., No. 19.]—Held by Full Court, affirming Molesworth, J., that a railway company incorporated by Act of Council was not within the provisions of that Act, and a rule nisi for compulsory sequestration under that Act discharged. In re St. Kilda and Brighton Railway Company ex parte Plevins, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 69.

Railway Company.]—The provisions of "The Companies Statute 1864," relative to winding-up of companies, do not apply to a railway company incorporated by Act of Parliament. In re St. Kilda and Brighton Railway Company, 1 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 157.

Unregistered Company—Act No. 228—"The Companies Statute 1864."]—A mining company under the Act No. 228 is not an "unregistered company" within the meaning of "The Companies Statute 1864," and cannot be wound-up under the latter Act. In re the Collingwood Quartz Mining Company, 5 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 190.

Foreign Corporation.] — The Oriental Bank Corporation was incorporated under that title for banking purposes throughout the British dominions by Royal charter in England. Its directors, board of management, and head office were in England, and it carried on the business of exchange and remittance there, but not the general business of banking. It had several branches or agencies in India, Victoria, and other colonies; and it had shareholders and creditors throughout England, India, and the colonies. It consisted of more than five members, and was not registered under the "Companies Statute 1864," or under the "English Companies Act 1862." On the petition of a Victorian creditor for winding it up under the "Companies Statute 1864," Part VI., Held that the corporation could be wound-up on such a petition, even if the English Courts had already made an order to wind it up in England. In re Oriental Bank Corporation, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 154.

Petition by Creditor for Compulsory Winding-up After Resolution for Voluntary Winding-up.]—Where the shareholders of a company had passed a resolution for a voluntary winding-up upon petition by a creditor for a compulsory winding-up, Held, that notwithstanding the voluntary winding-up the Court might, at its discretion, grant a compulsory winding-up, but that the Court would have regard to the wishes of the majority in number and value of the creditors, and such majority being in favour of a voluntary winding-up, application for a compulsory winding-up refused. In re Co-operative Meat Supply Association, 8 V.L.R., (E.,) 227.

The Court will not, unless something in the shape of misconduct on the part of the liquidator appointed under the arrangements for voluntary winding-up be proved as a thing done and not contemplated, interfere and make an order for a compulsory winding-up. Ibid.

Grounds for Granting a Compulsory Winding-up —"Companies Statute 1864," Sec. 73, Sub-sec. 5.]—On a petition under Sec. 73 (V.) of the "Companies Statute 1864," for winding-up a company, it appeared that the grounds on which it was sought to wind-up the company were—(1) that the company had been from the first carried on at a loss; (2) that the company was largely indebted; (3) that certain patent rights for working which the company was formed had not been transferred to it; (4) that certain plans proposed for preparing paints according to the patent in the specifications would not produce paints at a price to compete with other makers; (5) that certain persons were elected directors who had not paid calls; (6) that disputes and quarrels were taking place between the shareholders and directors. The Court held that there were insufficient grounds upon which to make the order, and declined to interfere as to the squabbles among the members and directors, intimating that if a majority of the company wished it the company could be wound-up voluntarily. In re Buzolich Paint Company, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 276, 281, 282; 6 A.L.T., 130.

Under "Companies Statute 1864," No. 190—Petition by Agent under Power of a Corporation Sufficient by Virtue of Sec. 154 of the Act No. 190.]—Where a corporation sought to have a company wound-up, and the petition for winding-up, and the affidavit verifying the petition were both made by an agent under power of the corporation, Held that Sec. 154 of the Act No. 190 rendered it possible for the Court to dispense with the letter of Schedule 7, Clause 4, by which the petition must be verified by the petitioner or one of the petitioners, and that the petition and affidavit were sufficient. In re the Oriental Rice Company, 4 A.J.R., 33.

Corporation—Power of Attorney—Sufficiency of Authority.]—A., being appointed attorney under power of a bank, the power authorising him to commence and carry on any suit, action, or other proceeding, and also, upon insolvency of any person or firm who at the time of such insolvency should be indebted to bank, or upon any such firm or person entering into composition with his creditors, to prove against his or its estate, and to take such other proceedings with relation thereto as should seem fit. A. presented a petition for winding-up of a company. Held that "the other proceeding" meant something ejusdem generis with an action or suit, which such a petition was not, and that second part of power did not give power to originate proceedings in insolvency, and petition dismissed. In re Provincial and Suburban Bank, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 159, 166; 1 A.L.T., 6.

Where Petition Refused.]—D. obtained judgment and issued execution against a company, and a return of nulla bona was made to the writ. D. was a shareholder in the company, and had also been a director; and in this capacity was present at a meeting at which it was agreed that the company's bank should have a first charge upon any amount which might be recovered in an action against another bank. This amount D. subsequently, but ineffectually, attempted to attach. The assets of the company were considered sufficient to pay all debts, ut were not readily available, and the company's prosperity depended partly upon the action against the bank, to which action a winding-up would put an end, and would sacrifice nearly the whole claim. It was not apparent that a winding-up would satisfy the petitioner's D.'s) debt, several creditors of the company opposed him, and it was not clearly proved that any supported him. Upon petition for winding-up, Held that the Court had a discretion in the matter, and petition dismissed without prejudice to renewal under altered circumstances of the company. In re Polynesia Company, 4 A.J.R., 47.

(c) Service, Verification and Advertisement of Petition.

Affidavit Verifying Petition.]—Where a petition is presented for the winding-up of a company under the "Companies Statute, 1864," the affidavit verifying it must be filed within four days of the presentment of the petition, in accordance with Schedule 7, Rule 4, of that Statute. A petition and affidavit were each dated 3rd of July, 1865; the petition was presented 22nd July, and the affidavit filed August 4th. Petition dismissed with costs. Semble the rule is only directory for the purpose of protecting an order inadvertently made in a case where rule has not been complied with, otherwise it is mandatory. Semble a defect in the service of a petition is not waived by appearance, but where the affidavits of service were unsatisfactory the case was allowed to stand over for further proof of service, the petitioners paying the costs of the day. In re Victorian Street Railway Company, 2 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 32.

Verification of Petition.]—A petition for winding up a company under "The Companies Statute 1864." No. 190, Sec. 75, is to be accepted without verification, and is afterwards to be verified by an affidavit made and filed within four days. In re Malmesbury United Brewery Company. 3 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 81.

Injunction Under No. 190, Sec. 77.]—The affidavit to ground a motion for an injunction under No. 190, Sec. 77, should be made after the presentation and acceptance of the petition. Ibid.

Service—Foreign Corporation—Head Office in England.]—Under the "Companies Statute 1864," if it apply to a corporation which has an office here, though not its head office, and is not registered under the statute or the "English Companies Act 1862," if the Act apply to such a corporation, service of a petition for winding-up is sufficient at the principal place of business in Victoria, since the "Companies Statute 1864," provides that such principal place of business shall be in lieu of a registered office. In re Oriental Bank Corporation, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 154.

First Order Bad—Second Order.]—Where an order for winding-up was bad on the face of it as showing no jurisdiction, a second order for winding-up was allowed to be made without an order to set aside the first order, the petitioner being held justified in treating the first order as a nullity. Reeves v. Bowden, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 218; N.C., 17.

A winding-up order is not a sequestration within the meaning of Sec. 74 of "Insolvency Statute 1871." See Oriental Bank v. Wattle Gully Company, post under INSOLVENCY—Effect of.

Suit Against the Company Sought to be Wound-Up.]—On the hearing of a petition under "The Companies Statute 1864," for an order to wind-up a company, the Court will not, at the instance of plaintiffs in a suit against the company, give leave to proceed with the suit notwithstanding the winding-up order; but such application must be brought forward as a substantive motion after the winding-up order has been made. In re the Melbourne and Newcastle Minmi Colliery Company, 1 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 166.

Two Petitions—Priority.]—A petition for the winding-up of a company was presented by A. on June 24th, and another for the winding-up of the same company on June 25th by B. In the newspapers B.'s advertisement appeared in the column before A.'s A.'s petition was set down for hearing on June 26th, B.'s on June 27th. Held, per Molesworth, J., that according to the practice adopted by him, the priority of presentment, and not the advertisements, determined the precedence, and that A.'s petition was therefore entitled to precedence. The Court will hear both petitions, and decide between them. In re Provincial and Suburban Bank, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 159, 177; 1 A.L.T., 15.

In a contest between two petitions, one seeking winding-up order, and the other a voluntary winding-up under supervision of the Court, the Court prefers to make order for compulsory winding-up, especially where there is difficulty in deciding as to liquidators selected by creditors. Ibid, pp. 178, 179.

Foreign Corporation—Petitions in England and Victoria—Staying Proceedings.]—The Court, on the petition of a creditor, made an order, under Sec. 176 of the "Companies Statute 1864," winding-up a banking company incorporated by Royal charter in England, and having its head office and directors there, and also an agency in Victoria. An order for winding-up the same company had also been made in England. The Court therefore directed a meeting of creditors to be held, under Sec. 83 of the Statute, and their opinion taken as to whether the winding-up in Victoria should proceed or not; and on their unanimous decision in favour of staying proceedings, made an order under Sec. 81, staying the proceedings absolutely. In re Oriental Bank Corporation, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 154.

Contributories were not allowed to attend the meeting, the Court holding that the wishes of the creditors should be paramount. Ibid.

Two Petitions.]—Where one petition for winding up a company is presented, and after notice of the first a second petition is presented for winding up same company or for a supervision order, the Court will not follow the usual practice of making an order on one giving carriage of proceedings and of allowing costs of both, but will only allow the costs of the former, the uncertainty in the second disentitling petitioners to costs. In re Provincial and Suburban Bank, 5 V.L.R., (E.,) 159, 174, 179.

Compulsory—Abandoning—Appearance of Company.]—Where a petition for compulsory winding up was presented, but owing to a technical defect the petitioner gave notice of abandoning it, but the company appeared on the day fixed for hearing, Held, that the company was entitled to its costs of such appearance. In re Co-operative Meat Supply Association, 8 V.L.R., (E.,) 227.

(g) Other Points.

Injunction — Sequestration — Motion to Dissolve Injunction.]—Two shareholders in the "Provident Institute" filed separate bills against the directors to wind up the institute, and obtained injunctions restraining the directors from further acting in the affairs or dealing with the property of the institute. Subsequently the directors voluntarily sequestrated the estate of the institute, under 11 Vic., No. 19, Sec. 3, and E. C. was appointed official assignee. The official assignee, under 5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 56, elected to defend the suits, and he delivered to the plaintiffs a suggestion of the insolvency, and of his appointment as official assignee. On motion for the official assignee to dissolve the injunctions obtained by the plaintiffs, Held that as the suit was by one of the members of the institute against the other members, and as "The Institute," eo nomine represented by the official assignee was insolvent, and not the individual members parties to the suit, the suit was not a "suit or action pending against the insolvent" within the meaning of 5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 56. Motion dismissed. Dodds v. Foxton, Dancker v. Porter, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 271.

Semble, that there is great difficulty in extending the words "suit or action at law" contained in 5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 56, beyond an action at law. Ibid.

Semble, that it is competent for the directors of a joint-stock company to effect a voluntary sequestration of the estate of the company under the 11 Vic., No. 19, Sec. 3. Ibid, at p. 276.

Who May be Heard on Petition for.]—On a petition under "The Companies Statute 1864," for a winding-up order, a company, neither a creditor nor a contributor of the company sought to be wound-up, is not entitled to be heard. In re the St. Kilda and Brighton Railway Company, 1 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 157, 160.

Petition for under "The Companies Statuts 1864."]—On a petition under "The Companies Statute 1864," for winding-up a company within the provisions of that Act, it is discretionary with the Court to grant the prayer of the petition. Ibid.

Facts Alleged in Affidavits and not in Petition.]—On a petition under Sec. 73, Sub-sec. 5, of the "Companies Statute 1864," the Court refused to regard anything stated in the affidavit which was not alleged in the petition. In re Buzolich Paint Company, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 276, 280.

Order for Shareholders to Pay up Calls—Service—Attachment.]—On application, under Sec. 121 of the "Companies Statute 1864," by liquidators for order for payment of calls by defaulting shareholders, the order was made and personal service on each of the shareholders was directed. After service of order some failed to obey it. The Court made a joint order for separate attachments for contempt to issue against those who had failed to obey. In re the Ballarat Patent Fuel and Manure Company Limited, 2 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 172.

Ex parte Order for Payment of Calls by Contributories.]—In a voluntary winding-up under "The Companies Statute 1864," No. 190, the Court may make an ex parte order for payment of calls by the contributories within a specified time after service of the order, or for application by them within the same time, to revoke or vary the order; and after the lapse of the specified time, the order will be absolute, and not liable to be set aside. In re the Belmore Silver and Lead Mining Company, 2 V.R. (E.,) 126; 2 A.J.R., 76.

"Companies Statute 1864"—Discretion of Court.] A creditor showing that he comes within the terms of the Act is not entitled to a winding-up order ex debito justitiae; but it is discretionary in the Court to grant it, and the Court may have regard to the wishes of the other creditors. In re Polynesia Company, 4 A J.R, 47.

Order—Advertising and Filing—No. 190, Sch. 7, Sub-secs., 6, 7—Post Dating Order.]—Where an order was obtained to wind up a company, but the petitioning creditors omitted to advertise the order in the Government Gazette, and to file it in the office of the Insolvency Court as directed by the "Companies Act," No. 190, Sch. 7, Sub-secs. 6, 7, the Court refused au application to post-date the order. In re Cognac Company, 2 V.L R. (E.,) 73.

Semble, that the provision as to filing the order in the Court of Insolvency is merely directory. Ibid.

In such a case the old order is treated as having lapsed, and a fresh order may be made without the old order being discharged. In re Cognac Company, Dwyer and Kelly's case, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 146.

Præcipe—"Stamp Statute," No. 355, Secs. 4, 10.]—Where on a petition for winding-up the fee for the præcipe is too small, and the full fee is afterwards paid before the hearing, that is no valid objection to the petition. In re Provincial and Suburban Bank, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 159, 172, 177; 1 A.L.T., 15.

Not Appointed by Winding-Up Order.] — The Court will not, in its discretion, include in an order for winding-up an order appointing a liquidator, although it may have the power. In re Red Anchor Preserving Company, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 77.

Removal—"Companies Statute 1864" No. 190, Secs. 85, 124.]—Semble, the Court may, on an order for voluntary winding-up under supervision of the Court, remove, under Sec. 124, liquidators appointed by shareholders, and appoint others selected by creditors, disregarding the three official liquidators appointed by Governor-in-Council under Sec. 85. The Court prefers liquidators selected by the creditors to those appointed by shareholders. In re Provincial and Suburban Bank, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 159, 178.

A person indebted to the company is not eligible to be appointed liquidator. Ibid.

Power of Liquidator Under Winding-up Order Under the "Companies Statute 1864."]—A winding-up order, under the "Companies Statute 1864," does not vest the property of the company wound-up in the liquidator, but merely enables him to recover property as a kind of agent of the company, suing in its name. In re Oriental Bank Corporation, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 154, 178.

Advertising List of Shareholders—Notice to Admit or Deny Liability—11 Vic., No. 19, Sec. 17.]—By an order under the provisions of the 11th Vic., No. 19, Sec. 17, the estate of a joint-stock company was sequestrated, and the Chief Commissioner, proceeding under this order, caused a list of shareholders to be made and advertised, and by the same advertisement gave notice that he had appointed a day for such shareholders to come in and dispute their liability in respect of their shares respectively; and stated that in default of their so coming in by the time fixed, each of such shareholders would be peremptorily held liable in respect of such shares respectively. On the day named several shareholders appeared, and objected to any proceedings being taken till proof was given that all the shareholders in the advertised list had been served with a copy of the notice. The Commissioner declined to settle the point, and certified to the Court that a difficulty had arisen in the prosecution of the order. Held, that the meaning of the order should be taken to be that an advertisement should be published requiring the person named in it to appear at the day fixed, and that upon their appearing they should admit or deny their liability, and in the latter case have it ascertained; but that the advertisement threatening them with being bound by the list, in default of appearance, should be regarded as a brutum fulmen, and that the order did not properly purport so to bind them; and that no shareholder could be bound until after service upon him requiring him to show cause, or his voluntary appearance. Held, also, that there was no necessity to show service upon all in the list before proceeding in the inquiry as to any. In re The Provident Institute of Victoria, 1 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 3.

Difficulties having arisen in the prosecution of the above order, the Court varied and added to the original order in certain respects, upon the ex parte application of the assignees seeking direction upon the difficulties in working the order. Ibid.

Under 11 Vic., No. 19—Jurisdiction of Insolvent Court.]—The deed of settlement of the P. Joint-stock Company provided that the board of directors should consist of not more than six or less than three, that all directors should be elected by ballot; and by an affirmative and merely directory clause the directors were empowered to sequestrate if the auditors should report that the company could not meet its engagements. The board dwindled to four directors, of whom two were re-appointed without ballot; one was the company's solicitor. In spite of the fact that the auditors had not reported that the company was unable to meet its engagements, a meeting of the board, duly summoned for that purpose, passed a resolution that the company was unable to meet its engagements, and a minute of the resolution was made, which, together with the resolution, was signed by the chairman and attested by the solicitor, and filed in the office of the Chief Commissioner of Insolvent Estates. On the petition of the chairman and managing director, under 11 Vic., No. 19, a Judge made an order for sequestration. At the time of the presentation of the petition and making of the order, an injunction, obtained in an equity suit by a shareholder to wind-up the company, restraining the chairman and managing director from dealing with the company's property, was in force, and the plaintiff in the equity suit obtained a rule nisi to set aside the order for sequestration. Held that the requirements of the deed of settlement and of the Act were complied with; that the requirements as to sequestration being merely directory the Court had power to entertain the sequestration, and, Semble, that it would, even had the clause been mandatory; and that notwithstanding the suit and injunction it was competent for the chairman and managing director to avail themselves of the liberty given to them by Sec. 3 of 11 Vic., No. 19, and competent for the Judge to exercise jurisdiction in spite of the injunction if it were brought before him. Ex parte Dodds, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 163.

6. Contributories.

Married Woman—Attachment for Non-Payment of Contribution.]—A married woman, after due notice of an application to place her on the list of contributories, may, at the application, plead her coverture, and it is then in the discretion of the Court to relieve her. Where a married woman did not plead coverture at the application, but at the hearing of a motion for attachment on her non-payment of contribution, Held that the Court would not hear the plea at that stage, and order for attachment made. In re Australian Sub-Marine Working Company, ex parte Longley, 4 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 124.

Paid-Up Shares—Consideration for.]—D. and K. subscribed memorandum of association and were registered as holders of 27 shares, all printed across as "paid-up." By subsequent arrangements the property of this company was transferred to a new company, and in this new company D. and K. were registered as holders of 24 shares treated as "paid-up." None of these shares were in fact paid-up, but D. and K. gave a guarantee to the bank for advances to the company; but there was no distinct evidence as to there being a contract that the guarantee was in consideration of the shares being treated as paid-up. Held, by Molesworth, J., and affirmed, that D. and K. were liable as contributories for 23 out of the 24 shares, that the scrip purporting to be paid-up could not, if untrue, assist D. and K.; that the guarantee was not money or money's worth, i.e., capital, to the company, and that D. and K. were not, under the circumstances, protected by the guarantees given. By the Full Court, though the Court will not go into the value of the consideration where a company purchased the goodwill and stock-in-trade of a business, yet the Court will inquire where the actual money value of services performed is capable of exact estimation. In re Cognac Company, Dwyer and Kelly's case, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 146.

After a winding-up order had been made on the petition of two creditors, a summons to place members on list of contributories may be taken out by the survivor of the two creditors without making the personal representative of the deceased a party, but that fact must appear on the face of summons. Ibid.

In such a case the course of procedure, when case is adjourned into Court, will be the same as at nisi prius. Ibid.

Calls Due Before Winding-up.]—Where a company was being wound-up voluntarily, and at the date of the winding-up, arrears of past calls were due, upon motion under No. 190, "Companies Statute 1864," Sec. 121, by the liquidators, Held (reversing Molesworth, J., who refused to make an order affecting calls due before and after liquidation) that the past and present members of the company were liable for such calls. In re Melbourne and Champion Bay Lead Mining Company, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 211.

Withdrawal of Application for Shares Before Allotment.]—H. and G., relying on certain alleged misrepresentations of a company's agent, applied for shares in the company, and gave cheques and promissory notes as security for value. Discovering the misrepresentations before allotment, H. and G. withdrew their application, and applied for return of cheques and notes, which was refused, although the company never attempted to enforce payment. The names of H. and G. were entered on the register of shareholders, but no notice of allotment was ever sent to them. Held, upon the company being wound-up, that the applications for allotment were, as between H. and G. and the directors, retracted before they were acted upon; and as they never received notice of the allotment or registry they were not, as between themselves and creditors or other shareholders, bound to apply to alter the registry; and that H. and G. were not liable as contributories. In re Provincial and Suburban Bank (Hall's case, Gregory's case,) 7 V.L.R. 1. PARLIAMENT.

Privilege—Powsr to Commit for Libel.]—The Legislative Council and Legislative Assembly of Victoria have all the privileges, immunities and powers which were legally held, enjoyed, and exercised by the Commons House of Parliament at the time of the passing of the "Constitution Act," and the publication outside the House, in a newspaper, of an article which the Assembly adjudged to be a libel on the Assembly, on a select committee thereof, and on a member of each, qua such member, is a contempt for which the House has authority to commit. In re Dill, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 171.

Brsach of Privilege—Arrest for—Speaker's Warrant.]—Quœre, whether in a warrant issued by the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly to arrest a person for breach of privilege by publication of a libel, it is necessary to allege that the privilege is one which was held, enjoyed, and exercised by the House of Commons at the time of the passing of the "Constitution Act." Ibid.

Privilege—20 Vic., No. 1—"Constitution Act," Sec. 35.]—In passing the Act 20 Vic., No. 1, the Legislature of Victoria acted within the power given to them by the "Constitution Act," Sec. 35, "for the Legislature of Victoria by any Act or Acts to define the privileges immunities and powers to be held enjoyed and exercised by the Council and Assembly and the members thereof respectively." Ibid.

Privilegs—"Constitution Act," Ssc. 35.]—The impossibility of the Legislative Council or Assembly exercising the power of impeachment, which is a relative power, owing to the absence of its correlative, does not restrict the general words of Sec. 35 of the "Constitution Act" creating a power, or render invalid an enactment which gives other powers that may be exercised by the Council and Assembly. Dill v. Murphy, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 342, 356.

Privilegs—"Constitution Act," Ssc. 35.]—Sec. 35 of the "Constitution Act," which empowers the Victorian Legislature to define the privileges of the Council and Assembly, so nevertheless that no such privilege should exceed "those now held, enjoyed and exercised by the Commons House of Parliament or the members thereof," does not refer to, and imposes no restriction in consequence of, the manner in which the privileges of the House of Commons have been acquired by it, or the capacity in which they are exercised by it; and, by virtue of Sec. 35, the powers and privileges of the Commons House, whether obtained by the lex et consuetudo parliamenti or otherwise, and whether enjoyed as a deliberative assembly or as a component part of the highest Court of the realm, may be rightly conferred by the Victorian Legislature on the Legislative Council and Legislative Assembly of Victoria. Ibid.

Privilege—How Dstermined.]—Per Stawell, C.J. It is not clear from the terms of 20 Vic., No. 1, Sec. 2, whether the determining on the privileges, &c., held by the House of Commons is to be regarded as a question of law, of which the Judges are to possess judicial knowledge, or a matter of fact susceptible of proof. Ibid, p. 359.

Privilege—How Determined.]—Per Molesworth, J.—Sec. 2 of 20 Vic., No. 1, recognises the convenience of producing the journals of the House of Commons as evidence for some debatable question. It may mean to enable our Houses themselves to decide their own powers, or to influence their discretion in the exercise of them. It may be to enable some other tribunal to decide upon the powers of the House which are disputed by some antagonist. Ibid, p. 364.

Privilegs—Act 20 Vic., No. 1—"Constitution Act," Sec. 35.]—The Act 20 Vic., No. 1, is an express exercise of the power given by the 35th Sec. only of the "Constitution Act" to the Victorian Legislature to confer powers and privileges upon the Legislative Council and Assembly; and the powers given in the 35th Sec. to define such privilege is duly exercised by the Act 20 Vic., No. 1, and the power to commit for contempt is one within the meaning of the section. Ibid.

Privileges.]—The Act only confers upon the Legislative Assembly the same powers possessed by the House of Commons in 1855, i.e., limited powers, and if the Assembly issue a warrant of commitment for contempt against a member, such warrant should contain statements from which it may be determined whether those limited powers have been exceeded or not. In re Glass, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 45.

Privileges of Legislative Assembly—Warrant of Commitment by the Legislative Assembly.]—G. was committed to prison by a warrant of the Legislative Assembly. The warrant stated only that the Legislative Assembly did resolve that G. was guilty of contempt and breach of the privileges of the said Legislative Assembly, and that the said Legislative Assembly had adjudged that the said G. be for the said offence taken into the custody of the Sergeant-at-Arms and by the said Sergeant-at-Arms delivered to and kept in Her Majesty's Gaol, &c. On return to a writ of Habeas corpus, Held that the Legislative Assembly only possessed the privileges possessed by the House of Commons in 1855, i.e., limited powers, and, therefore, it was essential that the warrant should contain statements similar to those set out in the warrant in Dill v. Murphy, or general statements, or statements equivalent thereto, i.e., averments showing whether those limited powers have been exceeded or not. Prisoner discharged. Ibid.

On appeal to the Privy Council, Held that there was vested in the Legislative Assembly the right of judging for itself what constituted a contempt, and of ordering the commitment of offenders by a general warrant without setting forth the specific grounds of such commitment, and that as G. had been duly committed for his contempt, the Supreme Court had no power to discharge him from custody. Appeal allowed. The Speaker v. Glass, L.R., 3 P.C., 560.

Privilege of Legislative Assembly—Customs Duties.]—The Legislative Assembly does not possess the privilege, by passing resolutions imposing customs duties, to authorise the collection of those duties by a customs officer till the end of the session of Parliament in which such resolutions have been passed. The Supreme Court has power by itself to determine the legality of the privilege. And the statement in the pleadings of such a privilege is a question of law and not of fact, and Sec. 2 of Act 20 Vic., No. 1, making the journals of the House of Commons, and consequently of the Assembly, primâ facie evidence of the privilege, does not turn the question of privilege into a question of fact; and therefore the privilege could not be admitted by a demurrer to a plea averring such privilege. Stevenson v. The Queen, Banks v. The Queen, Sargood v. The Queen, Watson v. The Queen, McNaughton v. The Queen, 2 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 143.

Powers—Re-enacting Old Laws.]—There is a great distinction between Parliament and a corporation; the former possesses unlimited powers, viz., to legislate for an unlimited period, even though its duration is limited the duration and powers of the latter are both limited. The Legislature, notwithstanding Sec. 40 of the "Constitution Act," has power to re-enact an old Act (19 Vic., No. 3,) which did not come into force until after the passing of the "Constitution Act." Ryall v. Kenealy, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 193, 202, 203, 204; N.C., 7

See S.C., STATUTES — Construction, &c. — Particular Statutes.

Qualification of Members—Act No. 128—"Constitution Act," Secs. 60, 61.]—C. before and after the Act No. 128, was an uncertificated insolvent and as such was elected as a member. He was sued by K. therefor. Held that Act No. 128 was an Act altering the qualification of members within the meaning of Sec. 61 of the "Constitution Act," 19 Vic., and as such did not require to be passed by an absolute majority of the whole number of the members of the Council and Assembly respectively, or to be reserved for the signification of Her Majesty's pleasure thereon in accordance with Sec. 60 of 19 Vic. Judgment for plaintiff. Kenny v Chapman, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 93.

And see PARLIAMENT.

2. OTHER POINTS.

Power of Extradition.]—The power of extradition from one part of the British dominions to another is not inherent in any colony, but requires the sanction of the Imperial Parliament. The Legislature has full power over the person of an individual so long as he remains within the limits of the colony, so as to detain persons charged with misdemeanours in other colonies, and (per Stephen, J.,) to pass laws to prevent such persons coming to the colony or to turn them out if they do come, but no further. *Ray v. CONTEMPT OF COURT.

1. WHAT AMOUNTS TO.

Newspaper Comments on Pending Action.]—Disparaging reflections on the members of the Court calculated to lower the Court in the estimation of the public, and comments made during the proceedings which are directly or indirectly calculated to prevent a fair trial to a litigant, amount to a contempt of Court. But where, during an action, a newspaper commented on the action as a "bogus" or "trumpery" action, and spoke of the political bias of the Judge in connection with an interlocutory decision of his, the Court Held that such comments did not amount to a contempt of Court, although the last comment approached very nearly to the border line. In re Syme, ex parte Daily Telegraph Newspaper Company, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 291.

Comment on Pending Case.]—A reference in a newspaper to an alleged libel as "said to have been of a most brutal character," made while the action in respect of such libel was pending, was held to be beyond the line of permissible comment, as tending to prejudice a fair trial and to warp the mind of the jury, and to be, therefore, a contempt of Court, but not such a grave contempt as to call for severe punishment. The Court, moreover, allowed a rule nisi for committal to be discharged after an apology made by the offender, on the terms of his paying the costs of the rule. Re Syme, ex parte McKinley, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 51; 1 A.L.T., 154.

Publication in Newspaper—Ex parte Statements.]—If a newspaper proprietor comments on ex parte proceedings before the case is determined, in such a way that the comments have a clear and distinct tendency towards directing and swaying the mind of the Court or jury, he is guilty of contempt of Court. In re Feigl ex parte Herman, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 143; 5 A.L.T., 20.

Non-Payment of Money.]—The mere non-payment of costs is not a contempt of Court. The refusal to pay may be a ground for proceeding by way of attachment to found a contempt, but is not in itself a contempt. In re Harward, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,)65.

Unauthorised Person Preparing Transfer—11 Vic., No. 33, Sec. 13.]—A person preparing a transfer of land for reward without proper authorisation to do so is guilty of a contempt of Court under Sec. 13 of the Act 11 Vic., No. 33. Re Strong, 4 A.J.R., 150.

Non-Compliance With Requirements of Act of Parliament.]—Entry upon land by a railway company in contravention of the "Land Clauses Consolidation Act 1845," is a contempt. Williamson v. Courtenay, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 21; post under LANDS COMPENSATION.

Suit Pending—Proceedings at Law.]—The mere filing of a bill by the next friend of an infant seeking an account of the infant's property, and the appointment of new trustees without any order having been made, does not make it contempt for another person to proceed at law on the infant's behalf by an action of trespass and no leave of the Court is necessary to institute such proceedings at law. Durbridge v. Scholes, 6. W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 1.

Party Not Obeying Order Within Time Limited for Appeal.]—Where a decree directs payment of a sum of money "forthwith," a reasonable time must be intended. A party against whom such an order is made refusing to pay within the time limited for appealing against the order, is not thereby guilty of a contempt. United Hand-in-Hand and Band of Hope Company v. National Bank of Australasia, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 173.

2. JURISDICTION.

Warrant for Commitment.]—It is unnecessary, in the case of a superior Court, to set out in the warrant for arrest for a contempt of such Court, what the nature of the contempt is. In re Slack, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 454.

Commitment—Punishment.]—Commitment for contempt may be during pleasure, or until the further order of the Court, or for a time certain, or no time need be stated at all. The punishment may be by fine or imprisonment, or both. Ibid.

Commitment for Definite Period.]—In certain cases a commitment to prison for a definite period for contempt of Court may be proper. Ibid.

Commitment Fixing no Term of Imprisonment.]—Quære, whether a commitment for breach of No. 33, Sec. 13, fixing no term of imprisonment, be not illegal. In re Thompson, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 24.

Discharge from Arrest Before Expiration of Period of Commitment.]—An order of the Court, in its Equity jurisdiction, adjudicated a party guilty of contempt, and ordered him to be committed for two months. Two days afterwards, before a warrant was drawn up thereunder, the party voluntarily surrendered himself, and on applying to be discharged on the same day, on the ground that no warrant for his commitment was yet drawn up, was told by the Judge, "You may go." Held that the surrender and detention did not constitute an arrest under the warrant, and that had it done so the Judge could not have discharged him before the expiration of the two months. In re Slack, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 454.

Court of Insolvency.]—See cases collected, post under INSOLVENCY—Jurisdiction.

3. PRACTICE.

For practice generally, see ante column 63, under ATTACHMENT.

Interrogatories when Necessary.]—Where cause had been shown against commitment of a defendant for contempt of Court, by breach of 11 Vic., No. 33, Sec. 13, and the Court determined that there was a contempt, and adjudged the defendant to be committed to gaol, Held, that after these proceedings there was no need of interrogatories, there being no doubt about the contempt, the act charged against the defendant being a contempt per se. In re Thompson, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 24.

Where Order Wrong.]—It is no defence to an application for committal for disobedience of an order to show that the order was wrong; the party should apply to vary the order, and not disobey it. B. was ordered to be imprisoned, but execution was stayed provided B. paid £500 every six months. B. disobeyed the order, and alleged that the order was wrong in containing the name of the wrong Official Assignee Order for B's. imprisonment. In re Bateman, 6 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 15, 22; N.C. 42.

Contempt of Court in Master's Office—Copies of Certificate Furnished to Defendant.]—During the taking of accounts in the Master's office, a defendant so behaved himself that the Master reported him as guilty of contempt of Court. The Master, in person, presented his certificate, supported by the affidavits of witnesses, and the Court held the defendant guilty of contempt, and, after hearing his defence, committed him for fourteen days. At the hearing, the defendant appeared in person, and the Court ordered that he should be furnished gratuitously with copies of the Master's certificate and the affidavits in support thereof. In re Slack, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 204.

Service of Order Nisi to Show Cause Against Attachment.]—S., a party to a suit, attending before the Master upon taxation of costs, committed acts of violence and used insulting language, and the Master reported him to the Court as guilty of contempt. The Court directed an order nisi to issue, calling upon him to show cause why he should not be attached for contempt. S. avoided service of the order by keeping house, and the Court made an order for substituted service thereof. Slack v. Atkinson, in re Slack, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 230.

Order for Committal Where Party Did Not Appear.]—Upon the hearing of an order nisi, calling upon the party in contempt to show cause against committal, the party did not appear, and the Court made an order for his committal for a fixed period, to commence to run from the date of his arrest. Slack v. Atkinson, in re Slack, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 230.

For Not Filing Accounts—Four-day Order—Attachment.]—Where a party disobeys the order of the Master to file accounts, a certificate of default should be obtained from the Master, and a four-day order obtained from the Court thereon, and in default of compliance with the order, an attachment for contempt may be obtained. Tyrrell v. Stewart, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 60.

Marrying Female Ward—Execution of Settlement Under Direction of the Court—Discharge.] — A medical man committed contempt by eloping with a ward of Court, and took her out of the jurisdiction and married her. He then executed a settlement of her property, giving himself a life estate, and entered into an arrangement for the practice of his profession out of the jurisdiction, which prevented his return for three years. After that time he returned, and submitting to the jurisdiction was committed to the Melbourne Gaol. Upon motion for his release, submitting to execute such settlement as the Court might direct, the Court made no order for his discharge, but intimated its intention of preparing minutes of a proposed settlement, which were subsequently handed out, settling the ward's property upon herself and the children of the marriage, and excluding the husband, save in the event of there being no children living to attain a vested interest. Upon the confirmation of the report of the Master that the settlement had been executed by the parties, a verbal order was made for the discharge of the prisoner, upon which it was intimated the sheriff might act, and a written order be drawn up afterwards. Ware v. Ware, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 119.

Turning Over — Discharge.] — Defendants arrested under an attachment for contempt should whenever arrested be turned over to the custody of the keeper of Her Majesty's gaol in Melbourne. On an application for a discharge of two of them upon consent of Attorney-General, the contempt being non-payment of costs ordered in a suit instituted by information by Attorney-General at relation of a corporation and bill by corporation, Held that Court would not hear counsel instructed by Attorney-General directly to pursue a course different from that which relators wish, but will only hear counsel instructed by solicitor on the record. Three of the five imprisoned were discharged from custody on payment of their proportion of costs in suit, and the costs of their contempt. Held that such discharge did not release them or remaining two from the balance of the costs due, and that remaining two were only entitled to discharge on payment of such balance and the costs of their contempt. Attorney-General v. Bentley, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 175.

CONTRACT OR AGREEMENT.

I. Formation of Contracts.

(A) Agreement.

Ambiguous Agreement—Intention of Parties How Ascertained.]—Where an agreement is ambiguous, the Court may look at documents of the preliminary negotiations between the parties in order to ascertain their intention. Norton v. Williamson, 6 A.L.T., 101.

Offer—Silence of Other Party.]—Per Full Court. One person cannot, merely by an offer, in the absence of any previous arrangement, place another in the position of being compelled to give an answer; and in such case silence does not evidence acceptance of the offer. Boyd v. Holmes, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 161, 170, 171.

Offer by Telegram—No Reply.] — Plaintiff at Amoy from time to time consigned tea to defendant in Melbourne, for sale upon their joint account. Each adventure formed a transaction, there being no general partnership. In December, 1873, defendant wrote to plaintiff, "When there is no reply by either side to a telegram, the sender should use his own judgment;" and in April, 1874, wrote, asking that "before further ventures on joint account," they should "wire such particulars as quantity obtainable, if good values, or can be bought well, average cost, and if freight tonnage is then obtainable; when, if I do not reply, I will then leave the operation to your judgment fully, and as a joint account venture." In July, 1875, plaintiffs telegraphed, "Can buy at nineteen, but exchange so much lower, equals eighteen last year. What say you?" to which defendant sent no reply by telegraph, but subsequently by letter declined to accept the offer. Before the receipt of the letter, however, plaintiffs had shipped the tea, which, upon its arrival in Melbourne, defendant treated as a consignment to him as agent merely, and sold it as such agent. A loss was incurred on the transaction, and plaintiff filed a bill seeking to make defendant liable for a moiety. Upon demurrer, Held by the Full Court (overruling Molesworth, J.,) that the arrangement of December, 1873, was revoked and a new arrangement, viz., that of April, 1874, set up, and that the telegram not purporting to proceed under the new arrangement, there was no obligation upon the defendant to answer it, and that his silence could not be treated as assent to make a binding contract; that there was no partnership, but only a series of isolated transactions on joint account. Ibid, pp. 161, 169.

Definite or Indefinite—Authority to Doctor—Revocation before Cure.]—A ship-master retained a medical practitioner to attend one of his seamen, and before the man was out of danger told him his services would no longer be required, as the seaman was to be removed to the hospital, and paid into Court the fees earned before his authority was revoked. Held that it was not a contract for an indefinite period, and that the master could revoke the authority. Brown v. Figg, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 136; 1 A.L.T. 3.

Alternative Offer—Acceptance of One Alternative—Subsequent Correspondence as to Mode of Carrying out Contract.]—N. wrote to M., June 24th, asking him whether he would buy certain property at a certain price, or would take a lease of it at a certain rent. N. replied, June 27th, that he was willing to buy at the price named, and then followed a correspondence as to the mode of payment and of taking possession. Held that there was a binding contract, and that the subsequent correspondence might be disregarded. Morrison v. Neill, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 287.

Conditional Offer by Letter.]—H. wrote a letter to C., April 24th, offering him the whole of a cargo of coals to arrive per ship "J.," 450 tons, half cash, the balance by acceptances, and the letter contained a note that this offer was subject to C. paying a bill for £460, due May 20th, and sending by return post a bill for balance due. Held that this letter did not contain an enforceable contract. Cakebread v. Huddart, 3 A.J.R., 121.

Correspondence — Promise.] — Previously to November, 1853, a piece of Crown land in Melbourne had been excepted from sale with the intention of being used for the water supply of the city. In November, 1853, the Municipal Council applied to the Crown for a grant of the land for the purpose of a market. In December, 1853, the Colonial Secretary, on behalf of the Crown, wrote, sanctioning the occupation of the ground for corporation purposes, and in a further communication in February, 1854, notified that it would be necessary to resume possession of part of land for water tanks to be erected thereon. By letter in February, 1854, from Council, it was stated that no objection would be taken to resumption of part of land, but that as steps had been taken for establishment of a market something more than a permissive occupancy was required, and another request for the grant was made. By letter April, 1854, the Colonial Secretary informed the Council that "the Lieutenant-Governor had been pleased to approve of the appropriation, as such market, of a part of the land applied for, &c." On petition under Act No. 241, and bill seeking to restrain Crown from selling the land, and to enforce specific performance of the agreement, Held, per Molesworth, J., that there was, in fact, no promise on the part of the Crown to grant the land, and if there was the right to claim under it was barred by Act No. 145, Sec. 6, as fulfilment of the promise was not sought within a year after the passing of that Act, and that even if there were a right under the Act No. 145, it was not enforceable under the Act No. 241, as amounting to a contract subsequent to the passing of the Act No. 49. Held by the Full Court on Appeal that there was in fact a promise to grant the land, but there was no promise in law, there being no consideration for the promise, and the promise itself being a nudum pactum; that Sec. 6 of No 145 is merely an enabling enactment, and it does not bar a claim which rests upon a promise supported by consideration. Mayor, &c., of Melbourne v. The Queen, 4 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 19.

And see cases post under VENDOR AND PURCHASER AND SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.

Written Offer Verbally Accepted—Verbal Condition.]—At the time a written offer to do certain work was accepted verbally, the defendant accompanied such acceptance by a verbal condition to which the plaintiff assented. On an action on the contract, Held that verbal condition was a part of the contract, and was admissible in evidence. Bonham v. Brophy, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 64; 1 A.L.T., 162.

Practice—When Objection Should be Made.]—Any objection to the admissibility of oral evidence as proof of a written contract should be made to the evidence when tendered, and it is too late if brought forward as a ground of nonsuit at the close of the plaintiff's case, if no objection was made at the time of tendering it. Whelan v. Hannigan, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 35.

And see EVIDENCE.

Contract as to Shares—Parol Addition—Local Custom.] — C. sued defendant for breach of contract in refusing to deliver certain shares in tributes Nos. 2 and 3. The contract in writing referred only to shares in the company; but C. proved a conversation between himself and defendant in which defendant verbally promised that the tributes should be included. Held that the parol addition could not be admitted to alter the contract; that a custom could not be admissible in evidence unless it was general, and that C. had denied the existence of a custom by admitting he had sometimes sold tributes apart from the shares. Plaintiff nonsuited. Chaplin v. Chalk, 3 A.J.R., 26.

Collateral Parol Agreement.]—There may be a valid verbal promise collateral with a written undertaking, but the verbal promise must be in no way inconsistent with the subsequent written document; if there is any variation the written agreement supersedes the verbal one. Abbott v. Commercial Bank, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 366; 1 A.L.T., 57.

For facts see S.C. under BANKERS, &c., column 82.

Experts.]—Where the meaning of words in general use is clear, the evidence of experts is not admissible to abridge their ordinary meaning by explaining a special meaning attached to such words. Bartlett v. Pyers, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 69.

And see also EVIDENCE.

Proviso that in One Event Contract Shall be Void—Parties not in statu quo.]—A contract, which arranged for the assignment of a licence and interest in a public-house in consideration of £75, of which £25 was to be paid in cash, and the balance secured by a bill of sale, contained a proviso that if the transferee refused to execute a bill of sale the agreement should be void. Held, that the transferee having obtained possession could not be permitted, after having received a benefit under the contract, to urge the proviso as an objection. Wood v. Cutts, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 275; 1 A.L.T., 40.

Intention of Parties Governing Strict Grammatical Construction.] — J. D. contracted by the following writing:—"I have this day sold to P. 500 bushels of oats, say feed oats, at a price of 6s. 6d. per bushel, to be delivered within one month from this date, at X; and 150 bushels to be taken from my store this day, and 1s. per bag to be paid or returned, and cash on delivery of the lot." Held that as the intention of the parties was shown by specifying the nature of the oats, and the price as to the 500 bushels, and there was no mention of these particulars as to the 150 bushels unless they were part of the 500 bushels, the intention governed the grammatical construction; that it was a contract for 500 bushels, 150 to be taken from the store at once, and the remainder to be delivered at X within a month's time. Dixon v. Perkins, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 10.

Implied Mutuality.]—A contract was made between manufacturers and H., by which the manufacturers agreed to employ H. as their agent for sale of the whole of the goods manufactured during a certain period, unless by accumulated stock or insufficient sales the manufacturers should not be enabled to work the machinery to the full power; in which event they might terminate the contract, or place a traveller on the road to effect sales at H's. expense. Held, that there was an implied obligation upon the manufacturers to deliver all goods sold by the agent. Hobart v. Victorian Woollen Company, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 30; 2 A.L.T., 120.

Three Contracts in One Document—Unilateral.]—C. agreed with H. and B. in writing as follows: "I agree to make for H. and B. the whole of the ironwork for one of their patent American sawmills," &c., "for the net sum of one hundred pounds, delivered in Melbourne (say £100). I also agree to furnish the above work with pine wood framing," &c., "for the net sum of one hundred and twenty pounds (say £120). H. and B. hereby agree to allow C. the sole right and title to the making of the said patent sawmill, according to their plans furnished, by the payment to them of £50 for each machine as their patent right. C." This was accepted and signed by H. and B.'s agent. Action for that the defendants (H. and B.) did not allow C. the sole right and title to the making of the said patent machines, but granted a license, &c., to one F. to do so, whereby plaintiff lost great profits, &c. Held that the document contained three independent contracts; and that the contract for breach of which C. claimed damages was unilateral, and not mutually binding, and formed no sufficient ground of action by him against H. and B. Crossley v. Hoffman, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 198.

Two Documents Forming One Contract—Vendor's Lien.]—M. sold to S. two engines and sent him the following invoice:—"Melbourne, 28th June, 1872. Mr. S., Bought of M.—terms, four months—one engine, C.D.F., £170; one engine, W.M.B., £175—£345. By acceptance, M." Simultaneously with this note, S. gave a storage receipt as for the same two engines:—"Melbourne, 28th June. 1872. Received from M. the undermentioned engines as storage:—One engine, C.D.F.; one do., W.M.B.—S." S. gave M. a bill drawn 28th June at four months. During the currency of the bill, S. sold one of the engines to C., who claimed under the sale. The bill not having been paid by S. to M., the latter also claimed it, contending that they had not parted with the right of property in it, but had only agreed to give it to S. at the end of four months if he paid for it. On an interpleader issue, Held that the two agreements, the one for sale, and the other for storage, were contemporaneous, the Court could consider them as forming one contract, and that their effect was to postpone payment for the goods for four months, but in the meantime the right of possession remained with the vendors. Martin v. Coombes, 4 A.J.R., 27.

Two Documents of Different Date—Read Together.]—In 1860 A., the owner of patent machines for stone-breaking, and W., railway contractor, agreed in writing that A. should supply machines to W., and repair them, and that W. should pay a royalty of £3750, or 9d. per yard on 100,000 yards of ballast, and should W. elect to break more stone then 6d. per yard after the first 100,000 yards; W. to pay these sums from time to time within fourteen days after the ballast should have been "spread on the railway (by W.,) and passed and certified" by the Government engineers; and "when such ballast should have been spread on the railway (by W.) without the intermixture (by him) of any other ballast, then and in such case the quantity should be ascertained by and taken according to the Government measure thereof." 4000 cubic yards were broken under this agreement, and in 1861 A. and W. agreed in writing that W. should thenceforth repair the machines and that A. should allow them for the repairs at the rate of 4d. per cubic yard out of the royalty on the first 50,000 yards that might be broken, and 3d. per yard out of the royalty for all broken after that number; and that "such allowance should be deducted from the amount payable to A." under the agreement already entered into, by which the first agreement was intended; and it was expressly agreed that "except as regards the repairs and the deduction, the second memorandum should not alter the original contract." Held that the contracts must be read as if both were made on the date of the first, and that the deduction of 4d. per yard must be made on the 4000 yards of ballast broken before the second agreement, and semble, that under the contracts A. could recover for breaking stone "intermixed by W. with other broken stone," though not spread. Appleton v. Williams, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 292.

Double Event.]—An agreement that one person should deliver and another accept goods of a certain kind ex a certain ship, to arrive, at a certain price per pound in bond all round, was held to be on a double event—the arrival of the ship, and her arrival with goods of the kind named. Cohen v. Cleve, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 167.

"More or Less"—Acceptance of Smaller Number—Rescission or New Contract.]—W. agreed to sell B. 3000 ewes and 1500 wethers, "more or less," and delivered in all 3563 sheep, which were accepted by B.'s agent, in pursuance, as W. alleged, of an agreement between their agent and B.'s agent to rescind the contract and to take the number delivered in satisfaction of the contract. B. recovered a verdict. Held on rule nisi for a nonsuit, that the evidence only showed that plaintiff determined to get what he could and did not amount to a new contract to take less than the original number, and that plaintiff did not take lesser number in satisfaction. Rule discharged. Brown v. White, 3 A.J.R., 43.

Quality.]—A contract contained a clause that the article contracted for should be "of the exact dimensions, the same quality of material and workmanship in wood, iron, paint, and upholstery work, and in all other respects as the omnibuses now in use by the said Melbourne Omnibus Company, and known as the New York Omnibuses." Held, that "quality" was to be taken as meaning "kind;" that a substantial compliance was insufficient; and that no claim could be maintained for extras to work done under the contract, and properly rejected as not being in accordance with the terms of the contract. McGregor v. Melbourne Omnibus Company, 1 V.R. (L.,) 56; 1 A.J.R., 73.

Province of Court and Jury.—Where a pattern is specified and put forward in a contract, it is for the Court to decide whether there is any evidence that the article is of the kind prescribed; and then for the jury to decide as to the quality. Ibid.

As to Construction of Building Contracts Generally.]—See under WORK AND LABOUR.

Contract to Carry on Up and Down Journeys—Entire Contract.]—A carrier contracted by written agreement as follows:—"J. M. agrees to load from W. M. & Co., Echuca, three tons general loading, and deliver same to R., B. station, within eighteen days from this date, failing which to forfeit 1s. 6d. per ton per day for each and every day after expiration of said time. The said J. M. further agrees to load from B. station six tons wool, and deliver same to W. M. and Co., Echuca, within fourteen days from date of loading, failing which to forfeit 1s. 6d. per ton per day after expiration of said time." J. M. carried the goods to B. station, but on arrival there the wool was not ready, and after waiting for it for a month he departed without it, and loaded wool at M. station, which he delivered to W. M. & Co. On suit by J. M. for payment for the carriage of the goods to B. station, Held that the contract was entire, and not having been performed J. M. could not recover. McCulloch v. Mackie, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 1.

Exercise of Option by One of Contracting Parties—Contract Including all Shipments.]—R. contracted with the Crown to procure certain railway plant from England and to convey it to Victoria. The 9th condition provided that it should be discharged at piers or into lighters at the option of the Government. Several cargoes arrived and were delivered, some alongside one pier, sometimes alongside another, and sometimes into lighters. On the arrival of one cargo, in November 1869, the Board of Land and Works, on behalf of the Crown, intimated that R. might discharge by "the best and cheapest way he could." In October, 1860, the Board gave notice that all cargoes were to be delivered alongside the pier at Williamstown; but the contractors continued to discharge according to their permission given in November, 1869, and thereby saved considerable expense. The Board refused to give the contractors their lighterage expenses since October, 1860. Petition by contractors for the amount. Held, that the contract was an undertaking by one of the parties to deliver cargo in one of two modes as the other party might elect; that such a contract was open till election made, and when made, it was closed; that the election was to be made generally as to all goods and not for each shipment; and that having been made in November, 1869, such election related to all subsequent shipments. Rule absolute to enter verdict for petitioners. Raleigh v. the Queen, 2 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 126.

Contract to Tow Ship for Fixed Price—Employment of Extra Tug.]—A contract was entered into by a tug-owner with a ship-owner, to tow the ships of the latter for a fixed price, the contract to exist for a year. The contract was taken over by another tug-owner, who, during the contract, towed one of the ship-owner's vessels up the Bay, and in so doing used an additional tug. Held, that the contract included the extra tug, and that the tug-owner could charge nothing additional for her services. Holmes v. Norton, 1 A.J.R., 93.

Agreement for Hiring a Ship.]—S., owner of a ship, of which T. A. was master, agreed with A., in Melbourne, that the ship "shall be hired by A. from S., for the term of three months, commencing from the 21st day of November, 1865, and ending the 20th day of February, 1866, to trade between Melbourne and the Gippsland Lakes. A. to insure and pay all working expenses, crew's wages," &c. "The present master, T. A., to remain as master, but under the pay of A. Terms—forty pounds per month, payable monthly in advance." The ship made one voyage to the Lakes and back, and a second voyage to the Lakes, and whilst in the Lakes on her second voyage, the outlet from them was closed by storms, and the ship could not get out till June, 1866. While she was so shut in, A. gave notice to S.'s agent that he should not require her after the end of the second month of the three mentioned in the agreement, and at the end of the two months he said to the master at Sale—"We have nothing to do with the vessel; she's given up to P. (S.'s agent) for the owners." In an action for her hire, and for detaining her beyond the three months, &c., the plaintiff recovered a verdict and damages; but leave was reserved to move to enter a verdict for the defendant, on the ground that the detention was not the detention of the defendant. Held, that under the agreement the possession of the ship was not transferred to A.; that under it the possession remained in S.; that delivery of the ship in Melbourne was not necessary, and the delivery by A., in Gippsland, was sufficient; that the detention was not the detention of A., and that the verdict on the issue as to detention should be entered for A. Stewart v. Austin, 3 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 112.

Exclusive License.]—A mining company entered into a written agreement with a tributor enabling him to mine on a certain portion of their land, and take and remove all gold, &c., therefrom, receiving from the company an amount, as wages, proportionate to the amount of gold he extracted. The agreement provided that the mine and all gold taken therefrom should for all purposes be deemed to be the property of the company, and further that the contractor should work such portions of the company's claim as the mine manager of the company should from time to time determine during the five years during which the agreement was to run, and the tributor was bound to employ not less than a certain number of workmen stated in the agreement. Held, reversing Higinbotham, J., that this amounted to an exclusive license to mine on all the land included in the agreement; and that the company could not subsequently grant to another a license to mine in a portion of the same land. Chun Goon v. Reform Gold Mining Company, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 128, 153; 3 A.L.T., 137.

Contract as to Mining and Auriferous Sand.]—The defendant company agreed with W. "that he should have the whole and sole right to collect clean and take away all the mundic sand and pyrites from the company's battery after such has passed from the tables and amalgamating barrels and outside the battery house" at a certain price per ton. The defendants had erected ordinary stampers with a table to catch "the blanket sand;" did not erect amalgamating barrels, and saved the sand from the table and extracted the gold from it, thus allowing none of it in its original state to go to the plaintiff H. Held that H. was entitled to all the sand after it had passed from the blanket, and that although the amalgamating barrels were not used, yet what passed from the tables would represent what he was entitled to under the original agreement. Wilson v. Rising Star Quartz Mining Company, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 274.

Security for Performance by Deposit of Stakes—Damages.]—A. and B. agreed together for the transfer of a lease and goodwill of a public-house, each party to deposit with C., a party to the deed, as stakeholder, a certain sum as security for the performance, and C. was to declare it forfeited in case of non-performance. B. deposited a cheque for the amount and not cash, and received a receipt as for the cheque; this cheque was presented and dishonoured. Held that A. was entitled to nominal damages for breach of the agreement to deposit cash, even if a forfeiture were not declared. Yon v. Tresnan, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 407.

Contract for Delivery of Railway Sleepers.]—Defendants contracted to supply plaintiff, at their mills at one place, with railway sleepers, and the contract provided that defendants should deduct or allow for all which did not pass the inspector at another place. The evidence showed that defendants delivered some of the sleepers at the second place. Plaintiff sued for failure to deliver the residue, and the jury found for the defendant. On rule nisi for a new trial, Held that the sleepers were to be delivered at the mills, subject to a condition of their being afterwards approved of by the inspector at the other place. Williamson v. Mitchell, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 343.

Bill of Sale—Assignment.]—A bill of sale given over certain chattels stated that the chattels were bargained, sold and delivered to the grantee, subject to a proviso for redemption, but contained no stipulation that the grantor might retain possession till default. After default the grantor assigned the chattels comprised in the bill to W. by deed poll, which recited that the grantor had bargained, sold, and delivered the chattels to the grantee, and assigned to W. the chattels comprised in the bill of sale to hold them for his own benefit as the grantee might have held them, subject to the proviso for redemption. Held, per Stawell, C. J. and Williams, J., that the legal effect of the deed was that by it the goods comprised in the bill of sale were bargained and sold to W.; that the sale was absolute on default being made by the grantor of the bill; and that after such default the grantee was liable to deliver actual possession of the chattels to W., under an implied contract, whether he had such possession himself or not. Pettitt v. Walker, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 72; 3 A.L.T., 118.

Hydraulic Press—Calculated to Stand a Pressure of 200 Tons.]—Defendant agreed to supply plaintiff with a hydraulic press "calculated to stand a pressure of 200 tons." Held that by this agreement no power of continual resistance to a pressure of 200 tons was bargained for, and that it was sufficient if the machine resisted such a pressure when applied to it as a test. Nathan v. Tozer, 2 A.L.T., 34.

Condition for Increase of Price on Alteration of Tariff Affecting Subject Matter.]—H. contracted with H.M. Government to supply meat at a certain price, with a proviso that should there be any alteration in the tariff "affecting meat," H. should be entitled to a proportionate increase in price. Held that a tax imposed upon live stock imported into Victoria might affect meat, and that it was a question for the jury. Judgment on demurrer for the petitioner. Hann v. The Queen, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 424; 1 A.L.T., 101.

Agreement by Auctioneer to Purchase Land for Customer.]—B. wrote to R. as follows: "Referring to our conversation of this morning, I understood you to say that if you became the purchaser of the 50 acres at E., that I should have the re-sale in lots, that you should pay me 5 per cent. and disbursements in connection with all sales, and I should keep your counsel, attend to sale, and endeavour to secure the property for you by bidding up to a certain price. If you did not succeed in getting the property I should make no charge for my services." R. replied: "In reply, I beg to say that I agree to the terms and conditions" in your letter. "I therefore authorise you to purchase, on my account, at auction, the 50 acres of land situated at E., at a price not exceeding £60 per acre. I shall be in the room myself, and will bid personally should I so decide, if you are not the purchaser on my behalf at or under £60." B. attended at the sale, and bid for the land, but did not succeed in purchasing it at or under £60 per acre; but R. attended the sale and purchased for himself at £87 10s. per acre. The question was whether B.'s right to have the conduct of the re-sale depended on his buying for the defendant at or under £60 per acre, or whether he was to have the re-sale if the defendant became the purchaser at any price. Held that the latter interpretation was the correct one. Bliss v. Rowan, 4 A.L.T., 77.

Sale of Racehorses—"Cleared Themselves."]—In a sale of racehorses the purchaser agreed to pay additional purchase money as soon as they "cleared themselves." Held that "clearing themselves" meant clearing expenses of feeding, training, &c., as well as the original purchase money. Bartlett v. Pyers, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 69.

(c) STATUTE OF FRAUDS.

Sec. 17—Contract Resulting in the Sale of a Chattel.]—L. sent the following order to H.:—"You will please supply the order my son will give you, and oblige—Yours, 'L.'" The particulars of the apparatus had before this been given by L.'s manager, and H. had supplied a list of prices. The work was proceeded with, and before it was executed L. countermanded the order by a memo in writing. H. sued L. by a plaint in the County Court claiming £14 as for work and labour done, and recovered a verdict. Held, on appeal, that it was a contract for the making of a chattel, which, when completed, would result in the sale of a chattel of greater value than £10, and was within Sec. 17; that the memo in writing was not sufficient; that an action for work and labour done could not be maintained. Nonsuit entered. Lyons v. Hughes, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 1.

Interest in Land.]—A. verbally agreed with B., a selector under the "Land Act 1869," that A. should expend labour upon B.'s selection by felling timber and preparing the land for cultivation, in consideration of A.'s having the first crop raised from such land. A. cleared and sowed the land and reaped the crop, which he removed for safe custody to B.'s house, on another part of the land. B. then refused to allow him to remove it, and A. sued him in trover. Held, that B. had no defence either under the "Land Act 1869," or the "Statute of Frauds." Lorenz v. Heffernan, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 129.

Semble, per Stawell, C.J. Such a contract is not a contract for an interest in land. Ibid.

Interest in Land.]—A permission given by a landlord to a tenant to pull down two brick walls is not an interest in lands within Sec. 4 of the Statute; and unless the contrary is expressed, carries with it leave to dispose of the proceeds. Georgeson v. Geach, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 144.

Land Speculation—Partnership.]—A contract for partnership in land speculation is not within the "Statute of Frauds." Kilpatrick v. Mackay, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 28.

Sale of Fixtures.]—A contract for the sale of fixtures is not within the 4th or 17th Section of the Statute, and does not require to be in writing. Malmsbury Confluence Gold Mining Company v. Tucker, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 213.

Substituted Agreement.]—Where an agreement is required to be in writing, any agreement in substitution thereof must be in writing also, but the parties may by subsequent agreement not in writing alter or vary the mode in which the contract is to be carried out. Welshman v. Robertson, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 124.

Agreement to Pay a Composition.]—A contract by G. to pay creditors of C. a composition of 10s. in the £ on all debts owing by C. is original and not collateral; it is not within the 4th Sec. of the "Statute of Frauds," and need not be in writing. Gray v. Pearson, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 81.

Contract for Hiring for more than a Year—Not in Writing—Quantum Meruit.]—Clough v. London and Australian Agency Company, ante column 148.

Contract Partly by Telegrams, Partly by Correspondence.]—M'L., at Sandhurst, and S., at Castlemaine, contracted as to employment of the former by the latter as publisher of a daily newspaper as follows:—M'L. and S. met on September 8th, and, after a conference, settled upon the terms of M'L.'s remuneration, which was embodied in a memorandum signed by S. only, one of the terms being, "if price as per telegram be accepted." On the 9th, S. sent a signed telegram fixing the price, and in some respects modifying the terms in the memorandum. M'L. on same day sent a signed telegram announcing he would send in his resignation to his old employers the next day, and he would "write by guard to-night," and on the same evening sent a letter referring to new terms, and ending, "This, unless contradicted by 10 a.m. on Wednesday, I shall consider your proposition, and tender my resignation." On September 10th S. wrote to M'L. referring to M'L's. letter, and stating, "Drop me a telegram to-morrow stating day and hour when you will meet the 'runners.'" And on September 11th M'L. sent a signed telegram stating he would meet them on Saturday, 21st of September, at 4 p.m. Held that there was in these documents a sufficient contract to satisfy statute, the one referring to the others or some of them in such a way as without any parol evidence to connect the whole with each other. M'Levy v. Matthews, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 63.

Signature.]—It is not necessary, in order to a compliance with the "Statute of Frauds," that the signature should be after or at the end of every part of a paper which it purports to cover. Gladstone v. Ball, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 277, 285, 286.

Assignment of Contract—Act No. 204, Sscs. 107, 108.]—R. entered into a contract with M. & Co. for the sale by R. of sewing machines, and this was assigned by M. & Co. to A. by an endorsement signed by M. & Co., but not by R., although R. had notice of it. There were letters in evidence from R. to A., treating the contract as binding between him and A., and in other respects the contract was acted upon. Held that the requirements of the Statute as to the assignment of the contract were satisfied. Rennick v. Riches, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 366.

Verbal Contract that Purchase should be for Plaintiff's Benefit—Subsequent Dealings on Faith of Contract.] — The plaintiffs were sons of an owner of station property. Their mother, after the father's death, married again and mortgaged this property, and it was sold to pay the debt. The plaintiffs wishing to buy the property applied to B., an old friend, who made a verbal agreement with them that he would advance the money for the purchase, charging them 10 per cent. on the sum advanced, and that, as security, the purchase should be made in B.'s name, the license of the stations and the stock should be assigned to him, and that, upon payment of money advanced and the interest thereon, he would convey and assign to plaintiffs. The plaintiffs remained on the stations and managed them, sold the stock, and credited B. with the receipts. Strict accounts were kept, and the evidence showed that the arrangement as acted upon was that the property and stock were treated as the plaintiffs', subject to their indebtedness to B., and that this indebtedness was discharged by plaintiffs' selling stock as their own, crediting B. with the proceeds, who applied them in reduction of his principal and interest, B. acting throughout as a patient creditor. B. died, and a suit was brought by the plaintiffs against B.'s executors to enforce the contract, and seeking other relief in the nature of a redemption suit, by paying off principal and interest due to B.'s estate, and seeking assignments of licenses and stock. Held that, though there was no written evidence of the contract to satisfy the "Statute of Frauds," yet the plaintiffs having given their time and labour and incurred liability as owners, and having made large payments to B., as on the footing of a contract, they were entitled to relief. O'Rourke v. Huon, 5 A.J.R., 87, 88.

Agreement for Compromise.]—A bank's solicitor settled a draft agreement of compromise as to real estate between the bank and S. and M., and returned it to S. and M.'s solicitor with a letter saying, "The bank seal cannot be affixed before twelve o'clock on Monday. We shall be prepared to settle at two." The bank paid S. and M. some money upon the footing of the compromise; and S. and M., in consequence of the compromise, did not go to trial in an action of ejectment in which they were plaintiffs and the bank defendant. The bank having refused to carry out the compromise, Held that the settling the draft, and the above letter, did not constitute an agreement binding under the "Statute of Frauds," and that there had been no part performance by S. and M. entitling them to a specific performance of the agreement, by reason of the plaintiffs not going to trial in the action of ejectment in pursuance of an agreement then incomplete. Shiel v. The Colonial Bank of Australasia, 1 V.R. (E.,) 40; 1 A.J.R., 30.

To Take Goods Returned.]—Where the vendee returns goods to the carrier as not being in accordance with the contract, and the vendor attempts to obtain them from the carrier, but does not do so, there is no implied contract on the part of the vendee to take the goods. Bailliere v. Foster, 1 A.J.R., 77.

On Sale of Goods—Delivery.]—In every bargain and sale of goods there is an implied contract to deliver the goods bargained and sold. Pettit v. Walker, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 72; 3 A.L.T., 118, 120.

2. Other Points.

An agreement was made between W. "as authorised by J.S." and C., to the effect that in consideration of £75 W. should transfer to C. all his interest in a certain hotel, licence, &c., and that the £75 should be paid as follows—£25 in cash, and £50 secured by a bill of sale over the furniture. W. sued C. for breach of contract in refusing to give a bill of sale. Held that the words "as authorised by J.S." did not in anywise affect the liability of either party, it being clear that W. was to have the advantage of the contract, and that he was beneficially interested in it. Wood v. Cutts, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 275; 1 A.L.T., 40.

III. The Matter of Contracts.

Valuable Consideration—Purchaser for Value—What is Value.]—Per Holroyd, J. Valuable consideration by a purchaser without notice must be something given or done, or some obligation entered into at the time, by which the circumstances of the person giving, doing, or entering into the obligation are altered. In order for forbearance to sue being such a consideration, there must be an intention to sue and an abandonment of it. Where a policy of life assurance was transferred in consideration of a past debt, and under circumstances which did not show great pressure by the purchasing creditors, Held not a valuable consideration. Evans v. Stevenson, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 108, 120; 3 A.L.T., 95, 130.

What is Sufficient.]—A declaration stated that in consideration that A. was then indebted to B. for money lent and for goods sold and delivered, it was agreed between A. and B., and A. then promised B., within twelve months to provide and ship cattle into the port of H., to be there sold and the proceeds there paid over by the agents of A. to B., in satisfaction and discharge of the money which A. owed as aforesaid to B., and stated a breach in that A. did not provide and ship cattle, &c. Demurrer, that (1) the consideration would not support the promise; (2) the consideration being executed, the promise should be such as the law would imply; (3) the law will imply no promise by a debtor that he will provide and ship cattle; (4) no promise by plaintiff was stated which would be a sufficient consideration for the promise of defendant; (5) plaintiff did not by the agreement bind himself to forbear for any period of time. Demurrer allowed; but leave given to amend. Murdoch v. Bell, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 51.

Action on Cheque.]—In an action on a cheque which was dishonoured, the plaintiff alleged that the cheque was given in consideration of a promise to sign an agreement. The plea alleged that the plaintiff did not sign the agreement. Held that the promise to sign was sufficient consideration for the cheque. Rule absolute to enter verdict for plaintiff. Fattorini v. Clemence, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 51.

"More or Less"—Plea of Acceptance of Lesser Quantity.]—B. declared on a contract by which he agreed to buy, and defendant agreed to sell, 3000 ewes and 1500 wethers, "more or less." Defendant only tendered and delivered 3563 sheep in all. Defendant pleaded an agreement that in consideration of the delivery of the 3563, and the defendant giving an assurance that they had delivered all the sheep intended to be sold, the plaintiff would dispense with residue and pay for what he got, and the plea averred the fulfilment of this agreement. Held that the plea was bad, there being no consideration to support plaintiff's promise. Brown v. White, 3 A.J.R., 40.

Judgment Recoverable Upon an Uncertain Event—Whether a Good Consideration.]—A. was indebted to F. in a sum of £120, and F. promised to give A. time on consideration of A.'s assigning to him a judgment recovered against the Crown for £157. F. sued A. for the £120, and A. now sued F. for breach of the agreement to give time. Held that, although the judgment debt of the Crown was recovered on a contract which the Crown could not make, and that although the moneys to pay such judgment could not be so expended except under the certificate of the Audit Commissioners, and a vote by Parliament for the purpose, yet the judgment was valid, and a valuable security, although depending upon an uncertain event, and the assignment of it was a good consideration to support the promise to give time. Alcock v. Fergie, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 285, 321.

For facts, See S. C., under Crown—Liabilities, under Act No. 241.

Offer of Reward—Discovery by a Police Constable.]—McE., on March 4th, 1864, published a notice that, in February, a large quantity of goods were stolen from his branch store, and offering £100 reward to any person giving such information as would lead to the recovery of such goods and the conviction of the thieves. R., a police constable, arrested three persons on suspicion in February, and recovered some of the goods which had been in their possession, and gave the defendant, McE., information which led to his recovering the whole of the goods stolen. The three persons were convicted of larceny, and evidence was given as to identity of the goods. R. obtained a verdict. On rule nisi for a nonsuit, Held that the plaintiff's information was the original and meritorious cause of the recovery of the goods, and the fact that the plaintiff had before the notice seized goods in the possession of suspected persons did not preclude him from receiving the reward, and that, on the primâ facie evidence, all the persons connected with the theft had been convicted. Rule discharged. Robinson v. McEwan, 2 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 65.

Promise to Pay Debt of Intestate.]—A promise in writing by an administrator absolutely to pay a debt of his intestate, with interest, one month after notice, whether such administrator were administrator or not at the time of the promise, discloses sufficient consideration, viz., a promise to forbear for one month. Wilson v. Luth, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 73; 1 A.L.T., 162.

Uncertainty of.]—An agreement, by a married woman, that she should attend upon her aged father and mother as long as they lived, and provide them with necessary services, and in consideration thereof her father should, when requested, transfer to her his interest in certain land, was held void for uncertainty. Shiels v. Drysdale, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 126; 2 A.L.T., 14.

Void Ante-Nuptial Agreement.]—An ante-nuptial agreement, void under the "Statute of Frauds," can form no valuable consideration for the conveyance of land after the marriage. Crow v. Campbell, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 186; 6 A.L.T., 34.

See S.C., post under TRUST AND TRUSTEE.

Nudum Pactum.]—G. promised to give his overseer increased wages, not only for the future but for a past period during which the wages had been at a lower rate previously agreed upon. Held void as to the past period for want of consideration, being a promise to increase wages for services that had been actually performed before the promise was given. Anderson v. Glass, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 152.

Nudum Pactum, Acting on Terms of.]—Previously to November, 1863, a piece of Crown land had been excepted from sale on the application of the Municipal Council, with the intention of its being used for the purpose of the water supply of the city. The Council then applied for a grant of the land for the purposes of a market, and according to the view taken by the Full Court a promise was in fact given by the Crown that the land should be granted for that purpose. The letter from the Council requesting the grant stated that the necessary steps to establish a market were then in progress. The Council entered upon the land and expended £800 in improvements. Held, by the Full Court, that if the establishment of the market were the consideration for the grant, that consideration had been well-nigh spent before the promise on which it was said to be rested had been made, and that there was no consideration for the promise, it being a nudum pactum, and that the Council unwisely affecting improvements on land which was not theirs by law, did not create a consideration or afford grounds from which its existence might be inferred. Mayor, &c., of Melbourne v. the Queen, 4 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 19.

Promiss by Crown—Nudum Pactum—Acting on Terms of.]—The Moderator of the Presbytery of Melbourne applied in May, 1852, to the Government for a grant of Crown land as a site for a church, school-house, and manse. This application was answered, June, 1852, by the Colonial Secretary, stating the Governor's sanction to an appropriation of two acres of land for the purpose required. Trustees were appointed and approved of by the Governor-in-Council, August, 1853. The land was taken possession of and fenced, and a school-house erected on part of the land; on other parts of the land houses were erected and let, the rents being applied to church purposes; but no church or manse was erected. No grant of the land was issued, and in November, 1868, the Board of Land and Works advertised the land, other than that on which school-house was erected, for sale, under Sec. 40 of the "Land Act 1862." On petition and bill by the trustees against the Crown and Board of Land and Works seeking to restrain sale, Held, following the Mayor of Melbourne v. the Queen, that the promise of the land to the trustees for a particular purpose, and the acts done upon the land, did not amount to a consideration sufficient to support a claim enforceable as a contract, and bill and petition dismissed. MacPherson v. the Queen, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 131.

Action for Shares for which Note was Given.]—K. took shares in a company under an agreement which allowed the projectors to receive payment in cash or by promissory note. Attached to taking the shares were certain promises as to the granting of land warrants. K. took shares and gave a promissory note for them, and subsequently sued for fulfilment of the promises as to the land warrants. Held that it was not enough to give the note to become entitled to the shares; but that K. should have alleged and proved payment of it; that the promises as to the land warrants could only be enforced when K. was entitled to the shares; and that not being entitled to them he could not sue. Keith v. Polynesia Company, 1 A.J.R., 156.

Price to be Fixed by Valuators—Failure to Appoint an Umpire.]—A written contract provided for determination of price to be paid by valuators, who, before commencing valuation, were to appoint an umpire. The valuators omitted to appoint an umpire before they commenced their valuation, and in their valuation they could not agree. The plaintiff brought an action to recover deposit of part of purchase money, and obtained a verdict. On rule nisi to set it aside, Held that the appointment of the umpire was a condition precedent, and that the agreement was broken. Rule nisi discharged. Finn v. Ray, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 13.

Conditions Precedent.]—Where the drawer and acceptor of a bill agree that, if at maturity the acceptor pays a certain amount, the drawer will renew for the remainder, a full payment of the amount agreed upon to be paid, is a condition precedent to the acceptor's right to claim a renewal for the remainder, for there can be no remainder till the part to be paid is first deducted from the whole. Pachten v. Politz, 1 V.R. (L.,) 11; 1 A.J.R., 26.

Condition Precedent.]—Tributors agreed with a mining company to work a claim, and the agreement contained the following clause:—"The company will deduct 2 per cent. of the tributors' portion of gold in addition to royalty and wages, until such sum amounts to £100, such money to be retained by the company until the termination of the agreement, as security for any breakage or injury to the property of the company." Another clause required the tributors to keep the pumps, &c., in a proper state of repair, and to make good any damage that might occur to the mine and machinery or plant during their term, and to hand them over to the company in good order and condition at the end of their agreement. The tributors worked out the ground and handed the claim over to the company, but did not repair the machinery, and sued for the £100. Held that the making the repairs was a condition precedent to the repayment of the £100, and plaintiffs nonsuited. Great Gulf Company v. Sutherland, 4 A.J.R., 158.

Condition Precedent — Non-performance of—When Defendant Allowed to Plead.]—If the defendant has already recovered judgment against the plaintiff in respect of the non-performance of conditions precedent in a contract, he will not be allowed, in an action on the contract, to plead such non-performance. Withers v. Greenwood, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 491.

Condition Precedent—Sale of Ground Comprised in an Application for a Mining Lease—Readiness to Transfer.]—In an action on a contract for the sale of lands, which are comprised in an application for a mining lease, readiness and willingness to assign or transfer is not a concurrent or precedent condition to the vendor's right to recover the money, at least in a Court of law. Cane v. Sinclair, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 60; 5 A.L.T., 186.

By Reason of Act of God.]—See cases, ante column 8.

Party Not Performing Guilty of a Breach.]—The general rule is that where the performance of a contract depends upon the existence of a given person or thing, a condition is implied that the impossibility arising from the perishing of the person or thing shall excuse the performance; but if a man chooses to enter into an agreement to sell a chattel or a piece of land belonging to a third person, there is no such inherent impossibility of his performing that contract, as to excuse him for not performing it in the event of his not being able to induce the third person to part with the chattel or land. Rosel v. Adam, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 170, 176.

When, therefore, A. undertook to transfer to R. licences to mine on certain lands, and to do all necessary acts to obtain the consent of the President of the Board of Land and Works to the transfer, upon consideration of R. giving certain acceptances, and A. undertook to pay R. a certain sum if he did not transfer, &c., and A. allowed one of the licences to lapse, and it became, therefore, impossible to transfer it, &c., Held that A. had committed a breach of the contract, and that A. could recover the sum agreed to be paid in default of the transfer, &c., even though R. had not paid the last of the acceptances, but that the amount of such acceptance should be deducted from the sum recovered. Ibid.

Illegal Condition—No Ground for Breach by Party Inserting.]—R. sued for breach of contract to let tolls to him, averring that defendants would not let him into possession of the toll-gate. Plea, that the contract contained a condition for illegal exemptions from tolls. Demurrer, that the illegality of one clause in the contract upon which both parties could have acted without violating any enactment, did not show any defence to the breach; and that though defendants had no right to insert the clause mentioned, yet they could not set up such illegal clause to defeat a claim founded on not giving possession under the contract. Demurrer allowed. Ryan v. District Road Board of Broadford, 4 A.J.R., 110.

Agreement to Pay Money to Jurors in Addition to their Proper Fees.]—An agreement by the parties to a cause to pay the jurors engaged in the trial, a remuneration in addition to the fees allowed them by law is illegal and void. Glass v. Martin, 3 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 117.

Scrip Lent for Illegal Purpose—Action in Trover to Recover it.]—In an action for the recovery of certain scrip which had been lent to the defendant, it appeared that it had been lent for the purpose of enabling defendant to vote at the meeting of the company. The Court allowed, on argument of a rule nisi, to enter a verdict for defendant, the record to be amended by adding the plea of illegality, and then made the rule absolute, the Court not assisting a person to recover his property when it has been lent or given for an illegal purpose. Cane v. Levey, 3 V.R. (L.,) 198; 3 A.J.R., 81.

Against Public Policy.]—M., who was inspector of a bank, and was a partner with D. in certain station property, agreed in consideration of being released from the liabilities of the partnership to permit D., who was a customer of the bank, to discount such paper as he might place in the bank until the property could be sold at a profit, so long as he kept deposited in the bank certain securities sufficient to secure the amount of the discounts. The bank refused to discount, and the station was sold at a loss. D. sued M. for breach of contract, averring as an inducement for him to enter into the contract that M. was inspector. Held, per Barry and Fellows, J. J. (dissentiente Williams, J.) that the contract was against public policy, as offending against the principles of commercial morality which regulate the duty owing by the defendant to the bank—principles which apply alike to all persons holding positions of trust or under obligation similar in character to their superiors. Degraves v. McMullen, 5 A.J.R., 8.

Courts Will Not Assist Parties to.]—Courts will not assist parties to illegal transactions, except in certain cases; and Semble not even then, where property has been conveyed, and it is sought to obtain an order for its re-conveyance on the ground that such conveyance originated in an illegal dealing. McCahill v. Henty, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 68.

Property Acquired on an Illegal Consideration.]—Property acquired on an immoral and illegal consideration, as of cohabitation, cannot be recovered by volunteers under one party to the illegality from the other party who has the legal estate, the position of the possessor, as between them, being the better. Murdock v. Aherne, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 244.

Immoral Consideration—How Far a Stranger to the Contract may Take Advantage of.]—W. let certain premises to P. for immoral purposes. N. let a piano on hire to P. P.'s rent being in arrear, W. distrained upon the piano, and N. then sued W. for the conversion of the piano. The County Court Judge refused a nonsuit, on the ground that N. being a stranger to the contract between W. and P., could not take advantage of the immoral nature of the contract. Held, on appeal, that N. could. Appeal allowed, verdict entered for plaintiff. Nicholson v. West, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 80.

Gaming and Wagering.]—See GAMING AND WAGERING.

And see under LAND ACTS—MINING.

What is—Combination Contrary to Public Policy]—Several butchers agreed under seal that they would not send or cause to be sent any meat for sale in the Melbourne Market, and that a company should be formed for the purpose of leasing land for the erection of suitable buildings in which to sell meat. Held that this was an agreement in restraint of trade, to benefit the parties, but to injure the public, that it was contrary to public policy, and unenforceable, although the consideration was ample. Birtwistle v. Hann, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 153.

Reasonableness of Restraint.]—E. sold R. his business as a carrier, E. covenanting for 10 years not to carry on such business in Melbourne, Ballarat, Echuca, or other specified places, or any place within the Colonies of Victoria and New South Wales, where E. might be for the time being or within six months next preceding such time have been carrying it on. Breach, that E. did carry on such business within the time at Melbourne, Ballarat, and Echuca. Held that the consideration must be limited to the towns named in the breach, and that a restraint not to carry on business in those places so named was reasonable and not void as being too large, and as in general restraint of trade. Robertson v. English, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 238.

By a memorandum in writing, R., in selling to McL. his business and stock-in-trade in Collingwood, agreed not to start in the same line of business within nine miles of Collingwood. Held that the limit was a reasonable one. McLeod v. Roberts, 3 V.R. (L.,) 145; 3 A.J.R., 97.

Sale of Goodwill.]—In a contract for the sale of the goodwill of a business, a provision which restrained A. from carrying on a butcher's business within one and a-half miles from a certain shop for an unlimited time was held reasonable. Goss v. Richardson, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 264.

Contract for Stevedoring—Reasonableness of Restraint.]—Where the object of an agreement is to parcel out the stevedoring business of a port amongst the parties to it, by which certain ships were allotted to each of the parties to which they were to confine themselves, and they stipulated not to compete with each other, Held by the Privy Council, affirming the judgment of the Supreme Court, that such agreement was not invalid if carried into effect by provisions reasonably necessary for the purpose, though thereby a partial restraint upon the power of the parties to exercise their trade might be created. Locke v. Collins, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 40. S.C. sub. nom. Collins v. Locke, L.R., 4 App. Cas., 674.

Per Privy Council—Agreements in restraint of trade are against public policy and void unless the restraint is partial and reasonable in relation to the objects of the contract, and also unless they are made upon a real and bona fide consideration. A provision that, if a particular merchant named should refuse to allow the person entitled to it under the agreement to stevedore his ship, and should require one of the other parties to do it, such party so required should give an equivalent to the party losing the stevedoring, is not unreasonable, either as regards the party entitled or the merchant. But a provision that, in the case of ships passing out of the hands of merchants named into the hands of others refusing to employ the person entitled under the agreement, all the parties thereto should be deprived of the work is unreasonable and cannot be justified. Collins v. Locke, L.R., 4 App. Cas., 674.

Proviso in Restraint of Trade when Inseparable.]—An agreement in writing was as follows:—"I., E. J. doth hereby sell to you W. H. one butcher's shop, two-roomed cottage, two yards and boiler, also tools, &c., situated at Stringer's Creek, for the sum of ninety pounds (£90 0s. 0d.,) the half to be paid in cash, and the balance, viz., forty-five pounds (£45,) in four months from date. And I., E. J., doth hereby agree not to start in business on Stringer's Creek in opposition to him. E. J. Witness—W. E." Held void on the ground that the proviso in italics was part of the contract and could not be rejected, and being in general restraint of trade rendered the whole agreement void. Hollaghan v. Jones, 3 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 37.

IV. DISCHARGE AND BREACH OF CONTRACT.

When Justified—Partial Failure to Perform.]—A partial failure by one party to perform a contract, where there is no absolute inability or refusal on his part to continue the contract, does not justify a rescission of it by the other party. Prendergast v. Lee, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 411.

L. agreed to take meat from P. for twelve months, and it was also agreed that P. should give L. a bonus or present of £10, which was paid. P. did not supply L. regularly with meat, and L. lost some customers in consequence of the irregularity. L. therefore rescinded the contract, though P. had heard no complaints and was willing to continue the supply of meat. Held that L. was not justified in rescinding the agreement. Ibid.

Contract Terminated by Third Person—Authority—Onus Probandi.]—Where a contract is terminated by a third person, the onus lies on the plaintiff to shew the authority, or facts from which the authority might be presumed, of such third party. Norton v. Williamson, 6 A.L.T., 101.

What Amounts to a Breach.]—See Bruce v. the Queen, post under CROWN—Liabilities, &c.

Count for Money Had and Received—Breach of Contract—Failure of Consideration.]—A tender by M. for the lease of a turnpike gate was accepted by the Government, and M. paid a deposit by way of rent in advance. Before he entered into possession the name of the gate was changed, and the gate itself moved four miles in situation. M. took possession, paid the rent in advance for three months, but not for the fourth, and, without making any complaint of the inferior value of the gate so moved, kept possession until the 23rd of the fourth month, when he was evicted for rent due and payable in advance for the fourth month. His receipts for the fourth month were less by £75 than his original deposit; he therefore sued the Government for damages, alleging for breach of the demise, that they never gave him the gate actually demised, and he also sued them on the money count for his deposit, alleging a total failure of consideration. M. recovered a verdict generally, with damages one shilling; but leave was given to move for an equitable verdict. On the motion, Held that M. could not recover his deposit on the money count as for a total failure of consideration, the parties not being able to be replaced in statu quo. The Court, however, offered to make the rule absolute without costs, to increase the damages on the first count, but the defendant refusing, a new trial was granted, costs to abide the event. Martin v. Board of Land and Works, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 123.

Damages for Breach — Maintenance Money for Detention as Witness.]—In assessing damages for breach of contract the jury are not at liberty to include in such damages as a separate item the plaintiff's maintenance as a witness during the time he has been awaiting the trial. Norton v. Williamson, 6 A.L.T., 128.

CONVERSION.

When Effected.]—Where imperfect instructions, executed as and purporting to be a will, but which were held by the Court to be effectual only in passing the income, contained directions for sale and conversion without any directions as to distribution of proceeds, Held that the direction for sale did not work a conversion, so as to change the nature of the property, which, as to the corpus, was distributable as upon intestacy. Read v. Read, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 212.

Contract for Sale—Default of Purchaser.]—The right as between real and personal representatives of the vendor depends upon there being a valid contract at the time of his death; if there is a valid contract then that is in Equity considered to be done which is contracted to be done. If, however, the property being sold, the title afterwards fails, the effect of the conversion ceases. Where the purchaser, after remaining in possession for some time, threw up his contract owing to his inability to pay, Held that that had not the same effect as a defect in title, and that there was a conversion and decree made for a vesting order vesting the legal estate in the executors of the deceased intestate vendor as against the universal devisees of his heir-at-law. Flower v. Wilson 3 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 84.

Under Act No. 230 ("Intestate's Real Estate Act")—Application for Administration Required.]—The Act No. 230 does not of itself convert real into personal estate, but requires an application for administration to be made, which, when granted, has a retrospective effect to the death of the intestate. Until then the property continues real estate with all the incidents of real estate. English v. English, 3 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 170.

COPYRIGHT.

1. Paintings, Photographs, Engravings, and Designs.

Photographs—"Copyright Act 1869," No. 350, Secs. 36, 38.]—N. summoned P. for selling a colourable imitation of a photograph duly registered by the proprietor N., and without his consent. Held under Sec. 36 of the Act, that the selling of a copy did not deprive the registered proprietor of the copyright; that the Section protects only photos taken, not through the intervention of a negative, and does not apply to those taken through such intervention; that the description of a photograph, "Collins-street, looking East," is a sufficient description for the purposes of registration under Sec. 38. Decision of justices fining P. affirmed. Pyrke v. Nettleton, 3 V.R. (L.,) 6; 3 A.J.R., 27.

Person Aggrieved—"Copyright Act 1869," Sec. 50.]—A "person aggrieved" within the meaning of Sec. 50 of the "Copyright Act 1869," applying to expunge an entry of copyright in an engraving, &c., must have some substantial objection, and one going to the merits of the registered proprietor's title, or he must show that the entry is inconsistent with some right that he sets up in himself or in some other person, or that the entry would really interfere with some intended action on his part. In re Martin, ex parte The Equitable Life Assurance Society, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 196; 6 A.L.T., 31, 61.

A life assurance society starting business in Victoria made an application to expunge the entry of the name of the manager of a similar society, which had been for some time carrying on business in Victoria, as the proprietor of the copyright in an engraving. The applicants proved that for several years prior to their registration in Victoria they had made use of a design very closely resembling that which was registered, and there was no direct evidence as to the originality or otherwise of either design. Held that the applicants were persons aggrieved, that the design of the registered engraving was probably copied from theirs, and order made expunging entry. Ibid.

Copyright in Engraving—Who may Apply to Expunge Entry of—Person Aggrieved—"Copyright Act 1869," Secs. 36, 50.]—The entry of a copyright in an engraving, under Sec. 36 of the "Copyright Act 1869," may be expunged on the application of the person aggrieved, under Sec. 50, if such engraving be not new and original. Ibid.

"Original" Engraving, What is.]—An engraving which is a mere reproduction of another is not "original." Ibid.

Design—"Copyright Act 1869," Sec. 3.]—A new shape for an iron frame for the door of a safe is not a "design" within the meaning of Sec. 3, so as to be capable of registration. Regina v. Radke, ex parte Dyke, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 23; post under PATENT.

2. Telegrams.

Copyright of Newspapsr Proprietors in—Injunction to Restrain Infringement.]—Certain newspaper proprietors entered into a contract with a telegraph company for the supply of news. By agreement with two other papers the proprietors of these journals were allowed to publish these telegrams simultaneously with the original journal. Defendant, proprietor of an evening journal at Geelong, copied the telegrams from one of the two journals who published under the agreement, and published them in his paper. Upon motion to restrain him from so doing, Held that the telegrams were copyright; that the publication by defendant was a sufficient injury to justify the interference of a Court of Equity, and injunction granted to restrain defendant from printing or publishing telegrams supplied or published by the plaintiffs. Wilson v. Rowcroft, 4 A.J.R., 57.

"Copyright Act" 350, Sec. 24—Newspaper—Telegrams from England—Injunction.]—Bill by proprietors of Argus newspaper against defendant, proprietor of the Gippsland Mercury, from publishing the contents of telegrams daily received by former and published in Argus. Plaintiff's paper was registered under Act No. 350, which expressly extends to newspapers, Sec. 24. Bill alleged that the intelligence published in the Argus as telegrams from England appeared in defendant's paper before the Argus reached Gippsland so nearly in the same words that it must be inferred that the Argus intelligence was copied into telegrams sent to Gippsland, and then inserted in defendant's paper. Case made by defendant was that news contained in Argus became a matter of common talk, and was sent by defendant's Melbourne correspondent as such. Held that the odour of defendant's publication was so perfectly identical with that of plaintiffs' that it was clear it was taken from the plaintiffs' publication; that right of copyright extends to results of inquiries as to facts which writer reduces to order, such being property from to-day acquired which is habitually infringed as soon as acquired with such speed that no effectual remedy could be found after publication. Ordered that defendant be restrained from publishing as news from England, or in any other form, in the Gippsland Mercury or otherwise, any copy or colourable alteration or adaptation in the nature of copies of any telegrams from England received and published by the plaintiffs. Wilson v. Luke, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 127.

3. Books.

"Book"—Acts No. 5 and 6 Vic., Cap. 45.]—In a suit for an injunction to restrain the defendant from infringing the plaintiff's copyright in a "book" consisting of plans and diagrams with instructions for their use printed on them, for an improved method of cutting out ladies' and children's dresses, it appeared that although the defendant's system was superior to that of the plaintiff, nevertheless the defendant had copied the plaintiff's and had incorporated a great part of the latter's book in his. Held that the case should be dealt with as a mere subject of copyright, that as such the defendant was virtually stealing the plaintiff's book, and interim injunction granted. Hanbury v. Dumsday, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 172.

A coroner's court is a Court of record in Victoria, and the Coroner has, under Sec. 4 of the "Coroner's Act," No. 253, and Sec. 39 of the Act No. 267, power to commit for contempt for a period of 48 hours. Casey v. Candler, 5 A.J.R., 179; for facts see S.C., post under Trespass.

I. Rights and Duties of.

Accepting Contract—Estimate.]—Before a corporation can accept a contract, an estimate of the cost of the proposed work should be prepared, and the rate made on that basis, except in cases of emergency or when the cost is small. Attorney-General v. Shire of Wimmera, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 24; 1 A.L.T., 125 [following Attorney-General v. Mayor of St. Kilda, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 141, and Attorney-General v. Shire of Kyneton, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 269.]

For facts of cases Attorney-General v. Mayor of St. Kilda and Attorney-General v. Shire of Kyneton, see post columns 218, 219.

In Contracting—"Local Government Act, 1874," Sec. 169.]—Sec. 169 of the "Local Government Act 1874," prescribing the form in which contracts are to be made by a municipal council, though in form permissive is really mandatory. Shire of Leigh v. Shire of Hampden, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 370.

Powers in Accepting Tenders for Contract — "Boroughs Statute 1869," No. 359, Secs. 35, 37, 39, 122, 140 — Vote of Interested Councillors — Accepting Highest Tender.]—A municipal council called for tenders for lighting the streets, and two companies put in tenders, one company, which had previously had the contract, at £5, the other, of which three of the councillors were shareholders and directors, at £7 5s. The council, by a majority of six to three, resolved to accept the higher tender. Of the majority three were the Councillors who held shares in the successful company. An information was brought against the council, and an injunction prayed for seeking to restrain them from affixing the corporate seal to the contract. Five of the defendants, who had voted for the resolution, demurred on the ground that it did not appear that they or any of them were incapacitated from voting as in the bill alleged, or that by reason of having so voted, the proceedings were null and void. Upon the motion for injunction, Held, per Molesworth, J., that the councillors who were shareholders committed a breach of the 122nd Section of Act No. 359, and subjected themselves to the penalty; but that their so doing did not avoid the corporate resolution; that the council were not warranted in sacrificing the interests of the corporation for the alleged good of the locality, and the injunction was granted until further orders. Upon the demurrer, Held, per Molesworth, J., that the bill sufficiently alleged facts impeaching the propriety of the council's acts, and demurrer overruled. Against the decision upon the demurrer the demurring defendants appealed, and pending the appeal the information was set down for hearing; and, upon the hearing, Held, per Molesworth, J., that the acceptance of the highest tender is within the discretionary power of a municipal council, though several councillors be interested in the contract, if the motive for accepting the tender be the ultimate benefit of the corporation; that the Court ought not to interfere with their discretion, and information dismissed with costs. Upon appeal, the Full Court upheld the decision overruling the demurrer, but reversed that dismissing the information upon the grounds that if Sec. 122 applied, it avoided the resolution to accept the tender; that the proviso of Sec. 39, validating the acts of an incapacitated councillor, relates to qualification and not to being interested, and that the resolution to enter into the contract was avoided by the interested councillors having voted upon it. Attorney-General v. Mayor of Emerald Hill, 4 A.J.R., 14, 32, 48, 104. On appeal, Ibid, 135.

Power to Contract—Act No. 506, Sec. 169—Contract for Construction of a Bridge.]—Contracts by municipal corporations must be made in one of the modes or forms prescribed by Act No. 506 ("Local Government Act 1874,") and the provisions of the Act being for the protection of the ratepayers are mandatory. Mayor of Richmond v. Edwards, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 348; 5 A.L.T., 118.

Liability of Corporation on Contract Entered into by One Council at Request of Other—Ratification.]—Three municipal councils agreed to join in the erection of a bridge at their common boundary. One of the councils sent a member to the meeting of one of the other councils with a letter written by the secretary with its authority, stating that such member had full authority to represent such council at the meeting of the other council. The latter council entered into a contract on the joint behalf of the two councils, with the concurrence of the member sent by the former council. Held that the former council was bound by the contract; that the council which, by agreement, had entered into the contract and superintended the execution thereof, had necessarily a reasonable discretion as to details in carrying it out, dealing with unlooked for difficulties, allowing extras, and in remitting penalties under the contract; and that the first-mentioned council waived any necessity for consulting it further about subsidiary contracts which might not perhaps have been thought to come within the authority given to approve the main contract by subsequently paying a part of its share of the expense of such subsidiary contracts. Shire of Leigh v. Shire of Hampden, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 370.

Under "Local Government Act 1874," Sec. 392.]—The obligation imposed by Sec. 392 of the "Local Government Act 1874," upon adjoining municipalities to unite in building and maintaining a bridge at their common boundary, confers upon them, by necessary implication, a power to unite for the purpose by voluntary agreement in either of the modes prescribed by Sec. 169, without the formal preliminaries required to start the process of compulsion. Ibid, p. 379.

"Local Government Act 1874," Sec. 394 — Agreement.]—The agreement between two shire corporations, for the carrying out of works within the boundary of two shires, must be a definite and formal agreement clearly binding on the parties. Semble, a mere acquiescence by one shire in the acts of the other is insufficient. Attorney-General v. Shire of Echuca, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 4.

Council Suing to Restrain a Nuisance—Right to Sue—"Municipal Corporations Act 1863."]—A municipal corporation, established under the "Municipal Corporations Act 1863," does not represent the interests of the population of the municipality, so as to be entitled to maintain a suit to abate a nuisance existing in the municipality, but not shown to be upon soil the property of the corporation. Such a corporation has no right to institute, on behalf of the public or any private individual, proceedings to restrain the continuance of such a nuisance. The Mayor of Ballarat East v. Smith, 1 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 52.

Charging for Use of Land Reserved for Public Purposes.] — Semble, that where Crown land within a municipality has been reserved for recreative and gymnastic purposes, and the municipal council has incurred expense about such land in order to assist its use for public exercises, the council may lawfully remunerate themselves by charging particular companies for its partial use; and such companies, again, having incurred expense for particular amusements or games, might lawfully charge an admission price to pay for that expense. United Sir William Don Company v. Koh-i-nor Company, 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 63, 75.

Liabilities, Adjustment of on Separation of Borough—"Local Government Act 1874," Secs. 530, 531.]—Where the Governor has, by an Order in Council, under Sec. 530 of the "Local Government Act 1874," severed one portion of a municipality and constituted it as a new one, the proper construction to be put upon Sec. 531 of the Act is that no adjustment of existing liabilities between the original municipalities and the new one so constituted can be made by the same order, but such adjustment must be made by a separate order after hearing both parties. Roebuck v. Mayor of Geelong West, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 189.

Investigation of Accounts at Annual Meeting—Ratepayers—"Local Government Act 1874," Sec. 202.]—Under Sec. 202 of the "Local Government Act 1874," ratepayers, though they have a right to be present, have no right to be heard before the Shire council at a meeting of such council for the investigation of accounts. Rippon v. Dennis, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 81; 1 A.L.T., 164.

Liability for Trespass of Revenue Inspector—"Wines, Beer, and Spirits Sale Statute," No. 227, Sec. 67.]—E. had been appointed by the Corporation of Melbourne to be inspector of licenses under Act No. 227. E. had received no instructions further than to prosecute in cases of default of license. E. laid an information against H., and obtained a warrant to a constable to seize beer, which it afterwards appeared did not belong to H. H. sued the Corporation in trespass. Held that E. acted beyond the scope of his authority, and that there being no ratification by the Corporation, they were not liable. Henderson v. the Mayor of Melbourne, 5 A.J.R., 134.

Appointment and Removal of Officers — Town Clerk — Appointment.] — The town clerk of a municipality established under the Act 18 Vic., No. 15, being an officer whose services are necessarily incidental to the very object for which the corporation was established need not be appointed under seal. Regina v. East Collingwood, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 1.

Appointment and Removal of Officers—Wrongful Dismissal—Salary—Damages.]—Where a municipal corporation had wrongfully dismissed its town clerk, to whom an ascertained balance of salary was owing, upon application by the clerk for a mandamus to compel payment of the salary due to him and damages, Held that as the sum payable for services between the last payment and dismissal could be calculated the rule for a mandamus should go for that amount; but that, in the absence of any certainty or capability of certainty as to the sum claimed for damages, no mandamus to compel payment of it could be granted. Ibid.

Appointment and Removal of Officers — Officer Removed Disputing Validity of New Appointment —What is the Proper Course.]—The town clerk of a borough was removed de facto from office. He disputed the validity of his successor's appointment, and sued the council for salary subsequent to such removal. Held that his remedy, if any, was not by proceeding for wages in a County Court, such Court not being competent to try the right to an office; and that the proper course was to apply for a rule calling upon the corporation to show cause why a mandamus should not issue commanding them to reinstate him in his office. Smith v. Mayor, &c., of Clunes, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 86.

Appointment and Removal of Officers—Removal—"Local Government Act 1874," Secs. 155, 157, 159, 160, 173.]—A special meeting under Sec. 160 of the "Local Government Act 1874," is not necessary to remove an officer of a municipal corporation. The council may remove an officer either by a special meeting, of which, and the business to be done thereat, due notice must be given under Secs. 157 and 159 of the Act, and may then proceed under Sec. 160; or it may give notice under Sec. 155 of extraordinary business to be transacted at an ordinary meeting, at which, under Sec. 173, the council can remove any of its officers. Ex parte Downey, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 3.

Resolution to Appoint Secretary Followed by Appointment—Council Cannot Rescind.]—A resolution of a Shire Council to appoint a person as secretary, followed up by an appointment, is incapable of rescission. Mandamus to compel the calling of a meeting of the council to rescind a resolution under which a secretary had been appointed, refused. Ex parte Knight, Regina v. Howes, 5 A.J.R., 107.

As to Mandamus to Compel Payment of Officer's Salary.]—See Regina v. Mayor of Footscray, and Regina v. Shire of Bulla, ex parte Daniel, under MANDAMUS.

For Negligent Making and Management Generally.]—See post under LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

Liability for Construction of Drain—Act No. 176, Sec. 237.]—C. sued the defendant Shire Council, for negligence in constructing a drain, whereby large quantities of sludge were distributed over plaintiff's land in all directions, and not in a defined channel, and recovered a verdict. On rule nisi for new trial, Held that the Shire Council was liable for the negligent construction of the drain, and that there was a good cause of action, but as the evidence of engineers pointed to the fact that no such damage had been done as the verdict assumed, the Court directed damages to be reduced, or, in default, rule absolute. Cameron v. Shire of Mount Rouse, 5 A.J.R., 136.

[NOTE.—Compare Sec. 384 of Act No. 506.]

Covenant to Repair.]—A municipal corporation, under the Act 18 Vic., No. 15, cannot effectually covenant to repair drains made for the streets over the lands of strangers. Mayor of St. Kilda v. Stevens, 2 V.R. (E.,) 165; 2 A.J.R., 102.

Constructing Reservoirs and Waterworks—"Local Government Act 1874," Sec. 446.]—The power of a municipal council to construct reservoirs or waterworks under Sec. 446 of the "Local Government Act 1874," only arises after the consent of the Governor-in-Council has been obtained to such construction. Smith v. Shire of Lexton, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 324.

Semble, that a pitched crossing through a creek in a highway, with the lower edge raised so as to dam back water on the road, would not fall within the term "reservoir" or "waterworks." Ibid.

Authorising Removal of Material from Crown Lands—"Local Government Act 1874," Sec. 386.]—A municipal council is not enabled by Sec. 386 of the "Local Government Act 1874," to authorise the removal of material from Crown lands, whether within or without the municipality, such Crown lands not being specially set apart for that purpose. Rotherly v. Patterson, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 213; 6 A.L.T., 92.

As to Removal of Material for Road Making from Land Temporarily Reserved for a Purpose of Water Supply.]—See Mayor of Ballarat and Ballarat East v. Bungaree Road Board, under LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

Under 24 Vic., No. 110—Taking Land for Streets.]—It is enacted by 24 Vic., No. 110, Secs. 6 and 7, that if at any time within three years from its passing a person should establish his title to the satisfaction of the council to debentures lodged for land taken for the improvement of the ward, the council should issue to him a certificate to that effect, and the treasurer of the City of Melbourne should pay out of the corporation funds the amount of the debenture; and that after the expiration of the three years the balance of the money secured by the debentures should be paid to the Colonial Treasurer, who should be liable therefor for ten years subsequently. A plaintiff laid claim to a balance of money which had, under these sections, been paid over to the Colonial Treasurer. Held that the liability of the council to issue the certificate did not cease when the money was paid over; that the three years must have expired before action could be taken against the council for withholding the certificate; and that to entitle a person to maintain such action at all he must have proved his title to the land taken within the three years, since the time, being fixed by an Act of Parliament, could be waived by neither party, and evidence tendered to show that there had been such a waiver as to certain of the title deeds, and subsequent acceptance by the council of plaintiff's title, was held inadmissible. Hodgson v. Mayor of Fitzroy, 1 V.R. (L.,) 218; 1 A.J.R., 167.

In Respect of Dangerous Hole on Private Land—Act 359, Sec. 393.]—Sec. 393 imposes upon a borough a new duty wholly different from what it had before at Common Law. It justifies a borough in going upon private property to make a street, &c., and so justifies what would otherwise be a trespass, but in such a case the borough is liable for injuries occasioned by leaving a dangerous hole on private property near a street, it being its duty to fence and enclose such a hole. This case was decided upon demurrer to a declaration. Daly v. Mayor of Ballarat, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 134.

Power to Make—Act No. 506, Sec. 213, Sub-sec. 8.]—A shire has only power to make bye-laws suppressing what are already nuisances at common law, not to create or define nuisances under Act No. 506, Sec. 213, Sub-sec. 8. Higgins v. Egleson, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 196.

Building Regulations—"Bye-Law Incorporating Act," No. 359, Sch. 12, Part I., Sub-Div. 6, Clause 30.]—The notice required by Clause 30, Sub-Division 6, of Act No. 359, Sch. 12, Part I., incorporated as a bye-law by a council is only required to be given where the house is within ten feet of the street. Mayor of Prahran v. Wild, 3 V.R. (L.,) 249; 3 A.J.R., 122.

Ultra Vires.]—Under Sec. 27 of the Act 18 Vic., No. 15, municipal corporations established under that Act were given the care and management of the roads, public streets, paths, wharves, jetties, piers, and public thoroughfares, and were given power to make such bye-laws for carrying out these objects, &c., as might to them seem fit. A municipal corporation passed a bye-law "for compelling the fencing of certain lands abutting upon the public footpaths," and took proceedings to convict an owner of property for non-compliance with it. Held ultra vires, and the execution of the conviction prohibited. In re Municipal Council of Kyneton, 1 W. & W. (L.) 11.

Ultra Vires—Keeping Swine—"Municipal Act," 18 Vic., No. 15, Sec. 26.]—A municipal bye-law which totally prohibits the keeping of swine within the boundaries of the municipality is ultra vires of the "Municipal Act," 18 Vic., No. 15, Sec. 26. Regina v. Cowie, ex parte Ardill, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 20; 1 A.L.T. 136.

Act No. 506, Sec. 213—Keeping Swine—Powers of Corporation to Exclude the Whole Municipality.] —By Sec. 213 of Act No. 506, the Town Council of Emerald Hill had power to make regulations setting forth the limits of the portions of the municipality within which it should not be lawful to keep swine, and passed a regulation comprising the whole of the town. Held that there was no excess of authority in including the whole municipality in one regulation. Same case, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 88; 2 A.L.T., 122.

Ultra Vires—"Local Government Act 1874," Sec. 239.]—A municipal bye-law prohibiting the driving of cattle at certain hours through the streets, and imposing a fine of so much per head for every head of cattle so driven is ultra vires, since in such case the aggregate penalty may exceed the limit of penalty, i.e., £20, fixed by Sec. 239 of the "Local Government Act 1874." Regina v. Shuter, ex parte Wren, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 138.

"Licensed Carriages Statute 1864," No. 217—Power to Enforce Bye-Laws—Hackney Carriage—"Railway Yard."]—The Act No. 217 does not give a corporation the right to enforce their bye-laws within the boundaries of a railway fence; the land within that fence is private property as far as the corporation is concerned. Rule absolute for order prohibiting proceedings by corporation to enforce a conviction of a driver of a hackney carriage for standing for hire in a railway yard of a Government railway at Geelong. Regina v. Johnstone, ex parte Breen, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 246.

Validity—Processions—"Local Government Act 1874," Sec. 213, Sub-sec. 17.]—A bye-law which enacts that no procession of persons or of vehicles, or both, for other than funeral purposes, shall parade or pass through any of the streets of a city, unless with the previous consent in writing of the mayor, or in his absence of the town clerk, and that twenty-four hours' notice shall be given to the police is not unreasonable, and is within the powers given to a municipal corporation by Sec. 213, Sub-sec. 17 of the "Local Government Act 1874," for regulating traffic and processions. Rider v. Phillips, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 147; 6 A.L.T., 37.

S.P. See Bannon v. Barker, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 200, where it was Held that an exactly similar regulation is within Sec. 2 of the "Police Offences Statute Amending Act," No. 630, which confers powers upon local authorities to make regulations for the route to be observed in carriage and footways, and preventing obstruction thereof.

Validity—Impeaching—Power of Justices—"Local Government Act 1874," Secs. 225, 246.]—Per Higinbotham, J. Sec. 225 of the "Local Government Act 1874," takes away from justices who have to enforce any bye-law made under that Act any jurisdiction to entertain objections to the validity of such bye-law. If it is desired to impeach its validity it must be done in the manner prescribed by Sec. 246 of the Act. Rider v. Phillips, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 147; 6 A.L.T., 37.

Validity—Impeaching.]—The liability of a power to abuse cannot be considered as an argument against such power having been created. Ibid, p. 152.

Expenditure—Contracts.]—Where a municipal corporation enters into a prospective contract involving a large outlay, not only in the current but in future years, the liability should be provided for by the levying a special rate, or the outlay in each year should not go beyond the income of that year. Where the council of a borough entered into a contract by which it appeared that they would incur prospective liabilities beyond the current year, (and that not by means of a special rate,) or run themselves into debt as for the current year, on information by the Attorney-General, at the relation of a ratepayer seeking to restrain them from entering into the contract, Held that an injunction would be granted in such a case. Quære, how far an estimate prepared under Act No. 184, Sec. 186, binds a borough council. Attorney-General v. Mayor of St. Kilda, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 141.

Expenditure in Excess of Assets.]—The council of a shire placed upon the estimate of expenditure, under Act No. 358, Sec. 204, an item of £1100 for a bridge and shire hall. The actual revenue proved much less than that estimated; and the shire being actually in debt for liabilities already incurred, the council by a majority of one entered into a contract for erecting a shire hall at a cost of £628. Upon motion for an injunction upon an information at the relation of a ratepayer, with the consent of the dissentient minority of the council, to restrain the council from expending any of the shire funds in the erection of the hall, Held that the dissentient minority had no right to assume a discriminating discretion as to which particular expenditure should be stopped; and that the contract having been entered into, the Court would not subject the shire to liability for damages by stopping its execution. Attorney-General v. Mayor, &c., of St. Kilda, distinguished. Attorney-General v. Shire of Darebin, 2 V.R. (E.,) 88; 2 A.J.R., 42.

"Local Government Act 1874," Secs. 151, 260—Shire Council — Expenditure — Estimats — Council Meeting—Quorum — Resolution — Intsrprstation of Statutes.]—Under Act No. 506, corporations are bound before incurring any considerable expense to call public attention to it by having a scheme of expenditure prepared in accordance with the Act. Bill and information by Attorney-General at relation of M. against the defendant corporation. Motion for injunction to restrain defendants from entering into any contract for the purpose of or expending any municipal funds in the erection of a shire hall. In an appropriation of ways and means of March 6, 1875, the first item was "Formation of streets, kerbing and channelling, making footpaths, and other public works, £2040." Held, an item of this kind, as to concluding words, implies only purposes ejusdem generis, and does not mean erection of a shire hall at £2200; that a resolution to do an entire thing does not warrant doing a part only of a thing. Quære, whether at a meeting of a shire council, at which a full quorum is present, if one-half withdraw, and the members left, though not a quorum, pass a resolution in accordance with a clause in the bye-laws in the schedule to the Act, the dissentients have power to withdraw and neutralise the powers of the council. Attorney-General v. Shire of Kyneton, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 269.

Information to Restrain Unlawful Expenditurs.]—A shire being desirous of erecting a bridge over a river, which formed its boundary with another shire, and failing to agree, under Sec. 393 of the "Local Government Act," No. 506, or to have the matter settled by general sessions under Sec. 394 of that Act, proceeded without obtaining the sanction of the Governor-in-Council, under Sec. 391, to erect the bridge at its own expense. A contract was entered into, and the erection of the bridge commenced simultaneously on both banks, the other shire making no objection. The Attorney-General, at the relation of a ratepayer of the shire, brought an information to restrain the expenditure of any of the municipal funds upon any work outside the municipal limits. Injunction granted. Attorney-General v. Shire of Echuca, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 4.

4. Rates.

Valuations—"Local Government Act 1874," Secs. 264-269.]—The "Local Government Act 1874" shows a distinct general intent that all rates shall be based on valuations made by valuers under declaration, which valuations are to be binding unless appealed from by any person aggrieved by their being too high or too low; and municipal corporations have no power, under Sec. 264 of the Act, to make any alteration in such valuations. The only redress of a person aggrieved by the lowering of the rate of the lands of others is to appeal within a month, and the language of the Act makes it doubtful if appeal lies by any one except a person improperly put upon the roll. Attorney-General v. Shire of Hampden, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 138.

Alteration of Rates by Council.]—Even had a council the power (under Sec. 264) of redressing individual grievances it would not extend to the grievance of a class. The singular number may embrace a number of individuals, but not an entire class of individuals. Ibid.

Power of Council to Grant Relief for Overpayment.]—Where a rate assessed has not been appealed from, and has been paid, the matter is concluded as between the ratepayer, the council, and the other ratepayers; and it is not in the power of the council to relieve from what it regards as the hardship of an overpayment, by applying the corporate funds to repayment. Ibid.

Corporation Suing for Rates—Act No. 506, Secs. 12, 285.]—A council is empowered by Sec. 285 to sue for rates, and an objection that the corporation sued as the "Council of the Municipality of E." instead of under the corporate style given by Sec. 12 as "The Mayor, &c., of the Borough of E." Overruled. Hearn v. Council of the Borough of Essendon, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 142; 1 A.L.T., 4.

Invalid Rate—Ratspayer not Paying is Entitled to be on Burgess List—Duty of Town Clerk.]—A rate was not signed by the members of a municipal council in due time as required by the "Municipal and Local Corporations Act," 27 Vic., No. 184, and a ratepayer making default as regards that rate was not placed upon the burgess list for that year. He thereupon laid an information against the town clerk for his omission to observe the requirements of Sec. 50 of the "Boroughs Statute," No. 359. Held that the rate being an invalid one, and the plaintiff having paid the last legally-made rate, he was entitled to be placed upon the burgess list for the year, and that the town clerk should be fined under Sec. 72 of the Act No. 359, for the omission so to place the plaintiff on the list, it being his duty to see that the rate was in accordance with the Act under which it was made. Lennon v. Evans, 1 V.R. (L.,) 133; 1 A.J.R., 123.

II. ELECTION OF MEMBERS.

"Electoral Act," No. 279, Sec. 67—Notice of Intention to Apply to Become a Voter—No Summons to Show Cause.]—H. sent a notice to the town clerk (F.) of his intention to apply to have his name put on the roll of electors for Melbourne, but did not require the town clerk to appear to show cause. F. did not appear, and an order was made that a certificate be forwarded to the returning officer. Held, on rule nisi for prohibition, that the order should have been preceded by a summons to show cause, and that the notice should have stated that H.'s name was erroneously omitted, or that H. was upon the roll between August 1st and 12th of the previous year, or that he was a ratepayer. Rule absolute. Regina v. Sturt, ex parte Fitzgibbon, 5 A.J.R., 71.

"Shires Statute," No. 358, Secs. 97, 373—Last Day for Nomination of Candidates.]—Three councillors were to be elected for a certain shire. The returning officer on March 10th gave notice that candidates were to be nominated not less that four days from notice, and not more than seven, and appointed Monday, the 16th, as the day of nomination. On Saturday, the 14th, K's. nomination was duly made, and so were two other nominations, and on Monday the returning officer accepted two other nominations. Held that these nominations were too late; that Sec. 373 only applied to a case where an act was required to be done on a specified day, and that day was a Sunday, but not to a case like the present where two or three days were specified for nomination. Rule absolute for a mandamus to compel returning officer to declare K. elected under Sec. 101 of the Act. Regina v. Hennessey, ex parte Knight, 5 A.J.R, 35.

Nomination Paper—Signature—Act No. 176, Sec. 84.]—The nomination of G. was signed by ten ratepayers. Below the names were the words, "And I, the abovenamed James G., hereby consent to such nomination," in G.'s own hand writing. Held that the words Jas. G. must be taken as being intended for a signature. Rule absolute to oust from office the other candidate, such nomination paper having been treated by the returning officer as invalid. Regina v. Oddie, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 221; N.C., 21.

S.P., See re Cordell, ex parte Walsh, 6 A.L.T., 47.

Nomination Paper—Validity.]—The fact that the nomination paper of a candidate as member of a road board for a sub-division of a district, nominates him for the office of member for the district, does not render such nomination paper invalid, as being contrary to the provisions of of No. 176, Sec. 84. Regina v. Munday, ex parte Daft, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 143.

[Compare Sec. 106 of Act No. 506.]

Invalid Nomination Paper—Waiver of Objection—"Shires Statute 1869," Secs. 97, 98.]—The nomination of a candidate for office as a shire councillor, if not delivered to the returning officer, at the office of the council, is invalid "under Secs. 97 and 98 of the "Shires Statute, 1869," and the objection to such nomination is not waived by the relator proceeding in the election, after protest. Regina v. O'Dwyer, ex parte Wilson, 4 A.J.R., 151.

[NOTE.—The corresponding Secs. of Act No. 506 are Secs. 116 and 136.]

Compelling Returning Officer to Receive Nomination Paper—What Course is Proper.]—A mandamus will not be issued to compel a returning officer to receive the nomination paper of a candidate for election as a member of a road board which he had rejected and to hold an election on it. The proper course is by quo warranto. Ex parte Attenborough, in re Bent, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 103.

Duty of Returning Officer.] — Semble, per Stawell, J., that the returning officer of a district is not to take upon him to decide technical points of law as to the validity of a nomination paper of a candidate for membership of the district board, or to reject such paper for want of form; and that, if it do not afford him sufficient information he should return it to the nominators to supply any omission there may be. Regina v. Munday, ex parte Daft, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 143.

Rejection of Nomination Paper—Waiver of Objection—Act No. 506, Sec. 116.]—At an election for a borough council, a returning officer rejected a nomination paper as not being signed by the candidate. The candidate voted at the election. Rule nisi to oust the elected councillor from office made absolute. Semble the directions of Sec. 116 as to publication of the time and place for lodging nomination papers are mandatory. Regina v. Jones, ex parte Darcy, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 334; 1 A.L.T., 50.

Election—Two Persons of the Same Name on the Roll.]—There were two M. R.'s on the voter's roll, one of them (No. 162) did vote, the other (No. 170) did not vote at an election in which D. was elected by a majority of one. There was conflicting evidence as to whether two votes at the election were not given under the name of M. R. Held that if two persons did vote under the name of M. R. the election was invalid, but the Court gave the defendant D. the option of choosing the issue of an information in the nature of a quo warranto to have the point of fact tried by a jury, or of having the rule for ouster made absolute. Regina v. Duffus 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 251.

Irregularity in Election—Polling Booth Not Kept Open the Whole Time of Election—"Local Government Act 1874," Sec. 122.]—At an election for a municipal councillor the polling booth was not kept open between the hours of 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. on the polling day, as required by Sec. 122 of the "Local Government Act 1874," but was closed half-an-hour to allow the scrutineers to get some luncheon. It was not shown that any voter was prevented altogether from voting, or did not vote by reason of not being able to v ote during the half-hour. Held on application for a rule nisi to oust, that a rule should not be granted unless it were shown that some person was injured through the irregularity; and that the mere existence of an inconvenience of this kind, which was not shown to have deprived any voter of his vote, was insufficient; and rule refused. In re Smith, ex parte Topper, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 223; 4 A.L.T., 58.

Person Elected in Place of Councillor Illegally Remaining in Office—Election Invalid.]—Where a councillor illegally remains in office his retirement creates no vacancy, and if a candidate be elected to fill the supposed vacancy made by his retirement his election is invalid, and the matter is not mended by the invitation of the returning officer for candidates to come forward and fill the vacancy. Regina v. Percy, ex parte Watson, 2 A.J.R., 122.

Councillor Disqualified Resigning—Extraordinary Election to Fill the Supposed Vacancy — Election Void.]—Regina v. Dreverman, ex parte Watson, post column .

Election—When Void—"Boroughs Statute" No. 359, Sec. 44—Councillor in Excess for a Ward—Person Elected on His Resignation.]—The Borough of Hotham was divided into three wards, and on the councillors being allotted to the wards, pursuant to Sec. 32 of the Act, six claimed to be councillors for the Middle Ward; of these three, M., F. and P. should have been the three councillors. D. claimed to be a councillor, but on an application being made to oust him, he resigned before the case was argued, and the defendant was elected in his place, and about the same time one of the three, M., F. and P., resigned or was got rid of. On information in the nature of a quo warranto, Held that D. had no right to his seat when he was elected, and had nothing to resign, and that the defendant elected in his place was in no better position, even if all the three, M., P. and F., had resigned. Regina v. Percy, 3 A.J.R., 29.

Improper Election.]—Where the returning officer tore up three ballot papers on the ground that they were informal, and G., the candidate for whom they voted, was defeated by three votes, and moved to oust W., the successful candidate, from office on the ground that the three votes ought to be added to the votes scored by G., and that one of W.'s votes was informal because the one of those who had voted for him, and whose number was 53 on the roll, had voted as No. 47, the real owner of that number not having voted, Held that the three voters having sworn that they voted for G., and no affidavit to the contrary having been produced from the returning officer, their votes must be added to G.'s; and that the number on the roll being as much a part of the description as the name, the vote which had been given under the wrong number for W. must be deducted from W.'s votes, and rule to oust W. made absolute. Regina v. Wilson, 1 A.J.R., 150.

Informal Election—Act No. 358, Sec. 97.]—On a rule to oust a councillor from office it appeared that the advertisement for the election was inserted only in an advertising supplement of a newspaper circulating in the district; and that the returning officer did not receive the nomination paper and the deposit till the morning of the nomination day, instead of the afternoon preceding. Held that the first objection was immaterial, but that the second was fatal; and rule to oust made absolute. Regina v. Miller, ex parte Nash, 1 A.J.R., 156.

Election of Mayor—Casting Vote of Chairman—Costs.]—Where a chairman gave his casting vote at an election for mayor in a case of equal voting, instead of drawing lots as required by Sec. 128 of the Act No. 184, Held that election was invalid, and that the relator was entitled to his costs. Regina v. Richard, ex parte Froggatt, N.C., 63.

Election of President—When Office Full de facto—Practice.]—A shire was divided into three ridings; at the time of the division there were nine councillors, five qualified for one riding, four for a second, and none for the third. Two out of the five and one out of the four ceased to be members, and three new councillors were elected for the third riding. At a shire meeting attended by six councillors (five forming a quorum) of which two were surplus councillors, W. was elected president. An Order in Council, subsequently gazetted, directed the three surplus councillors to retire. At another meeting of the shire, six being present, of whom S., a surplus councillor, was one, R. was elected president. Upon an order to oust R., Held that the office at the time of R.'s election was not full de facto as there was nothing to show that W. had acted as president, and that the second election was not irregular. Rule discharged. Regina v. Robinson, ex parte Torrance, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 50.

Validity of Ballot Papers—Act No. 176, Sec. 147.]—Three ballot papers delivered to voters were not signed by the returning officer. Rule nisi to oust from office, under Sec. 147 of Act No. 176, or for a quo warranto. Held that the signature on the ballot papers was not so essential under the Act that its absence rendered the election invalid. Rule refused. In re Lloyd, ex parte Leaker, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 226.

Act No. 359, Sec. 91.]—One voting paper had the names of three out of four candidates struck out, and the Christian name of the fourth only, the surname being followed by the words, "I vote for Hutton only." It appeared too that the paper was that of O'S., and that the words were written by F. on behalf of O'S., who was illiterate. Held that the ballot paper was good, and the election valid. In re Hutton, ex parte Haynes, 5 A.J.R., 135.

Ballot Papers Handed to Voters Before 9 a.m.—"Shires Statute 1869," Sec. 104.]—A rule to oust a shire councillor on the ground that the ballot papers had been handed to some of the voters shortly after 8 o'clock, instead of at 9 o'clock, as required by Sec. 104 of the "Shires Statute 1869," was refused, as there was a statement in the returning officer's affidavit that he held the poll from 9 to 4 o'clock, and it did not expressly appear that the voters who obtained the ballot papers voted before 9 o'clock. Regina v. Ross, ex parte Rettigan, 4 A.J.R., 166.

[NOTE.—Sec. 122 is the corresponding Section of Act No. 506.]

Names of Candidates Not put in Alphabetical Order in Ballot Paper—Act No. 506, Sec. 122.]—Ouster of a councillor was granted on the ground that the names of the councillors were not printed in alphabetical order as required by Sec. 122 of the "Local Government Act," No. 506. Regina v. Pooley, ex parte Scarlett, 6 A.L.T., 160.

Test of Qualification as Regards Property.]—The best test as to the property qualification of a borough councillor is the rate book. Other tests are to take the testimony of witnesses for the relator; to take the testimony of witnesses for the councillor, and again to take the average of the value of the property sworn to by witnesses for both. Where the rate collector, on his own authority, reduced the rates in respect of a property on account of certain buildings having been removed, and returned a portion of the rate paid in consequence, Held that the councillor having paid him the full rates was entitled to the benefit of such payment; and that the Court was inclined to deal liberally with a person supporting a bona fide claim. Regina v. Power, ex parte Irons, 2 A.J.R., 107.

Payment of Rates—"Boroughs Statute," No. 359, Sec. 46—Repeal of Previous Statute.]—An action was brought against M. to recover a penalty for sitting as a councillor without possessing the due qualification. The action was brought under Sec. 46 of the "Boroughs Statute 1869," No. 359, which provided that "no person shall be entitled to be enrolled in any year in respect of any rateable property unless before or on the 10th day of June aforesaid all such rates as shall under the provisions hereof have been made in respect of such property shall have been paid." The rates that had not been paid by M. had been made under a previous Act which the Act of 1869 had repealed. Held that there was no offence committed against the Act No. 359, and that M. was not disqualified from sitting, and rule to enter a verdict for plaintiff discharged. Scotchmer v. Michael, 2 A.J.R., 118.

Act No. 358, Secs. 43, 57, 157—Part of Qualification Parted With.]—P. was on June 20th rated at an amount allowing a clear surplus of £5 over the necessary amount of qualification, viz., £20. Afterwards he let part of this property (rated at £16) to a bank which erected a building on it, and in respect of which the bank was rated at £10. Held that the reduction to be made was the value of the land when so let, which would have allowed a sufficient margin for the necessary qualification, and not at its present improved value owing to the erection. Rule for ouster of P. from office discharged. Regina v. Perrin, ex parte M'Intyre, 5 A.J.R., 138.

Uncertificated Insolvent—"Municipal Corporations Act 1863," Sec. 33.]—K. was insolvent in 1855 and his certificate suspended for twelve months, and he took no steps to obtain his certificate. In 1859 he became insolvent again and obtained his certificate as for that insolvency. In 1862, being again insolvent, his certificate was suspended for six weeks and granted at the end of that time. On the 14th of May he was elected a councillor of a borough, and on the 31st of May, 1866, he obtained his certificate as to his first insolvency in 1855. Held that K. was an uncertificated insolvent within the meaning of the "Municipal Corporations Act 1863," No. 184, Sec. 33, at the time of his election, and was, therefore, incapable of being elected a councillor. Regina v. Knipe, 3 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 46.

27 Vic., No. 184, Sec. 34—Member Printing for Council.]—A member of a municipal council, a printer, who executed the printing required by the council, was held disqualified as a councillor, although his printing office was the only one within twenty-five miles round, and the work was done bonâ fide at the usual rates; and an order nisi to oust him was made absolute, with costs. Regina v. Haverfield, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 228.

[NOTE.—The corresponding Section of Act No. 506 is Sec. 54.]

Not Being on the Burgess Roll—No. 184, Sec. 32.]—In January, 1868, T. was elected a borough councillor. He had not paid his rates by the 30th of June previous, and was, therefore, not placed on the roll; but on the 28th of June he paid his rates. Held, on rule nisi for quo warranto, that under Sec. 32 of No. 184, a councillor must be entitled to be placed on the burgess roll for the time being in force before he is qualified for election; and that as T. was not so entitled, not having paid his rates, the rule must be made absolute. Regina v. Thompson, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 34.

Qualification for being a Member of a Road Board—Act No. 176, Sec. 33.]—In re Cope, ex parte Egan, post under LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

Payment of Deposit by Dishonoured Cheque—"Boroughs Statute," Sec. 80.]—Where a councillor had paid the deposit of £10 required from a candidate by Sec. 80 of the "Boroughs Statute," No. 359, by a cheque which was dishonoured, the Court made absolute a rule to oust him from office. Regina v. Weickhardt, 1 A.J.R., 78.

Act No. 506, Secs. 54, 71—Candidate Interested in a Contract with a Municipality.]—D. at the time of his nomination entered into a contract with a shire council to lease certain land from them for seven years and subject to certain covenants in the lease. D. was elected but did not take his seat. Afterwards D. endeavoured by a letter to resign, and his resignation being accepted, an extraordinary election was held to fill the supposed extraordinary vacancy at which D. was again elected. On a rule to oust from office, Held that D. was interested within the meaning of Sec. 54 of Act No. 506, and did not become a councillor either de jure or de facto at the first election, and that as he had nothing to resign there was no extraordinary vacancy, and that, therefore, the second election was void. Rule absolute. Regina v. Drevermann, ex parte Watson, 6 A.L.T., 141.

Rule to Oust, Who May Obtain—Relator Who Has Voted.]—A person who has voted for a candidate whom he knows to be disqualified, cannot afterwards proceed to set aside the election. When, however, such person, although he has voted at the election, did not acquiesce in considering the candidate's qualification sufficient, he may proceed to set aside the election. Regina v. Eddy, ex parte Forbes, 2 A.J.R., 83.

Rule to Oust—Heading.]—"In the Supreme Court" is a sufficient heading in a rule to oust a councillor. Regina v. Joseph, ex parte Oliver, 6 A.L.T., 85.

Councillor declared Elected not Taking Seat—Rule to Oust—"Local Government Act 1874," Sec. 71—Mandamus.]—An application under Sec. 71 of the "Local Government Act 1874," is not the proper proceeding to annul an election where a councillor declared duly elected has not taken his seat or done any act which would have the effect of filling the seat. The proper proceeding is by way of mandamus to compel the council to hold an election. Re Cordell, ex parte Walsh, 6 A.L.T., 47.

Rule to Oust—Quo Warranto.]—A councillor was elected to fill a vacancy, there being two vacancies, but he was not elected specifically for either vacancy. One of the councillors in whose place the new ones were elected should have retired within twelve months of the election and it was sought to obtain a rule to oust one of the new ones eighteen months after the election. Held that the rule to oust could not be granted, having been made more than six months from the time of the election, and that the proper course was by quo warranto; and a rule for quo warranto granted on payment of costs. Regina v. Donaldson, 1 A.J.R., 162.

Practice—Rule to Oust—Grounds.]—It is not enough for a rule nisi to oust a councillor to state that he was unduly elected, but such rule must state fully the grounds of disqualification, and leave to amend such a rule was refused. Regina v. McDougall, ex parte Dingsdale, 4 A.J.R., 153.

Practice.]—Where answering affidavits state facts which raise a suspicion that a relator, in an application to oust from office, is put forward by a disappointed candidate, who has disqualified himself by waiver and acquiescence from raising the objection, the Court before granting a rule absolute for ouster, requires an affidavit that there was no collusion between such person and the relator. Regina v. Jones, ex parte Darcy, 5 V.L R. (L.,) 334; 1 A.L.T., 50.

Amendment of Rule and Affidavits—Costs.]—When a rule nisi to oust a member of a "district" board, and the affidavits in support of the application called the board a "road" board, the error was allowed to be amended at the hearing of the argument, but costs were given against the parties amending. Regina v. Munday, ex parte Daft, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 143.

Rule to Oust — Improperly Elected Municipal Councillor Refusing to Resign—Costs.]—Where an improperly elected councillor had not acted or taken his seat, but had refused to resign, Held that he should pay the costs of a rule to oust him, which was made absolute. Regina v. Wilson, 1 A.J.R., 150.

Rule to Oust—Resignation—Costs.]—A borough councillor, who has been elected without any qualification, cannot, by resigning after a rule to oust has been obtained, relieve himself from the costs of making the rule absolute. Regina v. Peck, 4 A.J.R., 117.

"Melbourne Corporation Act," Sec. 35—6 Vic., No. 7, Sec. 49—Mayor-Elect—Retiring Councillor.]—A councillor whose turn it was to go out of office on November 1st, was, on October 9th, chosen to be mayor-elect. He did not take advantage of the enlarged term of tenure given by Sec. 35 of the "Melbourne Corporation Act," No. 178, but retired, and was elected, notwithstanding the protest of the other candidate that by virtue of Sec. 35 of No. 178, he was already a councillor. Held that the office of "mayor-elect" was not an office within the meaning of Sec. 49 of 6 Vic., No. 7, so as to disqualify him from being elected to fill the vacancy caused by his retirement; that though he became a supernumerary councillor ex officio, he still had to go out by rotation, as elected councillor, and that the turn to go out does not then fall upon the councillor whose turn it would be to go out after him. Ex parte Bent, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 246.

Penalties For—24 Vic., No. 114.]—C. and M. were proprietors and publishers of a paper circulating in a district of which C. was elected a member of the municipal council. Before and after the election the council sent advertisements to the paper and subscribed to it. Shortly before the election, while negotiations were pending between C., M. and one M'L. to let their office to M'L. as a job printing office, the council accepted M'L.'s tender to print an electoral roll without C.'s or M.'s knowledge, and just before the election M'L. took the office and printed the roll, but C. and M. derived no benefit nor ratified the contract, and made no entry of it. C. was elected a member. Held that C. had incurred no penalties under the Act, since the purchase of the paper and sending advertisements by the Council were not within the meaning of the Act, and the Council's contract was not executed by C. O'Dwyer v. Casey, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 85.

(B) Corporations other than Municipal.

"Quorum."]—A "quorum" of a body means those present, when all should and might be present; not a casual meeting of the required number of the body. Brougham v. Melbourne Banking Corporation, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 214, 222; 2 A.L.T., 81.

Power to Acquire Property in Violation of Charter.]—Semble, a corporation may have a good title to property acquired in violation of its charter. London Chartered Bank v. Hayes, 2 V.R. (E.,) 104; 2 A.J.R., 60.

(c) Liability of Corporations on Contracts and Otherwise.

Act No. 506, Secs. 169, 173—Position of Person Contracting—Formality of Meeting.]—The outside public are not required in contracting with a shire council to ascertain that all the internal formalities have been complied with, but they are bound to know the extent of the powers conferred by the Act of incorporation, and to see that the formalities essential to the constitution of the contract itself are complied with—e.g., that the seal is attached and duly attested. Where, therefore, a contractor was called before a meeting of councillors sufficient to form a quorum, and purporting to act as a duly constituted meeting, and was told that his tender was accepted, Held that he was at liberty to assume that every form necessary to constitute a meeting had been observed. Shire of Gisborne v. Murphy, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 63; 2 A.L.T., 118.

Contract Not Under Seal—Fraud.]—Courts of Equity do not allow corporations to use their incompetency to act without seal, to obtain the advantages of incomplete bargains, and then repudiate them in a manner which would operate as fraud. Connolly v. Shire of Beechworth, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 1; for facts see S.C. post under Specific Performance; and see S.P. Trainor v. Council of Kilmore, post column 230.

Contract for Erecting a Dam—Municipal Corporation.] — In contracts with corporations, other than joint stock companies, all the formalities required in their execution should be observed. The affixing the seal of the corporation affords all members a protection on which they rely against the assent of the whole body being improperly pledged, and an objection to a contract on the ground of the seal not being affixed should be held valid if urged. In an action against a corporation for the erection of a large dam, a verdict was given for plaintiff, and a rule nisi for nonsuit was obtained on the ground inter alia that the contract was not sealed. Held, that since the contract sued on was dependent wholly on the instrument, and it was not for any matter essential to the corporation or for carrying on its business, and for work executory and not executed, it should have been under seal. Rule made absolute. Barker v. Municipal Council of Clunes, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 315.

Attorney's Bill of Costs—Retainer Not Under Seal.]—Where a solicitor's retainer was not under seal but the solicitor was appointed by a resolution of a council, Held that a retainer under seal was essential to enable plaintiff to recover on his bill of costs. Shire of Colac v. Butler, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 137; 1 A.L.T., 3.

Where a seal of a company is attached to the document appointing a solicitor, the Court will presume it was duly attached. Jones v. Star Freehold Company, ante column 160.

"Mining Company's Act," No. 409, Sec. 48.]—A bill of sale given by a mining company was sealed with the company's seal, but was not so sealed in the presence of two directors as required by the rules of the company; these rules, however, did not require attestation by the directors. Held that, under Sec. 48 of the Act No. 409. the bill of sale was binding on the company. Newey v. Rutherford, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 340.

(c) When Sealing Unnecessary.

Contract Acted on—Consideration Executed.]—When the consideration for a release by an official assignee of an insolvent's equity of redemption to a corporation (mortgagee) is an agreement not under seal by the corporation to abstain from proving any portion of its debt, and such agreement has been acted on by accepting the release, Held by Privy Council, reversing Molesworth, J. (3 V.L.R., E., 190,) that the corporation is bound thereby, and that the consideration has not failed. Melbourne Banking Corporation v. Brougham, L.R., 4 App. Cas., 156.

Corporation Taking Benefit Under Agreement not Under Seal—Not Allowed to Repudiate it.]—Where a corporation kept possession of certain land, the subject of an agreement for sale, even although such agreement was not under seal, the Full Court Held, apart from the ground of part performance (on which ground Chapman, J., had held they were liable,) that the corporation were liable for the purchase money, as it must be presumed they took the land under the agreement, and that, therefore, it was only just that they should pay for it. Trainor v. Council of Kilmore, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 293, 301, 303, 306.

Executed Contract—Liability for Nuisance Committed Under.]—A borough council entered into an agreement with B. that he should receive nightsoil from the nightmen and dispose of it in a certain reserve. The corporation supervised the disposal of the nightsoil in the garden, and subsequently returned to B. a deposit which had been required from him as security for the due performance of it. The contract, though signed by B., was not sealed by the council. A nuisance was committed by the improper disposal of the nightsoil, and plaintiff sued the council for injury caused to him by such nuisance. Held that the council having ordered the work to be done, supervised, its execution, exercised control over it, accepted the work when done, and returned the deposit to the contractor, could not be permitted to say that there was no contract; and that they were liable. Weir v. Mayor, &c., of East Collingwood, 2 V.R. (L.,) 32; 2 A.J.R., 39.

The Court presumes that, when a professional gentleman says he appears on behalf of a Corporation, he is properly authorised. Rule for a prohibition applied for, on the ground that the attorney by whom a company was represented in the Police Court did not prove any retainer under seal—refused. Regina v. Call, ex parte Gillow, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 216; N.C., 15.

"Town and Country Police Act 1854," No. 14, Sec. 5, Par. 19—License not Under Seal.]—K. obtained a license, not under seal, from a Municipal Corporation to slaughter cattle. This was issued subject to payment of certain market dues, which were not paid, and security for paving, flagging, &c., prescribed by the Act No. 14, was not taken by the Corporation. This license was revoked, on the ground that K. had not observed conditions. K. was summoned and convicted. A rule nisi to prohibit execution was obtained. Held, that the license should have been under seal, but that the one actually given was a substitute for what might have been given under the Act, and that K. should have conformed to its terms. Rule discharged. Ex parte Kettle, in re McIntyre, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 21.

Debentures Secured Upon a Special Rate—Act No. 184, Secs. 218, 239.]—A. sued on a debenture issued by the defendant corporation upon a special rate. The defendants demurred on the ground that they were not liable on the debentures except as to the amount of the special rate in their hands. Held that the fact that a special rate was assigned as a security did not relieve the corporation from liability as to its general funds, unless it was provided that that fund (the special rate,) was to form the sole mode of payment; that the words of Sec. 239 of the Act No. 184, providing for the appointment of a receiver "without prejudice to any other mode of recovery," pointed to the conclusion that the loan was intended to be a debt of the corporation, and that plaintiff was entitled to maintain his action. Alroe v. Mayor of Sebastopol, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 217; 1 A.L.T., 22.

Ratification — Compromise.] — The ratification by the directors of a bank of an agreement for compromise entered into by the bank's solicitor does not bind the bank if the corporate seal be not attached. Shiel v. Colonial Bank of Australasia, 1 V.R. (E.,) 40; 1 A.J.R., 30.

(D) PROCEEDINGS BY AND AGAINST CORPORATIONS.

Parties.]—Where a corporation is doing an illegal act, the councillors who persist in the illegality are proper parties to a suit to restrain the illegality. Attorney-General v. Shire of Hampden, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 221.

Suit to Restrain Injury to Strset—Parties.]—Where a municipal corporation is charged with the care and management of a street within its boundaries, it may, as representing the ratepayers, sue to restrain irreparable injury thereto without joining the Attorney-General as a plaintiff. Mayor, &c., of Ballarat East v. Victoria United Gold Mining Company, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 10.

Suit to Restrain Mining.]—Semble per Molesworth J. The Attorney-General, a municipal corporation, and the owner of private property, cannot join in an information and bill to restrain mining for the different injuries, the one complaining of removal of gold, the other of injury to the streets, and the third of injury to his private property. Attorney-General v. Rogers, 1 V.R. (E.,) 132, 139; 1 A.J.R., 120, 149.

Joinder of Officer for Discovery.]—An officer of a corporation may be made a defendant to a suit for purposes of discovery merely. B., as agent for the defendant bank, was made a defendant merely for the purposes of discovery. Held he was a necessary party. Droop v. Colonial Bank of Australasia, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 7, 12.

Action for Slander—Newspaper Company Registered Under Act No. 190—Act No. 212, Secs. 11, 12, 19.]—A newspaper company registered as a corporation under Act No. 190 cannot, as a corporation, make the affidavit required by a newspaper proprietor under Act No. 212, and cannot enter into the recognizances prescribed by Sec. 19 of that Act; it cannot therefore lawfully carry on the business of newspaper proprietors nor maintain an action for slander in such business. A plea of not guilty is sufficient to raise a defence to such action. Daily Telegraph Newspaper Company v. Berry, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 469; 1 A.L.T., 103.

Injunction to Restrain Corporation from Accepting Tenders.]—Where an injunction restraining a municipal corporation from accepting tenders for contracts was obtained ex parte upon the statement that tenders had been called for, when, in fact, instructions had been given to its officer to call for tenders, which he had not carried out, Held, as there was therefore no pressing emergency, and an omission to state all the facts, the injunction should be dissolved. Attorney-General v. Shire of Wimmera, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 24; 1 A.L.T., 125.

Practice.]—Defendants cannot at the hearing for the first time raise an objection that the authority of a corporate plaintiff's solicitor to institute a suit is not proved to be under the corporate seal. Astley United Gold Mining Company v. Cosmopolitan Gold Mining Company, 4 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 96, 110.

Costs.]—Where an information, which was brought against a corporation and certain councillors who were acting illegally, stated several acts which appeared unwarrantable, and the defendants admitted them without palliation, Held that the relator was entitled to his costs from the defendants, but decision refused in the suit, whether they should be paid by the corporation or by the individual defendants, on the ground that the Court had merely to deal with the plaintiffs on one hand and the defendants on the other, and not with the defendants among themselves. Attorney-General v. Shire of Hampden, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 221.

Costs of Manager in Suit by Corporation.]—The costs of the attendance in the master's office of the manager of a corporate plaintiff will not be allowed, on taxation between party and party, except in so far as he attends as a witness. United Hand-in-Hand and Band of Hope Company v. National Bank of Australasia, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 271, 273.

Of Plea and Argument when Costs in the Cause.]—Where a plea is held good in law, the costs of the plea and argument will be made defendant's costs in the cause. Ramsay v. The Board of Land and Works, 5 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 16.

Dismissal of Bill—Injunction, Costs of Opposing.]—After a bill has been, on the motion of the defendant, dismissed with costs for want of prosecution, the Court cannot entertain a motion by the defendant for payment of the costs of opposing a motion for an injunction which was refused, the costs being reserved. Gourlay v. Kyte, 5 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 194.

Dismissal of Bill—Defendants Not Appearing.]—Motion for dismissal of bill with costs as to those who had answered without costs as to those who had not. Bill dismissed with costs as to all defendants. Lord v. Spence, 5 A.J.R., 99.

Where Bill Dismissed on Objection Taken at the Bar.]—Where an objection upon which a bill was dismissed was not taken by answer or demurrer, but at the bar, the Court dismissed the bill without costs. Douglas v. M'Intyre, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 249; 6 A.L.T., 90.

Costs where Objection Taken by Answer as Upon Demurrer—Costs of Defendant who is Not Required to Answer Demurrable Part of Bill.]—Where a bill is demurrable by reason of the Statute of Limitations, and the defence is not raised by demurrer or plea, but in the answer, and taken as a preliminary objection the bill was dismissed with costs against the principal defendant, and also with costs as against a defendant who was required only to answer two paragraphs not affecting the demurrable part of the bill. Kemp v. Douglas, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 92.

Dismissal of Bill for Want of Prosecution.]—See Govett v. Crooke, Thompson v. Tullidge, Flannagan v. Flannagan, and Virtue v. Cameron, post under PRACTICE AND PLEADING—In Equity—Bill.

Person Wrongly Disclaiming.]—Where a person having an interest in the subject matter of a suit when the bill is filed, puts in an answer disclaiming all interest, he is not entitled to his costs. White v. London Chartered Bank of Australia, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 33, 48.

Effect of Joinder of Innocent Parties with Guilty Ones as Plaintiffs.]—In a suit against trustees for administration and accounts a tenant for life, who had been a party to breaches of trust, was joined as a co-plaintiff with infant remaindermen who were ignorant of such breaches. Held, that under such circumstances none of the plaintiffs were entitled to their costs. Lane v. Loughnan, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 19; 2 A.L.T., 113.

Mining Company a Defendant—Manager Appearing by a Separate Counsel.]—In a suit against a mining company and its manager, if the manager has no interest distinct from the company, his appearance by a separate counsel is not justified, and he must abide his own costs. United Hand and Band of Hope Company v. Winter's Freehold Company, 3 A.J.R., 59.

A defendant, against whom no relief is sought, will not be allowed his costs, and should not inflict costs by putting in an answer. Dight v Mackay, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 163.

Persons Against Whom no Relief is Prayed Appearing.]—In a suit in which the bill prayed no relief against two defendants, who nevertheless appeared and defended the suit, Held that they should abide their own costs. Benjamin v. Wymond, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 3; 5 A.L.T., 153.

Costs of Charge of Collusion, Where not Proved.]—In a suit to set aside a conveyance on the ground of fraud and collusion with the trustees of a prior settlement, the charge of collusion was not proved against the trustee who appeared. Held that the Bill should be dismissed with costs as against him, and that the plaintiffs were not entitled to have such costs over as against two other defendants, who were condemned in the other costs of the suit. Ronalds v. Duncan, 2 V.R. (E.,) 65; 2 A.J.R., 30, 45.

Charges of Fraud.]—A charge of fraud unsustained always carries costs against the unsuccessful party to the extent to which costs were occasioned by that charge. And a defendant who has set up a charge of misrepresentation to a suit for specific performance, which charge has broken down, and where the whole evidence was directed to that charge, must pay costs. Bramley v. Parrott, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 172.

Charges of Fraud.] — General costs are not given to an unsuccessful defendant, on the ground that fraud was improperly imputed to him in the bill. Walduck v. Corbett, 4 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 48, 55.

Where there is sufficient equity stated and proved to sustain a bill, an unsuccessful charge of fraud is only a matter affecting costs. London Chartered Bank v. Lempriere, L.R. 4 P.C., 572.

2. Other Cases.

Of Abandoned Motion.]—Where a motion had been listed by a party to a suit, and, after service and before the day for hearing, notice was given to the other parties of withdrawal, and the motion had been struck out of the list, the Court refused to make an order for costs of the parties served, without notice to the party serving the notice. Warren v. Lange, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 127.

Abandoned Motion.]—After bill filed by two partners of a firm of three against the third for dissolution, and after notice of motion for an injunction to restrain defendant from dealing with the partnership assets, plaintiffs voluntarily sequestrated the estate of the firm, and neither the motion was proceeded with nor the notice countermanded. Held, that defendant was entitled to have his costs, as in case of an abandoned motion. Bates v. Loewe, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 7.

See S.C. post under PARTNERSHIP.

Where a suit, viz., a suit to recover back a sum of money paid under mistake on a dissolution of partnership, is in its nature nearly like an action at law to try a right, the costs must follow the result. Manson v. Yeo, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 187, 192.

Unnecessary Notice of Motion.]—On a motion for liberty to a receiver to bring ejectment against a person in possession of land, the subject of the suit, and for an order that the person bring into Court the title-deeds of the land, separate notices of motion were given to the person of each branch of the motion, no order for costs was made, because, as an unnecessary notice was given, one portion of the costs might be set off against the other. Royce v. Parker, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 267.

Suit to Compel Election.]—In a suit to compel election, though the defendant was not called upon to elect till the bill was sealed, he was visited with costs for litigating as to the election. Whitehead v. Whitehead, 4 A.J.R., 165.

Of Rule for Payment of Dividends to an Assignee of a Debt Assigned After the Execution of a Creditor's Deed.]—Assignments of debts after the execution of a creditor's deed are not to be encouraged, and on making absolute two rules for payment of dividends to such an assignee, and to his assignor, who retained part of his debt, costs of only one rule allowed. In re Sloman, 1 V.R. (E.,) 129.

Of Undefended Suit—Prayer for Costs.]—Where a suit is undefended, and a decree made in the terms of the prayer of the Bill, the Court will not include in the original decree an order for payment of costs by the defendant, unless there is a specific prayer for payment of them. Tyrrell v. Stewart, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 19.

Upon Appeal—Discretion of Primary Judge.]—Although on appeal the Court will entertain the question of costs, the appeal being launched on other grounds, yet a very clear case must be made out to induce the Court to interfere with the discretion of the Judge below. James v. Greenwood, 2 A.J.R., 41.

An Unsuccessful Plaintiff Refused Inspection of a Deed Until After Answer.]—A. brought a suit against trustees of a creditor's deed for payment of dividends under the deed and was, until after answer, refused inspection of the deed which at the hearing was held conclusive as to plaintiff's rights. Held that though A. was unsuccessful in the suit he was entitled to his costs up to inspection of the deed. Hermann v. French, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 15.

Effect of Correspondence Upon Costs.]—Where repeated letters before suit from the plaintiff and his solicitor to the defendant were left wholly unanswered, and the plaintiff failed to establish his case, the bill was dismissed, but without costs. Ogier v. Booth, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 160; 5 A.L.T., 109.

Writ of Distringas.]—Upon a return of a writ of distringas against the defendant bank which appeared to answer, the plaintiff moved for a rule nisi for sequestration against the bank, which was postponed until the defendant bank's motion to dismiss the writ should be heard. The Court having dismissed the writ upon such motion refused upon defendant bank's motion to make any order for costs as to bank's appearance to writ or of motion for sequestration. United Hand-in-Hand and Band of Hope Company v. National Bank of Australasia, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 8.

(1) Higher or Lower Scale.

"Common Law Procedure Statute," No. 274, Sec. 440.]—Sec. 440 applies to defendants as well as plaintiffs. Costs in an action on a bill of exchange, where £100 was the amount sued for in the writ, and jury found verdict for defendant, taxed on lower scale. Henry v. Newstead, 3 A.J.R., 42.

In an action for breach of contract the amount claimed in the writ was £50, but in the declaration the damages were laid at £120. Verdict for defendant. Costs taxed on higher scale, because alteration had been made by plaintiff himself. Sutton v. Gemmell, 3 A.J.R., 83.

Where, in a similar action, the writ claimed £150 and the declaration £100, and a verdict was returned for £56. Held that taxation should be on higher scale. Kronheimer v. Berghoff, 3 A.J.R., 83.

Amount Claimed in Writ Governs.] — In an action on a bill of exchange, where the amount claimed in the writ was £53, and the defendant obtained leave to defend, and the amount claimed in the declaration was £105, the Court held that the amount in the writ governed the case, and costs taxed on lower scale. Hornby v. Livingstone, 3 A.J.R., 117.

Act No. 274, Sec. 440.]—"The debt or damage claimed in any action," referred to in Sec. 440, is the amount named in the writ and not in the particulars of demand. The writ claimed £200, and the particulars of demand showed a balance of £92. Costs taxed on higher scale. Moorhead v. Reidle, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 11.

"Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," Sec. 440.]—The proper construction to be put upon Sec. 440 of the "Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," is that where the plaintiff's claim does not exceed £100, the costs of the successful party, whether plaintiff or defendant, and whatever may be the amount recovered, must be taxed on the lower scale; and that whenever less than £50 has been recovered, whatever may have been the amount claimed, costs must in this case also be taxed upon the lower scale. This applies only to cases in which Supreme Court costs are recoverable, and where the question is between the higher and lower scales, and does not affect cases within the "County Court Statute." Parsons v. McEwan, 4 A.J.R., 157.

Act No. 274, Sec. 440.]—An action for false imprisonment was brought in the Supreme Court, and resulted in a verdict for plaintiff, damages £75, which by consent were reduced to £20. The cause of action arising in New Zealand it could not be brought in the County Court. The Prothonatary refused to tax except on County Court scale. A Supreme Court Judge in Chambers refused to certify for Supreme Court costs on the higher scale. On rule nisi for taxation on the higher scale, the Court refused to interfere. Gonerson v. Muir, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 286; 1 A.L.T., 41

Act No. 274, Sec. 440.]—Plaintiff brought an action against defendant claiming £500. To the first count defendant pleaded a set-off exceeding £300, and obtained a verdict for £56. On the second count the plaintiff obtained a verdict for £25. Held that costs were to be taxed on the lower scale. Tattersall v. Slater, 5 A.L.T., 18.

Discretion of Judge.]—The Court will not interfere with the discretion of the Judge who tried the case, as to granting a certificate for costs on the higher sale. Moore v. Nolan, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 465.

Action for Slander—Plea of Justification Not Proved.]—Defendant pleaded justification, but the Court held that the plea was not proved, and a verdict was returned for plaintiff with £5 damages. Held that costs of the action should be taxed on the higher scale. Byrne v. Lewis, 6 A.L.T., 116.

Suggestion to Enable Plaintiff to Obtain Higher Scale of Costs—"Common Law Procedure Statute," No. 274, Sec. 440, Schedule 39—Sec. 429.]—Rule nisi to enter a suggestion on the record to enable plaintiff to obtain the higher scale of costs in an action of trespass. The action was removed from the County Court into the Supreme Court by certiorari and the plaintiff got a verdict. The Judge certified for costs on the higher scale, Schedule 39 of No. 274, but the Prothonotary refused to tax on that scale unless plaintiff obtained a certificate that trespass was "wilful and malicious" (Sec. 429,) which the Judge refused to grant. At the trial a letter was proved warning defendant not to trespass, but it was uncertain and a matter of contest whether this letter came to defendant before or after the trespass. The suggestion was to enter this notice as before trespass. Held that such a suggestion might be traversed and Rule discharged. Dunn v. Walduck, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 41.

Allowing Preliminary Objection.]—No Court, in allowing a preliminary objection, ever gives costs. Regina v. Cogdon, 2 V.R. (L.,) 134; 2 A.J.R., 84.

Person Taking Technical Objection.]—An objection, though technical, if taken at the proper time, generally entitles the successful objector to his costs. In re Phelan, 3 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 1.

Of Defendant Causing Case to Become a Remanet.]—A defendant, who had obtained a transfer of a cause from the list for trial by juries of four, to that by juries of twelve, after the prescribed time for such an application, on terms of paying the costs of and occasioned by the application, was held liable to pay the costs occasioned by the cause being made a remanet to the next sittings. Ray v. Synnot, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 112.

Of Interrogatories—Interrogatories Not Used.]—The costs of interrogatories not used at the trial by the party delivering them, should in ordinary cases be disallowed, unless the application for interrogatories has been an act of prudence on the part of the attorney, for the omission of which he would be liable to an action of negligence. Per Higinbotham, J. (in Chambers.) English, Scottish, and Australian Chartered Bank v. Adcock, 3 A.L.T. 27.

Costs of Claimant not Proceeding to Trial—"Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," Sec. 191.]—Per Stawell, C. J. (in Chambers.) The Court has power, under Sec. 191 of the "Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," to award costs against a claimant failing to proceed to trial of an issue. Caton v. Oriental Bank, 3 A.L.T., 104.

Of Amendment to Cure a Nonsuit.]—Where on a nonsuit point the plaintiff declined to amend at the trial, but obtained leave to apply to the Court in Banco to amend, so as to cure the nonsuit, if the Court in Banco should consider amendment necessary, and the Court in Banco did consider such amendment necessary, on the argument of the rule nisi, and that the objection was fatal unless the plaintiff amended, Held that under the circumstances the plaintiff should have leave to amend, and without payment by him of the costs of the trial or of the rule. Ross v. Adelaide Insurance Company, 1 V.R. (L.,) 232; 1 A.J.R., 170.

Of Appeal From Nonsuit.]—A successful appellant against a nonsuit is entitled to his costs of appeal, though he made no application in the Court below to set aside the nonsuit. Rule v. Lobbe, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 427.

(c) Under "Judicature Act 1883," and "Supreme Court Rules 1884."

Rules of Supreme Court, August, 1884—Rule 6 (a) Action of Ejectment.]—Per Williams J. (in Chambers.) Rule 6 (a) of August, 1884, does not apply to actions in ejectment. Rudduck v. Clarke, 6 A.L.T., 45.

Application in Chambers—Powsr of Judge to Fix Costs.]—Per Holroyd, J. (in Chambers.) A Judge in Chambers has no power without the consent of both sides to fix the amount of the costs of an interlocutory application in Chambers. Freehold Investment and Banking Company v. Thompson, 6 A.L.T., 65.

Discretion of Judge in Chambers as to Costs "Judicature Act 1883," Sec. 22—Ordsr 65, Rule 1.]—Where a plaintiff made an application for the costs of attending a summons under Sec. 43 of the "County Court Statute 1869," Held, per Higinbotham J. (in Chambers,) that the combined effect of Sec. 22 of the "Judicature Act 1883," and Order 65, Rule 1, was to allow a Judge in Chambers to exercise the full discretion now vested in the Court with regard to costs, and granted the application. Fahey v. Ivey and Kennedy, 6 A.L.T., 26.

Jurisdiction as to Costs of Judge in Chambers—Act No. 761, Sec. 22.]—Per Williams, J. A Judge in Chambers has power to deal with costs under Sec. 22 of Act No. 761. Coulson v. Campbell, 6 A.L.T., 89.

Taxation of Solicitors Bills of Costs, Generally.]—See Solicitor.

When Taxable.]—Where personal representatives have actually paid costs, and an agreement has been effected by which certain items were to be allowed, and the master was to "moderate" others, and a sum of £150 was struck off, Sembls, per Molesworth, J., that the whole costs were liable to taxation. Held, on appeal, that the striking off of the sum of £150, in lieu of moderation, was a waiver of the right (if any) to have the whole costs taxed. Attorney-General v. Huon, 7 V.L.R. (Eq.,) 30, 39, 45; 2 A.L.T., 138.

Subject Matter Within County Court Jurisdiction.]—Where value of subject matter of suit in the Supreme Court is under £500, costs in such a suit should be taxed on the County Court scale. Cunningham v Gundry, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 51.

Transfer from County Court — "County Court Statute," Sec. 44.]—By virtue of Sec. 44 of the "County Court Statute 1869," No. 345, if a defendant removes a cause from the County Court to the Supreme Court, and the plaintiff recover a verdict for any amount, the plaintiff is entitled to his full costs, as between party and party, without any Judge's certificate, rule, or order, and free from the effect of any privative statute, or of those which direct that costs shall be taxed on different scales, according to the amount recovered. Gerard v. Kreitmayer, 2 V. R. (L.,) 174; 2 A.J.R., 112.

Re-Taxing—How Dispensed With.]—Where in an action in which costs have been already taxed as between party and party, and under such taxation costs have been paid or are payable to one party, and such party then changes his attorney, if he thinks the items already taxed as between party and party should not be re-taxed, he need not consent to tax within the month mentioned in 11 Vic., No. 33, but may wait till the month has expired, or may go before a Judge within the month, and stating the special circumstances of the case as the reason why the items already taxed should not be re-taxed, and obtain such special order as may be proper under the circumstances. Ex parte Mouatt, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 339.

Summons to Review Taxation.]—Upon a summons to review taxation the party seeking to review should have his costs, if successful, in principle, although the amount gained be small. Hardy v. Wilson, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 135.

Taxation — Costs of — Change of Attorney.]—Where under a taxation of costs in an action as between party and party costs have been paid or become payable to one party, and such party then changes his attorney, and within the month mentioned in 11 Vic., No. 33, has the costs taxed as between attorney and client, and the Prothonotary re-taxes the whole bill as it is; the items already taxed as between party and party must be included in such bill, in order that the propriety of the extra costs may be judged of by the taxing-officer; and the costs of taxation will depend, not on the bill of extra charges only, but on whether there is, or is not, a reduction of one-sixth of the whole bill. Ex parte Mouatt, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 339.

Where the Prothonotary in taxing costs made an affidavit showing "that he had exercised a discretion, and had in fact allowed only so much as, in his opinion, the plaintiff would have been entitled to, had the issues on which he succeeded been the only ones on which the parties went to trial," the Court refused to interfere, although it was of opinion that the taxation was inconsistent. Bowie v. Wilson, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 252.

Of Abortive Trial.]—The costs of an abortive trial should be disallowed. When, therefore, at a trial the jury were discharged, and the case set down for a second trial at the same sittings, and on the second trial a verdict was found for the plaintiff, he was nevertheless disallowed the expenses of his witnesses for attending the Court five days previous to the abortive trial. Finlayson v. Adelaide Fire and Marine Assurance Company, 1 A.J.R., 116.

"Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," Sec. 141 —Effect of.]—Sec. 141 of the "Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," merely prescribes the method of obtaining costs of the day, &c., and does not award them as a matter of course, and a rule for costs drawn up under this section will be set aside, if there be a reasonable ground shown for withdrawing the record. Searle v. Hackett, 2 A.L.T., 88. Confirmed on appeal.

Certificate—Delay.]—A plaintiff recovered 1s. damages in an action for libel, and immediately afterwards applied to the presiding Judge for a certificate for costs. The Judge reserved his decision, and twenty-six days afterwards granted the certificate. On an application to set aside the certificate on the ground that he was only empowered to give the certificate immediately, and not to allow such a long time to elapse between the application and the grant of the certificate, Held that the Judge was not bound to give the certificate at once; that the defendant being present when the decision was reserved, if he had wished to object should have done so at once, and that the certificate should not be set aside. Henderson v. Daily Telegraph Company, 2 V.R. (L.,) 201; 2 A.J.R., 118.

Certificate for Costs—Informal.]—An informal or insufficient certificate for costs is a mere nullity, and need not be set aside. Noyes v. Robertson, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 195.

Trespass—No Certificate at Trial—Act No. 274, Sec. 429—Act No. 345, Sec. 41—Order to Tax.]—In an action for trespass, where the plaintiff recovered less than £10, the Judge refused at the trial a certificate of costs, under Sec. 429 of No. 274. A subsequent application was made for a certificate under Sec. 41 of Act No. 345, which was refused; plaintiff then obtained an order to tax his costs under the County Court scale. On a rule nisi to set aside the last-mentioned order, Held, that Sec. 41 of No. 345 does not profess to repeal Sec. 429 of Act No. 274, and there was no repeal by implication, and that as the certificate required by 3 and 4 Vict., Cap. 24, had not been obtained, the order to tax costs was a nullity, and there could be no waiver of it. Rule absolute. Pearce v. Thomas, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 125; 2 A.L.T., 137.

In Action for Trespass—Certificate—3 & 4 Will. IV., Cap. 42, Sec. 32—8 & 9 Will. III., Cap. 11.]—The Act 8 & 9 Will. III. Cap. 11, which enables a Judge to give a certificate that there was reason for joining a defendant who succeeds, so as to deprive him of costs, is in force in this colony, but applies only to actions for pure trespass; but the provisions in Sec. 32 of the Act 3 & 4 Will. IV., Cap. 42, which is more extensive, have not been incorporated in the "Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," and a Judge, therefore, cannot give such a certificate in actions for trespass on the case. Dakin v. Heller, 4 V.L.R. (L..) 114.

Certificate for Costs in Action to Try a Right.]—Gill v. Ellerman, post under TRESPASS—To Land, &c.

By Plaintiff Resident in New South Wales.]—A plaintiff resident in New South Wales need not give security for costs, as the law of that colony, allowing a judgment of any other colony to be registered and enforced there, renders such security unnecessary. Martin v. McDonough, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 37.

Applications for Security for Costs—Act No. 274, Sec. 441—Act No. 345, Sec. 43.]—Per Higinbotham, J. (in Chambers.) Under Sec. 441 of Act No. 274, applications for security for costs must be made before issue joined, and the provisions of that Section extend to applications under Sec. 43 of Act No. 345; where defendant has sufficient property in New South Wales to pay defendant's costs, no order for security will be made. Reeve v. Tuthill, 2 A.L.T., 146.

No security for costs can be required from a plaintiff if he is actually in Victoria, even though it appeared that the plaintiff had formerly lived in New Zealand, and her residence in Victoria was not likely to be permanent. Brooks v. Smith, 2 A.L.T, 147.

Who Need Not Give.]—Per Higinbotham, J. (in Chambers.) A person recently released from prison, who is in destitute circumstances, and who brings an action for his own benefit, is not liable to give security for costs, provided that he permanently resides within the jurisdiction of the Court. Main v. Donald, 6 A.L.T., 23.

The omission to set out the address of the next friend will not entitle the defendant to insist upon security for costs. Graham v. Gibson, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 103.

Of the Crown.]—The rule as to costs—"That where the Attorney-General might at the hearing be called upon to pay costs had he been a private individual, there he ought not to receive costs"—applies also before the hearing, on a motion by plaintiff to dismiss his own bill. Barber v. Barter, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 153.

Per Higinbotham, J. (in Chambers.) Although the crown solicitor is a civil servant, and paid an annual salary by the Crown for all work done by him on behalf of Her Majesty, he is entitled to receive the costs incurred by him in opposing a rule nisi for a mandamus on behalf of an inspector of police. Ex parte Slack, 6 A.L.T., 23.

Costs Against Crown.]—Where the Crown has not unequivocally admitted the right of a petitioner, but has put him to prove his case, and put forward certain objections which were given up at the hearing, costs will be given against the Crown. Allnutt v. The Queen, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 135.

Attorney-General—Administration Suit.]—In an administration suit by Attorney-General claiming the estate for the Crown, inquiries were directed as to next of kin. The Attorney-General then refused to go on with the suit, as the Crown had no interest. Semble, the claim of the Crown having failed, the Attorney-General was not entitled to his costs of suit. Attorney-General v. Huon, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 119.

Attorney-General.] — Where the Attorney-General sues for revenue purposes, or for the recovery of Crown property, and fails, he will not be allowed costs out of the property sued for. Attorney-General v. Huon, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 182; 3 A.L.T., 131.

Where the Attorney-General instituted a suit for administration of an intestate's estate, but on the appearance of the next of kin, who proved their claims, though not parties to the cause, withdrew from the suit, his costs were not allowed. Ibid.

Except in cases arising out of charities, the Attorney-General is placed in the same position as a private individual as to costs. Ibid.

Agent's Charges—Commissioner's Fees—Taking Evidence on Commission.]—See Anderson v. Berridge, post under EVIDENCE—Commission for Examination of Witnesses.

Against Borough Councillor of Rule to Oust.]—See Regina v. Peck, 4 A.J.R., 117, ante column 228.

Of Official Assignee.]—An official assignee who takes no interest in property settled upon the wife of an insolvent, but who is made a party to a suit respecting such property, is entitled to his costs against the plaintiff. Woodward v. Jennings, 1 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 1, 5.

Of Official Assignee.]—An official assignee of a person taking a beneficial interest under a settlement, who refuses, when applied to, to become a co-plaintiff, but does not then disclaim, and is therefore necessarily made a defendant, is not entitled to his costs. Ibid.

And see cases post under INSOLVENCY—Trustees and Official Assignees, their Rights, &c.

Public Body—Road Board.] —For circumstances in which the Court refused to give costs against a road board as a public body, see Lindsay v. Tullaroop District Road Board, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 61.

Married Woman—No Separate Estate.] — Where a wife is a co-defendant in a suit by official assignee or her husband, to set aside a conveyance as fraudulent and void, the wife having no

See also S.P., Shiels v. Drysdale, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 126, post under HUSBAND AND WIFE—Wife's Rights, &c.—In other cases.

Married Woman — Separate Property Without Power of Anticipation.]—The estate of a married woman settled to her separate use without power of anticipation cannot in anticipation be charged with costs. Webster v. Yorke, 6 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 294, 301.

Incumbrancer of Principal Defendant—Suit for Specific Performance.]—An incumbrancer from the principal defendant will not be treated differently to him in the matter of costs. Stewart v. Ferrari, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 200.

Foreigner Ignorant of English Language and Law.] —Where a foreigner, ignorant of the English language and laws, had for some time worked a portion of the land of a mining company under a parol agreement with the directors, and subsequently entered into a parol agreement with the manager to work other part of the company's land on tribute, which subsequent agreement was afterwards repudiated by the company, a suit by him for specific performance of the agreement having been dismissed he was not mulcted in costs. Chun Goon v. Reform Gold Mining Company, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 128, 154; 3 A.L.T., 137.

Trustees and Mortgagees—Appeal for Costs.]—As regards trustees and mortgagees the question of costs is one of contract, not of discretion, and trustees and mortgagees are not to be deprived of their right to costs, except for some culpable conduct, of the existence or non-existence of which an appellate Court is at liberty to judge. Per Stawell, C.J. Dryden v. Dryden, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 177, 181; 4 A.L.T., 25.

Number of Counsel — Demurrer — Trial.] — In taxing costs as between party and party, only two counsel are allowed for on the argument of demurrers, and then only in heavy cases, and the fact of there being cross demurrers is not a special circumstance which will warrant the allowance of a greater number. And at the trial, three counsel will, in heavy cases, be allowed for on taxation. Young v. Ballarat Water Commissioners, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 14; 1 A.L.T., 133.

Refreshers.]—Refreshers will be allowed to one counsel for attending on each day occupied by the jury in deliberating upon their verdict, where the case is of such a nature that the jury are likely to need the direction of the Court at any time. Ibid.

Taxation—Act No. 294, Sec. 440, Sch. 39.]—Per Higinbotham, J. (in Chambers.) The words in Sec. 39 "where costs are taxed on the lower scale the fees on briefs shall be allowed proportionally," necessarily involve a reduction of the reasonable and proper fee, proportional to the prevailing difference between the higher scale and lower scale, i.e., a difference of one-half. Everingham v. Waddell, 3 A.L.T., 34.

Refresher Fees.] — Per Higinbotham, J. (in Chambers.) When a case occupies more than one day, i.e., more than the time of one day, the Prothonotary has a discretion to allow refreshers to counsel; but where the case occupies less than the time of one day he has no discretion and cannot allow them. And, if the Prothonotary exercise his discretion erroneously, his decision ought not to be reversed, unless the mistake be a plain and also a serious mistake, or unless the Prothonotary acted on an erroneous principle. Stephen v. Board of Land & Works, 3 A.L.T., 112.

There is no rule which fixes the limits of a day of legal labour to six hours, or confers a right to refresher fees if these limits are exceeded in any degree however small. Ibid.

The hearing of a case was commenced at two o'clock on one day and was concluded at half-past two on the following day, occupying six and a-half hours in hearing. Refreshers were marked on the briefs of the plaintiff's counsel, and these amounts, together with a charge for attendance to mark them, were included in the plaintiff's bill of costs. On taxation these amounts were disallowed by the Prothonotary. Held that the Prothonotary was right in disallowing them. Ibid.

Number of Counsel.]—The name of a plaintiff having been inserted in a bill without his knowledge or authority, his name was ordered to be struck out, but the Court, holding that the case was perfectly clear, only allowed him the costs of one counsel. Lane v. Goold, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 236.

Copies of Documents Accompanying Brief.]—The Court will not review the disallowance of costs of copies of documents accompanying brief to settle answers. Hardy v. Wilson, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 135.

Number of Counsel.] — Per Higinbotham, J. (in Chambers.) The allowance or disallowance of charges made for a second counsel is a matter within the discretion of the taxing officer. Austin v. Mackinnon, 6 A.L.T., 19.

I. Jurisdiction and Practice.

Equitable—"County Court Statute 1869," No. 345, Sec. 100 (2)—Devise of a Portion (not specified) of a Farm, the Value of the Part being Less, but that of Whole being Greater than Limit of Jurisdiction, £500.]—A testator devised and bequeathed unto his wife all his real and personal estate, with directions for her to manage his real estate (a farm of 120 acres) during her life, and to convey to his son B. a portion of 20 acres severed from such part of the farm as she should think fit when B. came of age. B. came of age, and assigned his interest by indenture to C. C. brought a suit in the County Court, praying that widow should be decreed to mark out a portion and assure it to him. The Judge of the County Court took the test of jurisdiction to be the value of the 20 acres, it appearing that the value of the whole farm was £555, and made a decree in plaintiff's favor. Held on appeal, by Molesworth, J., that though County Court Judge had jurisdiction in a suit of this kind under Sub-division 2 of Sec. 100, when value was within the limit £500, yet that the test of jurisdiction was the value of the whole, the trust estate being the whole farm, and that County Court Judge had no jurisdiction. Decree reversed. Boyle v. Carolin, 3 A.J.R., 71.

Equitable—Suit for Performance of an Agreement not to Use a Patent—"County Court Statute 1869," Secs. 100, 101.]—The inventor of a patent, by deed, for consideration, transferred it to a company, with the sole privilege of using it. He subsequently used it for hire. Held that this was a breach of an implied contract in the deed, to prevent which a suit for specific performance might be maintained in the County Court under Act No. 345, Secs. 100, 101. Shepherd v. The Patent Composition Pavement Company, 4 A.J.R., 143.

Equitable—Patent Cases—"County Court Statute 1869," No. 345, Secs. 100, 108, 110—"Copyright Act 1869," No. 350, Sec. 55—It Liss on Defendant to Oust Jurisdiction—As to Amount Involved.]—Per Molesworth, J. Secs. 100 and 108 of Act No. 345 give an injunction jurisdiction to County Courts in cases where an action would lie. Sec. 55 of Act 350 enacts that County Courts shall have jurisdiction over actions, suits, &c., in matters relating to patents for inventions, and removes any restriction to such County Court proceedings under Act No. 345, and this most probably without reference to amount involved. It is not necessary in the equitable jurisdiction under the Act No. 345, having regard to Secs. 100, 110, for the plaintiff to show that the amount is under the jurisdiction to maintain his case, it lying upon the defendant to oust the jurisdiction. Shepherd v. Patent Composition Pavement Company, 5 A.J.R., 27.

Equitable—"County Court Statute 1869"—Specific Performance—Declaration of Trust—Subsequent Purchaser With Notice.]—In a suit for specific performance and a declaration of trust against a vendor and a subsequent purchaser with notice, Held that County Courts had jurisdiction under Sec. 100, even though the bill alleged fraud. Cunningham v. Gundry, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 51.

Equitable—"County Court Statute 1869," No. 345, Sec. 100, Sub-sec. 7—Suit to Dissolve Partnership—Disputed Partnership.]—The County Court has jurisdiction in suits to dissolve partnership where existence of partnership is disputed. The fact that there is a genuine dispute as to existence of the partnership does not oust its jurisdiction, and the fact of partnership is one which a County Court Judge is competent to try; it arises in the suit itself, and is not extrinsic to the adjudication. Lee v. Andrew, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 92.

Equitable—"County Court Statute 1869," Sec. 100, Sub-sec. 4—Exchange of Lands.]—An agreement for exchange of lands comes within the Sub-sec. 4 of Sec. 100 of "The County Court Statute 1869," No. 345, and the County Court has jurisdiction in a suit for specific performance of such an agreement if neither property to

Equitable—Setting Aside Sale of Mortgaged Premises—"County Court Statute 1869," Sec. 100.]—Semble, per Holroyd, J. (in Chambers,) that a suit to set aside a sale of property referred to a mortgage, and to have an account of what is due on an equitable mortgage, and to redeem the property comprised therein or to set aside the equitable mortgage, is within the jurisdiction conferred upon the County Court by Sec. 100 of the "County Court Statute 1869." Andrew v. Figg, 6 A.L.T., 86.

Cause of Action Arising Within the Jurisdiction.]—J., in Sandhurst, ordered goods of F. & Co., in Melbourne, "to be forwarded by a carrier to J., at Sandhurst," and F. & Co. delivered the goods in Melbourne to a carrier, to be taken to J., in Sandhurst. The Judge of the County Court at Melbourne nonsuited F. & Co. in an action for goods sold and delivered, on the ground that the cause of action did not arise "in some material point" nearer to the County Court at Melbourne than to the County Court at Sandhurst. Upon appeal, Held, that the cause of action did so arise, and that J. might be sued at Melbourne under the "County Court Act," No. 29, Sec. 3, Flower v. Jackson, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 42.

Causes of Action Arising Within the Jurisdiction.]—A contract was made by letter by H., in Melbourne, with S., at Newstead, for the delivery of flour by S., at Castlemaine. S. broke the contract, and H. sued him in the County Court at Melbourne, and was nonsuited on the ground that the suit should have been brought at Castlemaine. On appeal by H.'s attorney, who had not been allowed his costs on the ground that he was negligent in advising his client to sue in the wrong Court, Semble that the action was brought in the right Court. Bullen v. Hooper, 2 V.R. (L.,) 108; 2 A.J.R., 66.

Cause of Action Arising Within the Jurisdiction.]—A County Court has no jurisdiction to hear an action on a contract which was made and broken outside the local limits of its jurisdiction, even though the defendant may reside within such limits. Crooke v. Smith, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 95.

Contract Made Out of the Colony.—A County Court has no jurisdiction in a case where the cause of action arose out of the colony. Where, therefore, C., in Melbourne, wrote to S., at Stuttgart, requesting that some goods, of which he gave a description, might be sent out to him, and stating that if they answered expectation he would give a large order, and some goods were forwarded by S. to C., a bill of lading being forwarded by S. in favour of C., and the goods arrived, and C. paid part of the purchase money, but declined to pay the balance, for which S. sued him in the County Court, Held, that the cause of action arose out of Victoria, inasmuch as the delivery to the carrier at Stuttgart was a delivery to C., and that the County Court had no jurisdiction. Chapman v. Scheidmayer, 1 A.J.R., 115.

Territorial Limits—"County Court Statute 1869," Sec. 5.]—The County Court has jurisdiction over an action for the price of goods, where the goods were offered by a person in Victoria, by letter, to a person in New Zealand, who accepted by letter giving general instructions to forward them, and was served with the summons while temporarily in Victoria, since the plaintiff being resident, the defendant served, and the delivery effected in Victoria, the cause of action arose there. Green v. Lewis, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 197.

Property Converted in Victoria and Sold in India.]—Certain property was wrongfully converted in Victoria and shipped to and sold in India. The wrongdoer offered in Victoria to pay the owner the proceeds of the sale. Held that the Court had jurisdiction over a plaint for conversion, and also over a claim contained therein for money had and received. Powell v. Gidney, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 20.

Breach of Contract—Test of Jurisdiction.]—On a contract for the sale of 4500 sheep, the price of which came to more than £250, 937, the price of which was under £250, were short delivered. On suit in the County Court for £70 5s. 6d., damages for short delivery, the evidence showed that the first contract had been rescinded, and a new one to take a less number of sheep substituted. The Judge nonsuited the plaintiff on the ground of want of jurisdiction. Held, on appeal, that the issue (non assumpsit) involved the validity of the original agreement, and that the case was therefore beyond the jurisdiction of the County Court. Brown v. White, 2 V.R. (L.,) 209; 2 A.J.R., 119. But see infra.

Breach of Contract.]—Where a contract was for doing certain work for a sum of £300, and the damages for breach claimed in the plaint were for a sum of £50, Held that the whole amount of the contract must be looked at and that the case was beyond the jurisdiction. Hogg v. Irving, 3 A.J.R., 59. But see infra.

Breach of Contract.]—G. and K. tendered for repairs to a ship. The contract was obtained for the sum of £1650, and the profits amounted to £354. A dispute arose as to the proportion in which the profits were to be divided, and G. sued K. in the County Court. The County Court Judge Held that the matter was beyond the equitable jurisdiction of the County Court, and transferred it to the Supreme Court. On summons in Chambers to remit it to the County Court, Held that the matter was within the equitable jurisdiction of the County Court, and order to remit made. Glassford v. Kennedy, 4 A.J.R., 108.

Breach of Contract—Act No. 345, Secs. 39, 47.]—Held overruling Brown and White, and Hogg v. Irving, and following Glassford v. Kennedy, and Laven v. Flower, that the amount of a contract is immaterial so long as the sum sought to be recovered in the plaint by virtue of it does not exceed the limited amount. Cavanagh v. Sach, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 259.

For the facts of Laven v. Flower, in which the point turned upon the jurisdiction of Justices, see post under JUSTICE OF THE PEACE —Jurisdiction and duty—In other cases.

Amount Within the Jurisdiction—Sum Claimed in Particulars of Demand in Excess of Limit—"County Court Statute 1865"—"Amending Act," No. 282, Sec. 2.]—M'G. was an executor, and paid £1100, belonging to the estate, into a bank. K. was by the will appointed manager of certain property, and permitted by M'G. to draw cheques against the sum paid in. M'G. examined K.'s accounts, and required an explanation of a sum of £264. K. explained that £80 was spent in a way he thought satisfactory. M'G. sued K. in the County Court, issuing a plaint for £184, but claiming in the particulars of demand £264, and giving credit for the £80. By Sec. 2 of the Act No. 282, the County Court had jurisdiction over a claim on "balances of account where balance does not exceed £250." Held that, there being no evidence that an adjustment before action had been made by any person able to bind M'G. as to the £80 so credited, there was no jurisdiction. Prohibition granted against proceedings to enforce judgment in favour of plaintiff. Regina v. Pohlman, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 211.

Contract for Sale of Goods—Amount Reduced by Credits.]—M. agreed to purchase goods from C. to the amount of £274. M. refused to accept part of the goods, which were re-sold by C. C. sued M. for breach of contract and allowed credit in the particulars of demand for £27, the amount realised by the re-sale, and for £106 the amount of an accommodation bill accepted by C. and held by M. Held that the case was within the jurisdiction. Murphy v. Clarke, 3 A.J.R., 59.

Abandoning Excess—Act No. 345, Sec. 47.]—A plaintiff claiming as damages a sum in excess of the limit may, by abandoning the claim for the excess in his particulars of claim, bring the case within the jurisdiction and maintain his action. Jensen v. Hagan, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 21.

Abandoning Excess—Act No. 345, Sec. 47.]—Where in a plaint the plaintiff indefinitely abandoned "all excess of any claim over and above the sum of £250." Held that it was sufficient to bring it within the jurisdiction. Waxman v. McAuliffe, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 48.

Set-off Exceeding Limit.]—Where in an action for money lent brought in the County Court, defendant claims an amount (£318) by way of set-off exceeding the limit of the jurisdiction, the Court may satisfy itself as to the bona fides of the claim, and when so satisfied its jurisdiction ceases, and it can proceed no further. Johnston v. Cox, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 284.

Act No. 345, Sec. 39—Balance of Accounts.]—A plaint claimed £244, but the particulars of demand showed a claim of £338 in respect of partnership transactions which was not reduced by credits to £250. The judge gave judgment for £246, the balance due up to date. Higinbotham, J. (in Chambers, under the Emergency Clause,) issued a prohibition. Nicholson v. Plumpton, 2 A.L.T., 140.

Joint Liability—Contribution Within Jurisdiction.]—Where a defendant is sued for contribution to a joint liability, the amount of which is beyond the jurisdiction of the County Court, if the defendant's contribution can be ascertained and is within the sum up to which the County Court has jurisdiction, the County Court has jurisdiction in respect of the case. Parker v. Wood, 2 A.J.R., 55.

Act No. 345, Sec. 77—Costs—Set-off Beyond Jurisdiction.]—The power of a Judge to give costs under Sec. 77 "whenever any action is brought which the Court has no jurisdiction to try," refers to want of jurisdiction appearing on the plaint itself, and before any evidence has been given. But where a defendant raises a defence of set-off which is beyond the jurisdiction, the Judge is then compelled to stay his hand, and the case being taken out of his jurisdiction by something which appeared during the course of the proceedings, he has no power to give costs under Sec. 77. Regina v. Cope, ex parte Rawson, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 294.

Transfer Where Amount Exceeds £500 — Onus of Proof.] — Where in an administration suit an objection is raised as to the amount of the estate being beyond the jurisdiction of the County Court, the onus of proof lies on the defendant raising it, and the production of the probate showing the estate to have been sworn under £950, is not sufficient evidence of want of jurisdiction on that ground. Martin v. Keane, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 115.

To Set Aside a Summons Where Judgment Registered in Supreme Court—"County Court Act," No. 261, Sec. 62.]—The words "no further proceeding" in Sec. 62 mean "proceedings with a view to advance," and not to set aside. The Judge of County Court has therefore jurisdiction, and not the Supreme Court, to set aside a judgment registered in the Supreme Court on the grounds of bad service of summons. Wrixon v. Deehan, 2 W. W., & A'B. (L.,) 16.

Act No. 345, Sec. 71—Setting Aside Judgment —Non-Service of Plaint Summons.]—Where judgment was obtained the defendant not being served with the plaint summons, and the Judge set the judgment aside, Held that the Judge had jurisdiction under Sec. 71 to set it aside, and the effect was the same as if the judgment had not been obtained, and in an action of trespass for issuing execution on such judgment, the plaintiff obtaining such judgment cannot justify under it. Bruce v. Hart, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 482 ; 3 A.L.T., 73.

Foreign Judgment—Act No. 261, Secs. 2, 4.]—The County Court has only a local jurisdiction over judgments recovered in the colony, and has no jurisdiction in cases of judgments recovered in New South Wales. Greville v. Smith, N.C., 67.

Trying Title to Property Disposed of by Justices' Order Under "Justices of the Peace Statute," Sec. 121.]—B. H. mortgaged a mare to T. H., on November 21st, 1867. On May 26th, 1868, T. H. assigned the mare to the plaintiffs. The mortgage and assignment were duly registered, and on September 9th, 1868, a creditor recovered judgment against B. H., and the mare was levied on while in the possession of B. H. On September 28th T. H. gave notice that the mare was his property, and an interpleader summons was issued on September 22nd, when T. H. not appearing, the justices dismissed the interpleader summons, and ordered the sale under the execution to proceed. T. H.'s assignees then sued the purchaser in the County Court for recovery of the mare, and at the trial no order of the Justices, as mentioned in Sec. 121 of the "Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," was produced. Held, that the County Court had jurisdiction, and that plaintiff having had no notice of the interpleader summons were not bound by the order of the Justices. Maritime General Credit Company v. Rands, 1 A.J.R., 79.

Trial of Right to an Office.]—A County Court is not the proper tribunal to try the right to an office. Smith v. Mayor, &c., of Clunes, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 86.

In Matters of Trespass by Sheep—"Pounds Statute," Sec. 33.]—The "Pounds Statute 1865," Sec. 33, does not take away the jurisdiction of the County Court to give damages for trespass by sheep. Mulhare v. Lindsay, N.C., 14.

Commitment for Debt—Second Commitment for Same Debt—"County Court Statute 1869," Secs. 83, 84.]—A judgment debtor was summoned under Sec. 83 of the "County Court Statute 1869," and examined and an order made against him under Sec. 84 for payment of the debt by instalments, and for commitment in default of payment. Default having been made in payment of the second instalment the debtor was arrested under a warrant of commitment for the whole of the amount remaining unpaid, but was immediately discharged by the creditor on a part payment, with a promise to pay the balance. Default having been made in payment of the balance a second judgment summons was issued, and the debtor again committed. On rule nisi for a prohibition, Held, that the debtor having been arrested for the whole debt the jurisdiction was exhausted, and there was no power to make a second order under Sec. 84. Regina v. Cope, ex parte Fraser, 2 V.L.R., (L.,) 261.

Quære, whether there could be several commitments for default of payment of the several instalments where the amount of a judgment has been made payable by instalments. Ibid.

Fraud Summons—Debtor Committed—Insolvency—Discharge—"County Court Statute 1869," Sec. 89.]—A County Court Judge has no jurisdiction under Sec. 89 of the "County Court Statute 1869," to direct the discharge upon an ex parte application of a debtor committed under an order on a fraud summons, and who subsequently becomes insolvent. The application should be entertained in the presence of both parties. Rowbottom v. Hennelly, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 409; 2 A.L.T., 85.

Act No. 345, Secs. 72, 73, 74—Action of Ejectment—Trial Without Jury—Waiver by Consent.]—The County Court Judge has no jurisdiction to try an action of ejectment without a jury under Secs. 72, 73, 74. Such a trial is a nullity, and not an irregularity, and the fact of the appellant consenting to such a trial does not operate by way of waiver, consent not operating to waive a nullity or create a jurisdiction. Mason v. Ryan, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 335; 6 A.L.T., 152.

To Prevent Abuse of and Correct Irregularities in Practice.]—The County Court has an inherent power (though it has only the jurisdiction given by Legislature) to prevent the abuse of and correct irregularities in and frauds upon its own procedure and rules, and for that purpose to set aside proceedings which it may find to be void or irregular. Mason v. Ryan, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 335, 340; 6 A.L.T., 152.

Act No. 345, Secs. 35, 68.]—Under Sec. 68 a County Court Judge has jurisdiction to reinstate a case, which has been struck out through a defect in the summons (the name of plaintiff's attorney not being registered in the County Court book,) and to order the action to be tried at the next sittings. Giffard v. Unity Gold Mining Company, 6 A.L.T., 159.

Service of Plaint—When Unnecessary.]—Semble that where defendant appears, and his counsel takes part in the examination of witnesses, it is unnecessary to prove service of the plaint. Moore v. Prest, 1 A.J.R., 151.

Service of Plaint—Affidavit.]—Where the plaint in a suit described the plaintiffs as trustees, but the affidavit of service did not so describe them, and it appeared that they were suing as trustees, Held that the affidavit was sufficient. Ibid.

Service of Plaint Summons.]—Service of a plaint summons may be effected by serving a copy thereof, the original being produced on demand. Regina v. Bindon, ex parte Ah Soon, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 284.

Service of Plaint Summons—"County Court Rules," Order 3, Rule 17.]—A plaint summons against a defendant who had left Victoria was served upon an inmate of the defendant's place of business; the Judge thought such service insufficient, and dismissed the summons. Held that such service was sufficient within the meaning of Rule 17, and rule absolute for mandamus to Judge to hear the summons granted. Regina v. Leech, ex parte Ah Poy, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 392; 1 A.L.T., 97.

Objecting to Sufficiency of Service — When Allowed—Rule 24 "County Court Rules."]—The County Court Judge dismissed a summons, asking that all proceedings on a plaint summons be stayed because it had not been properly served, on the grounds that the summons was irregular; that the question of service or no service should be decided by examination of witnesses when the case was called for hearing (Rule 24 "County Court Rules"); that it was a question entirely between the plaintiff and the Court, and that defendant could not appear to object to service but only to defend. Edgerton v. Snowball, 1 A.L.T., 204.

Plaint Tested as of a Day Subsequent to Return Day—Striking Out—Costs—Order 3, Rule 15.]—Where a plaint was tested as of a day subsequent to the return day, and the case was accordingly struck out for want of due service in accordance with the County Court Practice, Order 3, Rule 15, Held, that no costs could be awarded by the Judge of the County Court. Regina v. Cope, ex parte Smillie, 2 A.L.T., 66.

Plaint Summons—Occupation of Plaintiffs Not Stated.]—A plaint summons described the plaintiffs as "trustees," and gave their address by post as "to the care of H., Lydiard-street, Ballarat." Held that this was an insufficient description of the occupation of the plaintiffs. Shaw v. Hamilton, 2 A.J.R., 86.

Plaint—Particulars of Demand Annexed—"County Court Rules 1881," Rule 62.]—The particulars of demand annexed to the scheduled form of plaint are, under the "County Court Rules 1881," Rule 62, to be read as incorporated with the plaint. Lawes v. Price, Warren v. Price, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 250.

Act No. 345, Sec. 56—Special Summons.]—A claim for goods sold and delivered, the price not being previously fixed, is a liquidated demand for which a special summons under Sec. 56 may issue. Britt v. Merizzi, 5 A.J.R., 161.

Pleading—Rules, Order 3, Rule 2—Bill of Exchange.]—Under Rule 2 of Order 3 a bill of exchange may be set out verbatim with endorsements, or by a statement of the legal effect of the bill and endorsements. Morton v. Jacks, 5 V.L.R (L.,) 181; 1 A.L.T., 12.

Pleading—Suing as Mortgagee—Order 3, Rules 89, 90.]—A building society sued in ejectment in the County Court. The plaint described the plaintiff as mortgagee in fee. It appeared that the plaintiff had a certificate of title in fee, and that a deed of defeasance had been executed between plaintiff society and the defendant reciting the transfer from the defendant to the society of even date, under which the plaintiff society was registered. Held that the society had substantially proved the allegation that it was suing as mortgagee. Delany v. Sandhurst Building Society, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 189; 1 A.L.T., 13.

Endorsement on Plaint Summons.]—An objection that a plaint summons is not endorsed with the name and place of abode of the issuing attorney should be taken by means of a preliminary application, and is too late if taken at the hearing. Ibid.

Pleading—Plaint not Alleging that Married Woman has Separate Property.]—In a plaint the plaintiff was described as "M. R., the wife of T. R.," and she sued for injuries done to certain land of which "she was possessed." The plaint did not allege that she had separate property. The judge offered an amendment, and on refusal, nonsuited her. Held that no amendment was necessary; that as a married woman she could not be possessed of the property except as her separate estate, and the objection went to a matter of proof. Appeal allowed. Ryan v. Topham, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 281; 1 A.L.T., 41.

Signing Notice of Defence—Attorney—"County Court Statuts," Secs. 35, 56.]—Where a defendant's attorney signed the notice of defence as required by Sec. 56 of the "County Court Statute," No. 345, but the attorney had not signed the roll as required by Sec. 35 of the Act, and before doing which no attorney is authorised to "act or appear" for any person, Held that the words "act or appear" did not apply to appearing in Court only, and that the notice of defence was bad. Regina v. Cope, ex parte Huthnance, 1 A.J.R., 23.

Notice of Intention to Defend.]—A notice of intention to defend under the "County Court Statute" is like a plea, and is delivered within sufficient time if delivered before judgment is signed, although it may have been delivered beyond the time prescribed for delivery. Masterton v. Blair, 2 V.R. (L.,) 19; 2 A.J.R., 16.

Special Defence—Notice of Delivered Too Late.]—It is within the discretion of a County Court Judge to say if he will allow a special defence to be entered into if notice be not properly given. Ibid.

Notice of Special Defence—Act No. 345, Sec. 58—Rules, Order 3, Rule 53.]—Notice of special defences (inter alia) "The Statute of Limitations" was served upon the plaintiff, but no copy was delivered to the Registrar under the rules. The Judge gave defendant leave to lodge a copy nunc pro tunc. Held that Sec. 58 of the Act only provided for delivery of a copy to the plaintiff, and that sufficient notice was substantially given. Weigall v. Gaston, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 98.

Stating Defence—"County Court Rules 1881," Rule 157—Stating Different Defence.]—Per Higinbotham, J. If a defendant give, under "County Court Rules 1881," Rule 157, a concise statement of his defence to the action, and of the points on which he relies, the effect of this is to limit his evidence to the matters included in the defence and points so stated. He cannot set up another defence without the leave of the Court. Howse v. Glowry, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 280, 284.

(c) Amendment of Plaint Summons.

Amendment—Costs.]—Where a plaint summons was held informal by a County Court Judge, and the plaintiff's attorney refused to amend, and the Judge ordered the case to be struck out with £1 15s. costs, on appeal, Held that the Court had no jurisdiction to determine whether the amount of costs which the Judge would have awarded as a condition for amendment was excessive or not. Shaw v. Hamilton, 2 A.J.R., 86.

Amendment of Summons—Order 3, Rule 3, "County Court Rules."]—Where an amendment of a plaint summons, which was defective in not containing the number of the plaint under Order 3, Rule 3, was refused by the County Court Judge, and the summons was struck out, Barry, J. (in Chambers) granted a mandamus for the Judge to hear the case. Regina v. Leech, ex parte Joske, 1 A.L.T., 32.

Amendment of Plaint—Act No. 345, Sec. 119.]—A County Court Judge has powers to amend in any way so as to bring forward for adjudication the questions really in controversy between the parties at the time when the action was commenced, provided that such amendment be in "the existing action." A plaint was for work done and commission as an auctioneer, and the evidence proving a case of breach of agreement, the Judge nonsuited the plaintiff, thinking he had no power to amend by inserting a claim for such breach. Held that he had such power. Knipe v. Belson, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 405; 1 A.L.T., 99.

Amendment—Discretion of Judge.]—A plaintiff stated in his plaint that all his creditors had agreed to give time, but the evidence showed that only some had so agreed, and an application was made to alter the plaint, but this was refused. On appeal, Held that amendment was rightly disallowed, and that the County Court Judge having the right to conduct the business in his Court, under the circumstances the Supreme Court could not dictate to him as to how he should have conducted the case. Wite v. Brodie, 4 A.L.T., 88.

Payment Into Court—"Without Costs"—Act No. 345, Sec. 54.]—Where a sum was paid into Court "without costs" sufficient to answer defendant's liabilities, Held that Sec. 54 and Schedules 4 and 5, contemplate that costs in full, or proportionately, will also be paid in, and that the plaintiff might go on and recover his costs. McEwan v. Dynon, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 271.

Payment Into Court—Verdict for Defendant.]—If the jury find that the sum paid into Court is a sufficient answer to the action, a verdict should be entered for the defendant. Donaldson v. Woolcott, 1 A.L.T., 98.

Payment into Court—Plaintiff's Right to Money—"County Court Statute 1869," Sec. 54.]—A plaintiff is entitled to money paid into Court under Sec. 54 of the "County Court Statute 1869," though he be subsequently nonsuited in the action. Coote v. Gillespie, 1 A.L.T., 151.

Payment into Court—Costs of Defendant Opposing Payment to Plaintiff.]—Where a defendant refused to consent to the plaintiff's taking a sum of money which had been paid into Court in an action in which the plaintiff was nonsuited, though the defendant did not appear on the application made by the plaintiff to the Court for that purpose, he was ordered to pay the costs of such application. Ibid.

Payment into Court—"County Court Rules," Order 3, Rule 41—Nonsuit.]—Semble that the effect of Rule 41 of Order 3 of the "County Court Rules," under the "County Court Statute 1869," as to payment into Court, is to prevent a nonsuit after such payment. S.C., 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 56; 1 A.L.T., 155.

Payment into Court—Admission of Whole Cause of Action.]—Payment into Court generally is an admission of the whole cause of action. A defendant paid a sum of money into Court generally, and the verdict was for a larger sum. The defendant appealed, and the Supreme Court directed a re-hearing, suggesting £70 as the measure of damages. At the re-hearing, the verdict was for a sum less than the first verdict, but greater than the £70. Held that defendant was entitled to a further re-hearing, but that he had admitted the whole cause of action, and the sum of £70 was again suggested. Robinson v. Highett, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 384; 5 A.L.T., 122.

Payment Into Court—Costs not Paid—Action to Recover—Costs.]—If the defendant in the County Court pay money into such Court and do not also pay in the amount of the plaintiff's costs up to the payment into Court, the plaintiff is entitled to his costs of proceeding with the action to recover such costs, though the sum paid into Court was sufficient to meet his claim without costs. Lawes v. Price, Warren v. Price, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 250.

Nonsuit—Power of Judge.]—A County Court Judge has no power to nonsuit a plaintiff against his will. Rule v. Lobbe, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 427.

Nonsuit—"County Court Statute 1869," Sec. 78.]—A County Court Judge has no power under Sec. 78 of the "County Court Statute 1869," to nonsuit a plaintiff against his will. Dobson v. Sinclair, 2 A.L.T., 8.

Act No. 345, Sec. 75—Nonsuit Against Will.]—At the close of a plaintiff's case, the County Court Judge nonsuited him against his will, the plaintiff's attorney "objecting." Held that the Judge had no such power. Ferguson v. Sparling, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 111.

Nonsuit—Power of Judge Where Defendant Does Not Appear—"County Court Statute 1869," Sec. 70.]—Semble that Sec. 70 of the "County Court Statute 1869" contemplates a case in which the defendant is not present at the hearing, and gives power to nonsuit in that case. Creak v. Newlands, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 412.

Judge Sitting Without Assessors—Nonsuit—New Trial.]—Where a County Court Judge sitting without assessors sums up the evidence and gives the grounds of his decision, if the plaintiff in such a case abstain from interfering until the Judge has indicated his opinion on the facts, with the object of taking his chance of a verdict in his favour, he must abide that chance; but if not, then he is entitled to have the same benefit on appeal as if he had at the time submitted to an erroneous nonsuit, in deference to the opinion of the Judge; and where it is plain to the Supreme Court that the County Court Judge has misdirected himself on the law, the verdict ought to be set aside, and a new trial directed on such terms as to costs as may be fit. Broadbent v. Vanrennen, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 366.

Act No. 345, Secs. 58, 78—Nonsuit—New Trial.]—F. sued P. in the County Court for money due on the sale of sheep. P. claimed a set-off, but the Judge refused it, no notice of such defence having been given under Sec. 58 and rules thereunder, and gave a verdict for plaintiff. Defendant then applied for a nonsuit, or to enter verdict for defendant, but the Judge refused this, and also to grant a new trial, as a new trial had not been included in the notice of motion. Held that the County Court Judge was right, having no power to grant a new trial which was not asked for in the notice, or to enter a nonsuit, as no leave had been reserved for making it, or to enter a verdict for defendant except upon consent. Powers v. Fairbairn, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 118.

New Trial.]—A new trial will not be granted owing to the absence of the defendant, who was misled by the state of the list and his witnesses, when the case was called over, if his counsel were present, cross-examined the plaintiff's witnesses, and did not ask for an adjournment till the plaintiff's case was closed. Mays v. Watmough, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 169; 2 A.L.T., 5.

County Court Judgment—Setting Aside—Act No. 261, Sec. 262—"County Court Rules," Rule 40.]—H. obtained a judgment in the County Court in 1863, but no execution was then issued. In 1869 he obtained a certificate that the judgment was still unsatisfied. H. then signed judgment in the Supreme Court in May, 1869, and issued execution under 28 Vic., No. 261, Sec. 262. Rule nisi to set aside judgment and execution under Clause 40, "County Court Rules," which provided that no execution shall be issued, except on summons to shew cause, after the expiration of a year and a day from date of trial or time limited for payment. Held that so long as the certificate remained the judgment was good, and that the plaintiff must apply to County Court to correct the judgment. Rule discharged. Hancock v. Emmett, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 142.

Setting Aside Judgment — Application For.]—The "County Court Rules," as to the time within which an application for setting aside a judgment should be made, do not apply to the case of an official assignee applying to set aside a judgment by consent signed against the insolvent, and which operates as a fraud on the creditors, since the assignee acts in a representative capacity, and has to consult the general body of creditors, who do not act as promptly as one person would act in the furtherance of his own interests. Andrews v. Harley, 1 V.R. (L.,) 127; 1 A.J.R., 122.

Judgment—Proof of—Act No. 345, Sec. 22.]—By Sec. 22, two ways are provided for proving a judgment, either by production of the register book, or of a certified copy of the entry therein; a rough note book, called a verdict-book, kept by the Registrar, and from which he used to enter judgment upon the register, is not evidence of the judgment within Sec. 22. Bishop v. Woinarski, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 106.

Judgment—When Execution May Issue.]—J. sued P. in the County Court for detention of goods, and recovered a judgment, and the Judge ordered that damages were to be reduced to a shilling if the goods were returned. P. offered to return goods, but J. refused to accept them, and had execution issued. P. then sued J. in trespass. Held that the order as to return of goods was no part of judgment, being merely a separate order that satisfaction should be entered up if goods were returned, and that J. was at liberty to issue the execution. Phillips v. Johnston, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 230.

Plaintiff Unable to Prove Service of Summons—Striking Out—Costs.]—Where the plaintiff appears at the hearing, but is unable to prove due service of the summons, the Judge has no jurisdiction to try the case, but in striking it out, he has under Sec. 77 of the "County Court Statute 1869," no power to give costs to the defendant, that section not applying to the case, since the Judge has jurisdiction in the sense of the term intended by that section, which refers to an excess of jurisdiction appearing on the plaint, or subsequently in the conduct of the proceedings. Regina v. Cope, ex parte Smillie, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 366; 2 A.L.T., 66.

Act No. 345, Sec. 38—Costs Taxed After Trial.]—Where costs are taxed after trial and judgment for them is entered, the Court will not grant a writ of prohibition to stop the execution. Rowe v. Thompson, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 135.

Taxation of Costs.]—Where at the trial a Judge of the County Court reserved his decision upon a nonsuit point, Held that he need not give any direction as to taxation of plaintiff's costs until he had decided upon that point. Anderson v. Ziegler, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 338.

Taxation of Costs—Decree in Appellate Court.]—Where in an appeal from the County Court, the decree of the Appellate Court gives costs, such costs should be taxed on the County Court scale and not on the Supreme Court scale. Cunningham v. Gundry, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 51.

Retaxation—Objection that Costs Should be on County Court Scale.]—A decree was made with costs on an appeal from the County Court, and the taxing-master taxed on the Supreme Court scale, no objection being made to that course at the taxation. Per Barry, J. (in Chambers) following Cunningham v. Gundry, that no certificate for costs having been given, but only an allocatur, the application was not too late, and that costs should be taxed on the County Court scale. Howard v. Currie, 1 A.L.T., 61.

Conduct Money—Debtor—"County Court Statute 1869," Sec. 83.]—Where on a summons under the provisions of Sec. 83 of the "County Court Statute 1869," the defendant had not been furnished with any conduct money, Held, per M'Farland, J., that the defendant was like any other witness, and was not bound to appear or to allege an excuse for non-attendance unless he were furnished with conduct money. Henry v. Greening, 4 A.L.T., 16.

Judge's Notes of Evidence — Order 5, Rule 7 — "County Court Statute 1869."]—Rule 7 of Order 5, under the "County Court Statute 1869," No. 345, which provides that "any party to the suit may obtain a copy of the Judge's notes of the evidence at the hearing," only applies to equity proceedings, and not to actions at law. Regina v. Pohlman, 1 V.R. (L.,) 101; 1 A.J.R., 91.

Judge Sitting Without Assessors.]—If a County Court Judge, sitting by consent of parties without assessors, sums up the evidence and gives the grounds of his decision, his expression of opinion on the facts and on the law must be carefully distinguished. Broadbent v. Vanrennen, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 366.

Subsequent Alteration of Decision by Judge After Leaving Court.]—A County Court Judge has no power to correct a mistake in his decision when he has pronounced it, entered it in his book, and has left the Court although intending to return; and on his return one of the parties, in the absence of the other, points out the mistake and asks the Judge to correct it. Regina v. Hackett, ex parte Cline, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 129; 4 A.L.T., 4.

Semble, that where such a hiatus occurs, the Judge has no power to alter his decision at all. Ibid.

II. Judges and Officers of the Court.

Tenure.]—Each County Court Judge holds office at the pleasure of the Governor-in-Council, and may be removed by him without cause assigned. Per Barry & Molesworth, J.; dissentiente Stawell, C.J. Regina v. Rogers, ex parte Lewis, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 334.

Removal From Office.] — S.C. See post under Quo Warranto.

Mandamus to.]—See Mandamus.

Appointed for Particular Sittings—Jurisdiction.]—A County Court Judge appointed to act for certain sittings, in the absence of the regular Judge of the district, has jurisdiction, after the conclusion of the sittings and adjournment of the Court sine die, to deal with applications arising out of causes tried at such sittings, and to sign a case on appeal therefrom. Quinlivan v. Darcey, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 370; 2 A.L.T., 67.

Compelling to Accept Security for Costs of Appeal.]—On an appeal from a County Court, the appellant (defendant) tendered as security a bond of two sureties justifying in stock-in-trade. The registrar refused to accept this security unless the attorney for plaintiff consented. Held that this was insufficient ground for refusing to accept the security, though semble that he might refuse to accept it if the costs were not fixed. Regina v. Stephen, 1 A.J.R., 164.

Certificate.]—There is no rule of the County Court similar to that of the Supreme Court, that the Registrar set out or refer to the evidence upon which he acts, and the Judge may act on a certificate which does not refer to it. Thomson v. Andrew, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 48, 56; 5 A.L.T., 181.

Action Against for Not Levying Execution—Notice of Action When Necessary—"County Court Statute 1869," Sec. 32.]—Before the plaintiff can be nonsuited for failing to give the notice required by Sec. 32 of the "County Court Statute 1869," in an action against a County Court Bailiff for not levying the amount of an execution, the defendant must prove that he acted in a bonâ fide belief that he was discharging his duty under the Act, and that he had reasonable and probable cause for his belief; and the question of reasonable and probable cause is one for the jury. Solomons v. Mulcahy, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 462.

A County Court Bailiff was charged with misfeasance in the exercise of his duties, and an action was brought against him in respect thereof. Held that it was for the County Court Judge to determine whether defendant acted as he did in the bonâ fide execution of his office; but as the defendant in the case could not have acted otherwise, he was entitled to notice of action under Sec. 32. Rule absolute for a nonsuit. S.C., 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 64.

III. Remitting Cases to County Court.

Summons — Objection — Adjournment — "County Court Statute 1869," Sec. 42.]—In an application under Sec. 42 of the "County Court Statute 1869," where the plaintiff's sole objection to have the action remitted was that he wished to deliver interrogatories to the defendant, Holroyd, J. (in Chambers,) allowed the summons to be adjourned in order to enable him to do so. Nixon v. Milton, 6 A.L.T., 98.

"County Court Statute 1869," Sec. 43—Who May Apply—Corporation—Affidavit.]—Per Holroyd, J. A corporation can apply under Sec. 43 of the "County Court Statute 1869," to have an action remitted to the County Court, and the town clerk, though not the only person who can make the necessary affidavit, is the best person to do so. Stevens v. Mayor of Flemington and Kensington, 6 A.L.T., 99.

See also Tilley v. Hoyt, 6 A.L.T., 67.

Application to Give Security for Costs or Remit Action—Proper Time for Making—"County Court Statute 1869," Sec. 43.]—Per Williams, J. (in Chambers.) The proper time for making an application for the plaintiff to show cause why he should not give security for costs, or otherwise why the action should not be remitted to the County Court, is immediately after the service of the writ, and before any pleadings are delivered. Robertson v. Brown, 6 A.L.T., 46.

Application Made Ex Parte.]—Where an application was made ex parte, under Sec. 43 of the "County Court Statute 1869," to remit an action to the County Court on the ground that the plaintiff was an uncertificated insolvent, Williams, J. (in Chambers,) granted the application and expressed an opinion that applications of this nature should be made ex parte, Stevens v. Mayor of Flemington and Kensington, 6 A.L.T., 98.

Costs—Application for Security for.]—Per Cope, J. When an action has been remitted to the County Court under Sec. 43 of the "County Court Statute 1869," the Judge of the County Court cannot entertain an application that the plaintiff should give security for costs. Wite v. Brodie, 4 A.L.T., 36.

Discretion of Judge—"County Court Statute, 1869," Sec. 103.]—Per Holroyd, J. (in Chambers.) A Judge has a discretion under Sec. 103 of the "County Court Statute 1869," as to whether he will order a case to be remitted to the County Court, and will not do so if he think it a proper one to be tried in the Supreme Court. Andrew v. Figg, 6 A.L.T., 86.

"County Court Statute 1869," Sec. 43.]—Per Williams, J. (in Chambers.) The words "other actions of tort," in Sec. 43 of the "County Court Statute 1869," refer to all actions of tort not specifically enumerated in the section, and include actions for negligence. Taylor v. Port, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 300; 6 A.L.T., 129.

Practice — Staying Proceedings in Supreme Court.]—Per Williams, J. (in Chambers.) The application under Sec. 43 of the Statute for a conditional order staying proceedings in the Supreme Court, and remitting the case to the County Court, unless the plaintiff within the time named in the order give full security for defendant's costs, or satisfy a Judge that he has a fit cause of action to be tried in the Supreme Court, should not be made ex parte, as the effect mght be to shut the plaintiff out from showing that he has visible means of support, and confine him to doing one of the two things mentioned in the order. In all future cases the application for the conditional order must be made on summons, calling on the plaintiff to show cause why such order should not be made. If the plaintiff can show that he has visible means of support, the summons is dismissed. If he cannot, then he must do one of the two things mentioned in the order. If he does neither, the order becomes absolute. If he does the first he merely gives notice of the fact to the defendant. If he proposes to do the second he must give notice in writing to the defendant that on a certain day at a certain time within the time limited by the order he will appear before a Judge to satisfy such Judge that he has a cause of action fit to be presented in the Supreme Court. The other side can then attend or not at will. If the plaintiff fail to satisfy the Judge, the order becomes absolute. Ibid.

IV. Transfer from County Court.

Act No. 345, Sec. 44.]—Williams J. (in Chambers) made an order, transferring a case turning upon the construction of indentures of apprenticeship, and involving important points of law, to the Supreme Court. Buzolich v. Fletcher, 3 A.L.T., 15.

Costs—No. 345, Sec. 45.]—If a case be removed from the County Court into the Supreme Court by the defendant, under Sec. 45 of the "County Court Statute," No. 345, and the plaintiff recover a verdict, no certificate order or rule is required to enable the plaintiff to recover his "full" costs; that means as between party and party, and on the higher scale. Gerard v. Kreitmayer, 2 A.J.R., 112.

Costs—Summons Under Sec. 41 of "County Court Statute 1869."]—Where an action has been transferred from a County Court on the ground of want of territorial jurisdiction on the part of the County Court, and the plaintiff recovers less than £50, the application for Supreme Court costs should be made to the Judge at the trial; and where this has been omitted to be done, and no reason assigned for the omission, the costs of a subsequent summons, under Sec. 41 of the "County Court Statute 1869," for such costs will not be allowed. Crooke v. Smith, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 95.

V. Appeal From.

Interpleader.]—An appeal lies, under Sec. 120 of the "County Court Statute 1869," from the decision of a County Court Judge, upon an interpleader summons. Barnard v. Mann, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 140.

Attorney Suing Client for Costs—"County Court Statute," Sec. 120.]—Where an attorney sued his client for costs, and the client obtained a verdict on the ground of the attorney's negligence in the action in which the costs were incurred by bringing it in the wrong Court, Held that Sec. 120 of the "County Court Statute" did not preclude an appeal in a case of this kind. Bullen v. Hooper, 2 V.R. (L.,) 108; 2 A.J.R., 66.

From Verdict of Jury.]—Under Sec. 120 of the "County Court Statute 1869," an appeal lies from the verdict of a jury in the County Court, though no application has been made to the Judge of the County Court to set it aside. Sheehan v. Park, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 25; 3 A.L.T., 98.

Order Discharging Debtor — "County Court Statute 1869," Secs. 89, 120.]—Sec. 120 of the "County Court Statute 1869," is wide enough in its terms to give the right of appeal from an order of a County Court Judge, under Sec. 89, directing the discharge of a judgment debtor committed upon a fraud summons. Rowbottom v. Hennelly, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 409; 2 A.L.T., 85.

Order that Case be Struck Out on Failure to Give Security.]—An appeal is not the proper remedy against an order that a case should be struck out if the plaintiff fail to find security for costs within fourteen days. The plaintiff should apply to the Judge to have the order amended. Hourigan v. Bourke, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 224.

Nonsuit.]—If a County Court Judge nonsuit a plaintiff wrongly, i.e., against his consent, appeal is the remedy. The Judge has power and jurisdiction to nonsuit, and prohibition is not therefore the remedy. Mau v. Weightman, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 110.

Nonsuit in Deference to Judge's Opinion.]—Where a plaintiff submits to a nonsuit in deference to a Judge's opinion, it is not necessary to remit the case; the propriety of the nonsuit becomes a question of law on which an appeal may be based. Davidson v. Brown, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 288; 1 A.L.T., 43.

Where plaintiff's counsel in his opening statement pointed out certain evidence and that he would claim certain damages, and the Judge intimated his opinion that the damages were too remote and that he would hold them to be such, even if the evidence disclosed and proved the facts, and the plaintiff under such circumstances elected to be nonsuited, Held that plaintiff was not debarred thereby from appealing. Harvey v. Shire of St. Arnaud, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 312; 1 A.L.T., 44.

"County Court Statute 1869," No. 345, Sec. 120—Interlocutory Order.]—Sec. 120 of Act No. 345 only contemplates appeals from such orders as, in one alternative at all events, finally dispose of case, so that the appellate Court may finally dispose of it. An appeal from an order confirming report of the registrar of County Court upon accounts directed to be taken by him in the course of the suit does not lie. Thompson v. Andrew, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 28; 4 A.L.T., 164.

Commitment for Breach of Injunction—"County Court Statute 1869," Sec. 120.]—Where appellant had been committed by the Judge of a County Court for disobedience of an injunction of that Court, and had appealed to the Supreme Court in Equity against the order, Held that the words "order of commitment" in Sec. 120 of the "County Court Statute 1869," No. 345, refer only to commitments for misconduct in Court, and that an appeal would lie from the order then appealed from, if erroneous. Shepherd v. The Patent Composition Pavement Company, 4 A.J.R., 143.

Question of Fact.]—An appeal from a County Court to the Supreme Court will lie only on a question of law, or of improper admission or rejection of evidence, and not on a question of fact. Kavanagh v. Haynes, 4 A.J.R., 73.

Question of Fact.]—In an action in the County Court where the evidence, as appearing on the case for appeal, all points in one direction, and is inconsistent with the Judge's decision, the Supreme Court will reverse such decision, even upon a question of fact. Hamilton v. Sefton, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 326.

Question of Fact—Act No. 345, Sec. 120—Amount Lodged on Appeal.]—Where a Judge has fallen into error in the reasons he gives for his decision, the Court will allow an appeal even on a question of fact, and order a re-hearing. There is no necessity for an order requiring registrar to pay over to appellant the money deposited on appeal. Jensen v. Hagan, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 21.

Question of Fact.]—Under Sec. 120 of Act No. 345, an appeal lies from the determination of the County Court upon questions of fact, but the Court will not upset such determination unless it be made clearly apparent that the judge or jury arrived at an entirely wrong conclusion upon the evidence. [Kavanagh v. Haynes, overruled.] Black v. Permewan, Wright & Company, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 292; 3 A.L.T., 21.

On Questions of Fact.]—In appeals involving a disputed question of fact, it is not sufficient for the appellant to show that the decision below was probably wrong. It is necessary to show conclusively that the Judge or jury have come to a wrong conclusion of fact. Brundell v. Wane, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 319; 3 A.L.T., 22.

Conflicting Evidence.] — Where the evidence before a County Court Judge is conflicting, the Appellate Court will not review his decision on a question of fact. Lee v. Andrew, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 92.

Where Allowed or Where Not.]—The Court will not disturb the finding of a Judge of a County Court where there is any evidence to support his finding. Bank of Australasia v. Keave, 4 A.L.T., 12.

Verdict Against Evidence.]—Where there is some evidence to support the finding of a County Court Judge, the Court will not disturb his finding on the ground that it is against evidence. Nathan v. Tozer, 2 A.L.T., 34.

New Trial—Re-hearing—Verdict Against Evidence.]—A County Court Judge in his charge to the jury told them there was no evidence of fraud, and the jury found the verdict for the plaintiff in opposition to the charge; the Judge then, without giving any reason, refused a new trial. The Supreme Court allowed the appeal, and directed the case to be re-heard. Waxman v. McAuliffe, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 48.

Discretion of County Court Judge—When Interfered With.]—On an appeal to the Supreme Court, that Court will not interfere with the discretion of the County Court Judge in his management of the business of his Court. Mays v. Watmough, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 169; 2 A.L.T., 5.

A County Court Judge being dissatisfied with a verdict ordered a new trial. Held that the Court would not interfere in such a case; new trial to be held in the County Court. Walker v. Graham, 3 A.L.T., 75.

Discretion of County Court Judge—When Interfered With—Commitment to Prison—21 Vic., No. 29.]—Where R. had been committed to prison in default of payment of a judgment recovered against him in the County Court, and the Judge refused on his insolvency to order his discharge, the Full Court refused to interfere with his discretion. Ex parte Robinson, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 30.

New Trial Ordered in County Court.]—Where the Judge of a County Court, being dissatisfied with the verdict, orders a new trial, the Supreme Court will not interfere with his discretion on appeal. Cooper v. Higgins, 2 A.L.T., 8.

Time for Appeal.]—The time for an appeal from the judgment of a County Court begins to run from the last decision in the matter, e.g., from a decision on a point reserved, and not from the trial; and after the final judgment has been given, every previous objection is open on appeal. London and Lancashire Insurance Company v. Honey, 2 V.R. (L.,) 7.

Time for Appeal—Power of Judge to Extend—Act No. 345, Sec. 120—Rules 1881, Form 44—Notice of Appeal.]—It is not necessary that the notice of appeal should state that the requisite security has already been given, and therefore Form 44 is ultra vires. A County Court Judge pronounced his decision on December 14th, 1882, but the judgment was not entered by the registrar, and the registrar refused to accept security within the seven days mentioned in Sec. 120. The appellant, being misled by Form 44, and thinking it necessary that security should be given before notice of appeal, failed to give the notice within seven days from December 14th, and the Judge allowed him further time. Held that the seven days runs from the date when judgment is pronounced, and that the Judge had not power to extend the time. Appeal struck out. Murray v. Dabb, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 156; 5 A.L.T., 23.

Rules Regulating—Order 5, Rule 4.]—Rule 4 of Order 5 of the "County Court Rules," of the 16th September, 1869, which prescribes the time within which an appeal case must be transmitted to the Supreme Court, is inoperative, no penalty being provided by it for non-compliance. Clarke v. Cameron, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 449; 2 A.L.T., 88.

The rules are to prescribe the mode of procedure, and cannot impose a condition precedent upon a right of appeal clearly given by the "County Court Statute 1869." Ibid.

Transmission of Case—Rules—Order 5, Rules 4 and 5.]—Where a case had not been transmitted within the time limited by Rule 4, but the Judge after transmission endorsed upon it an order to enlarge the time, the Court refused to strike the case off the list. Hunt v. Barbour, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 189.

Setting Down Appeal—Notice—"Common Law Procedure Statute," Sec. 73.]—Where four days' notice of setting down an appeal is not given under Sec. 73 of the "Common Law Procedure Statute," this is no reason for striking it off; it must simply stand over till notice has been given. Phillips v. Byrne, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 178.

Right to Appeal—When it Accrues.]—Where the defendant in the County Court has claimed a direction, but a verdict has been entered for the plaintiff subject to leave reserved for the defendant to move for a nonsuit, there is no final decision of the Judge till the motion for the nonsuit has been heard, and the defendant has no right to appeal before making such motion. Henry v. Kidd, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 466.

Security for Costs—"County Court Statute," Sec. 120.]—On an appeal from the County Court the appellant must, under Sec. 120 of the "County Court Statute," pay into Court the amount of the judgment given against him, and £10, or give such security as shall be approved of by the registrar. Where plaintiff was nonsuited, and on appeal paid into Court £10, but not the amount of the costs given against him, Held that the Act meant the judgment to include the costs; and case struck out of the list. Lucas v. Murray, 1 A.J.R., 130.

Amount of Security.]—The amount of the judgment which an intending appellant must lodge, or give security for, includes the costs of the proceedings as well as the damages awarded. Anderson v. Ziegler, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 338.

Security for Amount of Judgment—Act No. 345, Sec. 120.]—Sec. 120 only requires security for the amount of the judgment, where the judgment itself is a question involved in or the subject of the appeal. Thompson v. Rowe, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 55.

Striking Out Appeal—Wrong Court—Act No. 345, Sec. 120—Bond.]—Where the bond entered into on an appeal wrongly stated the Court as the County Court at Stawell, and was, after the expiration of seven days altered to Hamilton, and did not bind the appellant to pay costs in case of not prosecuting the appeal as required by Sec. 120, the Court ordered the appeal to be struck out. Carroll v. Macgregor, 5 A.J.R., 65.

Security for Costs—What is Sufficient—"County Court Statute 1869," Sec. 120.]—On an appeal from the County Court, in giving security for costs, the appellant, instead of giving a bond for the required amount to the respondent, gave it to the Registrar of the Court as a trustee for the respondent. Held (dissentiente Stawell, C. J.,) that this was sufficient compliance with Sec. 120 of the "County Court Statute 1869." Playford v. Brown, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 467; 2 A.L.T., 101.

Insufficient Security—Waiver.]—On an appeal from a County Court, the amount of security given by the appellant was not in compliance with the Act, but after the case had been settled the agent of respondent's attorney accepted service of the case, and agreed to its being set down for hearing. Held that the objection was waived. Churchward v. Lyons, 2 A.J.R., 118.

Deposit of Judgment and Costs—Subsequent Withdrawal of Part.]—If the amount of a judgment and costs has been deposited in lieu of security for an appeal from a case in the County Court, and the registrar allows the appellant to withdraw part of the amount pending the appeal, the right of appeal is not thereby affected, since the registrar remains liable for the whole amount. Bank of Australasia v. Keirce, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 147.

Deposit by Way of Security—Cheque.]—The appellant's cheque is a sufficient deposit to entitle him to proceed with the appeal, if the registrar of the County Court chooses to accept it as cash. Whelan v. Hannigan, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 464.

Security for Untaxed Costs.]—In an appeal, the appellant lodged £10 to meet the costs of the appeal, but the costs of the action not having been taxed within the time for appealing, failed to lodge or give security for such costs. Held that the appellant might have taken out a summons to tax or tendered a sufficient sum to cover the costs, and that he had not done all he reasonably could. Case struck out. Griffith v. Clancey, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 161; 5 A.L.T., 24.

Bond of Two Sureties Justifying in Stock-in-Trade.]—Regina v. Stephen, ante column 262.

Bond as Security.]—Where the operative part of the bond complies with the Act, it is sufficient, even if the recitals do not so comply with the Act. Powell v. Gidney, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 20.

Bond as Security—Act No. 345, Secs. 18, 120.]—A bond as security for the prosecution of the appeal may be approved by the assistant registrar under Sec. 18, and if it be made simply for carrying out such order as the Supreme Court shall make or for payment of costs on dismissal of the appeal, it is insufficient, it should provide for the prosecution of the appeal; but the Court refused to make absolute a rule for striking out the appeal case where neither the bond itself nor a copy were produced. Aarons v. Lewis, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 317.

Money Deposited on Appeal—May be Paid Over Without Order.]—Jensen v. Hagan, ante column 266.

Statement of Case—Referring Back to County Court.]—The Supreme Court has power to refer a case, which has been stated on appeal from the County Court, back to the County Court to be rectified. The County Court Judge is, however, not to be directed to amend the case, but only to see if the evidence has been properly set out, and, if he thinks fit, to make any alteration he may choose. M'Mullen v. Fraser, 2 A.J.R., 117.

Form of Case—Judge's Notes of Evidence.]—Where a Judge signed a case for appeal "I, James F. Nolan," instead of "I, the Judge who tried the case," as directed by the rules, the case was remitted to be properly signed. Guy v. Pierce, 3 A.J.R., 39.

Discrepancy Between Case and Judge's Notes of Evidence.]—Every presumption should be made to reconcile the case as stated by the Judge with his notes of evidence. Davies v. Breading, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 107; 2 A.L.T., 128.

Setting Out Evidence in the Case.]—Where the evidence required by Sec. 120 was not included in the case, but a note of the evidence was placed before the Supreme Court by consent which contained only an incomplete and inaccurate fragment of the evidence, Held (per Higinbotham, J.,) that for that reason, viz., the incompleteness of the evidence, the appeal must be dismissed. Fletcher v. Buzolich, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 348, 353.

Although the evidence as furnished by the Judge's notes is very meagre, the Court will not scrutinise it too closely to discover reasons to reverse the decision. Guy v. Pierce, 3 A.J.R., 48.

Amendment—Where Judge May Amend.]—The initials of the County Court Judge to the rough draft of an appeal case, signifying his approval of that document as a draft only, cannot be regarded as his signature to the case for transmission to the Supreme Court. The case is not out of his hands finally until he has signed it in the ordinary way, and the seal of the Court has been attached to it. Up to that time he may further amend the case. Henry v. Kidd, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 466.

Special Case — Settled by Judge — No Evidence that Parties Could Not Agree—Act No. 29, Sec. 68.]—On an appeal by special case under the Act No. 29, Sec. 68, the case had been settled and signed by the County Court Judge, but there was nothing to show that the parties or their attorneys could not agree. The objection being insisted on, Held that the Supreme Court could not hear the case, and case struck out. Broadfoot v. Wilson, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 147.

Special Case — Settled by Judge — Consent of Parties—Act No. 29, Sec. 68.]—On an appeal by special case under the Act No. 29, Sec. 68, the County Court Judge had settled and signed the case, and on the face of the case there was nothing to show that the parties could not agree, but in the fold of the case was a consent by the parties' attorneys to the case being set down for argument before the Supreme Court. Held that the parties had agreed to waive the objections, and that the Supreme Court could hear the case. Cooke v. Coward, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 148.

This case was identical, save that the consent to the case being set down for hearing before the Supreme Court was on a separate piece of paper and was signed by the respondent's attorney only. Held that the consent was sufficient to show that the parties had agreed to waive the objection, and that the case could be heard. Rucker v. Lyall, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 149.

Case Signed by Judge—Presumption that Parties Differed.]—The fact of a County Court Judge stating that he had settled and signed an appeal case "in accordance with the provisions of Sec. 120 of the 'County Court Statute 1869,'" necessarily implies that the parties must have differed, since he possessed no power under the statute to settle the case if the parties had not differed. Martin v. Elsasser, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 481, 483.

Judge of County Court Desiring Case Sent Back.]—If the Judge of the County Court desires to make a communication to the Court, e.g., that he wishes an appeal case sent back to him that he might state what his charge to the jury was, he should make it direct to the Court and not through counsel. Brown v. Lyon, 4 A.L.T., 39.

The Court will not go behind the case as stated, nor send back a case containing a wrong direction to the Judge for re-statement. Currie v. McNeave, 1 A.L.T., 18.

Case Irregularly Drawn up—"County Court Rules of 1881," Sec. 269, 271.]—On an appeal from a Court Court the appeal case was drawn up by the appellant's attorney, and a copy was made by the respondent's attorney, who made certain alterations in it. The case was then sent to the Judge, who settled the statements in it without further communication with the respondent. It was contended that the case was irregularly drawn up, since by the rules the Judge had no power to settle a case until the respondent had stated whether he had disapproved of the draft as prepared by the appellant, and here the respondent had not done so. Held that the case was irregularly drawn up, and case placed at the bottom of the list in order to give the parties an opportunity to agree on the facts in dispute. Grant v. Gilligan, 6 A.L.T., 10.

Settling Appeal Case.]—Plaintiff's solicitor prepared an appeal case and sent it to defendant's solicitor, who made some alterations and returned it. Plaintiff's solicitor agreed with the alterations, prepared a copy and sent it to defendant's solicitor, who refused to sign it. Held that the proper remedy was to take out a summons in the County Court, calling upon defendant to show cause why the case should not be returned signed, or should not be settled by the Judge. Meury v. Mayor of Daylesford, 4 A.L.T., 150.

Settling Appeal Case—Removal of Judge.]—If a County Court Judge who tried a case has been removed before an appeal, the appeal case may be settled from his notes and signed by his successor. Bank of Australasia v. Keirce, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 147.

Settling Appeal Case—"County Court Rules 1881," Rules 269, 270—Non-Compliance With.]—In settling an appeal case in the County Court, Rules 269 and 270 of the "County Court Rules of 1881" should be strictly complied with; but if they are not complied with, the case will not necessarily be struck out, but may be sent back for re-statement. Mason v. Ryan, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 189.

Duty of County Court Judge.]—It is the duty of the County Court Judge to give the Court of Appeal the benefit of the evidence which he was able to take, and to accompany it with the exhibits, to enable the Court of Appeal to form an opinion, and he is not to throw the duty upon any one else. Bauld v. Williams, 6 A.L.T., 162.

Appeal Case Not Sealed.]—The want of a seal on an appeal case transmitted to the Supreme Court, under Sec. 120 of the "County Court Statute 1869," is a defect which can be supplied, and is only to be regarded on the question of costs. Mason v. Ryan, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 189.

Case Delivered to Attorney not Authorised to Receive it—Mandamus to State Another Case Refused.]—Where a special case had been stated, but owing to difficulties it had taken a long time before it was completed, and during this period the appellant was incarcerated in gaol, and the case was delivered to his attorney who was not authorised to receive it, and nothing more was heard of it, a mandamus to compel the Judge of the County Court to state another case was refused. Regina v. Pohlman, ex parte Thomson, 4 A.J.R., 29.

Delivery of Appeal Case to Respondent—Act No. 345, Sec. 120—Rules, Order 5, Rules 1 and 2—Extension of Time.]—Where an appellant had exceeded the fourteen days allowed in Order 5, Rules 1 and 2, for delivery, and applied for an extension of time, the County Court Judge refused on two grounds—(1) want of jurisdiction, (2) want of sufficient circumstances. Held that the Judge had jurisdiction to extend the time, as by Sec. 120 of the Act the right to appeal vests in the appellant fulfilling its requirement, but the Court refused by mandamus to interfere with the Judge's discretion as to there being no sufficient circumstances to justify the extension. Regina v. Hackett, ex parte Goodson, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 357; 1 A.L.T., 51.

Delivery of Copies to Judges.]—It is not necessary to deliver a copy to an absent Judge. When a Judge is absent from the colony, it is sufficient if the appellant furnishes one copy and the respondent another to the two Judges constituting the Court of Appeal under such circumstances. Aarons v. Lewis, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 317.

Taking Objections—Objection Appearing on the Face.]—Where a case stated for appeal was not sealed by the registrar of the County Court, in compliance with the County Court Practice, Order 5, Rule 4, the Court held that, inasmuch as the defect appeared on the face of the case, the proper time to take the objection was when the case was called on, and that the irregularity was no bar to the hearing the appeal, but merely a question of amendment with costs. Wrixon v. Macoboy, 2 A.L.T., 60.

Objection Not Taken Below.]—An objection which is not taken below, may, if fatal and incurable, be relied on in the Supreme Court on the appeal. White v. Ross, 4 A.L.T., 85.

What Points May be Taken on Appeal—Point Overruled.]—A point which was clearly raised in the plaint as a ground for a nonsuit and overruled, is open for argument on appeal, although it has not been specified in the grounds of appeal. Hill v. Willis, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 193; 2 A.L.T., 20.

A fresh point cannot be taken before Appellate Court for the first time which has not been taken before County Court. English v. White, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 14.

Title of Rule Nisi.]—An objection that the rule nisi for an appeal from the County Court is not entitled in any cause, though endorsed as the appeal "A. v. B." is good; but on such an objection the Court allowed the rule to be amended on payment of the costs of the rule. Lucas v. Murray, 1 A.J.R., 130.

Practice—Name of Cause.]—Per Curiam. It is extremely inadvisable that in appeal cases the names of parties should be transposed. It would be more convenient if a cause bore the same title through all its stages which it bore when it was first instituted. Marks v. Pett, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 342.

Payment Out of Sums Lodged in Lieu of Security —"County Court Rule," No. 93.]—On an appeal from a decision of the County Court, under which the plaintiff was nonsuited with costs, the plaintiff paid to the registrar the amount of the costs and £10 to abide the event of the appeal in lieu of giving security. There was no stay of proceedings, and the registrar paid the money to the defendant. The plaintiff succeeded on appeal, and the order allowing the appeal was drawn up and contained a clause ordering the registrar to pay the sums lodged with him by the plaintiff back to the plaintiff. On an application to amend the order by striking out this clause, Held that the registrar was not justified in paying the money to the defendant under Rule No. 93, since the money was not lodged to the credit of the cause, but only in lieu of security to enable plaintiff to appeal, and application to amend the order refused. Moore v. Prest, 1 A.J.R., 163.

Varying Order of Appeal—Act No. 345, Sec. 120.]—Under Sec. 120 the Supreme Court may impose and insert in the order of appeal such terms and conditions as may appear necessary and proper, the subject having been brought under its consideration at the time; but the Court cannot, by an order, ex post facto, insert any new condition into the original decision. Corbett v. Bachelor, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 33.

New Trial.]—Where a new trial was ordered in an appeal from the County Court, the Supreme Court held that the trial should take place before a Judge only, to be set down at the next Nisi Prius Sittings after list of causes before a special jury of four, and before the list of causes for assessment of damages. Morley v. Rice, 3 A.J.R., 30.

New Trial—Damages Certain.]—Where in an appeal the decision of the County Court Judge is reversed, both parties have been fully heard, and the damages are certain, there being nothing for the jury to assess, the Court, to save expense, will not order a new trial, but will enter judgment for the amount certain. Allison v. Byrne, 3 V.R. (L.,) 155; 3 A.J.R., 67.

New Trial Before Judge of Supreme Court Without a Jury.]—A rule absolute in the first instance was granted, making the decision of the Judge a rule of Court upon a certificate of his decision by the Judge. Queen Insurance Company v. King, 5 A.J.R., 124.

Appeal from Nonsuit—"County Court Statute 1869," Sec. 120.]—Where a plaintiff is nonsuited against his will, and the County Court Judge has heard evidence on both sides, the Supreme Court has power under Sec. 120 of the "County Court Statute 1869," to consider the merits of the case, and give judgment accordingly. Dobson v. Sinclair, 2 A.L.T., 8.

Appeal from Nonsuit—Evidence Not Gone Into.] —Where an appeal is allowed from a nonsuit without going into evidence, and the case was not heard in the County Court, though it may be scarcely necessary that the case should be heard by a Judge of the Supreme Court, yet as the Court would not under the circumstances grant a mandamus to compel the Judge of the County Court to hear the case, Semble that the better course is to order a hearing before a Judge of the Supreme Court. Solomons v. Mulcahy, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 462.

Damages—Limit of Jurisdiction.]—In a County Court action the plaintiff sued on three counts, and the jury assessed separate damages on the three counts. The Court refused to interfere with the damages, although it directed a re-hearing and refused leave to increase the claim to £500, inasmuch as a re-hearing before a Judge of the Supreme Court does not make it a Supreme Court action. Bernstein v. Blashki, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 145.

Notice to Strike Out Case — Appearance of Appellant Not Necessary.]—The appellant is not bound to appear where notice of motion has been given by the respondent to strike out the appeal case, and, if he do not appear, the respondent can only obtain a rule nisi. Bank of Australasia v. Keirce, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 147.

Case Ordered to be Re-heard in Supreme Court—Statement of Defence—"County Court Rules 1881," Rule 157.]—Rule 157 of the "County Court Rules 1881," under which a defendant may be called upon to state his defence, is not applicable to a case ordered to be re-heard in the Supreme Court. Slack v. Terry, 5 A.L.T., 167.

Equity Appeal—Accounts Taken Before the Master Not Before the Registrar.]—A creditor's suit for administration in the County Court having been dismissed upon a preliminary objection, upon appeal the order was reversed and the suit directed to be heard in the Supreme Court. Upon the ordinary decree for administration being made, the accounts were directed to be taken before the Master-in-Equity, and not the Registrar of the County Court. Martin v. Keane, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 115.

In Suit — How Considered.] — Where the Registrar taxed costs, though there had been no adjudication thereupon, and the appeal case in no way disclosed what was the subject of the costs directed to be paid, the regular course would be that there should be a re-hearing, but, if the parties wish it, the Appeal Court will dispose of the question by examining the costs on affidavit, showing the subject of them. Thomson v. Andrew, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 48, 56; 5 A.L.T., 181.

Of Person Served With Notice of Appeal.]—A party to a suit served with notice of appeal is entitled to his costs of appearing on the appeal. Cunningham v. Gundry, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 51.

When and How Granted.]—On an appeal from a County Court, the costs are in the discretion of the Supreme Court, notwithstanding that the appellant succeeds; and costs will not be allowed when the appeal is decided on a point not taken in the Court below. Great Gulf Company v. Sutherland, 4 A.J.R., 164.

Where Appellant Succeeds in Part.] — In an appeal from a County Court where the appellant succeeds as to part only of the appeal, the general rule as to costs is not to be departed from, and he will be entitled to the costs of the appeal. Fenton v. Earls, 1 V.R. (L.,) 150; 1 A.J.R., 132.

Where Appeal Allowed on Ground of Misdirection.] —Where an appeal from the County Court is allowed on the ground of misdirection, the practice of the Supreme Court, in case of a rule absolute for a new trial, should be followed, i.e., each party must pay his own costs occasioned by the mistake of the Judge, i.e., of the County Court trial. Green v. Godfrey, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 50.

Appellant Not Appearing.]—Where an appellant did not appear the case was struck out, and respondent allowed his costs. Ryan v. Gray, 5 A.J.R., 16, 17.

Rule to Remit Case for Amendment.]—The appellant is entitled to costs up to the time when the respondent offered to consent to an amendment, but if the respondent does not offer to pay them at that time, the party obtaining the rule (the appellant) may go on, and is entitled to his costs. Whelan v. Hannigan, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 35.

Appeal—County Court Scale, Paragraphs 51-54.] —Per Williams, J. (in Chambers.) Paragraphs 51–54 do not refer to the respondent's costs at all; they relate only to the costs incurred by appellants in bringing case before the Court. Mayor of Sandhurst v. Gruner, 5 A.L.T., 12.

Summons for Apportionment of County Court Costs — Act No. 345, Secs. 38, 120.] — Where a defendant after judgment took out a summons for the apportionment of the County Court costs, which was dismissed, Held that Sec. 38 required such application to be made at the trial. Thompson v. Rowe, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 55.

Re-Hearing in Suprsme Court — Act No. 345, Sec. 41—Scale of Costs.]—Where, on appeal from the County Court in an action of trespass, the Supreme Court directed a re-hearing before the Supreme Court, in which the plaintiff recovered a verdict with nominal damages, and the Supreme Court Judge refused to certify that the action was to try a right, Held that Sec. 41 of the Act did not apply; and as to the scale of costs, it was for the Prothonotary to tax them as he thought right, subject to a review. Randall v. Smith, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 56.

Re-hearing—Costs Theretofore and Thereinafter Incurred.]—In a rule allowing an appeal from a County Court, and directing a re-hearing before a Judge of the Supreme Court, it was provided that the plaintiff should have the costs of the appeal, and the costs theretofore incurred (except the costs of the trial in the County Court), and that the costs "thereinafter" to be incurred should be borne by the unsuccessful party. Held, per Holroyd, J. (in Chambers,) that costs "thereinafter incurred" included the costs of the re-hearing. Slack v. Terry, 6 A.L.T., 30.

Counsel's Fees—Settling Special Case—Attendance Before Judge to Settle Case.]—Per Williams, J. (in Chambers.) A reasonable fee to counsel for settling the appeal case and attendance consequent thereon should be allowed; and where the Judge has been in the habit of hearing parties on a summons to settle the case in the event of disagreement, counsel's fees on the summons should be allowed. Brundell v. Wane, 3 A.L.T., 36.

Practice.]—The practice as to costs on appeals from the County Court, which are allowed for the future, is as follows:—The appellant gets the costs of the appeal unless the Court thinks proper to take them away. The party who ultimately succeeds in the action gets the costs of the actions both in the County Court and in the Supreme Court, except the costs of the trial in the County Court. Each party bears his costs of this trial. The costs, both of the appeal and of the action, are taxed at the same time, and if the same party be not entitled to both, the less is deducted from the greater and an allocatur is given for the balance. Marks v. Pett, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 342.

COURT.

Relation of Supreme Court to District Courts.]—The Supreme Court of Victoria does not stand in the same relation to the District Courts of the Colony as the Queen's Bench in England does to the Central Criminal Court there, the Circuit Court is merely the Supreme Court sitting on circuit as a Circuit Court, and is not a distinct Court. Regina v. Costello, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 86.

Supreme Court—Duty With Regard to Revenue.]—Per Barry, J. The Supreme Court, which acts as the Exchequer Court of England does in matters of revenue, is bound to protect the revenues of the Crown in this colony. Fitzgerald v. Archer, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 40.

Petition for Divorce.]—The Judges sitting in Banco in term have not jurisdiction to accept petitions in divorce. Bell v. Bell, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 244.

Jurisdiction of Court to Rescind Order Made in Chambers.]—A rule nisi was granted to rescind an order made by a Judge in Chambers discharging, on a writ of Habeas Corpus, H. G. from custody. Rule discharged on argument. In re Glass, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 103.

Judge Sitting Under "Emergency Clause."]—A Judge sitting in the vacation under the "Emergency Clause" as the Supreme Court, is bound by previous decisions of that Court. Ex parte Nyberg, 4 A.L.T., 83.

Overruling Decisions.]—Per Barry and Williams, J. J. Courts of co-ordinate jurisdiction do not directly overrule their own decisions; the safest guide is stare decisis. The Tommy Dodd Company v. Patrick, 5 A.J R., 14.

Supreme Court—Central Criminal Court.]—The Central Criminal Court is entirely distinct from the Supreme Court, and its records are not before the Supreme Court unless brought there. Sec. 23 of Act 502 applies only to trials upon a record of the Supreme Court. The Court refused a rule for a new trial in the case of a prisoner convicted and sentenced in the Criminal Court of a misdemeanour. Regina v. Hall, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 270.

Supreme Court—Practice.]—The Supreme Court is not bound by the practice of any of the Courts at Westminster, but, in respect of matters in which it has no practice of its own, will, if there be a difference of practice among the Courts at Westminster, follow that of the Queen's Bench. Re Phelps, 6 V.L R. (L.,) 37.

Court in Banco—Postponement of Trial of Issues Sent by Primary Judge in Equity Pending Appeal.]—The Court sitting in Banco for common law business will not entertain a motion for a postponement of the trial of issues sent down to Nisi Prius by the Primary Judge in Equity, pending an appeal to the Full Court upon the direction that the issues should be tried, and upon the form in which they are stated, such motion being in effect an attempt to obtain an appeal from the refusal of the Primary Judge, in the exercise of his discretion, to stay the proceedings. White v. Hoddle, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 183; 2 A.L.T., 18.

Jurisdiction—Supreme Court—Case Stated by General Sessions—New Trial.]—Sec. 390 of the "Criminal Law and Practice Statute 1864," empowering the Supreme Court to direct a venire de novo or new trial to be had, applies to ordering a new trial to be had before the Court in which the first trial took place. The Supreme Court, therefore, cannot, on a case stated by General Sessions, order a fresh trial to be had before itself. Regina v. Herbert, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 205.

Supreme Court Rules—Construction.]—Where the written Rules of Court and the Schedules to those Rules are inconsistent, the Schedules are overruled. Per Molesworth, J., "I apprehend, upon the analogy of cases where such questions have arisen under Acts of Parliament, the Schedule must be held to be overruled by the enacting part of the Rule." Jamieson v. Allen, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 19.

Rules of Court—15 Vic., No. 10, Sec. 32—Power to Relax.]—Rules made under 15 Vic., No. 10, Sec. 32 ("Supreme Court Act") are given by that Act the force of Acts of Parliament, and the Court has no power to make a dispensation with them. In re Gair, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 108.

An articled clerk made an application for permission to be examined before the time provided by the Regulæ Generales of October 16th, 1882. Held that though the application was one entitled to favourable consideration, the Court had no power to relax the Rules, and application refused. Ibid.

1. CONSTRUCTION OF.

Repugnant—Proviso.]—A mortgage deed contained the following covenant:—"The mortgagors do hereby for themselves jointly, and each of them doth for him separately, their and his heirs, &c., covenant with the said corporation that the said mortgagors, their executors, &c., shall and will on such demand as aforesaid, well and truly pay unto the said corporation the said principal sum with interest on the same as aforesaid: Provided always, the covenant last aforesaid shall not be construed to affect or extend the personal liability of the said mortgagors beyond the amount unpaid by them respectively as members of the said company on their respective shares in the same." Held, on demurrer to a plea setting up the proviso, that the proviso as repugnant to the covenant was void. Oriental Bank v. Goujon, 2 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 10.

Of Trustee—When Personal.]—E., M. and L., partners in a contract, dissolved partnership, and E. and M. retired from the contract. By the deed dissolving the partnership, it was provided that E. and M. should each by L.'s bond be secured a sum equal to one-tenth of the profits of the contract throughout, and be indemnified against losses. L. was, in fact, only a trustee for others. Subsequently L. was removed as trustee, and W. appointed in his place, L.'s bonds being given up by E. and M. on their obtaining a covenant from W. to pay and do that which L. was bound by his bonds to pay and do. The contract being completed, E. and M. filed a bill against W. and his cestuisque trustent for an account and payment of a sum equal to one-tenth of the profits. Held, that E. and M. were only entitled to a personal decree against W., and not against the parties ultimately liable to indemnify him. Evans v. Guthridge, 1 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 119, 132.

Covenant to Pump a Mine and Keep the Water "Forked" in the Shaft "Constantly and Without Stoppage"—Sunday.]—By deed S. covenanted that he would for two years, constantly and without stoppage, work and continue working the pumping gear erected on a claim, and would pump and continue pumping the mine, and would keep the water constantly "forked" in the engine or water shaft. S. during the two years pumped the mine and kept the water "forked" in the shaft, but owing to the engine being more than equal to keeping the water down it was necessary at times to stop owing to the pumps sucking, and S. always stopped the engine on Sundays. The water was, however, kept under, and no damage was done to the mine. Held that S. had sufficiently complied with the covenant, and was entitled to recover the remuneration agreed upon in the deed. Stevens v. Craven, 2 V.R. (L.,) 37; 2 A.J.R., 35.

Not to Cut, Destroy, or Injure Timber Unless the Trees were Grubbed.]—The construction of this covenant is, that the covenantor grub at the time of cutting, and not merely before the end of the term of the lease in which it is contained, the two things not being severable. Urquhart v. Brooksbank, 5 A.J.R., 162.

Movables—Fixtures.]—Where a lessee covenanted that the assignees should sell to the lessor certain buildings, engines, machinery, implements, &c., upon the land demised at a price to be agreed upon by the assignees and lessor, and "in case such valuation could not be agreed upon" at a price to be fixed by arbitration, Held that such a covenant did not run with the land as to moveables, but semble the contract was severable and would run with the land as to fixtures. Malmsbury Confluence Gold Mining Company v. Tucker, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 213.

Theatre—Covenant for Account and for Affording Facilities for Ascertaining Correctness of Accounts—Lessor and Lessee.]—A lessee of a theatre covenanted with the lessor that he would daily furnish an account showing gross returns of the day previous, and would produce books for inspection, and afford every facility for ascertaining correctness of such daily returns. Held, that the covenant did not import that lessee should check returns in person; he might do it in person or by any other person as to whom lessor could have no reasonable ground of complaint; that under covenant to produce books the lessee was impliedly bound to keep books giving reasonable information, and a list of persons whom he allowed to pass free into the theatre accessible to lessor; that words "afford every facility" were not to be restricted to lessor himself, but should extend to his agent, and that words included the ascertainment of facts before the account, such as the number of free passes, with which the account, if true, should correspond. Injunctions ordered to be issued for any of those purposes if necessary. Aarons v. Lewis, 3 V.L.R., (E.,) 79, 234.

Penalty or Liquidated Damages.]—See Gleeson v. Kingston, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 243, post under PENALTY.

Recital in Deed of Agreement to Pay—No Express Covenant to Pay—Construed as Covenant to Pay.]—Bruce v. Kerr, post under DEED—Construction.

Covenant to Refer Partnership Disputes to Arbitration.]—Certain persons agreed to provide money for establishing the works of a partnership, and if any of them should fail to do so he should pay interest at a fixed rate, and also agreed that if W., one of them, would provide the money the others would repay him. The deed of partnership contained a covenant to refer all differences and disputes arising between the partners during the term of the partnership to arbitration. W. provided the money, and all the partners repaid him but B., whom W. sued for his contribution. B. pleaded the covenant to refer. Held that the fact that the amount advanced to each partner by W. was ascertainable by reference to the partnership deed did not make the transaction a partnership matter, and judgment for plaintiff. Walker v. Born, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 447.

Joint or Several—Ambiguity — Evidence dehors to Explain.]—Where in the construction of a covenant there is a latent difficulty, or the language admits of two constructions, evidence dehors is admissible, not to explain away a difficulty patent, but to assist the Court in arriving at the intention of the parties. A covenant by A., his heirs, executors, &c., with B. and C., their executors, administrators, &c., construed as a joint covenant. Henderson v. Woodburn, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 413; 3 A.L.T., 37.

Cancellation.]—A covenant to pay money may be discharged by the simple cancellation of the deed, before breach, with the consent of both parties. Nicholson v. Merry, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 65.

2. RELATING TO LAND.

Covenant for Further Assurance—Lost Deed—Grantor Not Compelled to Execute a Duplicate After Many Years.]—G. lent his mother, who was married again to R., £100, to go in part payment of the purchase of certain land. The Crown Grant of this land issued to R., who, in February, 1856, by deed conveyed half of the land to G. as for £100 paid. G. entered into possession and built a house, and afterwards lost the deed. Disputes arose as to ownership, and, in 1874, G. brought a suit, seeking, inter alia, to compel R. to execute a duplicate of the lost deed under the covenant for further assurance in the deed of February, 1856. Held that, as the lost deed was eighteen years old and its efficacy had been long disputed, and as there was no distinct evidence of the language of the covenant, and no averment of conditions precedent to the right to enforce having been complied with, the relief sought would not be granted. Quære whether such a general right for further assurance can be enforced. Geraghty v. Russell, 5 A.J.R., 89, 90.

To Repair—Breach, What is.]—P. was tenant of G. of an hotel for three years under a covenant to keep and deliver up the premises in good repair as at present, fair wear and tear excepted. Before the expiration of the tenancy P. agreed with G. for a further tenancy, G. being permitted to enter and repair for the preservation of the property. G. entered, and by his workmen continued to repair for six weeks. G. refused to grant the further lease and demurred to a bill by P. for specific performance on the ground (amongst others) that the repairs were only what the plaintiff ought to have effected to prevent forfeiture of the license, and that by not effecting them P. had broken the covenant to repair. Held that there was no breach of covenant by P. Polleykett v. Georgeson, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 207.

Covenant to Repair—Whether it Runs With the Land — Continuous Obligation.] — A lessor covenanted for himself, executors, administrators, and assigns to repair "forthwith" a certain part of the premises leased, and within a specified time to erect certain buildings. Held that these covenants did not run with the reversion, but fell within the second class in Spencer's Case, and the assignees being named would be bound; that each was a covenant to do a thing within a certain time, and was not of continuing obligation, and as it could only be broken once for all, the assignee was not liable unless it had not been broken before he became assignee. Rankin v. Danby, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 278; 5 A.L.T., 92.

CRIMINAL INFORMATION.

Defamatory Libel—Act 15 Vic., No. 10, Secs. 12, 13—19 Vic., No. 4, Sec. 10.]—There are only two kinds of proceeding by information in criminal matters, one under the 12th Section of Act No. 10, viz., an information prosecuted by the Crown Prosecutor, and the other filed by a private person with the leave of the Court under Sec. 13. "Private prosecutor" in Sec. 10 of the "Libel Act," 19 Vic., No. 4, means a person filing an information under Sec. 13 of Act No. 10. In a case where the Crown Prosecutor had signed an information for defamatory libel, and left the conduct of the case to a private individual, and the defendant had been convicted and fined, on a summons to amend the postea with a view to costs, Held that such individual was not a "private prosecutor" within meaning of Sec. 10 of the "Libel Act," and had no locus standi. Summons dismissed. Regina v. O'Farrell. 2 W. & W. (L.,) 117.

Libel—Complainant Obtaining a Commitment for Trial by Justices.]—Where F. summoned K. before justices for a libel, and K. was committed for trial, the Court discharged a rule nisi for criminal information, refusing to interfere where F. had obtained redress before the justices. *The Queen, ex partc Farrell v. I. ABDUCTION.

Act No. 233, Sec. 52—Girl Taken in Absence of Father.]—W. was convicted of abduction. It appeared that the father of the girl abduced had been absent when the abduction took place. Held, that it was to be presumed that she had been taken against his will. Conviction affirmed. Regina v. West, 5 A.J.R., 19.

Abduction of Girl Under Age With Future Interest in Property—Evidence.]—T. was charged under Sec. 50 of the "Criminal Law and Practice Statute 1864," with the abduction of a girl under age, and having a future interest in certain personal estate. The only evidence of such future interest was that of the girl's parents, who had been informed that she was entitled under her grandfather's will to receive £1000 upon coming of age; that her sister actually did receive such a sum under the will upon coming of age, and that this had been told to T. Held sufficient to sustain a conviction. Regina v. Taylor, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 95.

II. Arson and Burning.

Evidence — Existing Policy of Insurance.]—A.H.T. was convicted of arson, but questions were reserved as to whether certain acts and admissions by the defendant herself were receivable in evidence of a subsisting insurance. Held that they were. Conviction upheld. Regina v. Thompson, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 23.

Bark Hut.]—A bark hut which has been used as a dwelliing may be the subject of arson though there be no evidence of any conveyance of the property, and though it does not appear whether the land on which it stands is Crown land. Regina v. Rowden, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 230.

III. Assault and Battery.

O'L. was convicted of a robbery in company, the property taken being described as "a piece of calico." The evidence showed that the robbers were in company with B., and saw him pull out of his pocket a purse containing money. B. suspecting their intentions changed the purse from his right to his left-hand pocket. Afterwards the robbers attacked him outside, and dragged out the whole of his right-hand pocket (intended by the piece of calico in the information,) but got no booty. There was no evidence of how long the pocket was held or what became of it. It was left to the jury "if there was evidence of robbery of the pocket if its materials were calico." Held that as the whole pocket was torn out, that fact in itself was evidence to go to the jury as to the intention. Conviction supported. Regina v. O'Leary, 2 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 13.

Indecent Assault.] — M. was convicted of an indecent assault upon an adult woman. The information contained two counts, one for assault with intent to commit a rape, the other for an "indecent assault," but contained no count for a common assault. Held that, although an "indecent assault" upon an adult woman was not a specific offence, yet an "indecent assault" is nothing more than a "common assault" with circumstances of indecency on the part of the offender; that the conviction had a sufficient basis in the information. Conviction affirmed. Regina v. Messenger, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 253.

"Criminal Law and Practice Statute" No. 233, Sec. 369.]—An information charged L. with having feloniously caused grievous bodily harm to another, and the jury found him guilty of common assault. Held that in the absence of special enactment the misdemeanour and felony could not be included in one information, and similarly the verdict could not stand, as it would amount to an insertion in the information of an improper count. Sec. 369 of Act No. 233 is in favour of this. Conviction quashed. Regina v. Longmuir, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 237; N.C. 58.

Robbery—Under Arms — Servant — Property of Master—Presentment.]—A conviction, under Sec. 111 of the "Criminal Law and Practice Statute 1864," can be supported upon a presentment for robbery under arms from a servant of the property of his master, in the absence of the latter, such presentment being good, even before plea. Regina v. De Theuars, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 23; 1 A.L.T., 134.

Robbery under arms is merely robbery with an aggravation. Ibid.

IV. Bigamy.

What Constitutes.]—S., within seven years of her first husband's disappearance, married again. Shortly before her second marriage she received a letter informing her that her first husband was dead. She married again, and on the reappearance of her first husband was tried for bigamy. The jury brought in a verdict of guilty, with a rider strongly recommending her to mercy, on the ground that she had been informed that her husband was dead. On questions of law reserved, it was argued that the rider made the verdict equivalent to "Not Guilty." Held that the verdict "Guilty" was rightly found. Per Stawell, C. J.—Seven years is the limit within which a second marriage is entered into at the risk of the party who ventures to marry again without full knowledge of the death of the first husband or wife, as the case may be. Per Molesworth, J.—The offence of bigamy is entirely the creation of the statute. Knowledge within seven years was never a necessary ingredient of this offence; the fact which constitutes the felony in bigamy is the second marriage; and the question as to whether, when that second marriage is entered into by the parties, their status is such as to make it criminal, is one on which they must be informed at their own peril so far as being liable to conviction. Regina v Smith, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 325.

Evidence of First Marriage.] — S. being tried for bigamy, her father gave evidence as follows: —"I am a Roman Catholic, and the marriage was performed again by Father ——, a Roman Catholic priest, in a house where prayers were said. There was no church built. I know the ceremony of my own church, and it was performed. Mr. and Mrs. S. (the latter the prisoner,) lived together for thirteen years. They took each other for man and wife. I cannot tell what was said, because it was in Latin. I am not certain whether there was a ring." The Judge refused to direct an acquittal. The jury brought in a verdict of guilty, with a strong recommendation to mercy on the ground that S. had, shortly before her second marriage, received a letter informing her of her husband's death. Two questions of law were reserved, one of which was, that the first marriage was not proved. Held, dissentiente Williams, J., that there was sufficient evidence of the first marriage. Ibid.

Evidence of First Marriage—Admission by Wife of Protection Order Against First Husband.]—On a charge against a woman of having committed bigamy, the only evidence of her marriage with her first husband was an admission in an affidavit sworn by her that she had a protection order against him. On a search in the Registry only one such order, dated some years before the trial, was found. Held that this evidence was sufficient to support a conviction. Regina v. Moore, 4 A.J.R., 74.

"Marriage and Matrimonial Causes Statute," No. 268, Secs. 4, 10, 27—Presumption in Favour of Compliance with Preliminaries to Marriage.]—Y. was convicted of bigamy. At the trial it appeared that there was no evidence of any compliance with the requirements of Sec. 4, except that the second marriage was solemnised by a minister of religion ordinarily officiating as such, and there was no proof of declarations under Sec. 10. Held that the Court must presume that all the preliminaries to the marriage ceremony had been duly performed. Conviction affirmed. Regina v. Young, 5 A.J.R., 19.

Regularity of Second Marriage—Declaration on Second Marriage Not on Oath—Act No. 268, Secs. 10, 29.]—M. had been convicted of bigamy, and it appeared that as to the second marriage, which was regular in other respects, the parties had made a declaration not on oath, and that they had not been asked whether they objected to an oath on conscientious grounds. Held that, by Secs. 10 and 29 of the Act, an option was given as to an oath or solemn declaration. Conviction confirmed. Regina v. Medcalf, 5 A.J.R., 76.

Act No. 268, Sec. 14—Marriage of a Minor.]—G. was convicted of bigamy. As to the first marriage, it appeared that the woman was under 21, and that the mother had consented to the marriage, but there was a doubt as to the consent having been given in writing. Held that the maxim omnia praesumuntur rite esse acta applied, and that Sec. 14 meant this:—The marriage ought not to take place without the consent, but if it does take place it is valid. Conviction affirmed. Regina v. Griffin, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 278.

First Marriage—Validity of.]—See Regina v. Benson, 4 V.L.R., (L.,) 21, post under Husband and Wife—Marriage.

V. Coining and Uttering Counterfeit Coin.

Possessing Materials for Coining—Evidence.]—On on information against W. for unlawfully having in his possession a mould and implements used for the purpose of coining, the evidence against W. was that the mould and implements were found in the house of B., who had been convicted on a similar information; that W. had lived in the house of B., and had on several occasions purchased materials for coining similar to some that were found in the house. Held that on the evidence W. was properly convicted. Regina v. Wilson, 1 A.J.R., 118.

Medals Passed as Money.]—McC. passed three medals as coins, and though the fraud was palpable it appeared that a witness had thought that one of these was genuine since he received it and gave change for it. Held that McC.'s conviction was right. Regina v. McCall, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 136.

VI. Conspiracy.

Evidence of.]—C., K. and W. were accused of conspiracy to defraud a company, and K. and W. were convicted. The only evidence to connect C. with the conspiracy was that he had bid at the sale of the company's property made under an execution put in by W. for a debt, and that a copy of a letter was found among W.'s papers addressed to C. requesting him to bid for the property. C. swore that he never received the letter, and could not read it if he had received it. Held that this, though suspicious, was not sufficient to connect C. with the conspiracy. Regina v. Capes, 1 A.J.R., 158.

To Cheat and Defraud.]—In an information for conspiracy to cheat and defraud one D.M.P. of moneys, several overt acts were laid, but the evidence only pointed to the last, which was for "causing twenty-two casks to be sent to P.'s store containing for the most part a dark greasy substance, not tallow, for the purpose of having it sold as good tallow." There was conflicting evidence as to whether this substance was tallow, and the jury were directed to convict if they thought that the information was true, averring a part filling of the casks with a substance of inferior value, even although they might believe the substance was in fact tallow. On this the jury convicted. Held that the words "not tallow" could not be rejected, as the conspiracy was not laid as an overt act, because a conspiracy could not be charged, and an overt act laid under one and the same form of words. Conviction quashed. New trial ordered. Regina v. Govan, 3 V.R. (L.,) 221; 3 A.J.R., 110.

Conspiracy — Statements by Co-Conspirators.]—S. and E. being in custody on a charge of conspiracy, S. made a statement as to E.'s guilt to a detective. This statement was repeated by the detective to E. who declined to say anything about it, acting under advice. Held that E.'s silence did not form evidence from which the jury were at liberty to draw any inference as from an admission. Conviction quashed. M. was convicted on the same charge as S. and E., and the evidence consisted of a statement made by M. to S. after S. was taken into custody, M. being free at the time, and of a statement by S. to the prosecutor. Held, that the former statement was admissible as it was for the purpose of preventing the recovery of the property fraudently obtained, but the latter was not admissible without a caution to the jury that it was to be disregarded unless S. was convicted. Regina v. Eccles and Merritt, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 36; 2 A.L.T., 117.

Charge of Conspiracy Based on an Act Supposed to be Unlawful, but in fact Lawful.]—Where a charge of conspiracy is based on an act supposed to be unlawful, but in fact lawful, the charge cannot be sustained. Regina v. Taylor, 2 W & W. (L.,) 23.

VII. Embezzlement by Clerks and Servants.

Who is a Clerk or Servant—Change of Employment by Agent.]—S. was hired by a firm to act as storeman and traveller at a branch, and had acted solely under the terms of his hiring. The firm subsequently appointed at the branch a person as agent and sole manager, and gave him alone authority to collect moneys of the firm. The agent allowed a new practice to grow up, under which S. collected the moneys; and S. having misappropriated the moneys was convicted, but after conviction the Judge reserved a point of law. Held that S., having submitted to the practice allowed by the agent, could not gainsay it, and contend that he did not receive the moneys by virtue of his employment as clerk or servant, and that so far he was rightly convicted; but, there being no evidence that the agent had any authority to alter the employment of S., and the Court doubting very much if the jury should not have been asked to find specifically on that point, and, thinking that the benefit of the doubt should be given to the prisoner, directed a new trial. Regina v. Stewart, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 313.

Clerk or Servant—Who is.]—The rules of a friendly society provided that the treasurer should be paid in accordance with a resolution of the society. C. had been acting as treasurer for some time; but no resolution for paying him had been passed. C. appropriated the funds of the society, and was convicted of embezzlement. Held, on special case, that C. was clerk or servant of the society within the meaning of Sec. 139 of No. 233, as he might under the rules enforce some payment; and semble, that even if he were to receive no remuneration, the conviction would be affirmed. Regina v. Cantlon, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 24.

Collector for Hospital, and also for Private Persons.]—H. was convicted of embezzlement. It appeared that he was appointed collector for a hospital, being paid by salary and commission, and he had to account to the committee for moneys received by him. He had on several occasions paid over the moneys by means of his own cheques; H. also collected debts for private persons. Held that there was evidence to show that H. was the servant of the committee, and conviction affirmed. Regina v. Herbert, 4 A.J.R., 89.

By Servant of the Crown—Act No. 233, Sec. 141—Evidence of Appointment.]—O'F. was convicted as under Sec. 141 of No. 233, for embezzling moneys received by him as a Crown servant. There was evidence that O'F. had issued licenses for the occupation of Crown lands under Sec. 47 of the "Land Act 1869," and that he embezzled moneys received by him in his capacity of licensing clerk, and that he had paid over some of the moneys received to the Crown. Held that there was sufficient evidence of his being a servant of the Crown, and conviction affirmed. Regina v. O'Ferrall, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 81.

What is Not Embezzlement — Appropriation of Money by Secretary of Secret Society whose Rules are Not Registered.]—A secret society within the meaning of 39 Geo. III., Cap. 123, and 57 Geo. III., Cap. 19, duly registered its rules. It also registered bye-laws made by a board who had the control of a fund for the widows and orphans of members. This board subsequently made other bye-laws, which were submitted to the revising officer, but were not certified by him, and therefore not registered. Under these the secretary had to receive contributions to the fund, and the management of the fund was vested in trustees. W., who was secretary, appropriated moneys contributed to the fund and received by him under the new rules. He was convicted of embezzlement upon an information which stated the property of the fund and contributions to it to be in the trustees under the new rules. On questions reserved, Held that, as the rules were not registered, the moneys were not the moneys of the society, and judgment for the prisoner. Regina v. Wood, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 371.

What is Embezzlement.]—Embezzlement consists in the appropriation by the servant of the property of the employer before it reaches his actual possession. Defendant was clerk and traveller of N. B. and Co. He was indebted to J. and P., who were indebted to N. B. and Co. Defendant fraudulently credited J. and P. in their account with N. B. and Co. with the sum he owed them, and received J. and P.'s receipt as for that sum. Held that this was no embezzlement as the moneys purloined were not legally the property of the employers, and the employers could still recover the amount due from P. and J. Regina v. Sydenham, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 16.

What is.]—Embezzlement, in contradistinction to larceny, may be styled an act of the mind—a mental operation—the feloniously appropriating property received by a person as the agent or clerk of another. The property is in the possession of the accused, and no question arises as to the cepit or asportavit, just as in the case of a person charged with appropriating property found by him, there is a clear and obvious distinction between the act itself, and the evidence of that act. Regina v. Draper, 1 V.R. (L.,) 39; 1 A J.R., 46.

What Is.]—C. was in B.'s employ, and his duty was to collect the moneys received from the sale of coals, and after paying expenses to remit or account for balances once a month. Being in difficulties, he operated on the cash credit, drawing cheques to a large amount to pay off his private debts, and he opened an account with himself in the ledger, debiting himself with the sums so drawn; he confessed to B., offering to pay off the debt by instalments. Held that C. was guilty of embezzlement. Regina v. Church, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 153; 5 A.L.T., 23.

What is Sufficient Evidence.]—Where there was evidence that defendant had purloined certain amounts, but no evidence pointing out the person from whom he received a particular portion, or by which any particular portion could be traced, conviction sustained on the ground that there was evidence to show a particular embezzlement of an amount on any day, though that amount might possibly have consisted of several smaller sums deducted from other amounts received on such day. Regina v. Ashford, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 171.

What Evidence Sufficient to Support a Conviction for Embezzlement.]—Evidence of a general deficiency held sufficient to uphold a conviction for embezzlement, affirming Regina v. Ashford, [2 W. & W. (L.,) 171.] Regina v. Monckton, 3 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 25.

Evidence.]—A bank clerk passed a cheque into the bank, but to his own account, and not in accordance with the directions accompanying it when he received it in the course of his duty. He subsequently by means of a fictitious credit placed a sum equal to the amount of the cheque to the credit of the person to whose credit the cheque was directed to be paid. Held, that there was evidence to go to the jury of embezzlement, the subsequent acts of the clerk not being inconsistent with a felonious intention. Regina v. Draper, 1 V.R. (L.,) 39; 1 A.J.R., 46.

Evidence—Question for the Jury.]—It is a question for the jury, and not for the Judge, to decide what is the fair conclusion to be drawn from the overt act of appropriation and the rest of the evidence subsequent to the act. Ibid.

Evidence of—General Deficiency.]—Proof of a general deficiency without proof of the embezzlement of a specific sum is sufficient evidence of embezzlement. Regina v. Macey, 1 A.J.R., 151.

Evidence—Act No. 233, Sec. 143.]—C. gave S. a general direction as his agent to collect rents and to pay them into a certain bank to C.'s credit. S. appropriated to his own use an amount of £5, and was convicted. Held that the general direction applied under Sec. 143 to each sum as it was received, and was sufficient to support a conviction for the embezzlement of one sum. Conviction confirmed. Regina v. Spencer, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 280.

Improper Conversion by Agent of Moneys Received by Him—"Criminal Law and Practice Statute 1864," Sec. 143.]—A conviction under Sec. 143 of the "Criminal Law and Practice Statute 1864," for the conversion by an agent of moneys received by him, contrary to the written directions of his principal, may be sustained, although the directions provided for the payment by the agent of a fixed rate, called in the directions "interest," but independent of time, for all moneys which should be unpaid by the agent after a time mentioned in the directions, such "interest" not really being interest but a penalty, and not operating so as to convert the unpaid moneys into a debt to the principal. Regina v. Watson, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 174.

Embezzlement or Larceny—No. 233, Sec. 139—Evidence—Letter by Post.]—T. was cashier of a company, and while he was acting as such a letter containing a cheque, and properly addressed and stamped and directed to the manager of the company, was posted, but never reached the manager. It was not T.'s duty to open letters. On the 28th of February T. was dismissed, and on the 6th of March he cashed the cheque. Held that since the alteration of the law effected by Sec. 139 of the "Criminal Law and Practice Statute 1864," it did not matter that T. had not received the cheque in the course of his duty, and that he was properly convicted of embezzlement; and that there was evidence sufficient for the jury to presume that the letter was delivered in due course of post, and that T. opened it and took the cheque. Regina v. Turner, 2 V.R. (L.,) 84; 2 A.J.R., 59.

Embezzling Moneys Belonging to a Mining Company—Proof of Registration.]—In a charge for embezzling moneys belonging to a mining company, the certificate of registration was signed by the Deputy-Registrar. Held that under Sec. 215 of Act No. 213 (R. P. Stat.) this was sufficient, and conviction affirmed. Regina v. Walter, 5 A.J.R., 25.

VIII. False Pretences and Cheats.

Existing Fact.]—M. was convicted of falsely pretending to one, H., that he had taken a house in order that he and H. might live together in the house after marriage, and that he required a sum of money to furnish the house. It appeared that M. had taken a house, and had received money from H. on the said pretence, but had afterwards married another person. On a point reserved, Held that one only of the representations, viz., that he had taken a house, was a representation of an existing fact, the others were representations as to the future and not as to the present, and that there was no crime, since the first representation was true. Conviction quashed. Regina v. Sullivan, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 114.

A pretence of an existing fact is sufficient to support a conviction, although it is accompanied with promises to do an act at a future time. Regina v. Apfel, 3 V.R. (L.,) 172; 3 A.J.R., 73; for facts see S.C. post column 293.

Existing Fact—Obtaining Money by False Pretences—Sale of an Hotel Free from Incumbrances.]—S. sold to W. an hotel, representing that it would be free from incumbrances. At the time of the sale there was a bill of sale over the hotel as security for an acceptance still current, and immediately after T.'s taking possession the acceptance became due, was not paid, and the assignee under the bill of sale entered upon the hotel. Held that there was no false pretence, for if the acceptance had been paid there would have been no incumbrances on the hotel, and, therefore, there was no misrepresentation as to an existing fact; the representation was as to what S. would do in the future, and conviction quashed. Regina v. Savage, 4 A.J.R., 165.

False Pretences—Obtaining Money by—What is.] A person is rightly convicted of obtaining money or valuable securities by means of false pretences, who has obtained a loan upon the security of a deposit of deeds, which he represents to be the true and only title deeds of the land conveyed by them, after he has himself brought the same land under the "Transfer of Land Statute," and obtained a certificate of title thereto. Regina v. Thompson, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 12; 3 A.L.T., 96.

Cheques—Post-Dated.]—In obtaining money by false pretences by means of cheques it makes no difference that the cheque is post-dated. The false pretence must relate to an existing fact, and if the fact exist that the prisoner when he gave the cheque had no funds, or any reasonable expectation of having funds to meet it, it makes no difference that the cheque is post-dated. Regina v. Bathurst, 1 A.J.R., 40.

Post-Dated Cheque.]—A post-dated cheque may be the subject of a false pretence. The mere issuing of a cheque is in itself evidence of making a false pretence, although the person who issues it may not say a word. A., on June 18th (Saturday,) bought mining shares from L.; told L. that there was no use sending the post-dated cheque he gave until the second exchange on June 20th. At the time of the purchase A. represented to L.'s partner that he had sold the shares to a person in Melbourne, with whom he had often done business. The broker employed by A. sold the shares with A.'s consent for £6 15s., though A. had given £8 for them, and handed A. the money. The cheque was presented and dishonoured, there being only £1 10s. to his credit at the bank. Held that these statements made by the prisoner did not lessen the effect of the evidence conveyed by the issuing of the cheque that it was a good and available instrument. Conviction affirmed. Regina v. Apfel, 3 V.R. (L.,) 172; 3 A.J.R., 73.

Ownership of Property.]—On a charge of obtaining money by false pretences it is not necessary either to allege or prove whose the property was; it is sufficient to show that it did not belong to the prisoner. Regina v. Halliday, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 33.

Evidence—Admissibility Of.]—On the trial of R. for obtaining money under false pretences, it appeared that the Victoria Racing Club issued badges to persons whom it registered as licensed to bet on the course, and that R. wore the badge of a person so registered. A witness, who had lodged money with R. for a bet, because, as he said, he saw that R. wore the badge, was asked, "What did you understand from the badge?" This question was objected to by R.'s counsel, who also objected that the minute-book of the club, from which the register of persons licensed by the club to bet was prepared, was inadmissible as evidence that R. was not licensed. Held, on special case, that the question was a proper one, and that the minute-book was admissible. Regina v. Robinson, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 131; 6 A.L.T., 14.

IX. FORGERY.

Forging and Uttering—What Is.]—On the 28th July H. went to a country inn near Melbourne, giving out his name as L., and remained there for fourteen days, at the end of which his account amounted to £13 7s. 6d. It did not appear that the landlord applied for payment. On the 9th August H. gave the landlord a forged cheque in the name of L. for £15 to get cashed for him in Melbourne. Next day, before the landlord started for Melbourne, H. requested him to return the cheque, saying that he had a friend coming who would give him some money. The landlord did not return the cheque, but presented it in Melbourne, and it was dishonoured. On the landlord's return H. had departed, and being arrested ten miles off, said, "I gave the cheque to him to quiet him till the mail comes in." H. did receive £40 by the English mail. At the trial H. was convicted of forging and acquitted of uttering. Held, on a case reserved, that the conviction should be upheld. Regina v. Hooper, 1 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 195.

What Constitutes Forgery—Forging Signatures to a Petition.]—The possibility of profit accruing to the person charged with the crime is not a necessary element in the crime of forgery, and a conviction for forging and uttering the signatures of several persons to a petition for the appointment of a justice of the peace was sustained. Regina v. Flynn, 4 A.J.R., 91.

Signature of Other Person's Name to Claim to be Put on Ratepayers' Roll—"Shires Statute 1869," Sec. 63.]—B. was informed against for having forged the name of a voter with intent to deceive the secretary of a shire council and the revision court of the shire. B. filled up and signed a claim to be put on the ratepayers' roll of a shire in the name of M., whose authority he falsely stated he had obtained. The name of M. was placed on the roll, and, at a subsequent election, M. voted, though he had given no authority for the claim. Held that Sec. 63 of the "Shires Statute 1869" required the signature of the person himself to be put to the claim, and that B. having signed in his own name was not guilty of forgery. Regina v. Bourke, 4 A.J.R., 164.

Evidence.]—On the trial of a prisoner for forgery of a cheque, a bank officer swore that no such person as the alleged drawer had any account at the bank. His knowledge of the matter was derived only from searching the bank books, which were not produced. Held that the evidence was properly admitted, and that the production of the bank books was unnecessary. Regina v. Wright, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 243.

Act No. 233, Sec. 227—Fraudulent Intent.]—K. was convicted of forging a receipt for money. It appeared that he had been employed by C.

to effect an insurance for her, and for that purpose obtained from her a larger sum than was necessary. He retained the excess and increased the amount named in the receipt. Held there was evidence of fraudulent intent. Conviction affirmed. Regina v. Kitts, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 10.

Uttering Forged Cheque — Evidence.]—J. was convicted of uttering a forged cheque, knowing it to be forged. Evidence of the prisoner having previously uttered a forged bill of exchange was admitted. Held that such evidence was admissible, and conviction affirmed. Regina v. James, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 11.

Information — For Forgery of an Undated Bill of Exchange.] — An information for forging described a document bearing no date as a "bill of exchange." Held, that the document was rightly described, the date not being a material part of a bill of exchange, and a conviction on the information affirmed. Regina v. Gurnett, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 28.

"Authority for the Delivery of Goods"—Bill of Lading—No. 233, Sec. 227.]—A bill of lading is an "authority for the delivery of goods" within the meaning of Sec. 227 of the "Criminal Law and Practice Statute 1864," No. 233. Regina v. Wright, 2 V.R. (L.,) 204 : 2 A.J.R., 119.

X. INSOLVENCY ACTS, OFFENCES UNDER.]—See INSOLVENCY.

XI. LARCENY AND RECEIVERS.

Husband and Wife Acting in Concert.]—B. and his wife acted in concert for a theft, the wife taking and B. receiving. On their trial the wife was acquitted of stealing, on the presumption that she acted under B.'s coercion, but B. was convicted of receiving from her. On a question reserved, Held that there was a stealing in fact by the wife, and that the presumption, in consequence of which a wife is not amenable to punishment for such a stealing, did not alter that fact, and conviction affirmed. Regina v. Bailey, 1 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 20.

H. met the prisoner at a railway station, H. having then certain bank notes on his person. The prisoner complained of poverty and asked for food. H. and the prisoner travelled together, were at an hotel together, and H. went to sleep in his waggon camped near to the hotel. On the next morning, on awakening, H. found his right hand pocket, in which were the notes, turned out and emptied. During the night he had been awakened by a noise, and saw a person (to the best of his knowledge the prisoner) standing thirty yards from the waggon. The next day the witness met the prisoner, who produced a bundle of notes, changed one for drinks, and spent others in buying clothes. H. could not in any way identify the notes found on prisoner when arrested or those he had spent, not knowing their numbers, or having any marks on them. The evidence was sent to the jury and the prisoner was convicted. Held by Stawell, C. J., and Barry, J. (dissenliente Williams, J.) that there was no evidence to go to the jury. Conviction quashed. Regina v. Wilson, 2 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 22.

Of Money Entrusted to One Person to Give to Another.] — A mining company owed J. G. certain money. S., the manager of the company, seeing L. G., the brother of J. G., on the mine, gave him a cheque for the sum due to give to his brother, and took a receipt from him signed as for J. G. L. G. never gave the money to J. G., and some months afterwards when arrested some distance away and asked if he knew S., he said "No." On trial for larceny he was convicted, and on a question reserved the conviction was upheld. Regina v. Godenzi, 3 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 75.

Gold — What is a Mine — "Criminal Law and Practice Statute," No. 233, Sec. 104.]—Where a prisoner was convicted of larceny of gold, objections were taken (1) that there was no mine, (2) no taking, (3) no felonious intent. Held, on case reserved, that where gold is in its natural position (in situ,) even if it is in the form of separate grains contained in auriferous earth (wash-dirt,) it is in a bed or vein within Sec. 104 of Act No. 233; that to constitute a mine there need be no shaft opened on the surface of the land itself; that mining may be carried on under several portions of land accessible by one shaft only; that miners' rights confer no authority to enter on and take, without the consent of the proprietor, gold from lands which have been alienated from the Crown; and that the evidence of the prisoner, a servant of the company whose gold was stolen, having clandestinely opened a secret drive from the main drive, and having masked the entrance was sufficient to go to the jury on the question of criminal intention. Regina v. Davies, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 246; N.C., 64.

Receiving Security Under an Agreement—Evidence of Felonious Intention.]—B. received G. B. into his service, and required £300 deposit as security from him, and the following agreement was drawn up:—"I, G. B., agree to work for B., Richmond, at £1 per week and board, and to give £300 as security for three months, free of interest—G. B., B." G. B. gave B. a cheque for £300 of the same date as the agreement, and it was cashed the same day. G. B. remained more than three months in B.'s service, and eventually left without obtaining his cheque again, and B. shortly after became insolvent. On a charge against B. for larceny of the cheque, Held, on special case, that there was evidence to go to the jury that G. B. deposited the cheque as security for his conduct, and that B. was not to have the use of the money, and that the suggestion of the security was but an artifice to obtain possession of the money, the prisoner intending at the time he got it to appropriate it to himself and defraud G. B.; and that B. was rightfully convicted. Regina v. Brockman, 1 A.J.R., 152.

Evidence of Receiving — Production of Stolen Goods.]—L. was tried for burglary and receiving, and was convicted of receiving, subject to a question as to whether there was evidence to go to a jury. It appeared that the owner proved that his house was burglariously entered and jewels stolen, and identified some of them produced in the Police Court by three pawnbrokers. The pawnbrokers proved that at different hours on the day after the alleged burglary, the prisoner pawned such articles. They were not produced at the trial, nor was any reason given for their non-production. Held that the non-production was a matter for the jury, and if they were satisfied by other evidence of the identity of the goods, their production was not indispensable. Conviction supported. Regina v. Lynch, 2 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 102.

Receiving—Evidence of.]—Explanation of how stolen property, discovered in a person's possession two years after the robbery, came into his possession is not needed; and if such possession be the only evidence on a charge of receiving, an acquittal should be directed. But if the person accused give a false account of the possession, and thus afford evidence against himself, it then becomes a question of identity, to be considered by the jury, and if the goods be identified sufficiently, there will be evidence enough to sustain a conviction. Regina v. McGowan, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 180.

Gold from a Mine—Evidence of Corpus Delicti.]—A prisoner was convicted of larceny, and it appeared that the gold alleged to have been stolen was proved by analysis and assay to correspond with gold taken from the mine in which prisoner was working, that he was working where he would have opportunities of stealing it, and that the prisoner had stated that he was penniless immediately before he sold the gold. Held there was sufficient evidence. Conviction affirmed. Regina v. Bramwell, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 311.

Possession Obtained by Fraud.]—Where the jury have found that there was a fraudulent intent, and where possession has been obtained by fraud, and that fraud was meditated, an asportavit may be inferred and the offence be complete. Regina v. Bull and Wall, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 134; 3 A.L.T., 2.

Evidence.]—H. was convicted of larceny. It appeared that N. and he had taken part in a fight, and that N. had taken off his coat and thrown it down; that on taking it up again some money was missing. Money of the same description (bank notes) was found on H., but otherwise it was not identified. H. afterwards admitted to a constable that the notes were picked up by him, and that he had not asked N. about his loss and had told no one of his finding the money. Held that there was evidence to go to the jury, and conviction affirmed. Regina v. Harry, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 369.

Gold—No. 233, Sec. 107—"Claim."]—D. was convicted under Sec. 107 of the "Criminal Law and Practice Statute 1864," No. 233, of keeping back and concealing from his co-partners, or co-adventurers, gold taken from a "claim." The evidence showed that the ground from which the gold was taken was held under a lease from the Crown by D. and his co-partners. Held that land held under a mining lease was not a "claim" within the meaning of Sec. 107; and conviction quashed. Regina v. Davies, 2 V.R. (L.,) 117; 2 A.J.R. 74.

See also, as to Gold from a Mine, Regina v. Davies, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 246, ante column 296.

25 Vic., Cap. 96, Sec. 3.]—F. was manager and shareholder of a company carrying on the business of pawnbroking, and had a licence in his own name, but "as agent of" the company. H. deposited a watch with F., and F. absconded with the watch, but was captured at King George's Sound and brought back in custody with the property. H. was convicted of stealing the watch, but a question was reserved as to F.'s liability as such bailee to be convicted of larceny. Held that there was no necessity that the information should have been laid under 25 Vic., Cap. 96, Sec. 3, as there was evidence on which to frame an information irrespective of the Act. Conviction supported. Regina v. Fischel, 2 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 11.

What is—Mortgagor Selling Articles Given by Bill of Sale.]—D. was the owner of certain chattels over which he gave A. a bill of sale. Default was made in the payment, and A. wrote to B. requesting him to remove the chattels from the lands belonging to A., on which they were, to some other land, and informing him that he was not at liberty to dispose of them. B. did remove them and subsequently sold them. Held that the letter sent to B., and his acting upon it by removing the chattels, showed that he recognised the authority of A. to ask him to move the chattels, but not to dispose of them; and that this recognition of authority formed sufficient evidence to go to the jury that B. was a bailee; and conviction upheld. Regina v. Boyd, 1 A.J.R., 88.

Conversion of a Bank Note Entrusted to a Person to Procure Change.]—Defendant was entrusted with a bank note to procure change. He converted it to his own use and offered the person entrusting him with it a smaller sum as satisfaction, which was declined. Held that he was rightly convicted of larceny as a bailee. Regina v. Ah Poo, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 8.

D. was convicted of larceny as clerk of the Oriental Bank. At the trial, a clerk in the office of the Registrar-General produced a copy of the original charter of the bank, and a copy supplemental charter, both registered under Act 27 Vic., No. 204, Secs. 89 and 90. The copy charter was put in and proved; it was complete in itself, duly incorporating the bank. The copy of the supplemental charter was tendered, but on an objection being made that the proof of this copy being in conformity with the Act was insufficient, it was withdrawn.

Counsel for the prisoner objected to the withdrawal, on the ground that the client was bound by his counsel's statement, and the Crown having endeavoured to prove, and having tendered the copy supplemental charter, ought not to be permitted to say that the supplemental charter was unnecessary, and to withdraw it. On case stated, Held that the objection could not be supported. Conviction upheld. Regina v. Dickson, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 116.

Allegation and Proof of Ownership—Stealing from Dead Body.]—J. was convicted of stealing a watch from the dead body of N. The question reserved was, in whom the property should be laid. It was in fact laid in the widow of N., who had not taken out administration. The Court held that the property was rightly laid in the widow. Conviction affirmed. Regina v. Johnstone, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 216.

Allegations and Proof of Ownership—Misdirection of Judge—Amendment—"Criminal Law and Practice Statute 1864," No. 233, Sec. 390.]—M. and others were tried for stealing and "receiving" certain goods on board a ship. The information contained eight counts—four for stealing, respectively laying the property in four different persons, and four for receiving, laying the property in the same way. The Judge directed the jury that, if satisfied with the identity of the goods and of their being shipped on the particular ship, the property might be laid in the different persons named, and that it must be necessarily in one of the several persons. The jury returned a verdict of "guilty of receiving," and in answer to a question put by the Judge said they couldn't tell whose property it was which had been stolen. Held that there was a misdirection; that the Judge might have directed them to find the property in the master; that, in strictness, there should have been a finding on each count; and that the Court could not amend under Sec. 390. New trial ordered. Regina v. Murphy, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 218.

Proof of Identity.]—B. was convicted of stealing tobacco. The evidence showed that C. had placed a tierce of tobacco outside his shop; it was found some distance off the next morning and was identified by C., but seven pounds of it were missing. Three hours afterwards the same quantity of tobacco, similar in all respects, was found wrapped up in a swag in the prisoner's bed. In the evening before B.'s room had been searched and the swag also, but the tobacco was not there. Held that the evidence as to the identity was not sufficient to go to a jury. Conviction quashed. Regina v. Bond, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 280.

Laying Property in Two Persons.]—Where a prisoner was convicted on 22 counts, for one class of which the gold stolen was laid in the Crown, and for the other in the B. Company, Held that the offence being one, and one only, viz., "stealing," it was not necessary that the verdict should be restricted to one or the other of these cases; that for the offence, though formally judgment must be pronounced on each count, yet substantially only one punishment is inflicted, and the verdict might be pleaded in bar to any future prosecution. Conviction affirmed. Regina v. Davies, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 246.

View of Stolen Property by Jury After Conclusion of Case.]—On the trial of W. on counts for stealing and receiving hides, the jury retired to consider their verdict, and on their return into Court stated that they had great doubt as to the identification of the hides, and that there was no probability of their agreeing. The Judge then accompanied the jury to the place where the hides lay, and allowed the jury to inspect them, and also allowed the witnesses to point out the marks by which the hides were identified. The jury then found the prisoner guilty of receiving, and he was sentenced. On special case reserved, Held that there was no impropriety in the course adopted, and conviction affirmed. Regina v. Westlake, 2 V.R. (L.,) 8; 2 A.J.R., 17.

XII. Malicious Injury to Property.

Act No. 233, Sec. 204.]—M. was tried and convicted for an offence under Sec. 204. It appeared that M. had sown drake, sorrel, and wild oats in a field where a crop of wheat and oats had been recently sown before, and there was evidence of the actual germination of the seeds. Conviction affirmed. Regina v. Maund, 3 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 96.

And see under Offences (Statutory) and Justice of Peace—Jurisdiction and Duty—Question of Title.

XIII. Misdemeanours.

Under Act No. 228, "Mining Company's Statute," Sec. 24.]—A manager of a mining company would incur liability as for a misdemeanour by neglecting to comply with Sec. 24, notwithstanding the provision making false notices a misdemeanour. Robin Hood Company v. Stavely, 4 W. W. & A'B. (M.,) 26.

False Declaration Under "Land Acts."]—See Regina v. Taylor, post column 303, under Perjury.

XIV. Murder, Manslaughter and Offences Against the Person.

Evidence—Corpus Delicti—"Degrees of Cogency."]—M. was tried and convicted of the murder of one Mara. They were last seen together in company on October 18th. On December 25th, certain remains were found of a human being, it being unascertainable whether of a male or female, the body having been burned, but a belt, buttons, pieces of a shirt and trousers were found close by, indicating that the remains were those of a male. Close by the spot was a piece of paper found, which it was proved Mara had put into his pocket on October 16th, and being a counterpart of a piece produced in Court, and also pieces of clothing of the same pattern and colour as those which Mara wore. M. was found in possession of a horse and cart belonging to Mara on October 19th, and they remained in his possession until his arrest, though he had made several attempts to dispose of them, and also of a deposit receipt for £12, payable to Mara's order, which M. had tried also to dispose of. Near the remains were tracks of the precise size of the wheels of Mara's cart, and corresponding with the width of the cart. Mara had never been seen or heard of since October 18th, 1866. On case reserved, Held that there was evidence to go to the jury of the corpus delicti; that there was evidence that the remains were those of a human being whose life had been unlawfully taken, and of the identity of the remains with those of the person charged with having been murdered; that a greater degree of cogency is not required to prove the corpus delicti than to establish the criminal agency; that there is no test by which a Judge is enabled, as a matter of law, to say whether evidence is of any certain degree of cogency or not. Per Barry, J.—That until the corpus delicti is established, the evidence bearing on criminal agency cannot be considered, but when the first is established sufficiently, the evidence used in establishing it may be used in proving the criminal agency. Conviction confirmed. Regina v. Murphy, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 63.

Person Ordered to Shoot Another—Withdrawal of Order—Question for the Jury.]—L. was supercargo of a British ship which was conveying natives to be employed as labourers by the planters in Fiji. On the voyage a conflict ensued between some Tanna and Palmar natives, the Palmar natives shooting arrows from the hold in all directions, both at the crew as well as at the Tanna men. L. said, "It's no use getting a rope to make them fast, as they have bows and arrows," and gave muskets to the crew, giving orders to the effect, "Shoot at them if you get a good shot." These directions were heard by the cook and cabin boy only. About twenty minutes afterwards the cook held a light down the main-hatch into the hold, and three of the crew (none of them having heard L.'s directions to shoot) fired and shot three of the Palmar men. L. was convicted of manslaughter. On special case reserved, Held, by Stawell, C. J., and Barry, J. (dissentiente Williams, J.,) that it was for the jury and not for the Court to determine the nature of the orders given, and then whether, during the interval between their delivery and the discharge of the last shot, circumstances had so changed, or so long a time had elapsed to justify the conclusion that the order had been virtually though not expressly withdrawn. Conviction affirmed. Regina v. Levinger, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 147.

Murder—What Is.]—S. pursued G. S. with a loaded pistol intending to kill him, and actually fired three shots at him. While in pursuit he was intercepted by W., and in the struggle between them the pistol went off accidentally and killed W. Held that S. had murdered W. Regina v. Supple, 1 V.R. (L.,) 151; 1 A.J.R., 129.

Through Neglect of Duty.]—Where a sick and helpless child is under the care of its mother, there is no duty cast upon the step-father, for neglect of which he is criminally responsible in case the child died from want of proper care, to see that his wife is paying the child the attention required by her helpless condition. Regina v. Duffy, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 430; 2 A.L.T., 85.

Administering Cantharides—Intent to do Grievous Bodily Harm—Evidence of Intent.]—A prisoner administered cantharides to a girl of sixteen with the object of having connexion, but had no intent, though the effect was necessary, of doing grievous bodily harm, and there was evidence that the prisoner knew what the drug might do, and what might follow the use of it. Held, that though his primary object might have been to seduce, there being direct evidence of malice and bodily harm having resulted, the jury might properly infer from these facts that he had both objects in view, and, if they did so, it was utterly immaterial which intent was the primary one. Regina v. Grandison, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 132.

Sodomy—"Criminal Law and Practice Statute," No. 233, Sec. 58.]—On an information under Sec. 58 of No. 233, for committing an assault upon a person, and without the consent of such person violently committing sodomy, the prisoner cannot be found guilty of the minor offence of committing sodomy without violence, or with consent. Regina v. O'Connor, 1 A.J R., 118.

Admissibility of Evidence—Intent.]—A. M. D. was convicted of having administered a deadly poison to F. D. with intent to murder. The Crown prosecutor proposed to give evidence of subsequent administration of the same kind of poison by the prisoner from which deceased had suffered, with the object of proving the intent, of showing the history of the case, and that the poisoning was not accidental. This evidence was admitted at the trial. Held that, although there was no direct proof that the other poisons had been administered by the prisoner, the evidence was properly admitted to show the intent alleged. Conviction affirmed. Regina v. Davis, 3 V.R. (L.,) 95; 3 A.J.R., 52.

XV. Perjury, False Oaths, and Declarations.

False Declaration—Materiality—9 Vic., No. 9, Sec. 9.]—P. was convicted under 9 Vic., No. 9, Sec. 9, for having made a false declaration before a magistrate as to a juror's expressed partiality in another criminal charge against another man. Held that this was an offence under the Act, that materiality of the fact so stated was not important, the purpose of making the declaration being immaterial, and that the offence was complete when the declaration was made. Regina v. Pearce, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 248.

False Declarations Under "Land Act 1862."]—A false statement respecting an act which the Statute does not forbid and provides no issue to try, ought not by implication and in the absence of express words, to be deemed a misdemeanour. Regina v. Taylor, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 23.

For facts, see S.C., under LAND ACTS — Offences against.

False-Oath in Proceedings Coram non Judice not Perjury.]—A father sued C. before justices in Petty Sessions in a plaint claiming damages as due to himself for an assault by C. on his infant child. At the hearing of the plaint C. swore that he never laid a hand on the child, and this being proved false, an information was laid against him in the Supreme Court for perjury, and he was convicted, and a question of law reserved by the Judge. Held that the proceedings by the father before the Justices in Petty Sessions to recover damages as for himself for an assault committed on his infant child, were in every aspect coram non judice, and the oath in such proceedings not one on which perjury could be assigned; and conviction quashed. Regina v. Charles, 3 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 52.

"Criminal Law and Practice Statuts 1864," No. 233, Sec. 271—"Evidence Statute 1864," No. 197—"Amending Land Act 1865," No. 237—Declaration as to Improvements.]—M. was convicted of having made a false declaration, under the regulations of Act No. 237, as to nature and value of improvements made upon the land, before a Justice of the Peace, under and in pursuance of the "Evidence Statute 1864," Sec. 37. Held that as the making a voluntary declaration, respecting the facts forming the subject matter of the prosecution, has not been required by any Act of Parliament, but only by the usage and practice of one of the departments of the Government (the Board of Lands and Works,) perjury cannot be assigned on a voluntary declaration made respecting "any fact, matter, or thing whatsoever," in the words of Sec. 271 of No. 233, but only on those declarations made in "verification, assurance or the ascertaining" of some fact, matter, or thing respecting which a voluntary declaration is "required or authorised" by law to be made. Conviction quashed. Regina v. Mungovan, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 157.

Voluntary False Declaration, Act No. 343—Not Retrospective.]—The "Criminal Law Amendment Act 1869," No. 343, relating to voluntary false declarations, is not retrospective, and therefore the making of a false voluntary declaration before the passing of the Act cannot constitute an offence under it. Regina v. Gallagher, 4 V.R. (L.,) 20; 1 A.J.R., 27.

False Declaration—Not Before a Magistrate—Act No. 230, Sec. 33.]—A declaration which is false need not be made before a magistrate, in order to render a person liable, under Sec. 33 of Act No. 230, for making a false declaration. Regina v. Halliday, 2 V.R. (L.,) 83; 2 A.J.R., 59.

Statutory Declaration Under "Land Act 1869."]—G., on an application for land under the "Land Act 1869," made the usual statutory declaration that he had not selected the maximum number of acres allowed by the Act, and that the land he was then applying for added to what he had already selected would not exceed the maximum number of acres so allowed. As a matter of fact, G. had previously selected more than the quantity allowed, but the land for which he applied was then in the occupation of another selector, but such selector had forfeited it, and, subsequent to G.'s declaration, he received a lease of the forfeited land applied for. Held that the offence did not depend upon the success or non-success of the application in respect of which the declaration was made, since he had sworn that he had not taken up the maximum quantity allowed, and it was proved that he had taken up more than such quantity; and a conviction for perjury affirmed. Regina v. Greaney, 4 A.J.R., 116.

Swearing False Information — Identification.]—L. applied to a clerk of Petty Sessions for an information, and the clerk prepared one, and read it over to L., who made his mark in the presence of the clerk, who thereupon attested his signature and delivered the information to a justice to be sworn. The justice administered an oath to L. to make true answers to such questions as he should put to him, and asked L. whether he knew the contents of the information, and whether it was true and signed by his mark, but did not then read the information over to him. The justice then signed the information. Held that the paper read over to L. by the clerk could not be sufficiently identified with that attested by him before the justice, and a conviction for perjury quashed. Regina v. Levy, 4 A.J.R., 116.

False Declaration — Act No. 343, Sec. 3.]—H. was convicted for perjury upon a voluntary declaration. A declaration was in the form given by Act No. 343, and the word "declared" was in the memorandum at the foot instead of the word "sworn" in the jurat of an affidavit, but the prisoner was sworn to the truth of the declaration. The declaration referred to "certain cattle at Corowa branded in a certain way," which the prisoner declared "were free from contact with any diseased stock," which was false; the cattle were not at Corowa at the time of the declaration. Held (1) that the super-addition of the oath did not make the declaration less a declaration, (2) and that although the description of the cattle being at Corowa was incorrect, that did not prevent their being identified by other means. Conviction affirmed. Regina v. Hickey, 5 A.J.R., 104.

Evidence—Production of Information—"Wines, Beer, and Spirits Sale Statuts."]—A complaint was laid under the Statute which does not require an information to be laid. Held, that though the summons before the justices for the offence against the Statute, under which the perjury was committed, recited an information, and the clerk who proved the proceedings stated it was in writing, yet the information need not be produced at the trial for perjury. Regina v. Miller, 5 A.J.R., 166.

Corroborative Evidence.]—Corroborative evidence need not amount to an independent case against the prisoner. See as to sufficient corroborative evidence. Regina v. Cameron, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 85.

Declaration Not Read Over in Presence of Commissioner—Act No. 343, Sec. 1.]—A false declaration is duly taken and received within the meaning of Sec. 1 of the "Criminal Law and Practice Amendment Act 1869," No. 343, and a conviction for making such false declaration may be sustained, although the declaration was not read over to the declarant, who was illiterate, in the presence of the Commissioner before whom it was made, if it appear that the Commissioner was satisfied that it had been read over to the declarant and that he knew its contents. Regina v. Thornton, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 427; 2 A.L.T., 85.

XVI. Personation.

Personating a Voter.]—K. was charged by information with personating a voter named Ronald McDonald, at a general election of members for the Legislative Assembly. At the trial on circuit evidence was given that the name of Ronald McDonald appeared on the electoral roll, and that K. had voted under that name, and afterwards attempted to vote under another name appearing on the electoral roll, and being taken into custody gave his name as K. No other evidence that such a person as Ronald McDonald existed was given. Molesworth, J., directed that the prisoner might be properly convicted, though no such person as Ronald McDonald had ever existed. The prisoner was convicted. Held, per Stawell, C.J., and Williams, J., that the crime of personation might be committed, though there was no further proof of the existence of the elector personated than the appearance of his name on the electoral roll afforded. Per Molesworth, J., that the direction to the jury was doubtful, the case not having been treated as one in which the electoral roll was some evidence, but as one of the personation of a fictitious person. Conviction upheld. Regina v. Keating, 1 W. &. W. (L.,) 207.

XVII. Rape and Abusing Women and Children.

Attempt.]—G. was acquitted of the capital offence, but both he and B. were found guilty of an attempt. There was no doubt as to G.'s crime. As to B. he was not in the room when G. made his attempt, and there was no evidence of B.'s own separate assault, but he found the girl tied down, and left her so tied after hearing G. express his intention to commit the offence. Held that B.'s acts showed the intent, though the purpose was not completed, and B.'s conviction upheld. Regina v. Branch, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 253.

Evidence.]—Witnesses called to corroborate the statement of the prosecutrix, on a charge of rape, that she made a complaint, can only be examined by counsel, as to whether the complaint was in fact made; and cannot be asked to state any detail of such complaint. Where a witness gave evidence of the terms of the complaint, and in such complaint the prisoner was mentioned by name as the offender, a conviction which followed on such evidence as corroborating the testimony of the prosecutrix, was quashed. Regina v. Cooper, 1 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 123.

Carnally Abusing a Child Under Ten Years of Age—Evidence.]—On the trial of a prisoner for carnally abusing a child under the age of ten years, a statement obtained by the child's parents from the child against her will, and long after the offence was committed, is not admissible in evidence against the prisoner. Regina v. Nixon, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 32; 3 A.L.T., 95.

Carnally Abusing Child Under Ten Years of Age — Evidence — Res Gestæ — Statement of Child in Answer to Questions.]—Evidence is admissible, as confirmatory evidence, on a charge of carnally abusing, or of indecently assaulting, a child under the age of ten years, not merely of the fact that a complaint was made by the child immediately after the commission of the offence, but also of what the child said; and such ststement is not the less admissible because it was made in answer to questions by the person to whom the statement was made, as to what was the matter. Regina v. Bates, Regina v. Brown, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 310; 4 A.L.T., 79.

XVIII. Seas (Offences on the High Seas.)

Murder—Warrant Issued in New South Wales—Capture in Victoria—Trial, Where Held—6 & 7 Vic., Cap. 34—12 & 13 Vic., Cap. 96.]—Where L. was arrested and detained in Victoria upon a warrant issued in New South Wales, and endorsed in Viotoris, for murder on the high seas, upon return to a writ of habeas corpus, Held that the two statutes were completely independent of each other, and that the case did not fall within 6 and 7 Vic., Cap. 34; and that L. could not be sent back to Sydney, but must be discharged. In re Levinger, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 8.

And see Regina v. Mount and Morris, post columns 317, 318.

XIX. Procedure and Practice.

Form Of.]—At the trial of H. for obtaining money by false pretences, the information was objected to on the ground that it did not aver that the money was obtained by the false pretences. The chairman of General Sessions refused to allow an amendment, but discharged the jury, and proceeded to try H. upon a fresh information for the same offence. Held that the more regular course would have been to quash the first information; but that the course taken was not invalid. Regina v. Halliday, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 33.

Description of Instrument in.]—Where a criminal information describes a written instrument by several designations, and then sets it out in hæc verba, with or without a videlicit, the Court will treat as surplusage such descriptive averments, and consider as material only the instrument itself. Regina v. Wright, 2 V.R. (L.,) 204; 2 A.J.R., 119.

Information Containing Charges of Misdemeanour and Felony.] —See Regina v. Longmuir, ante column 285.

Conviction Under Sec. 111 of Act No. 233, Supported Upon a Presentment For Robbery Under Arms.]—See Regina v. De Theuars, ante column 286.

Act No. 502, Sec. 20—Presentment by Attorney-General.]—There is no limitation to the powers conferred by Sec. 30 of Act No. 502 ("Judicature Act 1875,") and under these powers a prisoner at the trial may be charged in the presentment with a different offence from that for which he was committed. Regina v. Martin, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 343; 6 A.L.T., 163.

Postponement of Trial.]—An application for a postponement of a criminal trial must be supported by an affidavit; it cannot be made before plea except in prosecutions by indictment. Regina v. Jones, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 163.

Discretion of Judge to Order.]—Where a Judge on a criminal trial has, for any reason, discharged the jury without a verdict and postponed the trial, the Court will not review his discretion by quashing a conviction made upon the second trial. Regina v. McNamara, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 19.

Order for Changing Not Annexed to Information —Amendment.]—An information filed in the Supreme Court at Melbourne, was tried at Ballarat, but there was nothing on the face of the record to show that it ought to be tried at Ballarat. On motion in arrest of judgment for error on the face of the information, the Full Court ordered the record to be produced, and ordered the Prothonotary to annex to it the Judge's order changing the venue from Melbourne to Ballarat, considering that as the objection had not been taken at the trial, and that judgment was not passed at the trial solely in consequence of an objection being then reserved to be argued on behalf of the defendants, which was not raised before the Full Court, the Crown should have leave to amend; and on the record so amended judgment was given for the Crown. Regina v. Costello, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 86.

Criminal Information for Libel—Change of Venue.] —The reason for granting a change of venue is the existence of excitement in any particular locality, and that excitement so bearing on the case as to make a fair trial improbable. Where a motion for a change of venue was made on affidavits showing only that general political interests were involved, motion refused. Regina v. Syme, 2 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 167.

Attorney-General — Change of Venue.] — The Attorney-General is constituted a standing grand jury for the colony, and as such has power to file an information where he pleases. Where arson was committed at Daylesford and the Attorney-General filed the information in Melbourne, on a rule nisi calling on the Attorney-General to show cause why the venue should not be changed, Held that he had the power to file the information at Melbourne; that the Court has, in order to prevent any possible injustice, power to change the venue, but declined to do so under the circumstances alleged in the affidavit. Regina v. Patterson, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 43.

Change of Venue—When Court Will Grant.]—An application was made to change the venue on the ground that the newspapers circulating in the district were full of comments of a most inflammatory character likely to prejudice the prisoner's case. Held that the materials disclosed merely a conjecture as to the probability of prisoner not having a fair trial. Application refused. Regina v. Jackson, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 313; 3 A.L.T., 24.

(c) Jury.

Foreign Juror.]—After a jury had retired, the foreman returned to Court and informed the chairman of General Sessions that one of the jurors was a foreigner who could speak English a little but could not understand it. The evidence was then interpreted to him, and the prisoner was convicted. On case stated, Held that if the Judge was satisfied that the juror could have performed his duties, the conviction was good, but, if the Judge was of opinion that from ignorance of the English language he was unable to do so, there was no trial. Regina v. Hoctor, 2 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 124.

Grand Jury—Attorney-General Standing in Place of.]—See Regina v. Patterson Supra.

Peremptory Challenge—Jury de Medietate Linguæ —"Juries Statute 1865," Secs. 37, 38.] — The "Juries Statute 1865," Sec. 37, modifying the Common Law, gives a right of peremptory challenge up to the number of twenty, in any trial or inquest taken before any Court wherein the Crown is a party. Sec. 38, following 6 Geo. IV., c. 50, providing for a jury de medietate linguæ in the case of aliens, does not take away this right in whole or in part, but merely prescribes the composition of such a jury, and the incidents of the trial are annexed by the Common Law, and are therefore implied and included in the Statute. Regina v. Levinger, L.R. 3, P.C. 282; 1 A.J.R., 137.

Whenever the case requires it, and the reason of the rule applies, the law of juries, in the absence of a positive provision to the contrary, is applicable to both moieties of a jury de medietate linguæ. The Common Law regarding juries, is, in the absence of a positive provision to the contrary, applicable to such a jury. Ibid.

Where, therefore, an alien prisoner tried for felony claimed the right of a jury de medietate, which was granted, and he challenged peremptorily an alien juror, and the Crown demurred to the challenge, which was adjudged bad, and the prisoner was convicted and sentenced, Held, by the Privy Council (special leave to appeal having been granted by the Judicial Committee,) that he was entitled to such peremptory challenge; that the judgment denying the right was wrong; and conviction and verdict thereon quashed, and venire de novo awarded. Ibid.

Privy Verdict—Adjournment.]—On a trial for cattle stealing the prisoner pleaded "Not Guilty." After the case was closed, the jury retired to consider their verdict, and before they had agreed the Court was adjourned until 10 a.m. of the following day. After adjournment, the jury remained in their room till 10.10 p.m., and then sent word that they had agreed, and the Judge attended at Court, the prisoner was placed in the dock, the jury requested to look upon him, their names called over to which they answered, and upon being asked if they had agreed they replied that they had and gave their verdict. They were then directed to attend next day, and dismissed. Next day they attended, formally gave their verdict, and it was recorded in their presence and that of the prisoner, and sentence was passed. On case stated by the Judge as to the regularity of the proceedings, Held that there had been no adjournment in the legal technical sense so as to render the verdict a privy verdict, or to prevent the Judge stating the case; and conviction affirmed. Regina v. Spencer, 4 A.J.R., 29.

"Juries Statute," No. 272, Sec. 17.]—An order for a special jury may be made under Sec. 17 of Act No. 372 without any summons or notice to the person accused to show cause. Regina v. Downey and Warburton, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 87.

Power of Judge to Set Aside a Juror.]—At a criminal trial, the Judge in striking the jury, ordered a juryman who was called to stand aside, and not to be allowed to enter into the box to deal with the case, the juryman in his opinion not being sober or in a fit state to do his duty. Held that the Judge had such power to set the juror aside. Regina v. Burns, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 191; 5 A.L.T., 67.

And see post under JURY.

View by Jury After Case Concluded Not Irregular.]—See Regina v. Westlake, ante column 300.

Autrefois Acquit.]—On a plea of autrefois acquit, where a verdict has been entered for the Crown, the usual practice is to proceed with the trial on the plea of not guilty. Where this was not done, and the prisoner was not convicted, the Banco Court held that, under Sec. 389 of the "Criminal Law and Practice Statute 1864," which authorises the reservation of a question of law for its opinion on the "trial of any person convicted of an indictable offence," it had no jurisdiction to deal with a point so reserved. Regina v. Prendergast, 4 A.J.R., 154.

Duty of Court Where Prisoner May Not Take Objection.]—Although an Act may prohibit a prisoner or his counsel from taking certain objections, the Court is not thereby exonerated from its duty to see that there is a case to go to the jury. Regina v. Gallagher, 1 V.R. (L.,) 20; 1 A.J.R., 27.

Money Found on Prisoner—Portion Allowed for Defence.]—The property on a prisoner should not be retained unless it was in some way connected with the offence with which he was charged. When there is no clear evidence as to how the prisoners came by money found on them the property should not be returned to them, but a portion may be allowed for conducting their defence. Regina v. Williams, 1 A.J.R., 39.

Cross-Examination of Witness — Depositions in Court Below.]—On a trial the witnesses for the prosecution may be cross-examined on their depositions in the police court without such depositions being put in and read. Regina v. Robertson, 1 A.J.R., 140.

Criminal Assault on Successive Days.]—A criminal assault committed on successive days may be treated as one offence, and the Crown will not be put to its election as to the particular assault upon which it intends to rely. Regina v. Garland, 4 A.J.R., 157.

(g) Other Points.

The list of criminal cases, with the order of trial, which is published at each criminal sessions, is not binding on the Court. Regina v. Schreibvogel, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 92.

Jurisdiction of Circuit Court.]—By a proclamation of December, 1866, which, after reciting that by Act No. 10, Sec. 17, the Governor-in-Council was authorised to define, alter, and vary the limits of districts within which District Courts should be holden, and that the limits of the circuit districts of Geelong, Portland, Ballarat, Castlemaine, and Sandhurst were defined, the limits were varied and the limits of the District Court of Sandhurst and Castlemaine were defined according to such variation. A. H. T. was tried at Castlemaine for arson at Sandhurst. Held that the Court at Castlemaine had jurisdiction to try the case; that the pre-existing limits might exist simultaneously with the new ones, and the Court have concurrent jurisdiction as to each in different places without abolishing them. Regina v Thompson, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 23.

Identification of Prisoners on New Trial.]—Where on a new trial the prisoner, having at the former trial pleaded "Not Guilty," was not arraigned or called upon to plead, but was placed at the bar, represented by counsel, called by name, told to look to his challenges, and never raised the question of identity, Held that he was sufficiently identified with the prisoner convicted at the former trial. Regina v. Whelan, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 7.

Wrongful Admission of Evidence—Correction by Judge.]—A Judge at a criminal trial overruled an objection as to the admissibility of certain evidence, but afterwards, being on consideration of the opinion that it should not have been admitted, informed the counsel for the prisoner, in the hearing of the jury before he rose to address them, that it had been struck out and was not to be considered as given. Held that the Judge had the power so to withdraw it, and that the withdrawal was sufficient, without distinctly warning the jury to disregard it. Regina v. Burns, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 191; 5 A.L.T., 67.

Charging Jury—Suggested Motive.]—In charging a jury on a trial for murder, the Judge may tell the jury that in considering the case, assuming them to be of opinion that a prisoner had a motive for committing a crime, they might take into consideration that it was not suggested that any one else entertained any ill-feeling to the deceased, or had any motive for, or inducement to commit the crime. Regina v. O'Brien, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 242; 6 A.L.T., 95.

Objection Taken After Verdict.]—An objection taken after verdict recorded is not too late. Regina v. Herbert, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 205.

Wife Against Husband.] — The unsworn evidence of an aboriginal woman was received under the "Evidence Consolidation Act" on a trial of an aboriginal for murder, though the woman described herself as the prisoner's "lubra," and as "married" to him, there being no other evidence of marriage. Regina v. Neddy Monkey, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 40.

Letter From Husband to Wife.]—See Regina v. Dowling, post column 314.

Person Offending Against the "Pounds Act," 18 Vic., No. 30.] — Impounding cattle out of the police district in which they were distrained is "an offence," so that the accused is not a competent witness. Ex parte Beilby, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 281.

Woman Approaching Her Confinement—11 & 12 Vic., Cap. 42, Sec. 17.]—The words "or so ill as not to be able to travel," contained in Sec. 17 of 11 and 12 Vic., Cap. 42, include the case of a woman sworn by her husband to be suffering from no other illness than her approaching confinement, but to be in an unfit state to travel solely on account of such approaching confinement; and a conviction which was supported by the depositions of a woman absent for such reasons was upheld. Regina v. Ah Pock, 1 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 127.

Inability to Travel—Act No. 267, Sec. 80.]—H. was convicted of stealing a cheque. At the trial, depositions of a pregnant woman who was unable to travel, were put in under Sec. 80 of the Act No. 267. The fact of pregnancy was deposed to by a constable who had seen the witness shortly before the trial, and the Judge admitted the depositions. Held, on case reserved, that the constable was competent to give an opinion on the witness's inability to travel, and that there was sufficient evidence to go to the Judge of such inability. Conviction affirmed. Regina v. Hay, 3 V.R. (L.,) 160; 3 A.J.R., 69.

T. had been tried for the murder of a child and had been acquitted. He was then tried for aiding and abetting the mother in concealing the birth (1) By throwing the body into a river. (2) By placing the body in a hole and covering it up with sand. The evidence was as follows:—(1) The mother of the child stated that defendant had thrown the child into the river. (2) That of a witness who was told by defendant that the mother had had a child, and was shown the hole where the child was buried. (3) The depositions of defendant himself before coroner, when he was not informed of his right to refuse to be sworn. T. was convicted. Held that T.'s evidence before the coroner was not admissible, as it was not that of a "free" man voluntarily given, and that without such evidence there was no evidence to convict T. Conviction quashed. Regina v. Taylor, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 153.

Admissibility of Statements Before Coroner.]—Semble, it is a safe rule that, if suspicion attaches to a witness at any time before the proceedings have terminated, such a witness should be cautioned, and any evidence given after that may be used as evidence, otherwise depositions before a coroner should be rejected. C. and R. were convicted of arson; R. as an accessory. Depositions before the Coroner were tendered, C. having been cautioned, but R. having received no caution. Conviction as to C. affirmed, quashed as to R. Regina v. Coldwell, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 208.

Act No. 379, Secs. 3, 132, 134—Act No. 301, Sec. 157.]—If a person answer a question voluntarily his answer is admissible against him, or if an Act provides that he must answer and affords him no protection from the consequences of his answers, his position appears substantially the same as if he had answered voluntarily. Where a prisoner was charged with an offence under Act No. 379, and at the trial depositions were tendered as evidence which he had made at a compulsory examination under Sec. 132, Held that such depositions were admissible, and that Sec. 157 of Act No. 301 did not apply to such a case. Regina v. M'Cooey, Regina v. Johnson and Smith, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 38.

At a trial for murder certain declarations of the murdered man were admitted in evidence, and the prisoner was convicted. It appeared from the evidence that, on September 11th, a police magistrate put the question to him, "Do you feel you are in a dying condition." The deceased replied, "Well, I don't know that I am dying now." In reply to question, "Do you believe you will die or are about to die," he answered, "Yes; I don't think I shall get over it," and that he told the doctor that he was convinced that nothing could save him; that during a period ranging from the 11th to the 20th of September he told his wife that "he thought he should get better." The declarations were taken on September 11th, and the man died on September 20th. Held by Barry and Williams, J. J., (dissentiente Stawell, C. J.,) that the evidence was inadmissible, that the expression of such a hope of recovery rendered the declaration inadmissible; per Stawell, C. J., that his answer to the doctor showed that he had a fair settled conviction that recovery was hopeless, and that the declaration was made under that conviction and therefore admissible. Conviction quashed. Regina v. Whelan, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 264.

It is a very salutary rule, and one to be observed, that the Court will not, without a very strong excuse indeed, allow evidence to be admitted, the knowledge of which has been withheld from the prisoner until the trial. Regina v. Brown, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 239; N.C., 59.

"Criminal Law and Practice Statute," No. 233, Sec. 389.]—The propriety of the admission of such evidence is not a question of law within Sec. 389, but merely a rule of practice. Ibid.

Evidence Not Produced at Committal Produced at Trial.]—The rule that evidence not produced at the committal of a prisoner should not be produced at his trial, is one of practice only and may be departed from. Regina v. Schreibvogel, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 92.

Admissibility—Statements Made in Prisoner's Absence—Admissions by Conduct.]—On the trial of R. for stealing boots, L. gave evidence (subject to objection as to its admissibility) that he had heard one P. say in another Court, in R.'s hearing, that R. had brought to him certain boots, like samples which P. then produced, that R. thereupon desired that samples of the boots produced by P. might be compared with samples of the stolen boots produced by L., and that P., L. and R. made the comparison; that P. then said he was sure that both samples belonged to the same lot of boots, and that to this R. said nothing. R. was convicted, but on case stated for opinion of the Full Court, Held that the only part of the evidence objected to that was admissible was the request of R. for a comparison, and the fact of the comparison, which by themselves were of no weight, and conviction quashed. Regina v. Rooney, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 227; 6 A.L.T., 100.

Proof of Handwriting—"Evidence Act," Sec. 18—Writing in Dispute—Comparison of Handwriting.]—On an information against S. N. and J. N. for conspiring to procure a false affidavit of debt, witnesses were examined on a comparison of handwriting in proof of the signature of S. N. to the affidavit. D. produced a writing which he had seen S. N. sign, and, on comparison, was of opinion that the signatures were by the same person. C. looked at an order to pay money brought to him by J. N., and purporting to be signed by J. N., on which order C. had acted; and he also looked at the instructions to prepare the affidavit of debt, which were signed by S. N. On comparing the signature to the affidavit with either of these signatures he was of opinion that the signature to the affidavit was that of the same person. The document D. had referred to, and the affidavit, both went to the jury, and counsel for S. N. and J. N. cross-examined C. and D. on their evidence as to the signature of the affidavit by S. N., and urged that their evidence, not being receivable before the "Evidence Act," was not now admissible under that Act for comparison of writings. Held, per totam curiam, that the affidavit was a document in dispute, under the Sec. 18 of the "Evidence Act," No. 100; that D.'s and C.'s evidence for comparison of handwritings was admissible; and that sending the document produced by D. to the jury, though not regular, was not a ground for a new trial on the question of law reserved at the trial. Per Stawell, C.J., and Williams, J., that the affidavit was a document in dispute, simply because counsel for the prisoners cross-examined upon it. Per Molesworth, J., not only on that ground, but also because the point had not been thus argued at the trial, he not being prepared to say that mere cross-examination on a document would be enough to make it "in dispute." Regina v. Nathan, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 317.

Rebutting Evidence—To Prove General Bad Character.]—P. was convicted of stealing from the person. Evidence was given of her good character by witnesses, and then the Crown Prosecutor called as rebutting evidence two constables, who swore that P. was known to them as a prostitute and the associate of thieves. Held that the evidence was of particular and not general bad character and inadmissible. Conviction quashed. Regina v. Pearce, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 125.

Letter from Husband to Wife.]—Communications between husband and wife are, as a rule, not admissible in a criminal charge against the husband, but where the communications have come into the hands of a third person and are produced, they are admissible. Regina v. Dowling, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 79; 5 A.L.T., 5.

Right of Jury to Ask Questions so as to Elicit Evidence.]—A jury may, with the leave of the Court, through their foreman, make any inquiry which could be properly made on behalf of the prosecution or defence. Regina v. James, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 193; 6 A.L.T., 58.

At the trial of J. for stealing money from L., it appeared that L. had lodged some of his money in the Savings' Bank. After the Judge had summed up, the jury, without objection from counsel on either side, asked L. if there was an entry in his Savings' Bank pass-book which would show that he had lodged his money as alleged, and whether this pass-book could be produced. L. answering in the affirmative, the jury requested that the book should be produced, in order that they might examine it. To this counsel for the prisoner objected, but the Judge overruled the objection, and the jury saw the book and convicted J. Held, on special case, that the evidence was rightly admitted. Ibid.

Admissibility—Comparison of Plaster Casts of Foot-prints.]—In order to prove that certain foot-prints had been made by a prisoner, it was proved that one of his boots had been pressed into the soil beside these foot-prints, and had made a similar impression. Plaster casts, which had been taken of the foot-prints in question, were also produced in Court, and a comparison made between them and the boots of the prisoner. Held that this evidence was properly obtained, and was admissible. Regina v. O'Brien, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 242; 6 A.L.T., 95.

Admissibility of Evidence—Threats Used by Accused.]—Evidence of threats used by a prisoner that he would shoot any person who should take land, which formerly belonged to the prisoner, was held admissible against him on his trial for the murder of a person who had obtained an allotment of such land, and had been found shot dead, though the threats in question had been uttered some years before, and were used specially with reference to another allotment. Ibid.

Admissibility to Show Intent.]—See Regina v. Davis, ante column 302.

Irrelevant Evidence of Immaterial Fact.]—See Regina v. Ainsworth, post column 319.

Wrongful Admission—Correction by Judge.]—See Regina v. Burns, ante column 311.

Act No. 233, Sec. 298—Cumulative Sentence.]—M. was tried under Act No. 267, Sec. 27, for escaping from a gaol. Three records were produced, the first of which showed that he had been sentenced to three years' imprisonment, and the two other records showed sentences "cumulative upon former sentence." Held that Sec. 298 of the Act was not sufficiently complied with; that the former sentence should have been referred to specifically. Regina v. Desmond, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 48.

Cumulative Sentences—Evidence of Former Conviction—Amendment.]—One sentence cannot be postponed so as to commence at the end of a period for which a person is already in prison, unless the imprisonment then being undergone by the prisoner was under a sentence for another crime, and the conviction for such crime should be proved, and can only be proved by legal evidence, viz., production of the previous conviction, or by a certificate signed by the officer having the custody of the records of the Court where the prisoner was sentenced, and mere oral evidence of the previous conviction is insufficient. Where, however, a sentence has been postponed improperly, the Court has power to amend it by making the imprisonment commence from the time the sentence was passed. Regina v. Fennell, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 183.

Two Counts—Sentence on Each.]—Sentences, the one cumulative on the other, may be passed on each count of an information containing two counts, each of which charges a distinct misdemeanour. Regina v. Jones, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 221.

Cumulative Sentences—Evidence of Former Conviction.]—See Regina v. Desmond and Regina v. Fennell, ante columns 315, 316.

Offences Committed on High Seas—Penal Servitude — Return to Habeas Corpus.]—Two prisoners being convicted of an offence on board a British ship upon the high seas, were sentenced to penal servitude for fifteen years, and were thereupon detained in a public gaol within the meaning of the "Statute of Gaols 1864." A habeas corpus was sued out, and on the return to the writ, which was to the effect that the prisoners were detained "for the cause and to the end that they may undergo the sentence aforesaid," the Court ordered the prisoners to be discharged and set at large, on the ground that sentence of penal servitude could not be carried into execution in the colony without the intervention of a Secretary of State, as provided by 16 and 17 Vic., Cap. 99, Sec. 6. On appeal to the Privy Council, Held that the return to the writ was sufficient; and that even if it were not, the Court had at all events erred in not remanding the prisoners until it was clear that there were no lawful means of executing the sentence. Regina v. Mount and Morris, 4 A.J.R., 124; 6 L.R., P.C., 283; 44 L.J., P.C., 58; 32 L.T., 279; 23 W.R., 572.

For Offences Committed on the Seas — Penal Servitude.]—Even though no provision were made in the colonies for the carrying into execution of a sentence of penal servitude, yet if an Imperial Act directed such a punishment, the sentence could not be treated as a nullity, merely because no means were provided in the colonies for carrying it out; but on the review of Imperial and Colonial legislation, it is apparent that a sentence of penal servitude may be passed in Victoria for offences within the jurisdiction conferred on the Courts of the Colony by 12 and 13 Vic., Cap. 96. Regina v. Mount and Morris, 6 L.R., P.C., 283; 44 L.J., P.C., 58; 32 L.T., 279; 23 W.R., 572.

For Offences Committed on the Seas—12 and 13 Vic., Cap. 96 — 20 and 21 Vic., Cap. 3.] — Although the Act 12 and 13 Vic., Cap. 96, only authorised the colonial Courts to inflict punishment in the case of offences committed on the seas according to the law then in force, such law authorising transportation only for any period not less than seven years, and though the Act 20 and 21 Vic., Cap. 3, which abolished transportation and substituted penal servitude, does not expressly include the colonies, it is applicable to them with respect to the sentences to be passed on persons convicted in the colonies of offences only triable there by virtue of the Admiralty jurisdiction conferred by the Imperial Act 12 and 13 Vic., Cap. 96, on colonial Courts. Such offences might be tried after that Act in England or in the colonies, and the policy of the Act was that such offences before triable in England only should after it be tried in the colonies as well, and that the same consequences should ensue in the way of punishment as if they had been tried in England, and this general intent and policy should govern the construction of both Acts, in the absence of an expressed intention to the contrary. Ibid.

Offence Committed Upon the High Seas—Manslaughtsr—12 and 13 Vic., Cap. 96—9 Geo. IV., Cap. 31, Sec. 9 — 16 and 17 Vic., Cap. 99, Sec. 6 —20 and 21 Vic., Cap. 3.]—Two prisoners were tried by the Supreme Court at the Criminal Sessions for murder committed on board a British ship upon the high seas, and were convicted of manslaughter. The jurisdiction to try persons charged with offences committed on the sea within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty was conferred on colonial Courts in 1849 by the Act 12 and 13 Vic., Cap. 96, Sec. 1, which enacts that colonial Courts should have the same jurisdiction for trying such offences, and be empowered to take and exercise all such proceedings for bringing persons charged therewith to trial, and "for and auxiliary to and consequent upon the trial," as by the law of the colony might have been taken if the offence had been committed upon any waters within the limits of the colony. Sec. 2, which relates to the sentence to be passed in such cases, provides that convicted persons shall be subject to the same punishment as "by any law now in force" persons convicted of the same offence would be liable to in case such offence had been committed, and was "enquired of, tried, and adjudged in England." At the time the Act passed the punishment for manslaughter in England was, under 9 Geo. IV., Cap. 31, Sec. 9, transportation for life, or for a term not less than seven years, or imprisonment, with or without hard labour, not exceeding four years, or fine. By 16 and 17 Vic., Cap. 99, penal servitude was, in some cases, substituted for this punishment, and by 20 and 21 Vic., Cap. 3, penal servitude was substituted for transportation. The Judge who tried the prisoners sent the case for opinion to the other Judges of the Supreme Court, who gave as their opinion that the prisoners might be sentenced to penal servitude for the same period, as under 12 and 13 Vic., Cap. 96, they would have been sentenced to transportation; but that by virtue of 16 and 17 Vic., Cap. 99, Sec. 6, sentence of penal servitude could not be carried into execution without the intervention of the Secretary of State. On appeal to the Privy Council, Held that the Judges were right so far as they decided that sentence of penal servitude could be passed, and that such a sentence amounted to one of detention and compulsory service under 27 Vic., No. 233; but that the intervention of a Secretary of State was not necessary, since the direction in Sec. 6 of the Act 16 and 17 Vic., Cap. 99, that the Secretary of State should point out the place of confinement in case of a person sentenced to penal servitude, relates only to the manner of executing the sentence, and to matters of administration, and therefore need not be resorted to in the case of sentences passed in the colonies, which may be executed according to the local procedure. Regina v. Mount and Morris, 4 A.J.R., 1, 38, 124; 6 L.R., P.C., 283; 44 L.J., P.C., 58; 32 L.T., 279; 23 W.R., 572.

Removal of Prisoner to Pentridge.]—A prisoner sentenced to imprisonment at Portland Gaol, with hard labour, may be removed to the penal establishment at Pentridge by a warrant or order of the Governor, which need not be addressed to any person in particular, need not be under seal, and is not to be construed in the same manner as a warrant of commitment. Regina v. McCarthy, 4 A.J.R., 155.

Error Does Not Lie in Supreme Court to Review Judgments.]—A prisoner was convicted of fraudulent insolvency on an information containing four counts, and he received cumulative sentences on each count, amounting in all to six years with hard labour. On motion for a rule nisi for a writ of habeas corpus, or for the writ itself, on the ground that there is but one offence of fraudulent insolvency, that the four counts were for but one offence, and that the longest sentence allowable for that offence was three years with hard labour. Held, that the motion must be refused, and that to grant the application would be an assumption by the Court of a jurisdiction in error to review judgment which it does not possess. In re Millar, 3 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 41.

The Supreme Court does not sit as a Court of Error in criminal cases, nor is there any Court of Error in such cases in the Colony. Regina v. Cleary, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 85.

Appeal to Privy Council—How Granted.]—Leave to appeal against a decision of the Supreme Court discharging two prisoners under sentence was granted to the Crown, upon the terms that the order allowing the appeal should be served upon the parties themselves if they could be found, and, if they could not, upon the attorney on whose application the writ of habeas corpus upon the return of which they were discharged issued. Regina v. Mount and Morris, 5 A J.R., 58.

New Trial—When Granted or Refused—Partiality of the Jury.]—After conviction of two prisoners for conspiracy, a new trial was applied for on the ground, amongst others, of partiality and prejudice on the part of the jury. The affidavits as to the conduct of the jury were to the effect that one of the jurors had said before the trial that the two defendants were the "two greatest rascals in Melbourne," and that another had used words of nearly equal force in respect of the defendants, or one of them, on account of their, or his, connection with personation at a parliamentary election. Held, that a much stronger case would be required if this were the only ground for a new trial. Regina v. Nathan, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 317, 322.

New Trial in Cases of Felony—Power of Court to Grant—"Criminal Law and Practice Statute," No. 233.]—The Court has power, under the "Criminal Law and Practice Statute," No. 233, to grant new trials in cases of felony; and an order for a new trial was held good, though made at the time of quashing the first conviction, and though the prisoner's counsel did not appear to object, the prisoner having had ample opportunity to test the question by writ of habeas, requiring the gaoler to show the grounds on which he was detained in custody, and there having been a long interval between the order for the new trial and the new trial itself. Regina v. Whelan, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 7.

Granting new trials in cases of felony is a matter of practice, and so is not affected by the fact that the "Criminal Law and Practice Statute" does not in so many words give the power of granting new trials in such cases, or by there being no provision made for new trials in cases of felony by the law of England. Ibid.

New Trial—When Granted or Refused.]—Unless there has been a great and manifest misconduct of proceedings, the Court will not grant a new trial where the prisoner has been acquitted on a charge of misdemeanour. Regina v. Benjamin, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 178.

New Trial After Judgment.]—A new trial will not be granted after judgment pronounced on a criminal charge until the judgment has been got rid of. An affidavit of the fact of a judgment is not necessary where the presiding Judge at the trial is a member of the Supreme Court Bench. Regina v. Ryan, 3 V.R. (L.,) 77; 3 A.J.R., 49.

Irrelevant Evidsnce of Immaterial Fact.]—The evidence of a document, itself irrelevant, to prove an immaterial fact does not invalidate conviction, and is not a ground for a new trial. Regina v. Ainsworth, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 26.

Evidence Improprsrly Admitted.]—Where, on a trial of a prisoner for carnally abusing a child under the age of ten years, a statement of the child, obtained by the parents by means of punishment, and made long after the commission of the offence, had been received in evidence, the Court allowed a new trial instead of quashing the conviction. Regina v. Nixon, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 32; 3 A.L.T., 95.

When Granted — Misdemeanour.]— A prisoner who has been convicted in the Central Criminal Court of a misdemeanour seeking before sentence passed for a new trial, must show to the satisfaction of the Supreme Court that a definite wrong has been done him, and for that purpose he cannot refer to the course which the Crown has taken in instituting or carrying on the proceedings. Regina v. Schreibvogel, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 92.

Costs of Application for New Trial.]—The Court has uniformly adhered to the principle of not recognising that the Crown can receive any assistance in prosecutions, and of insisting that each prosecution should be regarded as either entirely a public, or entirely a private, proceeding. If, however, the Attorney-General feel bound to sign an information, in his function of a grand jury, and not feeling bound to go any further and put the country to the expense of prosecution, leaves the option of prosecuting to private persons, and in such a case the private person bears the whole cost, the Court will not allow the prisoners a new trial on the ground that the verdict was against evidence, unless the applicant pays the costs of the first trial; and the Court not having power to enforce such payment, the applicants must consent to pay such costs. Regina v. Nathan, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 317.

Practice—No Appearance for Prisoner.]—Semble, on a special case reserved, when there is no appearance for the prisoner, the Court will not hear Counsel for the Crown. Regina v. Grandison, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 132.

On a Crown case reserved, counsel for the Crown is entitled to be heard, although there is no appearance for the prisoner. Regina v. Taylor, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 153.

Power to State on New Trial—When it May be Stated—Question of Difficulty at Trial—No. 233, Sec. 389.]—W. was tried for murder and convicted, but the conviction was quashed and a new trial ordered on the ground of evidence having been improperly admitted. At the new trial W. was not arraigned, having before pleaded "Not Guilty," but was told to look to his challenges, and the trial proceeded on the previous plea. An objection was raised that W. should not be given in charge to the jury, because the information showed by its endorsement that the previous conviction had been quashed, and no fresh information had been filed. The Judge, considering that the objection did not arise at the trial, and was matter to be raised in arrest of judgment, W. was allowed to enter new pleas, and was not afterwards allowed to withdraw. Another objection was raised, that the Court which had previously tried the prisoner was no longer a court, having adjourned sine die. W. was convicted, and his counsel moved in arrest of judgment, which was refused. The Judge in Chambers, some time afterwards, consented to state a case. Held that the questions in dispute had arisen at the trial, and that the trial commenced as soon as the prisoner was told to look to his challenges; that "the reasonable time" for stating the case ought not to expire till the first four days of the ensuing term; and that the case in question was not reserved and stated too late, though the Court before which the question arose was gone when the case was reserved. Regina v. Whelan, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 7.

Special Case—Lapse of.]—On the acquittal of a prisoner on a charge of misdemeanour, a special case, if reserved, would lapse. Regina v. Benjamin, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 178.

Act No. 233, Sec. 389—On the Trial—Hear and Determine.]—On a trial for murder committed on the high seas, after the jury had given their verdict of "guilty," doubts arose as to the proper sentence, and a case was reserved for the opinion of the Full Court. On the case coming before the Full Court, Held that the difficulty was one which had arisen "on the trial" within the meaning of Sec. 389 of the "Criminal Law and Practice Statute 1864;" but that since the Court, where a case was reserved, had to "hear and finally determine the question," it had no power to deal with the question, since it could not compel the Supreme Court to pass the sentence which it might deem legal. The Court, however, gave its opinion to the Judge of the Supreme Court, who had reserved the case. Regina v. Mount and Morris, 4 A.J.R., 38.

Proper Questions on Which it May be Stated.]—A question as to the manner in which a jury is empanelled, provided it be done in a manner not contrary to the "Jury Statute," is not a question of law upon which a special case could properly be stated for the opinion of the Court, but is a mere matter of procedure. Regina v. Lee, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 225; 2 A.L.T., 23.

Drawn Up by Deceased Judge—No Signature—"Criminal Law and Practice Statute 1864," Sec. 390.]—Where a Judge drew up a special case, and it was in his own handwriting, but not signed by him as required by Sec. 390 of the "Criminal Law and Practice Statute 1864," and he died before it came on to be heard, the Court considered the case sufficiently stated and entertained it. Regina v. Duffy, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 430; 2 A.L.T., 85.

Property of the Crown.]—The property of the Crown is not subject to distress for arrears of rent due to the landlord of the premises on which that property is found. Regina v. Tucker, 1 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 193.

Right to a Trial at Bar.]—Where the Crown is substantially a party, or is immediately or directly interested, the Crown is of right entitled to the application for a trial at bar being granted. The fact that a petitioner, under a contract made with the Victorian Government, representing the Queen, claims money, which will have to be paid out of the Consolidated Fund, does not make the Crown directly interested; such a suit is really against the Local Government and only nominally against the Crown. Application refused. [Note.—An order for a trial at bar was subsequently maintained upon affidavits as to nature and merits of the case.] Bruce v. The Queen, 2 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 193, 201, 202.

Rights of to Gold upon Private Property.]—In respect of mining for gold by strangers upon private land, the Attorney-General has a right to an account of the gold raised, and to stop further mining. Attorney-General v. Scholes, 5 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 164.

By the law of England, which is also the law of this country, all gold mines belong to the Crown, and that though the Crown may have granted the lands containing the mines to a subject without reservation, the gold under the grantee's land is not his, and neither he nor anybody else has a right against the Crown to take it. Millar v. Wildish, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 37.

Right of Crown to Gold—Crown Grant of Lands—6 & 6 Vic., Cap. 36.]—A grant of Crown lands under 5 and 6 Vic., Cap. 36, made before the passing of the Act 18 and 19 Vic., Cap. 55, does not transfer to the grantee the gold and silver that may be found under the lands so granted. Woolley v. Ironstone Company, 1 V.L.R. (E.) 237.

Affirmed, on appeal to P.C., L.R., 2 App. Ca. 163.

Per Privy Council.]—The prerogative right of the Crown to gold and silver found in mines will not pass under a grant of the land from the Crown unless the intention that it should so pass is expressed by apt and precise words. Since the Act 5 and 6 Vic., Cap. 36, contains no reference to the rights of the Crown in the precious metals to be found under the soil, Held that the Statute has not so modified the common law that a sale of waste lands under it must be taken to include a grant of the gold and silver found under land so sold. Woolley v. Attorney-General (Victoria,) L.R., 2 App. Ca., 163.

The garnishee provisions of the Act No. 274 are not applicable against the Crown. Aitkin v. Godkin, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 216.

Royal Pardon — "Influx of Criminals Act," 18 Vic., No. 3—"Constitution Act," 22 Vic., No. 68.]—Act No. 3, being recited in the Schedule to 22 Vic., No. 68, is perpetually re-enacted by it, and such power of re-enactment is given to the Legislature by the "Constitution Act." K. was convicted by Justices as having come to Victoria illegally contrary to 18 Vic., No. 3, and it appeared that K. had been convicted of treason-felony and had been transported to Western Australia, but had received a free pardon. Held, that the prerogative of the Crown to pardon was subject to the enactment of the Legislature, and that the Crown by assenting to Act No. 3 intended that such prerogative should be exercised subject to that Act. Conviction upheld. Ryall v. Kenealy, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 193, 200, 201, 206; N.C., 7.

S.C., see STATUTES—Interpretation of, and ante column 178.

Limitations Do Not Run Against.]—The "Statute of Limitations," No. 213, Part 2, does not affect the Crown. Attorney-General v. Hoggan, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 111.

There is jurisdiction in Equity to entertain an information by the Attorney-General seeking a declaration of title to certain land by escheat owing to the death of person seized more than fifteen years ago without heirs, and an injunction to stay bringing land under "Transfer of Land Statute," No. 301, and registering another as proprietor, even though the information shows a legal title in the Crown. Ibid.

Nuisance—Injunction to Restrain Sale of Land—Right ad Medium Filum Viae.]—By proclamation certain Crown lands were put up for sale. The petitioner purchased one lot, which was bounded by a street called "Pall Mall." Afterwards the Board of Land and Works notified its intention of selling land upon the other side of this street, but extending sixteen feet beyond the medium filum, encroaching to that extent upon the portion of street fronting petitioner's land. Petition and bill against the board to restrain sale, and alleging a nuisance by obstructing petitioner's direct access to a reserve on the other side of the street. Held that there was no jurisdiction to prevent a nuisance on the part of the Crown, the matter not resting on a contract. Injunction granted as to the sale of the land of the half of the street fronting petitioner's land. Pike v. The Queen, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 194; 2 A.L.T., 75.

On Forfeiture for Felony—Bars Right to Bring a Suit—32 and 33 Vic., Cap. 23.]—A bare right to set aside a sale or to recover property conveyed away does not pass to the Crown by forfeiture for felony. Semble, only that passes to Crown which is certain, immediately ascertainable, and tangible. J. was interested under a settlement to certain property and he mortgaged it to defendant, and subsequently, in April, 1870, he conveyed the equity of redemption to defendant. To a bill seeking to impeach the conveyance of the equity of redemption, defendant put in a plea that in June, 1872, plaintiff was convicted of felony and was imprisoned as a felon till July, 1877. Held that the bare right to set aside the conveyance, which was all that was vested in plaintiff at time of his conviction, did not pass to Crown, and plea overruled. Quaere, whether the "Imperial Statute," 32 and 33 Vic., Cap. 33 (abolition of forfeiture for felony,) extends to Victoria. Johnston v. Kelly, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 97; 3 A.L.T., 41.

Leases by—Effect of.]—The Crown in this colony stands in the same relation to its tenant as an ordinary landlord to his tenant. Kickham v. The Queen, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 1, 6; 3 A.L.T., 86.

Estreated Recognizance—Act No. 379—Act No. 241.]—G. entered into a recognizance which was estreated September, 1882. In October, 1882, G.'s estate was sequestrated, and in November judgment on the recognizance was signed against G. G. was arrested under fi. fa., and paid the amount of the judgment and costs under a protest. Held that the Crown is not barred by the insolvency of a Crown debtor, nor is it debarred by Act No. 241 from enforcing its remedies against such a debtor, and that the judgment could not be set aside, or satisfaction in respect of it entered. Regina v. Griffiths, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 45; 4 A.L.T., 156.

Act No. 506, Sec. 418.]—As the Crown is not named in Sec. 418 of Act No. 506, it is not bound by it; and therefore a municipality is not bound to enclose or protect a hole when situated upon unalienable Crown land, nor is the Crown bound to protect the dangerous places, or to recompense the municipality for performing that duty. Bisp v. Mayor of Collingwood, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 249; 5 A.L.T., 79.

Issuing License Inconsistent with Rights of Former Lessee.]—No application lies against the Crown to prevent the issue of a license or lease inconsistent with the rights of a former lessee or owner; and proceedings cannot be taken till something be actually done. Shire of Ballan v. The Queen, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 255; 6 A.L.T., 109.

Semble—The Crown is entitled by information to redress injuries to others as well as to itself from the wrongful consequences of its own mistakes. Attorney-General v. Belson, 4 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 57.

2. ITS LIABILITIES UNDER THE "CROWN REMEDIES AND LIABILITIES STATUTE" AND OTHERWISE.

Certificate Holder Under "Land Act 1862"—"Claim or Demand" within the meaning of Sec. 27 of Act No. 241.]—A certificate holder under the "Land Act 1862," having paid the certificate fees to a solicitor and applied for a lease and tendered a rent which was refused, has no right to enforce his claim by petition under Sec. 27 of the Act No. 241, as such right is not founded on any "contract" with the Government. Simson v. The Queen, 2 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 113.

Claim Arising Out of Contract—Selection of Land under "Land Acts."]—Where a Victorian Act, assented to by the Queen, authorises a class of persons to select defined lands and pay rent for them to a land officer, the transaction, completed by payment, constitutes a claim or demand, founded on and arising out of a contract entered into on behalf of Her Majesty, or by authority of Her Local Government within the meaning of the Act No. 241. The Court may make interlocutory orders against the Crown under that Act; such orders should not be mandatory, and should contain no penalty in case of non-compliance, nor should they describe the person who is to do the acts directed in them. Kettle v. The Queen, 3 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 50.

Claim Arising Out of Contract—Right to a Grant in Fee Under the "Land Acts."]—Held and affirmed per P.C.—That a right to a grant in fee, selected under the "Land Acts," is a claim arising out of contract within the meaning of Sec. 27 of Act 241. Ettershank v. The Queen, 4 A.J.R., 11, 55, 132. On appeal to P.C., sub. nom. Attorney-General v. Ettershank, L.R., 6 P.C., 354.

For facts see S.C., under LAND ACTS—Selectors.

Implied Contract—Act No. 241, Secs. 20 and 27.]—Under the Act No. 241 an action for money had and received lies against the Crown in a case where between subject and subject tort would also lie. Where the plaintiffs had paid Custom duties, collected by an officer under the authority of resolutions imposing such duties, which had passed the Legislative Assembly, and it was held that such collection was illegal, the plaintiffs brought a petition under the Act No. 241 for the recovery of those duties. Held that Secs. 20 and 27 do not necessarily exclude the notion of giving a right to sue on an implied contract; that the cause of action arose out of contract—a contract implied by the law to repay that which it would be inequitable to retain. Rules nisi for nonsuit discharged. Stevenson v. The Queen, Dalgety v. The Queen, Sargood v. The Queen, Matthews v. The Queen, Ecroyd v. The Queen, Banks v. The Queen, McArthur v. The Queen, McNaughton v. The Queen, Watson v. The Queen, 2 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 176.

Claim Arising Out of Contract, Act No. 241, Sec. 20—"Customs Act," Sec. 21.]—A person paying customs duties improperly levied cannot sue the Crown under Sec. 20 of Act No. 241 to recover them, but must sue the officer under Sec. 21 of "Customs Act 1857." Sargood v. The Queen, see post under REVENUE—Customs.

Registration Fees Wrongly Paid—Act No. 49—Petition to Recover.]—Lorimer v. The Queen, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 244. See post under REVENUE—Customs.

"Claim or Demand"—Application for a Mining Lease.]—The fulfilment of preliminaries necessary for the application of a mining lease do not give such rights against the Crown as would amount to a claim founded on contract within the meaning of Sec. 27 of Act No. 241. Hitchins v. The Queen, 4 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 133.

"Claim or Demand"—Mining Lease.]—The right, if any, of a holder of miners' rights to stop the issue of a second lease inconsistent with such holder's previous rights, is not a "claim or demand," or "founded on or arising out of some contract" within the meaning of Sec. 27 of the Act No. 241. City of Melbourne Gold Mining Company v. The Queen, 4 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 148.

"Claim or Demand" within "Crown Remedies and Liabilitiss Statute 1865"—Injunction to Restrain the Issue of a License Inconsistent with a Lease.]—The Crown granted in 1864, under the Act No. 148, Sec. 12, to a Road Board, a lease of a water reservoir, together with the exclusive right of collecting the stormwater falling on the watershed on which the reservoir stood, and also with liberty to cut and use all channels, races, &c., which might be necessary for the purpose of conducting the water into the reservoir, with liberty to sell the water. M. applied under the "Mining Statute 1865," for a license to cut a race for mining purposes from a creek which was within the area leased to the Road Board, which thereupon petitioned under the "Crown Remedies and Liabilities Statute 1865," for an injunction to restrain the Board of Land and Works and the Mining Department from granting a license to M. to cut the race from the creek in question. Held, per Molesworth, J., following City of Melbourne Gold Mining Company v. The Queen, that no application would lie against the Crown to restrain the granting of a lease alleged to be inconsistent with the rights of a former lessee or owner; that proceedings cannot be taken unless something was actually being done infringing the alleged right; that in this respect there was no difference between leases and licenses, and that proceedings could not be taken till the license was issued and the licensee doing something under it inconsistent with the alleged right of the Road Board. Application refused. Shire of Ballan v. The Queen, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 255; 6 A.L.T., 109.

Act No. 241, Sec. 27—Claim Arising Out of Contract.]—If an action properly brought against the Crown on a contract is defeated by a collusive and fraudulent adjustment, relief against such an adjustment is a claim arising out of a contract under Sec. 27 of Act No. 241, and in such a case a petition will lie. M. in his petition set out a contract entered into between the Crown and himself, and a collusive and fraudulent adjustment effected by trustees for him with the Crown, by which an action brought against the Crown on the contract was compromised. Demurrers overruled. Merry v. The Queen, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 8; 4 A.L.T., 133.

Power to Contract.]—The Parliament of Victoria may by legislative enactment in express terms authorise the Government of Victoria representing the Crown to enter into a contract, but there is no authority to show that, in the absence of such enabling powers, the Government can contract so as to bind the State. The Government may in cases of unforseen exigencies act on the faith of the Parliament confirming its acts, but until such confirmation be given, the act done by the Government is not at law obligatory on the State. Alcock v. Fergie, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 285, 310.

How Far Crown Bound by Promises of its Officers.] Per Molesworth, J.—"I do not think the Crown bound by promises of the Queen herself, or any of her officers, though acted upon or partly performed, as to Crown lands, but only by grants under seal or conveyances exactly conformable to Acts of Parliament authorising them." Dallimore v. The Queen, 3 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 19, 33.

Retrospective Effect of "Crown Remedies and Liabilities Statuts," Acts Nos. 49 & 241.]—Petition under Act No. 241, and Bill by Mayor, &c., of Melbourne, praying specific performance of a contract made in 1854 to grant land for purposes of a market. Held by Molesworth, J., that if there was a right to claim the benefit of the contract, yet it was not enforceable under the Act No. 241, as amounting to a contract subsequent to the passing of the Act No. 49 (1858.) Held by the Full Court on appeal, that if there was a right it was enforceable under the Act No. 241, although it was made before the passing of the Act No. 49, those Statutes being retrospective. Mayor, &c., of Melbourne v. The Queen, 4 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 19, 34, 42.

No. 241, Sec. 2—"Prosecuting and Continuing" Petition—Appeal to Privy Council—Costs.]—A petition against the Crown under the "Crown Remedies and Liabilities Statute 1865," No. 241, is "prosecuted and continued" within the meaning of Sec. 2 of the Act, when on appeal before the Privy Council, so as to entitle the successful party to add the costs of the appeal to his final judgment. Regina v. Dallimore, 3 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 131.

28 Vic., No. 241, Sec. 25—Judgment Against Crown by Default—"Constitution Act," 19 Vic.—"Audit Act," 22 Vic., No. 86.]—A judgment by default may be signed on behalf of the Crown consistently with the terms of Act No. 241. Sec. 25 of Act No. 241 makes it lawful for the Governor to cause to be paid out of the consolidated revenue certain damages, assessed, &c., but does not enact the method of carrying out the details, that having been done by 22 Vic., No. 86, Sec. 24, and Sch. 7. But, to render any part of the consolidated revenue legally applicable to the payment of such a judgment, Parliament must have voted and actually appropriated the money for the purpose by a general or special Appropriation Bill. Act No. 241 is not an Appropriation Bill but only a Procedure Act, and does not in any way repeal the "Audit Act," No. 86. A judgment signed by default is so far a valid judgment, but there are no means of satisfying such a judgment without an Appropriation Act. Alcock v. Fergie, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 285, 312 et seq.

Electric Telegraph Department—Non-Transmission of a Message—Act No. 455, Sec. 18.]—D. sent a message to a person in New Zealand containing the words "reply paid," and the department failed to transmit the reply. Held that under Sec. 18 the department was not liable, even although the reply was sent from a place beyond the Colony. *Dron v. Pastoral Runs—Gold-Field's Common Proclaimed on—When Reversion to the Crown is Not Caused by.]—Prior to and in the year 1862, a pastoral run was occupied by D. as licensee. By proclamation of January 28th, 1861, a part of the run was proclaimed a gold-field's common. No reduction of D.'s assessment or license fee was made. By proclamation of October 26th, 1863, the common was abolished and another proclaimed, which consisted of the middle third only of the former. D. claimed the other two-thirds of the original common, which no longer formed part of any common. The Crown claimed it also, as reverting to it freed from the rights of D. and the commoners, and put it up for sale as "new runs," and it was purchased by B. and N. D., however, had remained in possession alone, or with the commoners, and had paid his license fees up to the end of 1863, and he impounded B.'s and N.'s stock. The Crown recovered a verdict in ejectment against D. On motion for a nonsuit, Held, that under No. 117, Sec. 71, on the proclamation of a gold-field's common over lands held by a pastoral tenant of the Crown, the rights of the tenant might co-exist with those of the commoners; that, under Secs. 80, 107 and 121 of the Act, yearly licenses might be issued as theretofore; might be revoked for any of the objects set out in the 80th Section, and unless so revoked would continue up to the end of the year 1870; that the Crown was not justified in treating the two-thirds of the original common as unoccupied runs capable of being dealt with under Sec. 98 of the Act, since such dealing was not for one of the specified objects; and that as D.'s license could not have been and was not revoked, the lands had not reverted to the Crown, and rule for nonsuit made absolute. Regina v. Dallimore, 1 W.W. and A'B. (L.,) 153.

NOTE.—On appeal to the Privy Council, their Lordships, having discovered that the last license issued by the Crown, in respect of the Lamplough run, expired on December 31st, 1862, having been for one year only, and subject to the reserved right of the Crown to sell or proclaim any portion of such lands as a gold-field's common, without compensation for the loss of enjoyment to the licensee, Held, that the Crown had at the time of the sale to B. and N., which was after the expiration of the last license, an indefeasible title to the land sold under the terms of the license, as also upon the construction of the Acts No. 117 and No. 145, notwithstanding the previous and subsequent occupation by D., and payment of rent by him, which under the circumstances did not constitute a tenancy from year to year, or give the licensee any title to the lands in question. S.C., L.R., 1 P.C., 13.

Demand of Possession—Who May Make.]—Semble that the district surveyor is not an authorised agent to make a demand of possession for the Crown of Crown lands. Ibid, 1 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 153, 161.

Application to Public Purposes Of—What Is—Road.]—Semble, That as to a road over Crown land, an advertisement in the Government Gazette is necessary as an "application" to public purposes, within the meaning of No. 32, Sec. 4. United Sir William Don Company v. Koh-i-noor Company, 3 W. W. & A'B. (M.,) 63, 77.

Title to Crown Lands.]—Per Molesworth, J. The "Constitution Act," Sec. 54, has made no change in the estate of Crown lands, or the powers of the Crown to protect legal public interests in them; it merely transferred to the colonial a subordinate power of dealing with a subject previously controlled by the Imperial Government. Attorney-General v. Belson, 4 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 57.

See also Woolley v. Ironstone Hill Lead Company, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 237.

Power of Governor to Reserve when Held Under Miners' Rights.]—The Governor-in-Council cannot apply Crown lands previously held as a claim to public use under the "Mining Statute 1868," Sec. 13, but may under Sec. 14 except such lands from further occupation as a claim, and then use them without regard to the rights of the claimholders. Wakcham v. Cobham, 1 V.R. (M.,) 34: 1 A.J.R., 93.

Crown Lands Temporarily Reserved as a Park—Revocation of Reservation — Notice of — Suit to Restrain Sale of Land.]—Bill by plaintiff seeking to restrain Board of Land and Works from selling, or authorising sale of, certain allotments in Albert Park. Bill alleged that in 1850 Crown Lands, now named Albert Park, were by Her Majesty excepted from sale and reserved as a park under Act 5 and 6 Vic., Cap. 36; that Governor-in-Council, by order February 22nd, 1864, notified in Gazette, appointed defendant Board as a trustee of portion of said land; that, in 1865 certain Crown Lands separated from the Park by the St. Kilda-road were sold in building allotments by the Board; that, in 1868 plaintiff had purchased some of lots so sold in 1867 at a high price, and had laid out money on a house and offices owing to knowledge that land reserved could not be built upon; that Board had advertised land for sale, and was about to sell; that erection of buildings would obstruct view from windows of plaintiff's house, and materially affect plaintiff's comfort and lessen value of land; that a proclamation appeared in Gazette, August, 1862, notifying that Governor-in-Council had temporarily reserved land from sale; that a proclamation appeared in Gazette, March, 1875, stating a proposed revocation of temporary reservation after expiration of four weeks from publication, but that reservation was not in fact revoked at sealing of Bill, April 10th, 1875. Defendant Board demurred on following grounds—(1) want of equity, (2) no privity of contract or estate between plaintiff and defendant, (3) plaintiff had no interest in land subject matter of suit or in alleged trust, (4) defendant had no estate or interest in the land nor any power to sell same or make any title to same, (5) that land was Crown Land vested in Her Majesty, and the Attorney-General was a necessary party to suit. Held that the temporary reservation required a four weeks' notice to revoke it, and that the one announcement could not operate as a notice and as a revocation at its expiration, and, therefore, that sale was when Bill was sealed illegal as between Board and public. But Courts of Equity would not treat agreeable views and clear ventilation as valuable rights legally enforceable or the infringement of them as nuisances, and private persons could only sue to restrain public nuisances when they were especially injured by a breach of public trust; that unless case could be put upon footing of contract, Crown could not be sued by Bill; that Board was only agent of Crown to adjust preliminaries of sales which Governor only could effect and not Board; that Board was a mere officer of Crown, and Courts have no jurisdiction to restrain the Crown by proceedings against its servants, and that Attorney-General was a necessary party to suit. Demurrer allowed. Palmer v. Board of Land and Works, 1 V.L.R. (Eq.,) 80.

For a similar case, mutatis mutandis, see McDonald v. Board of Land and Works, 1 V.L.R. (Eq.,) 90.

Reservation of Crown Land From Sale—How Far Land Taken Out of Operation of Mining Acts.]—Crown land had been reserved by proclamation under the "Sale of Crown Lands Act 1860" No. 117, from sale. For some years before the proclamation of reservation the defendant company had occupied the land for mining purposes and had expended large sums of money on it. In a suit to restrain such mining, Held that the reservation being only a reservation from sale did not dedicate it to any particular purpose, and did not take the land out of the operation of the Mining Acts. Injunction refused. Attorney-General v. Southern Freehold Company, Attorney-General v. United Hand-in-Hand and Band of Hope Company, 4 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 66, 78, 80, et seq.

Sale of Crown Lands Under "Land Act 1862," — Negligence of Agents.]— Per Molesworth, J. "I cannot import into Acts of Parliament conferring the means of acquiring public lands by sale from the Crown, the doctrines of principal and agent in sales by private persons, and say that if any of a series of officials, through whom such matters pass, neglects to give a timely notice to a sub-agent, authorised to sell, of the withdrawal of his authority, that, therefore, the sale is invalid. Kennedy v. The Queen, 1 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 145, 153.

Removing Materials from Crown Land For Road Making—"Local Government Act," No. 176, Sec. 235.]—Per Full Court, overruling Molesworth, J. The words in Sec. 235 "any land" do not include Crown land, and injunction granted restraining a road board from entering Crown lands in the occupation of two boroughs, and used by them for waterworks, from entering upon such lands and quarrying for stone for road making. Mayor of Ballarat and Ballarat East v. Bungaree Road Board, 1 V.R. (E.,) 57, 67, 71, 72, 73; 1 A.J.R., 33.

Wade*, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 5.

"Local Government Act," No. 506, Sec. 386.]—A municipal council is not enabled by Sec. 386 of Act No. 506, to authorise the removal of material for road making from Crown lands, whether within or without the municipality, such lands not being specially set apart for that purpose (overruling *Bell v. Unauthorised Occupation of—Information—Expired License—Evidence—"Land Act 1869," Sec. 23.]—It is necessary, on an information before Justices, under Sec. 23 of the "Land Act 1869," for being in unauthorised occupation of Crown Lands under an expired license, to produce the license, or to prove its existence and contents. Broadbent v. Hornbrook, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 415.

Without the production of the license evidence of the forfeiture in the Gazette is inadmissible. Bloomfield v. Macan, 5 A.J.R., 73.

Presumption as to Land being Crown Land.]—Until the contrary is proved, a presumption arises that land is Crown land, and that the defendant proceeded against has no title to occupy. M'Grath v. Smith, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 231.

Unauthorised Occupation — Occupier of Residence Area — Evidence of Exception.] — Where the occupier of a residence area, the subject matter of which was afterwards excepted from such occupation by a notice in the Gazette, was summoned for being in unauthorised occupation of Crown land, Held that the notice in the Gazette determined his occupancy. Regina v. Dowling, ex parte M'Lean, post under MINING—Residence Area.

Unauthorised Possession—Act No. 360, Secs. 4, 93.]—A person in unauthorised possession of Crown Lands cannot make such a title to the lands as to entitle her to recover for use and occupation when purporting to let the land. Regina v. Hare, ex parte Young, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 38.

STATUTES.

24 Vic., No. 99—Repealed.
"Intestates Real Estate Act 1864," No. 230—Partly repealed.
"Administration Act 1873," No. 427.

1. RIGHTS, DUTIES, POWERS AND LIABILITIES.

Duties Pending Judgment of Court as to Grant of Administration.]—Administration of an intestate's estate was granted to Curator in preference to creditors. Pending an appeal to the Full Court, an application was made to the Full Court as to the duty and right of a curator to act pendente lite. Held that he must act pendente lite, and do his duty. Re Patrick Coady Buckley, 3 A.J.R., 89.

Right to Sell Property Psnding Appsal as to Who is Entitled to Administration.]—Where an order was made by Molesworth, J., granting administration to the Curator, and the order was appealed from, the Court restrained the Curator from selling or disposing of the property pending the appeal, there being, in the opinion of the Court, no case of urgent necessity or of clear utility made out, even supposing the Curator was clearly and permanently administrator. Ibid, p. 100.

Act No. 230, Secs. 21 and 22—Administration of Estate—Payment of Debts.]—D., a clerk in the employ of trustees of a cemetery, embezzled moneys belonging to the trustees, and died leaving £412 as the amount of his debt due, having reduced the amount before his death. The Curator obtained a rule to adminster, and the trustees applied to him for payment of the debt; this being opposed by other creditors, the Curator refused to pay. Summons under Sec. 21 calling upon the Curator to show cause why he should not pay the trustees. Held that the Court had no jurisdiction under Secs. 21 and 22 to make such an order; those sections apply only to misconduct on the part of executors or the Curator, and provide for a speedy remedy for such misconduct, but not a summary mode of obtaining the benefits of an administration. In re Dixie's Estate, 2 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 53.

Leave of Court Required Before Instituting Proceedings Against Curator—Act No. 230, Sec. 39.]—Per Molesworth, J. (in Chambers.) The sanction of the Court is by Sec. 39 of Act No. 230, required before instituting proceedings against the Curator, but the Court upon terms sanctioned the proceedings already begun nunc pro tunc. Pratz v. Weigall, 2. A.L.T., 104.

Summary Jurisdiction of Court Ovsr—Misconduct.]—Per Molesworth, J. (in Chambers.) The summary jurisdiction of the Court over the Curator of Intestate Estates, under Sec. 21 of the "Intestates Real Estate Act," is confined to cases of misconduct on the part of the Curator. Cavanagh v. Weigall, 1 A.L.T., 204.

An application to compel the Curator to transfer certain mining shares which stood in the name of an intestate was refused, and a subsequent suit to compel the transfer was set aside on summons by the Curator, as not having been authorised by the Court or a Judge, under Sec. 39 of the Act. Ibid.

2. WHEN ENTITLED TO ADMINISTRATION.

When.]—An application to substitute the Curator to take out a rule to administer the estate of a testator instead of relatives of the testator, who wished the Curator to administer, was refused, on the ground that it was made too soon after the testator's death (two months;) but the Court intimated that, if no other application were made in the meantime, the rule would be granted in two months from then. In the goods of Hill, 1 A.J.R., 72.

24 Vic., No. 99, Sec. 4—In What Capacity Curator Appointed.]—Where the Curator of Deceased Persons' Estates is appointed by a will as "executor," under the Act No. 99, Sec. 4, a rule will be granted, not for probate to the Curator personally as executor, but authorising him to administer the estate pursuant to the will, in which case, in the event of a change of office, the administration of the estate will pass to the new Curator. In re Clarke, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 15.

Appointed Executor by Testator—Form of Order.]—Where the Curator of Intestate Estates was appointed executor by the testator, the Court made an order as follows:—"Upon reading (all the affidavits) it is ordered that the Curator of the Estates of Deceased Persons shall be administrator of all and singular the property of O'B. deceased, with the will of the said O'B. annexed." In the Will of O'Brien, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.) 91.

Where Sole Next of Kin Infant of Weak Mind.]—Administration will be granted to the Curator in preference to a stranger nominated by the sole next of kin of an intestate, where such next of kin is an infant of weak mind. In the Estate of McLaren, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.) 35.

No Other Person Entitled—Act No. 427, Sec. 20—Power of Sals.]—Where there is no person in the colony entitled to take out administration, and the property requires looking after, the Court will grant administration to the Curator. The Court, without inserting terms in the order preventing him from selling, intimated an opinion that he should preserve the property in statu quo, and not sell at present. In the Estate of Hanna, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 44.

Contsst Bstwesn Curator and Creditors.]—See in re Coady Buckley, post under WILL.—Practice in granting Probate and Letters of Administration.

Contest Betwesn Curator, Creditor, and a Son of the Intsstate.]—See in re Gallogly, post under WILL. —Ibid.

Act No. 99, Sec. 3.]—Where the only property in the colony of an intestate consisted of a sum of money deposited by him in a Melbourne bank, Held that he died "possessed or entitled to personal estate within the colony," and administration granted to the Curator under Act No. 99, Sec. 3. In the goods of Rowley, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 115.

Curator—Act No. 230, Sec. 12.]—Where land belonging to an intestate was unfenced and uncultivated, and Curator applied for a rule to administer, Held it was not "liable to loss, waste or injury" within the meaning of Sec. 12 of Act No. 230; that it was no reason for granting rule that land was required for payment of debts. Rule refused. In the real estate of Jackson, 2 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 49.

I. General Principles.

Breach of Contract.]—Where two parties have made a contract which one has broken, the damages which the other party shall receive in respect of such breach of contract ought to be such as may fairly and reasonably be supposed to have been in the contemplation of the parties at the time the contract was made, as the probable result of its breach. Thompson v. Marshall, 3 W. W. & A'B. (L.,)150.

Facts in Contemplation of Both Parties—Admission of Oral Evidence.]—Plaintiffs entered into a contract to repair a ship and entered into a sub-contract with defendants for a supply of portion of the materials for repairs. Plaintiffs sued defendants on the sub-contract and recovered the amount which they had had to pay for demurrage under the principal contract. The defendants had notice of the demurrage to which plaintiffs were liable. On rule nisi for reduction of damages or new trial, Held that oral evidence was admissible to show that the parties had in contemplation the fact that, if defendants by their delay caused the plaintiffs to incur the penalty, the defendants would be liable to the extent to which they caused the plaintiffs to suffer, and that such liability on the part of the plaintiffs under the principal contract was the correct measure of damages; but under the circumstances of the case, by which it appeared that the ship's agent had been responsible for part of the delay, the rule was made absolute unless plaintiffs consented to a reduction of damages. Wright v. Langland's Foundry Company, 5 A.J.R., 113.

Breach of Contract—Matter in Contemplation of Both Parties—Failure of Consideration.]—P., the owner of station property, being indebted to the defendants, certain merchants, agreed to make concessions as to a past commission which he disputed, and to pay future commissions on consideration of their supplying him with necessary funds to carry on his station for twelve months. After nine months the defendants refused to make further advances, and requested him to move his account to other merchants, which he was compelled to do, incurring thereby expenses in the transfer of his account. P. sued the defendants and recovered a verdict, damages being calculated upon (1) the cost of transfer, (2) the amount of disputed commission, (3) commission on advances for the nine months. On rule nisi for new trial to reduce damages, Held that the plaintiff was entitled to the costs of the transfer, such flowing naturally from the breach, and being contemplated by both parties; that on a partial failure of consideration plaintiff was not entitled to the whole of the items for commission, a total failure only would entitle him to them, but that plaintiff was entitled apart from the value of the consideration to damages arising from the breach, and that the measure of these would be the excess of the cost necessary to procure advances for the remainder of the period beyond what he would have had to pay defendants if they had performed their agreement, and the damages resulting from the journeys made to Melbourne, and the withdrawal of his supervision from the station property, such having been within the contemplation of the parties. The Court itself estimated the damages and reduced them accordingly. Parker v. Cunningham, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 202; 1 A.L.T., 21.

Where plaintiff purchased a reaper and binder at harvest time, and the vendors knew that he was a farmer, and wrote to him expressing regret that the machine was not ready for harvest, Held that damages assessed on the loss of crops the plaintiff had sustained through the inefficiency of the machine were not too remote, they were in the contemplation of the parties, and the natural consequences of the breach. Corbett v. Taylor, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 455.

Remoteness of Damages — Gate Across Public Road—Loss of Time—Injury to Vehicle.]—H., while travelling on a public road, came to a swing gate across the road, which was closed. He got out of the vehicle to open the gate, leaving the vehicle standing on the road, and whilst opening the gate the horses ran away and injured the vehicle and themselves. Held that the plaintiff would have been entitled to damages arising from the loss of time and inconvenience occasioned by turning back from the gate and going by some other way, but that the damages arising from the loss of the vehicle and horses were too remote, not flowing naturally from the unlawful act of omission by the plaintiffs, but from his own injudicious conduct in leaving his horses. Harvey v. Shire of St. Arnaud, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 312; 1 A.L.T., 44.

Action for Slander—Damages for Breach of Contract.]—C. had a contract with M'P. for the purchase of sheep on credit terms. F. uttered to M'P. slanderous words concerning C., in consequence of which M'P. tried to get further security, and failing, refused to complete the contract. C. sued F. in an action of slander, and tendered evidence to show loss through breach of contract. Rule nisi to enter a verdict for defendant. It was contended in support of the rule that the special damages arising from the breach of contract were too remote, C. being entitled to bring two actions, one against M'P. for breach of contract, and one against F. for the slander, and recover damages twice over for the same injury. Held that the double remedy was no bar; that defamatory words may cause a breach of contract, and that such breach may be laid as special damages to sustain the action for slander. Rule discharged. Carroll v. Falkiner, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 184.

Dishonouring Cheque.—Loss of Partnership in Consequence.]—In an action for the dishonour of a cheque, the jury may consider as evidence of general damage to the plaintiff's mercantile character, the loss by him of a partnership which the intended partner refused to enter into by reason of such dishonour; but they are not to estimate the loss of such partnership as special damages, it being too remote as special damage, and evidence of the probable value of such partnership is inadmissible. Dyson v. Union Bank of Australia, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 106; 3 A.L.T., 135.

For Breach of Contract—Plaintiff's Maintenance Money for Detention as a Witness may Not be Included.] — Norton v. Williamson. See post under EVIDENCE — Costs and Expenses of Witnesses, &c.

Excessive.] — The Court will not disturb a verdict merely because the damages are too high, but only where they are excessive; and they are excessive when calculated on a wrong basis. Donaldson v. Hutchins, 1 A.J.R., 26.

Excessive Damages.]—The Court will not interfere unless it is found the jury have acted altogether recklessly. Black v. Board of Land and Works, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 12.

Large Damages — Where Court will Reduce.]—Where K. had promised to marry H., but was unable to do so because he was at the time of entering into the contract already married, and had offered by way of solatium to settle £1000 on H., and the jury gave H. £1000 damages; also where a bank had dishonoured a customer's cheque, and special damage was alleged in the loss of certain customers of the plaintiff and in an illness which was alleged to be aggravated by reason of the dishonour, and the jury gave plaintiff £1000 damages, such damages being more than equal to the profits of two years of plaintiff's business, on rules nisi for a new trial, Held that, where large damages were given, the Court would not interfere, unless the damages were extravagant, or where apparently the jury had not fully considered the case, or had awarded damages without bestowing that calm attention which they ought to bestow; and that neither of the above cases called for interference by the Court; and rules discharged. Humphry v. Kelly, Jonnes v. National Bank, 1 A.J.R., 170.

Excessive Damages—Dishonour of a Cheque.—The Court, although of opinion that damages were excessive, in the absence of mistake of law on the part of the Judge, or a mistake in the calculation of figures, or misconduct by the jury, refused a new trial. Bengson v. Bank of Victoria, N.C., 13.

Measure of Damages—Interference by Court.]—Plaintiff recovered from defendant damages in an action of negligence. The plaintiff appealed on the ground that the damages were too small. Held that the Court would only interfere where the jury have been guilty of misconduct, or have made a mistake, or neglect to assess damages, or give only nominal damages where substantial damages are recoverable, or leave out of consideration some material element. Archibald v. Pruden, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 422; 3 A.L.T., 59.

See also S.P. Smith v. Mayor of Emerald Hill, ibid, p. 431; Smith v. Iffla, ibid, p. 435.

Excessive Damages.] — The Court will not in actions of tort interfere with the assessment of damages except in the case of misconduct or clear mistake on the part of the jury. Where in an action for false imprisonment the jury awarded £1000 damages for a detention of a very short duration, the Court regarded the excessive amount as evidence of mistake and granted a new trial unless the plaintiff consented that the damages should be reduced. Bailey v. Hart, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 66; 4 A.L.T., 161.

Excessive.]—S. hired O. in France for a term of five years from O.'s arrival in Melbourne. S. undertook to pay O.'s expenses to Melbourne and back, but on the understanding that O. would return to France at the end of her agreement; to provide O. with board and lodging and washing during the term of contract; to pay her 2000f. the first year, 3300f. for the second year, and to add to this last sum for the three following years 50c. upon each article newly made by O. O. was only to receive two-thirds of her salary till 1000f. had been retained by S., such sum to be paid into a bank to O.'s credit, and to be forfeited by O. if she left her employment before the end of the second year. O. further contracted not to enter the service of any one else in Melbourne during the year following the completion of her agreement. On arrival in Melbourne S. refused to complete the contract, and O. was unable to obtain any very remunerative employment. O. sued for damages, and recovered £250. On a rule nisi for a new trial, which was granted on the ground that the damages were excessive, Held that the measure of damages should be compensation for the time during which O. would probably be out of employment, and the cost of her passage to France; and damages reduced to £150. Oudot v. Soulie, 1 A.J.R., 35.

Excessive Damages.]—The Board of Land and Works invited tenders for occupation for depasturing purposes of a certain run for a year. W. tendered, and having paid a bonus and rent, his tender was accepted. Licensees of adjoining runs were in occupation of parts of this run, and although the Board promised to renew license and give W. full possession, they failed to do so. W. had expended large sums in improvements, and sued the Board. He obtained a verdict for £7000, which included an allowance for portion of bonus and rent, loss of run for one year, and value of improvements. On rule nisi for new trial on ground of excessive damages, Held that the Board were guilty of a censurable want of information as to the occupation of the run, and that the plaintiff was entitled to damages; but that as the plaintiff only had a contract for a license for a year, the damages must be reduced to the loss he had been subject to through not having had possession for that time. Rule absolute to reduce accordingly. Williams v. Board of Land and Works, 2 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 130.

Trespass—Value of Sheep Illegally Seized.]—For circumstances under which Court refused to interfere, even though of opinion that damages were excessive, see Brown v. Aitken, N.C., 58.

Excessive Damages—Malicious Prosecution.]—Where a plaintiff, after instituting an action for malicious prosecution, had offered to settle for £10, which was refused, and obtained a verdict for £70, the defendant applied for a new trial on ground of excessive damages. Held that there was no measure of damages, the offer to settle for £10 before action not being conclusive on that point. Rule for a new trial refused. Gould v. Wilson, 3 A.J.R., 108.

Excessive Damages—Too Much on One Count and Too Little on Another.]—C. sued E. for trespass and trover. The jury gave him £50 on the first count and £163 on the second. The damages were conceded to be £23 too much on the second count, but it was submitted that the total was correct. The Court ordered the amount on the first count to be increased by £23, and the damages on the second to be proportionately reduced. The rule for a new trial to be discharged, plaintiff paying the costs of the rule. Cohen v. Ekman, 3 A.J.R., 118.

Excessive Damages — Negligence — Compensation for Death—"Statute of Wrongs," No. 251, Secs. 12, 15.]—An action was brought by a widow to recover compensation for the death of her husband, who was killed on a railway, and the jury awarded £5000 damages. In assessing the damages the jury took into account the salary of the deceased as manager of a station, and certain allowances. Held that the damages were excessive, that the proper measure was the amount based on what he could set apart to support his wife and children, and the actual money value of his income twelve months before his death, calculated as an annuity, subject to the contingencies of his retiring, &c. Rule absolute for a new trial, unless the plaintiff agreed to reduce the damages to a sum suggested by the Court, viz., £4000. McLean v. Board of Land and Works, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 239; 3 A.L.T., 8.

And for other cases see cases post under NEW TRIAL.

Horses Shipped from England Dying on Voyage—Measure of Loss.] — Where an action was brought to recover damages for the loss of two horses shipped from England, and which had died on the voyage through neglect, the jury returned a verdict with £500 damages, taking the amount of freight into consideration, being directed to estimate the value of the horses at the port of debarkation, and not at port of shipment. On a rule nisi for new trial on ground of misdirection, or to reduce the damages by £130, the amount of the freight, Held that there was no misdirection, that the amount the shipper would have to pay for similar horses in Melbourne ought to measure his loss, and that, since plaintiff could not get similar horses in Melbourne, he should be put in a position to be able to purchase others in England. Rule discharged. Horwood v. Stackpoole, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 89.

On Breach of Contract—Limited Evidence as to.]—Where a Judge had made an order for plaintiff to supply particulars of loss he had sustained through a breach of contract, and plaintiff had furnished some, being by a subsequent order limited to the particulars furnished in his evidence of loss, Held that other evidence was inadmissible, and the damages were reduced to nominal damages. Cakebread v. Huddart, 3 A.J.R., 121.

On Several Breaches—Venire De Novo.]—Damages may be assessed generally on several breaches, or separately on each one; and if they be assessed generally on several breaches and one be bad, the proper remedy is by rule for a venire de novo, not for a new trial. Nolan v. Chirnside, 4 A.J.R., 68.

On Common and Special Counts.]—The damages to be awarded on a special count are not to be controlled by reference to the particulars in common counts which have been abandoned. Ibid.

Substantial — Breach of Agreement to Appoint Arbitrator.]—The damages on a breach of an agreement to appoint an arbitrator may be substantial and need not necessarily be nominal. Ibid.

Measure of Damages in Action for Misrepresentation.]—In an action for misrepresentation, where the plaintiff has advanced money under the misrepresentation, the measure of damages is the amount of the money so advanced; and it lies on the defendant to reduce such damages by evidence of payment, or any other ground of reduction. In such a case the question of remoteness of damages does not arise. Stevenson v. Landale, 1 V.R. (L.,) 31; 1 A.J.R., 45.

DEATH.

Presumption of May Be Rejected or Not.]—In a suit for ejectment evidence was given of the absence of J. from his last residence during seven years, unheard of by those who would have heard of him if he were not dead, yet the residence of these persons in the neighbourhood of the home of J.'s family, or their inquiries, did not extend over the full period of seven years from the time when J. was last heard of at or near his home. The jury found that the death of J. was not proved. Upon rule nisi for a new trial, Held that though the jury might on the evidence have presumed J.'s death, they were not bound to do so, but were at liberty to draw the inference of his death, or reject it according to their conclusions on the whole case, Stawell, C. J., dissenting, and holding that the presumption was one of law, which the jury ought to draw, if according to the rule of evidence they might draw it from the facts. Rochford v. Jackson, 1 W. Assent and Signature of Debtor to Order to Pay—Suit by Assignor Against Debtor and Payment.]—K. owed W. £56, and W. had obtained a judgment. H. owed K. money. It was agreed that H. should pay W. the amount he (H.) owed K., and that W., in consideration of H. undertaking to do so, should release his claim against K., and H. signed and assented to an order for H. to pay W. the amount owing to K. by H. K. then sued H. and received payment, and W. sued H. Held that the fact of K.'s having sued H. and recovered payment, did not prevent W. from suing H. on the order signed by him. Hughes v. Warren, 3 A.J.R., 65.

Assignment of Lease Under a Creditor's Deed—No Assent by Lessor—Assignor Liable for Rent.]—Jackson v. Bignell, post under LANDLORD AND TENANT—Assignment of Leases, &c.

Revocation of Assignment—When Operative.]—A shire was indebted to C., a contractor, for certain works performed by him for the shire. C. gave orders in writing to certain of his creditors upon the shire council, transferable by endorsement. The shire treasurer endorsed the orders, and said they would be paid if there was any money. Before the accounts were passed by the shire council, or were paid, C. wrote to the council countermanding both orders, and warning the council against paying them. Subsequently the accounts were passed for payment, and both orders were paid by the council. In an action by C. to recover the amount due under his contract, Held that the shire was not entitled, under a plea of payment, to credit for the amounts paid, since the promise of the treasurer, even if it had power to bind the council, was conditional upon there being money, and upon the council passing the accounts, and before that time arrived C. had revoked his orders. Canty v. Shire of Stawell, 2 V.R. (L.,) 181; 2 A.J.R., 106.

2. AGREEMENTS BETWEEN DEBTORS AND CREDITORS.

Deed of Assignment in Trust for Creditors—Execution—Interest.]—A creditor before taking any benefit of distribution under a creditor's deed of assignment must execute it, but his execution is not a condition precedent to his proving in the Master's office for his debt. Semble, that creditors are entitled to interest on their debts up the date of payment, the method of distribution being payment of principal and interest of all debts down to date of deed, and then the balance of interest out of the surplus, if any. Heape v. Hawthorne, 2 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 76, 87, 89.

Taking Fresh Security.]—If a creditor think fit to get a new security, whatever its force, he will not in a Court of Equity be allowed to use it, and at the same time enforce all his antecedent rights. Murphy v. Martin, 1 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 26.

Deed of Assignment to Trustees.]—A release to the debtor by the creditors is a sufficient consideration to him for executing a deed of assignment for the benefit of creditors. Whitehead v. Griffith, 1 V.R. (L.,) 18; 1 A.J.R., 29.

See S. C.—EXECUTION.

And see generally as to Assignment in Trust for Creditors, post under INSOLVENCY—Composition Deeds.

Release of Debt—Part Payment.]—L., a shareholder in a company, was sued for £146 in respect of unpaid capital on his shares, and he paid £15 in satisfaction thereof, when the company withdrew the summons, but afterwards sued for the balance. Held, it was not a good release, and that the company might sue for the balance. Reeves v. Luplau, N.C., 58.

Joint Debtors—Execution by One of a Creditor's Deed—Release of Others.]—In an action against three debtors on their joint promissory note, two of them pleaded that the third had executed a creditor's deed, which contained a release of the debtor from all his debts, and that the deed had been executed by four-fifths in number and value of the creditors including the plaintiffs. Held that the other two debtors were released by the plaintiffs, since the creditors, having by their own act in inserting the release released the one debtor, could not be relieved from the principle of law, that they had therefore discharged their co-debtors. The plaintiffs, however, put in a replication to the effect that there was a proviso in the deed that the execution thereof by any creditor should not prejudice or affect any claim against joint debtors. Held that on the whole deed, the co-debtors were not released. Whits v. Glass, 2 V.R. (L.,) 46.

6. In Other Cases.

Ancestor's Debt—Realty—54 Geo. III., Cap. 15, Sec. 4.]—It is not necessary to show that the creditor has first exhausted the personalty, in an action at law against the heir in possession of lands descended, to recover a debt due from the ancestor, for the Statute 54 Geo. III., Cap. 15, Sec. 4, gives a new and cumulative remedy at law to the simple contract creditor against the realty, without forcing him, at least at law, to first exhaust the personalty. If, in asserting his remedy, he works any injury, the injured party has a remedy on applying to a Court of Equity. M'Ewan v. Moncur, 1 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 9.

Specialty Creditor—Insolvensy.] —A specialty creditor whose security consists of a mortgage of land not worth the whole of the specialty debt, has, under the Insolvency Law, no priority over simple contract creditors for the excess of the specialty debt over the value of the land mortgaged. In re Taylor, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 127.

Deceased Debtor—Debt Payable Out of Realty—54 Geo. III. Cap 15, Sec. 4.]—The 54 Geo. III., Cap. 15, Sec. 4, which makes land of a deceased person liable for his simple contract debts, does not thereby change the nature of the debtor's lands, and the creditor must sue the debtor's real and not his personal representative. a'Beckett v. Matthewson, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 29.

Deceased Debtor—Proof of Dsbt.]—The Court always requires some corroborative evidence in support of a claim for a debt made after the death of the alleged debtor, and based upon an oral promise only. McDonald v. Hughes, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 59; 3 A.L.T., 103.

"Imprisonment for Debt Act," No. 284—Sec. 1 repealed and re-enacted by "Imprisonment for Debt Amendment Act," No. 292, the remainder of the Act being kept in force by the "Imprisonment for Debt Continuation Act," No. 320.

1. "ABSENT DEBTORS ACT."

"Absent Debtors Act"—Irregular Proceedings—Proof of Waiver of by Defendant.]—It is not sufficient proof of the waiver, by a defendant of irregularity of proceedings against him under 4 Vic., No. 6, to show that he has returned to the colony, without also showing that he had knowledge of the proceedings, or that notice was given to him. Nicholson v. Robertson, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 27.

"Absent Debtors Act"—Irregular Proceedings—When Defendant May Set Aside.]—To enable a defendant, when only protecting himself from the claims of others, to set aside irregular proceedings under 4 Vic., No. 6, it is not necessary that he should have complied with the requirements of the Act. Ibid.

2. "IMPRISONMENT FOR DEBT ACTS."

Act No. 284, Sec. 2—Summons to Debtor to Attend.]—A debtor summoned under the "Imprisonment for Debt Act," Sec. 2, is bound to attend, or send a satisfactory excuse for non-attendance, though no sum for his expenses has been tendered to him, and if he fail to attend or send such excuse, an order may be made against him in his absence. Ex parte Aplin, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 67.

"Imprisonment for Debt Statute," Secs. 2, 3.]—The "Imprisonment for Debt Statute" contemplates that a separate summons under Sec. 2 should be taken out, and a separate order, under Sec. 3, made in respect of every sum of money recoverable under an order of Justices, the Statute being quasi criminal in its provisions, they should be strictly adhered to. Regina v. Pritchard, ex parte Smart, 2 A.L.T., 58.

Fraud [Summons—Examination of Debtor—No. 284, Sec.] 9.]—In proceeding upon a Fraud Summons, under the Act No. 284 ("Imprisonment for Debt Amending Act,") the examination of the debtor must, under Sec. 9, be reduced to writing, the words of the Section being mandatory and not directory; and if not reduced to writing, a commitment thereupon will be bad. Regina v. Harker, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 40.

Examination Not Taken Down in Writing—Waiver of Objection.]—At the examination of a debtor on the return of a fraud summons, his examination was not reduced to writing, but no remonstrance or objection was made by the debtor. Afterwards, however, he applied to be discharged from custody, on the ground that his examination had not been reduced to writing as required by the Act regulating imprisonment for debt. Held that the taking the examination down in writing was a matter of procedure only, and that the debtor by his acquiescence had waived his right to have his examination reduced to writing. Smith v. Manby, 1 V.R. (L.,) 168; 1 A.J.R., 135.

Fraud Summons—Act No. 284, Sec. 9—Examination of Debtor to be Taken in Writing.]—Justices made an order upon a debtor for payment upon a summons for work and labour, and a fraud summons was issued upon which an order for commitment was made. It appeared that the debtor's estate had been sequestrated previously to the fraud summons, and he informed the Justices of this upon the examination upon the fraud summons, and that no depositions in writing were taken down upon such examination. Held that the Legislature had made it imperative upon the Justices to take down such depositions in writing, and they were not relieved from this duty either by the silence, consent or request of the debtor. Rule absolute for prohibition. Regina v. Shelley ex parte Jones, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 297; 5 A.L.T., 90.

Fraud Summons—Service of Order.]—A defendant ought not to be required to show cause why he should not be punished for disobedience of an order of Justices until a copy of the order to pay has been served upon him. Order for commitment quashed. Regina v. Scott, ex parte Munro, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 16.

Verifying Copy of Order Served Before Applying to Quash Under Act No. 571.]—See Regina v. Carroll, ex parte Coe, post under JUSTICE OF THE PEACE—Quashing Orders, &c.

Act No. 284—Fraud Summons—Service of Order.] —The order directing payment must be served on the debtor before he can be summoned to show cause on a fraud summons, and the Court quashed an order made on a fraud summons where this had not been done. Ex parte Keith, 5 A.L.T., 18.

Fraud Summons Under Act No. 284—Service of Copy of Original Order for Payment—Waiver.]—Before a fraud summons is enforced, a copy of the original order for payment must be served, and proceedings under Act No. 284 being of a quasi criminal nature, objections as to want of service cannot be waived by appearance before the Justices when original order was made, or by part payment of the money comprised in or consent to the original order. Regina v. Cookson, ex parte Collins; Regina v. Jones, ex parte De Portu, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 23; 4 A.L.T., 148.

Fraud Summons, When it May Issue—Reasonable Time for Payment—Refusal of Debtor.]—Where a person is served with an order of Justices for payment of a sum of money, and upon being served says that he will not pay the amount, there is no necessity for allowing him a reasonable time for payment, but a fraud summons may issue at once. Regina v. Kirby, ex parte Deane, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 6; 5 A.L.T., 171.

Fraud Summons—Dismissal—Costs—Act No. 284, Secs. 2, 3.]—O'D. obtained an order from justices for payment of a debt, the amount not being paid by H. the debtor, a fraud summons was served on H., who lived at Sale, requiring him to attend Petty Sessions at St. Kilda. H. demanded his expenses as a witness. The justices dismissed the summons with costs. Held that the Justices were right in dismissing the summons, but not with costs. O'Donoghue v. Hamilton, 3 V.R. (L.,) 22; 3 A.J.R., 32.

Effect of Act No. 284, Sec. 3.] — Per Higinbotham, J. (in Chambers.) The Act is not intended to make debtors pay their debts. and if creditors abuse a fraud summons for the purpose of recovering payment, they must specifically prove the charges they make, and where a creditor, instead of treating a false pretence as such, trusts to the debtor's subsequent promise to pay, he cannot rely upon the fraud. In re Levy, 3 A.L.T., 19.

3. ORDER FOR COMMITTAL.

Verbal Order Followed by Warrant—Affidavits to Contradict — Justices' Jurisdiction.] — D. was summoned before magistrates for a debt under £20, had been ordered to pay, and had not done so. He was then summoned by a "fraud summons" under the "Act to Amend the Law of Imprisonment for Debt," No. 284, Sec. 2, for examination as to his means of payment and intentions to pay, and the Justices made a verbal order that he be committed to prison. A warrant of commitment was made, reciting the verbal order; and on such warrant, but before any written order or minute of order was drawn up, he was put in prison. On motion for a rule nisi for a habeas corpus, Held that the Court could not look at an affidavit stating facts which impugned the recitals in the warrant, and that the warrant showed a sufficient order to justify the detention of the prisoner; that the Acts No. 284 and No. 292 did not deprive the magistrates of jurisdiction to imprison for debts under £20 [overruling Adair's case, 3 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 107,] and rule nisi discharged. In re Devaney, 3 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 103.

When Warrant Bad—Prisoner Wrongly Designated.]—S. had been committed to gaol on a fraud summons. In the summons he had been named W. H. S., and had been so styled in all the proceedings under the fraud summons; but the warrant for commitment was made out in the name of W.S. Held, upon habeas corpus, that the commitment was bad. Prisoner discharged. In re Slocombe, 4 W. W. & A'B., (L.,) 248.

Order for Payment by Instalments — Power of Judge.]—A Judge has no jurisdiction on a fraud summons to make an order under the "Imprisonment for Debt Act," No. 284, for payment of a judgment debt by instalments, and in default of payment, imprisonment, though such an order may be made on consent. But it is open to the Judge to make an order for payment by instalments, and that in the event of default being made in the payment of any one instalment, the whole debt should become payable; and for imprisonment in default of payment of the whole. McKean v. Kavanagh, 2 V.R. (L.,) 139; 2 A.J.R., 95.

How Set Aside When Bad.]—The proper remedy where an order for committal in default of payment, under the "Imprisonment for Debt Act," No. 284, is bad on its face, is by rule nisi to set aside the order, and not by appeal under Sec. 6. Ibid.

When Valid—"Imprisonment for Debt Act," No. 284, Sec. 3.]—W. had been committed under Sec. 3 of the Act on a fraud summons for not paying amount ordered by Justices, but the commitment did not specify the period of imprisonment. Held that as the return did not show that there had been any adjudication of the period named in the warrant it was insufficient. Prisoner discharged. In re Williams, 5 A.J.R., 160.

Act No. 284, Sec. 3—Act No. 379, Sec. 75—Insolvency After Commitment on Fraud Summons — Habeas Corpus Refused.]—See in re Geary, under INSOLVENCY—EFFECT OF—In other cases.

By Justices — Uncertain Period — Act No. 284, Sec. 3.]—An order made by Justices under the "Imprisonment for Debt Act," No. 284, Sec. 3, for the commitment of a contumacious debtor "after the space of four weeks" is bad. Regina v. Bannerman, ex parte Shiels, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 25; 1 A.L.T., 136.

Form of Warrant—"Imprisonment for Debt Act," Sec. 5, Sch. 3.]—A warrant of commitment upon a fraud summons is good if it follows the form given in Sch. 3 of the "Imprisonment for Debt Act," No. 284, though it recites merely the non-payment of an amount ordered to be paid. Re Gawne, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 296; 2 A.L.T., 45.

What Order Should Comprise.]—An order of commitment on a fraud summons ought to state facts disclosing jurisdiction, or from which jurisdiction to commit may reasonably be inferred. It is bad if it states merely that a former order to pay has not been obeyed. Regina v. Lloyd, ex parte Gill, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 53.

What it Should Comprise.]—The order of commitment, under the Act No. 284, Sec. 3, upon a fraud summons must comprise only the sum and costs awarded in the original proceedings; if it comprise further costs, e.g., the costs of ineffectual efforts to recover the sum awarded, the commitment will be bad. Regina v. Tacke, ex parte Watson, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 34; 3 A.L.T., 105.

Made in Absence of Debtor.]—Owing to the unavoidable absence of the debtor the proceedings on a judgment summons were adjourned, but no notice of the day to which the proceedings were adjourned was given to the debtor, and an order was on that day made in his absence. Held, that the debtor should have had notice of the date to which the cause was adjourned, and order prohibited. Ex parte Shakespeare, 4 A.L.T., 5.

Order Drawn Up Wrongly Without Notice to Debtor of Correction of Error.]—A Judge drew up an order after judgment had been signed against a defendant, ordering defendant to pay to plaintiff the amount of the judgment or commitment in default, and on the same day drew up an amended order directing payment into Court. Held, that the second order could not stand, as the debtor had received no notice of the application to amend the first order. Taylor v. Plumpton, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 48; 4 A.L.T., 156.

Act No. 284, Sec. 3—Informal Order—Amended Order.]—An order made under the Act was in the form of a minute stating the particulars of the claim, the amount and date of the judgment, that the proceedings were by fraud summons and the decision of the justices. By an affidavit in reply, the complainant referred to an order drawn up since the minute, but undated. On a rule nisi to quash the order, Held that the minute was defective in not specifying whether any of the offences under Sec. 3 had been committed, that the onus of fixing the date of the subsequent order lay upon the complainant, and that this order was defective in not specifying the offence under Sec. 3—it not being sufficient to state that the debtor still owes the money, and has since judgment recovered sufficient means to pay, without alleging that he neglected or refused to pay the same. Quære, whether a defective order can be amended by a subsequent order. Regina v. Hardware, ex parte Smith, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 325; 6 A.L.T., 151.

Contradicting Recital Collateral to Purpose of Deed.]—A party to a deed wishing to contradict a recital in the deed, collateral to the main purpose of the deed, must aver that he was not aware of the facts at the time he executed the deed. Withers v. Greenwood, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 491.

2. Form and Contents.

Conveyance — Past Words of Conveyance.] — In deeds appointing new trustees, the only operative part after the appointment of the new trustee was "hath bargained, sold, released, quitted claim, and confirmed unto the said" new trustee. Held, that the words in the deed were sufficient to pass the legal estate. Mein v. Dallas, 1 A.J.R., 89.

3. Construction of.

Recital — Covenant.] — An indenture, dated October 16th, 1860, made between K. and C. of the one part, and B. of the other part, recited that B. had sold certain hereditaments to K. and C. for £20,000, of which only £18,000 had been paid; and that it had been agreed that £2000, the balance of purchase money, with interest, should be paid at the time and should be secured in the manner thereinafter mentioned. By the indenture the hereditaments were conveyed back to B., as mortgagee in fee, subject to redemption. It was agreed that if K. and C. should repay the £2000 on October 16th, 1862, "and, also, in the meantime, interest for the said principal sum," &c., "by four equal quarterly payments" on days named, then B. should reconvey the hereditaments free from encumbrance, and that K. and C. might pay off before-hand if they so wished. K. and C. covenanted simply that they had not encumbered. All parties agreed that in case of default in payment of principal or interest on the days provided, B. might sell; and the indenture contained the usual clauses enabling him to give title, &c.; lastly, it was agreed that till default in payment, K. and C. should remain in possession of the premises. The interest fell two quarters in arrear. On a special case stated, Held that the indenture contained an express covenant to pay principal and interest, on which K. and C. could be sued personally in covenant for the interest in arrear. Bruce v. Kerr, I W. & W. (L.,) 141.

Variance Between Recitals in a Deed and Actual Facts—Onus of Proof.]—Where there is a variance between the recitals in a deed and the actual facts, the onus of reconciling the facts with the recitals lies on those claiming under the deed. Symons v. Williams, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 199, 216.

What Passes Under a Deed.] — Where a deed of assignment assigned "all that the said periodical known as the Melbourne Punch and the copyright thereof, and all the back numbers and bound-up volumes thereof in stock, and all the engraved blocks used since the said K. became the proprietor of the said publication in the publication of the said periodical up to the 30th of June, 1866, and goodwill, &c.," Held that the words, "and all the back numbers and bound-up volumes thereof in stock," were to be interpreted by the words, "up to the 30th of June, 1866," in the next sentence, and that the assignee was entitled to recover certain volumes which were in stock on June 30th, but which had been removed between that time and the day of the date and execution of the deed (July 27th.) Wilson v. Smith, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 131.

Creditors' Deed—Release Operating as a Covenant Not to Sue.]—A creditor's deed contained a clause permitting creditors to execute without prejudice to their securities or remedies against joint debtors, and a clause releasing the debtor without prejudice to the rights of creditors holding security, but omitting any reference to joint liability. Held that the omission could not overrule the former clause, and that the release only operated as a covenant not to sue. Glass v. Higgins, 2 V.R., (E.,) 28; 2 A.J.R., 10.

What Passes by Grant of "All Ways, &c."]—A deed granting in general words, "all ways, &c.," belonging or appertaining to the land granted, does not create a right of way. Blyth v. Parlon, 2 V.R. (E.,) 111; 2 A.J.R., 75.

By References to Plan in the Margin.]—S. subdivided a section of land into a number of lots, reserving streets, and sold the lots by a plan of subdivision exhibited at the time of sale. In a conveyance of certain lots, the plan of subdivision was referred to as to boundaries, and a right of way was granted over B. street, "and all other streets reserved out of the said section, and which lands and hereditaments are more clearly shown in the plan delineated in the margin of these presents." On the plan in the margin of the deed, B. street was not shown for the full length delineated on the plan of subdivision. Held that the grantee's right of way over B. street was limited to so much of the street as was shown on the plan in the margin. Ibid.

Lost Deed—Covenant for Further Assurance—Grantor Not Compelled to Execute a Duplicate After Lapse of Many Years.]—Geraghty v. Russell, ante columns 281, 282.

Vesting—Divesting.]—Trust for A. for life, and in the event of her death during the lifetime of her son B. and her two youngest daughters C. or D., then upon trust for the benefit and maintenance of B., C. or D. in equal proportions until attaining age or marriage, and then upon trust to convey in equal proportions as B., C. or D. shall appoint, and in event of death of either of them, B, C. or D. before majority or marriage then in trust for the benefit of the survivors of them and the lawful issue of either of them so dying. Held that the event contemplated was the death of A. during the life of the three or any of them, the property vesting on their respective marriages or majority, whichever first happened; and that A. having attained twenty-one and died a bachelor, his share became vested on his majority, and was not divested on his subsequent death unmarried. Re "Transfer of Land Statute," ex parte Leach, 5 A.J.R., 72.

Termination of Agreement "on Giving Notice."]—A deed contained a provision that the agreement contained in the deed might be put an end to by any party to it, on giving the other parties one year's notice of his intention so to do. Held that "on" giving had the same meaning as "by" giving notice, and that, notice having once been given, the agreement could not be revived by a withdrawal of the notice. Robbins v. Robbins, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 128.

Merger.]—Synnot v. Parkinson, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 521, see post under MERGER.

Construction—Boundary.]—Where, in a grant, the land granted was described as "bounded on the west by another road and reserve to the Port Phillip Bay," the grantee was held to have a right to insist against the grantor, that, as between them the grant gave a right to the use of the road and reserve as a highway, whether it was so in fact or not. Webb v. Were, 2 V.L.R., (E.,) 28.

Where, in a grant, the land granted was described as "bounded on the west by a public promenade extending in width to the high water mark of Port Phillip Bay," the grantor was held debarred from preventing the use by the grantee of the public promenade as a promenade. Ibid.

Boundary—"Margin" of Sea Shore—Question for Jury.]—In a deed (a Crown grant,) the parcels fixed a starting point which had been obliterated and was not at the water's edge, and then gave the boundaries as on the east "by the margin of Bridgwater Bay to the commencing point." The plaintiff contended that the "margin" meant the water's edge, and not the top of some cliffs a short distance therefrom. Held, that the word "margin" was not a legal term, so that the Judge was compelled to expound it as a matter of law, and that its meaning had been properly left to the jury. Kennedy v. Shire of Portland, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 541; 3 A.L.T., 77.

False Demonstratio.]—Per Full Court. When there is a grant of a particular thing once sufficiently ascertained by some circumstance belonging to it, e.g., by terms of plain and simple description, the addition of an allegation, mistaken or false, respecting it, will not frustrate the grant. A. by deed gave to B. certain land, "except the dwellinghouse and buildings connected therewith on the land, and also the field on which they stand, containing about 100 acres, bounded on the north by a road, on the east by (b,) on the south by (c,) and on the west by (d.)" The plaintiff to whom the land excepted was given, claimed to be entitled to an allotment 99, which was on the same side of the road as part of allotment 100, on which was erected the dwellinghouse, &c. Allotment 99 contained 63 acres; the part of allotment 100, contained 101 acres. Held, affirming Williams, J., that the description by metes and bounds was the true and leading description, and as that description would include allotment 99, and part of allotment 100, the words descriptive of the area should be rejected. Cunningham v. Platt, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 55, 65, 66, et seq.; 3 A.L.T., 126.

Parol Evidence to Explain—Intention—Parcels.]—In construing a deed of settlement, statements made by the settlor are inadmissible to show his intentions; but evidence of existing facts is admissible to show that a description of the parcels in a deed was erroneous, and to show how the mistake on which the erroneous description was founded arose. Ibid, p. 68.

Construction of Guarantee.]—See GUARANTEE.

3. REGISTRATION.

What Deeds Must Be Registered.]—It may be doubted whether a deed, merely transferring an estate from one trustee to another, falls within the scope or object of the Acts in force in 1861, relating to registration in this colony, as it is difficult to suppose a case in which such a deed could be executed for valuable consideration. a'Beckett v. Matthewson, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 29, 33.

What Requires Registration—Deed of Assignment—Registration—"Instruments and Securities Statute 1864," Sec. 56.]—A deed of assignment in favour of all such creditors as shall execute it within a certain time is not a deed of assignment for the benefit of all the creditors within the meaning of the "Insolvency Statute 1865;" and if any of the property comprised in such deed be allowed to remain in the apparent possession of the debtor, it must be registered under Sec. 56 of the "Instruments and Securities Statute 1864;" and if there be a blank in the schedule to such deed, and a similar blank in the copy filed under the section, and after filing the copy the blank in the schedule is filled up, but not that in the copy, the copy so filed is not a true copy within the meaning of the section. Port v. London Chartered Bank, 1 V.R. (L.,) 162; 1 A.J.R., 146.

What is an Instrument Affecting the Land Within Sec. 194 of the "Real Property Statute 1864."]—An equitable mortgagee by deposit allowed the mortgagor possession of the deed deposited for a special and temporary purpose, on his signing a receipt containing a promise to return it on demand, "it being held by them (the plaintiffs) as security for advances." Held, per Molesworth, J., that this was a written evidence of the relation between them; but not in the nature of an instrument in writing for valuable consideration affecting lands within the Acts for the registration of deeds. White v. Hunter, 5 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 178, 181.

Effect Of.]—Registration is only important in deciding priority between inconsistent conveyances, each of which would be effectual but for the other; but gives no increased efficacy to conveyances impugned for fraud or mistake. Sutherland v. Peel, 1 W. W. & A'B. (E..) 18, 23.

Priority of Registration — "Real Property Statute 1864," No. 213, Sec. 194.]—Per Molesworth, J. "The direct enactment in Sec. 194 is as to the priority between one deed, conveyance, or instrument in writing and another; not between such deed, &c., and a transmission of right not evidenced by writing." Therefore, where A. deposited deeds by way of equitable mortgage with B., accompanied by a memorandum duly registered, and B. transferred the deeds to C. without any memorandum, and A. afterwards executed a legal mortgage to D., which was registered, Held that the principle of prior registration did not apply as between C. and D. White v. Hunter, 5 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 178.

Priority—"Registration Act," No. 213 — Only One Conveyance Valid.] — In 1854 H. sold and conveyed land to A. The deed of conveyance was registered August, 1867. In 1856, H. became insolvent, and S. was appointed his official assignee. By mesne conveyances in 1856 and 1857, the land was sold to T., being sold in the first instance by S, and these conveyances were registered prior to August, 1867. A. brought ejectment against T., and recovered a verdict. On rule nisi to enter a verdict for defendant, Held that the effect of the "Registration Acts" is to give priority to the registered owner over the unregistered owner, only in the event of two equally valid conveyances, but that H. having transferred the legal estate to A. before his insolvency, A.'s title was paramount, even though T.'s conveyance from S. was registered prior to it, the subsequent conveyance by S. being inoperative. Andrews v. Taylor, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 223; N.C., 22.

Priority Dependent on Registration.]—W. mortgaged certain property (a) to C., March, 1858, to secure £9000, and he, in July, 1858, mortgaged other property (b,) and the equity of redemption in (a) to a company. This last mortgage was defeasible on endorsement of satisfaction of certain requisitions; these requisitions were, in fact, satisfied, but no endorsement was made to that effect, and the mortgages were not registered till 1871. W., in March, 1859, mortgaged (a,) (b,) and other property to F. and C., and this mortgage was registered forthwith, and contained no reference to the previous mortgages. In February, 1860, W., with R. and N.C., his partners, conveyed all joint and separate real and personal property upon trust for creditors. March, 1874, F. and C. conveyed to G.W. and J.W., W. joining in conveyance freed from mortgage of March, 1859; no consideration was given by grantee, and there was no declaration of trusts. March, 1866, the trustees of deed of February, 1860, W. and creditors of old deed conveyed to new trustees upon trust for creditors; this deed provided for distribution of assets, and recited a report by Master respecting creditors, their debts, and outstanding assets, including (a,) which was described as mortgaged to C., and comprised in mortgage of March, 1859, but no mention was made of mortgage to the company, July, 1858. July, 1870, G.W. & J.W. mortgaged to the company, W. concurring, subject to mortgage to C.; no allusion was made to mortgage of July, 1858, and that mortgage was not registered till 1871. All the other deeds, including creditors' deeds, were registered shortly after execution. The trustees of the deed of March, 1866, brought a suit to redeem C.'s mortgage, the company claiming to redeem in priority to the plaintiffs. Held, reversing Molesworth, J., that the deed of July, 1858, and the creditor's deed of March, 1866, were not inconsistent, so as to make the creditor's deed of March, 1866, take priority over the deed of July, 1868, by reason of its prior registration; that the endorsement on the deed of July, 1858, was necessary in order to make it void, and that the trustees of the deed of March, 1866, were not entitled to redeem. Fraser v. Australian Trust Company, 3 A.J.R., 1, 83.

Attestation.]—A memorial under the "Registration Act," 6 Geo. IV., No. 22, Sec. 4, having on it merely the words, "By the Court," without any seal of the Court, or signature of a Judge or any officer of the Court to verify it, is not properly attested. Dalton v. Plevins, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 177, 185, 186.

Grant by Deed to Defendant by Former Owner of Servient Tenement—Replication of Prior Registration of Deed on which Plaintiff Relied.]—Action by M. against B. for damages for allowing water and sewage to flow through M.'s land. Plea (1) That former owner of plaintiff's land (servient tenement) had granted permission to discharge drainage, &c., on the servient tenement. (2) On equitable grounds an agreement between former owners of tenements, and in consequence the construction of the drain and acquiescence in the use of the drain. Replication to these pleas, that deed through which plaintiff claimed was registered prior to deed under which defendant relied. Held that replication was sufficient and judgment for plaintiff. Mitchell v. Burns, 3 A.J.R., 69.

4. Setting Aside and Rectifying.

(1) Voluntary Deeds.

On Ground of Mistake—No Power of Revocation —In Favour of Wife—Act No, 384, Sec. 18.]—Suit by husband to set aside voluntary deeds made in favour of his wife. These deeds purported to assign certain hotels, and all interest in them, to tustees upon trust for his wife, on consideration of the trustees paying husband's debts, and allowing him small weekly payments, and contained no power of revocation. It appeared that plaintiff had understood that his wife was to manage the hotel business as his agent, and that he would have power to revoke these deeds in two years' time. Held that though these deeds were executed, in pursuance of a contract in writing with the wife, she had no separate estate at the time of such contract, and that such contract was not binding under Sec. 18 of Act No. 384; that the deeds were voluntary, and were executed by plaintiff under a mistake and misapprehension of the contents, and deeds decreed to be set aside. Bryant v. Patten, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 86.

And see cases under FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCES—INSOLVENCY—SETTLEMENT.

Foolishness—Absnce of Professional Advice.]—Where an old man, aged 70, conveyed away his house and land, which, except the furniture in the house, was all his property, without receiving any adequate consideration therefor, he being without professional advice, the Court ordered a re-conveyance of the property, and a return of the consideration money, on the grounds of the foolishness of the old man, and the absence of professional advice, but gave no costs. Reed v. Buck, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 33.

Proving the Dsd.]—Per Molesworth, J.—"I do not think it is generally necessary for a person to prove a deed which he seeks to set aside; the litigation on the subject is based upon its existence. If there is anything in its contents affording evidence to either party, he may produce it. Attorney-General v. Belson, 4 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 57, 63.

On the Ground of Mistake.] — A husband brought a suit to rectify a marriage settlement on the ground of mutual mistake. The evidence showed a mistake upon the part of the husband, but the wife alleged in her answer, though there was no evidence to support it, that she married on the faith of the settlement as drawn, and that there was no mutual mistake. Held, per Molesworth, J., that in the absence of evidence to contradict the wife, the bill should be dismissed, with costs. Upon appeal to the Full Court, Held that the decree was right, and that the onus of proof of mutual mistake lay on the plaintiff, and that the evidence was insufficient to support his case. Soloman v. Soloman, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 40.

Voluntary Dsd—No Clause of Rsvocation—Mistake in Law.]—Voluntary deeds not containing any clause of revocation are valid and enforceable in Equity, unless executed in mistake or obtained by fraud. Where a settlor was hindered from inserting a clause of revocation on the understanding given by his attorney that it was unnecessary, as the settlement might be got rid of by a fictitious sale and re-purchase, Held that such was a mistake in law, against which no relief would be granted, and afforded no ground for setting aside or rectifying the deed at the instance of the settlor. Moorhouse v. Rolfe, 4 A.J.R., 159.

On the Ground of Mistake and Fraud.]—A lease gave the lessee an option to renew for a further term, which he exercised. The endorsement of renewal upon the old lease contained a clause that the new lease was "under and subject to covenants, clauses, and agreements in the within lease contained, and as if the same had been specifically repeated and embodied herein." Under this the lessee claimed a right of further renewal, which the lessor had distinctly, in previous conversations with the tenant's agent, refused to grant. The draft endorsement was submitted to and read over by the plaintiff, who made no objection to it, but asserted afterwards that he had mistaken the meaning. Upon bill by the lessor to have the endorsement rectified, on the ground of mutual mistake and fraud, the lessee denied mistake on his part, and the evidence was balanced on the question of fraud. Held that, as the plaintiff had perused the endorsement, and should have been on his guard, the effect of the words must prevail, and bill dismissed, with costs. Johnson v. Donaldson, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 121; 2 A.L·T., 12.

On Ground of Mistake.]—Per Molesworth, J.—To entitle a party to rectify a document, it must be shown distinctly what was the intent of both parties, and that there has been a mutual mistake. It is not enough to show what one party thought was the result of a conversation, unless there is something in it distinctly showing that the other party took the same view. Plaintiffs were merchants trading as partners; the defendants, M. and A., were also trading as partners. Plaintiffs became indebted to defendants and other creditors, and by mortgage under Act No. 301 mortgaged certain lands to M. as a trustee for his own firm as to one quarter, as a trustee for other creditors as to rest. Plaintiffs subsequently became insolvent, and their trustees made an arrangement by which they were entitled to buy back their estate on paying 9s. 6d in the pound, and as part of it, M. signed an agreement by which, for a certain preferential standing, he released to plaintiffs "his share" in the mortgage. He refused to release the interest of the firm therein, but offered to release his individual interest. Held, per Molesworth, J., on a suit by plaintiffs for rectification on ground of a mutual mistake and for general relief, that there was no evidence of a mistake, and that under the agreement M. had only assigned his individual share. Per Full Court, that though there was no mistake proved, the Court could grant the consequent relief prayed upon the construction of the deed itself without rectification, and that under the deed of agreement, M. assigned the firm's share in the mortgage. McClure v. Marshall, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 84, 96.

On Ground of Mistake.]—A bill to rectify a deed on the ground of mistake did not show that the intention of the parties, or at all events of the defendant, was not in conformity with the deed, showed no common mistake of both parties, and no fraud by one party knowing that the other was acting in ignorance. Held bad on demurrer. Harper v. Mackenzie, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 102, 106.

And see Sutherland v. Peel, Attorney-General v. Belson, post under MISTAKE.

Rectification of Mistake in a Crown Grant.]—See GRANT.

DEFAMATION.

I. IN ORDINARY CASES.

1. What is Actionable.

Imputation of Illegitimacy Not Actionable.]—No action will lie for saying to a man, "Your children are bastards." Smith v. Hetherton, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 101.

Word "Bog-Trotter."]—See O'Malley v. Elder, post column 365.

Libel on Partner in Which Other Partner is Referred To.]—W. and M. were in partnership as attornies, and M. was also President of the Board of Land and Works. S. published in a newspaper certain articles reflecting on M. as President of the Board, and in such articles W. was referred to. The articles complained of were in three counts, and were as follows: 1—"He (M.) has closed the front door of the Land Office to the general public. He has opened a private entrance for his partner and clients." 2—"At a time when the Land Office was closed to the general public, A., a partner in the firm of McC., V. and Co. (clients of W. and M.,) waited upon M. at the Land's Office, in company with W., the junior partner of the learned President, and obtained from him the promise that commons would in certain instances be open for selection. Acting on this, A. proceeded at once to T., where his firm has a branch store, and, assisted by his clerk and shopman, pegged out the whole of the common on the very day that the new "Land Act" came into operation." 3—"M.'s good offices are more easily obtained by the friends and clients of his junior partner." The innuendoes charged as to the first and third that S. meant that W. improperly availed himself of the facilities alleged to have been afforded by M. to him and his clients; and, as to the second, that S. meant thereby, "that when the office of the Board of Land and Works was closed to the general public, W., in company with A., unduly and improperly, and with a view to obtain an unfair advantage for the said A. and his, A.'s, said firm over the general public in the selection of certain public lands of the said colony, viz., the T. common, waited upon his partner, the said M., and by such undue and improper means, and with such object obtained from him a promise that certain commons would in certain instances be open for selection, of which the T. common was one, and that the said A. availed himself of such promise by pegging out the same on the very day that the new "Land Act" came into operation." Held, on demurrer, that the matters charged in the first and third counts referred to W.'s partner as President of the Board of Land and Works, and not to W. himself, and that there was nothing actionable in the words used; that the innuendo in the second count was too large for the matters charged, and that the words used contained a charge only against M., as President, and not against W. Wilson v. Syme, 1 V.R. (L.,) 112; 1 A.J.R., 90.

Slander of Married Woman in Past Tense—Suit by Husband.]—A declaration in an action by a husband for slandering his wife set out the slanderous words used as "You," (plaintiff's wife) "kept a brothel, and that's how you got your money." Plaintiff sued on the ground that this alluded to the time of his wife's coverture, in which case he would be punishable for allowing her to act as the defendant stated. Held, that the statement being in the past tense, it did not necessarily allude to the time of coverture, and that no action would lie. Ray. v. Wakefield, 1 A.J.R., 162.

Criticism Upon an Actor's Performance.]—An actor sued the proprietor of a paper for a criticism on the actor's performance, which was to the following effect:—"Faust, in the hands of that slovenly and careless actor, I., was a farce. The great scene depends upon the sudden transformation of an old man into a young and brilliant young man. Now, when the gown and beard were twitched off, I. appeared dressed like an ordinary supernumerary in solid garments. Then the delivery of his speeches was so low, sulky, and lifeless, that we were really inclined to think he had some quarrel with the management about it." The jury gave the plaintiff a verdict. The Court refused a new trial. Ireland v. King, 5 A.J.R., 24.

Seaman's Certificate of Discharge—Filling Up Columns with a Cross — Question for Court.] — Where the master of a ship filled up the columns relating to ability, sobriety, and conduct of a seaman's certificate of discharge with a cross, Held that it was for the Court to say whether the matter complained of was libellous; that the mere insertion of crosses in the columns of the certificate afforded no grounds from which a libellous inference could be legitimately deduced—nothing proper to be left to a jury; and plaintiff nonsuited. Snewin v. Doherty, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 305; 2 A.L.T., 59.

Shipmaster Writing "Declined" in the Certificate of Character Given on the Discharge of a Seaman.] —See Garson v. Jacobsen, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 7, post under SHIPPING—Seamen.

Words Imputing Criminal Offence—Effect Neutralised by Contemporaneous Words and Circumstances.] —Words, e.g., "You are a b——y, infamous thief," in themselves importing a criminal offence, may be shown, in an action for defamation, by evidence of the circumstances and the connection in which they were used, to be merely terms of scurrilous abuse; and will not then be actionable without proof of special damage. Hodgson v. Bulpit, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 440.

In Jamison v. Scott, 5 A.J.R., 24, the Court Held that the word "thief," as applied to a plaintiff, was slanderous.

Imputation of Insolvency—Person Libelled Not a Trader.]—F. sued E. for libel on two counts, (1) being that E. wrote of F., "What about F.; has he settled with you. I am going to make him insolvent, as I have tried fair means which I find of no use;" (2) that plaintiff was Harbour Master at X., and that the words were written in relation to his said employment. Defendant demurred to first count because it did not allege that plaintiff was a trader. Plaintiff recovered a verdict, and a rule nisi to enter verdict for defendant and the demurrer were argued together. Held, that if the words were a mere charge of insolvency urged against a non-trader, they would not be libellous, but that it was open for the jury to say that the words were libellous, as conveying a charge of dishonest insolvency, because the Court was of opinion that they were capable of such a meaning. Rule discharged. Judgment for plaintiff on demurrer. Fermaner v. Emmerson, 5 A.J.R., 146.

(c) Upon Proof of Special Damage.

Imputation of Drunkenness — Schoolmaster.] — It is not actionable to say of a schoolmaster "that he was drunk and fell on the floor," unless special damage can be shown. Brandrick v. Johnston, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 306.

Trade Advertisement—Contradicting Advertisement of Another.] — An advertisement of a tradesman, which contradicts a statement in an advertisement of another tradesman, is not actionable unless special damage be stated and proved. Nicholson v. Allen, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 233.

Privileged Occasion—Matter Between Master of a School and Board of Education—Proof of Malice.] —M., a master of a school under a Board of Education, brought an action of libel against the defendants (a minority of the local Committee of the Board.) It was based upon a letter addressed to the Central Board, and the main paragraph was to the following effect:—"That a number of children's names are entered as free pupils on the plea of pauperism, such list not being attested by either a magistrate or a clergyman of the district; in fact the list is not even laid before the committee." M. recovered a verdict. On rule nisi to enter a nonsuit, Held (1) That as the Central Board had a duty to perform, the letter was privileged. (2) That as to malice, inasmuch as the sting of the libel—that M. had lent himself to allowing pupils to be placed on the free list, when they ought not to have been free, and thus defrauding the Government—was not proved, it was competent for the jury to take that as evidence of personal malice, although a very small ground of malice. Rule discharged. Miles v. Weber, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L., 129.

Privileged Occasion—Master and Servant.]—The Board of Land and Works dismissed M. for insolence and insubordination, and the superintendent of traffic wrote a notice containing the libel, and at the end of which were the words, "Caution all railway servants." This notice was put up in a room appropriated for use of railway servants, but to which strangers went, although, strictly speaking, they had no right of access. On rule nisi to enter a verdict for plaintiff, Held, that the notice was privileged, and that the Board in cautioning their servants against similar misconduct acted on an occasion which rebutted the presumption of malice. Rule discharged. McDonald v. the Board of Land and Works, 5 A.J.R., 34.

Privileged Communication—Letter to Solicitor.]— Where a defendant wrote in answer to a demand for payment of costs by a solicitor, a letter charging him with duplicity in a matter not connected with the debt, Held that the letter was not privileged. Nolan v. Connell, 5 A.J.R., 20.

Malice—Privileged Communication—Question For Jury.]—In an action for libel upon a privileged communication by a constable to his superior officer, the jury may look at the document in question and say whether the language is stronger than necessary, so as to display actual malice. Moran v. Lyons, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 379.

Privileged Communication—Malice—New Trial.] —In a privileged communication the jury found for the defendant. Held that the Court required a very strong case to be made out to render it incumbent upon it to take the questions of excess of privilege and of express malice out of the hands of the jury. and decide that the words used were libellous, and that the evidence of malice was so strong that the jury was not justified in finding for the defendant. Pearson v. Slingo, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 9.

Question for the Jury — Privilege.] — In an action for defamatory words in the County Court, the Judge nonsuited the plaintiff on the ground that the words being privileged, it was a question of law and not of fact. On appeal, Held that the defence of privilege being raised, the Judge ought to have submitted it to the jury to say whether the privilege had been exceeded, and that a nonsuit was improper; and appeal allowed. Creek v. Newlands, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 412.

Privileged Communication — Letter from One Director to Another Concerning a Manager—Excess of Privilege.]—M., a director of a mining company, wrote to another director a private letter concerning the conduct of the manager, and insinuating that he had been dishonest. The manager brought an action against M., and the jury found for M. Held that the directors having a common interest in the mining operations, the letter was privileged, and that the jury having found for the defendant, the Court would not, on the ground of excess of privilege, take the case out of their hands and disturb their verdict, except in a very strong case. Horne v. Milne, 7 V L.R. (L.,) 296; 3 A.L.T., 23

Public Appointments—Fair Comment—Imputation of Unfitness Not Based on Public Acts.]—Although the public acts or conduct of a person in a public office are the legitimate subjects of criticism, apart from those acts or conduct a public officer is no more obnoxious to criticism than a private individual. Therefore, although it is open to anyone to publish statements as to the unfitness of a person for a public office, founded on his acts in such office, it is not open to anyone to publish such statements, without stating any public acts in support of the statements, e.g., to say of a person that his only qualification for the post of Government auditor is that he is an insolvent grocer. Broadbent v. Small, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 121.

Member of Parliament — Fair Comment.] — A member of Parliament brought an action for libel and recovered a verdict. On rule nisi for a nonsuit on the ground that there was no evidence of malice, Held that an attack upon a public man must be founded upon public acts or conduct, which must be proved in order to justify it as fair comment. Rule nisi refused. Langton v. Syme, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 30, 32.

To Establish a Defence of Fair Comment Facts Must Be Proved.] — The public sayings and doings of a public man are public property upon which every member of the community is entitled to offer fair comments; and so, also, proceedings in Courts of Justice may be published and commented on so soon as the particular cause has been finally disposed of; and this right, if not exceeded, constitutes a sufficient defence to any action for either publication or comments. To constitute such a defence, and so bring the case within the privilege, the report must be proved to be a fair representation of proceedings which actually took place, and not of supposed proceedings, and the comments, too, must be on actual proceedings. Williams v. Spowers, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 82, 101, 102; 3 A.L.T., 113.

Per Higinbotham, J. The above right of comment is not a defence sui generis, but is a defence of conditional or qualified privilege, and when set up the defendant may insist that his claim to privilege shall be adjudicated upon in conformity with the rules which regulate the decision of that question at nisi prius in other actions for libel which involve the like claim. The privilege may appear, from admissions on the record or otherwise, that the person of whom the libel is written is a person whose position and character are of general interest to the whole country, or that the subject matter is of interest to the whole country and is relevant. The onus probandi is by this defence shifted to the plaintiff, who must prove actual malice, and if there be evidence, intrinsic or extrinsic, of actual malice, the question of malice must be determined by the jury, who are to find whether the libel was written in spite or ill-will, and not for the purpose which makes the occasion privileged. If there be no malice found, the verdict must be for the defendant, though the jury find upon the general issue that the publication is libellous, and upon a plea of justification that the defendant has failed to prove the substantial truth of his libel. Ibid, pp. 91, et seq.

Fair Comment — Imputation of Dishonesty in Horse-Racing — Question for Jury.] — D. sued the proprietor of a newspaper for an article imputing dishonesty in horse-racing, and the jury found that it was fair comment, and returned a verdict for defendants. On rule nisi for new trial, on grounds—(1) Misdirection through the Judge not telling the jury that the libel was so gross as to be malicious and outside the region of fair comment, (2) Verdict against evidence, Held that it was for the jury to say whether the comments were sustained by the evidence or whether the defendants had or had not exceeded their privilege. De Mestre v. Syme, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 10.

Form of Declaration — Particulars of Damage Alleged—Setting Out Names.]—The general rule is that the names of persons who have ceased to deal with a plaintiff which must generally be known to the plaintiff should be set forth in the declaration. But there are exceptions; and when Y. used the words, "infernal rogue and swindler," of B., a restaurant keeper, and the declaration did not set out the names of persons who had in consequence ceased to deal with B., Held, upon demurrer to the declaration, that the case came within the exception, and demurrer overruled. Judgment for plaintiff. Brady v. Youlden, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 205.

Libel—Demurrer—Words Capable of Construction Put upon them in Declaration—Meaning a Question for the Jury.]—P. brought an action for libel against S. for a letter which appeared in S.'s paper to the following effect:—"When the northern portion of the old shire of D. was severed from ours, we hoped to have been clear of the element of jobbery and corruption, which caused so much trouble, &c. . . . but it appears as if a little of the old leaven still remains. Whether this be so or not may be judged from the following facts." The facts stated being that P. had a brother who was appointed rate collector and valuer, and that there were alterations in the ratepayers' roll; persons living within a stone's throw were omitted, while strangers were added as voters. Held, on demurrer to the declaration, that the words complained of were open to the interpretation that the defendant was an accomplice in improperly altering the ratepayers' roll; that it was a question for the jury. Demurrer overruled. Plant v. Syme, 3 A.J.R., 105.

Declaration—Words Not Actionable Per Se—No Averment that they were used touching Trade or Employment—Innuendoes.]—A declaration in an action for defamation, in which the words used were not actionable per se, and which contained no sufficient averments that the words were used of the plaintiff in his trade or employment, and in which the innuendoes put a meaning on the words which was not actionable, was held bad on demurrer. Moulder v. Nicholson, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 68.

Demurrer — Innuendo — "Common Law Procedure Statute," Sec. 6.]—In an action for libel, the declaration alleged the imputation of dishonest and fraudulent practices on the part of a solicitor in a matter not strictly professional, viz., giving a promissory note payable to a company alone, and striking out the words "or order," and contained an innuendo that the language was used of and was meant to injure the plaintiff in his profession as an attorney. Held, upon demurrer to the declaration that under Sec. 6 of the "Common Law Procedure Statute" it is not necessary to show upon the declaration how the libel injures the plaintiff, and that it would be for the plaintiff to satisfy the jury that the article justifies the interpretation put upon it. Demurrer overruled. Warton v. Gearing, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 122.

Innuendo — Proof of — Arrest of Judgment.] — A declaration containing an imputation of drunkenness to a schoolmaster contained an innuendo that defendant meant to convey the notion that the plaintiff was a man of intemperate habits. Plaintiff recovered a verdict. On rule nisi for arrest of judgment, Held that as there was no evidence to prove that meaning, the rule would be made absolute if plaintiff consented; otherwise, for a new trial. Brandrick v. Johnston, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 306.

Innuendo—Evidence.]—A libel imputed, inter alia, that plaintiff was a "bog-trotter." In an action in the County Court, the Judge rejected evidence of the meaning of the word, as there was no innuendo, and as the word was not libellous without explanation. Held that the evidence was improperly rejected. O'Malley v. Elder, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 39.

"Common Law Procedure Statute," No. 274, Sec. 6 — Innuendo — Demurrer.] — The plaintiff may in his declaration, by innuendo, put any construction he pleases upon the language used by the defendant, and it then becomes a question for the jury whether the language was used in the sense imputed and not of demurrer; the enactment in Sec. 6 of the Act shows that the form in the schedule shall be sufficient, and does away with the necessity of the old prefatory averments. Dwyer v. Macartney, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 296.

Question for the Jury as to Libel or no Libel, Irrespective of Innuendo.] — Where the libel complained of was the publication of a list of notices of intention to file bills of sale under the Act No. 557, which list contained the name of the plaintiff; but the innuendo imputed a meaning which was not libellous, and the intended bill was not over the stock in trade of the plaintiff's business, Held that the question whether the publication of the list was libellous and injurious to the plaintiff as a trader, was one for the jury. Wissing v. Coombs, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 70.

Plea of Justification—Demurrer—Words Set Out in Plea Not Defamatory.]—F., a medical practitioner, spoke and published of B. the following words: "I will not meet Dr. B. in consultation as he is not a properly qualified man and is an advertising man," and "I will have nothing to do with Dr. B.; he bought his votes for the hospital; he is an advertising doctor, and it is generally believed that his diploma is not good; it is from the United States; but there is a doubt cast upon it, and no regular practitioner will have anything to do with such a man as Dr. B." F. pleaded justification of the words, "Dr. B. is an advertising man," and "he is an advertising doctor." The plaintiff demurred on the ground that the plea picked out and sought to justify only words not actionable per se. Held that the part justified was not so connected with other words as to be inseparable, and that those words in themselves were not defamatory. Demurrer to plea allowed. Beaney v. Fitzgerald, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 184.

Plea in Justification — Interpretation of After Verdict for Defendant.]—W. published and used of U., in his business as a sheep farmer, the following words inter alia (a) "It is upwards of twelve months since U. was fined £1340 by local magistrates in requital of his efforts to acclimatise the acarus in the Lower Murray district;" (b) "By the grace of our Attorney-General, he is enabled to snap his fingers at the administrators of the law. He is a standing example to all scabby flockmasters of how easily a man may escape the penalties of the Act, in their case made and provided. In spite of law, of magistrates, of scab-inspectors, U. comes triumphantly out of his great scabbing experiment. He has achieved the object of his march from the Devil's River, and may boast of the cheap way in which he has succeeded in stocking his run on the Lower Murray." W. put in a plea to (a) and (b) justifying the words used. A verdict was given in favour of W. on the ground that the pleas were true. On rule nisi to enter a verdict for plaintiff non obstante veredicto, Held, as to (a,) there was no suggestion of any particularly libellous meaning in the words in the plaintiff's pleadings, and it would be nonsense to suppose that the writer seriously charged U. with acclimatising the acarus, which was well known to exist, and that as the jury had found that the plea of a fine having been inflicted was proved, there was sufficient justification; that, as to (b,) the words must be taken mitiori sensu after verdict obtained, and the plea must be deemed a sufficient justification of the libel to which it was pleaded. Rule discharged. Urquhart v. Wilson, 2 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 29.

Semble, that on demurrer, the pleas, which did not meet and cover the motive of the libels, would not have been a sufficient justification. Ibid.

Semble, after verdict the Court cannot look at any other part of the record beyond part covered by plea itself, or refer to any other part of libel justified for the sense in which the portion so justified is to be interpreted. Ibid.

Plea of Justification—Proof of—Authorship.]—In an action for libel, the declaration was for publishing in a newspaper a libel imputing that the plaintiff was the author of a certain report in another newspaper of the proceedings of a Land Board, and alleging that a certain letter in that report was tortured. Defendant pleaded justification of the article as being true. Held that to justify defendant in imputing the authorship to the plaintiff, it was necessary that the plaintiff should either have clearly held himself out as, or be proved to have been in fact, the author. Tracy v. Luke, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 222.

Justification—How Proved.]—In an action for publication of a libel, charging the plaintiff with endeavouring to injure a company by misrepresenting its affairs, the defendants supported their plea of justification by proof of a pamphlet relating to the company, published by the plaintiff subsequently to the alleged libel. Held that they might so support their plea. Crowther v. May, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 425.

And the jury may consider the libel as a whole, and the truth of the matters charged is a question for them. Ibid.

Justification—Particulars of Plea.]—Per Stawell, C.J. (in Chambers)—In an action for libel, particulars of a plea of justification should be asked for before pleading to it; but they may be ordered after issue joined under special circumstances at the discretion of a Judge in Chambers, on such terms as he may direct. Wilson v. Syme, 1 A.L.T., 185.

Amendment of Pleadings—Costs.]—In an action for libel the defendant pleaded two pleas in justification of the charges of embezzlement, which was the libel complained of in two counts. The jury found for the defendant on the first count, for the plaintiff on the second, and gave £75 damages. On a rule nisi to enter a verdict for defendant on the whole record, the Court directed the second count to be amended by inserting allegations to show that it referred to another embezzlement than that in the first count, the defendant to limit his pleas accordingly. Rule to be discharged on plaintiff paying costs of rule and amendment. Clegg v. Bryant, 3 V.R. (L.,) 210; 3 A.J.R., 108.

Striking Out Plea—Pleading Evidence—Plea of Not Guilty, with a Plea of Fair Comment.]—H. brought an action for libel against S., who pleaded—(1) Not guilty. (2) A plea of fair comment, which, in effect, pleaded evidence. Williams, J. (in Chambers) struck out plea 2, observing that plea 1 was sufficient; but that he would allow plea 2 if it were one of fair comment generally. Hunt v. Syme, 4 A.L.T., 178.

Proof of Publication.] — McD., formerly a shunter in the railway department, sued the Board for a libel which consisted of a statement in a notice posted in the guards' and shunters' rooms at the Melbourne and other stations. These rooms at Melbourne were not, strictly speaking, accessible to strangers, but if carriers wanted a shunter, they were in the habit of going to this room. Held there was sufficient proof of publication. McDonald v. the Board of Land and Works, 5 A.J.R., 34.

Evidence of Publication.]—Where a libel was alleged to be contained in a letter, and it was proved that defendant had stated in plaintiff's presence what was written in nearly the same words in a letter (the one in question) in handwriting of defendant's wife, which reached the person who had recommended plaintiff to defendant, and to whom defendant had threatened to send the message, the Court held there was sufficient evidence to warrant the jury in finding a publication by the defendant, or by his authority. Johnston v. Jackson, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 331; 1 A.L.T., 49.

Action for Slander—Newspaper Company Registered Under Act No. 190—Unable to be Registered as Proprietor Under Act 212—Unable to Maintain Action for Slander as to its Business.]—See Daily Telegraph Company v. Berry, under CORPORATION, ante column 232.

Evidence in Mitigation of Damages.]—On a trial for slander, the defendant was allowed to put in evidence of his authority for the statement by him which was the subject of the action in mitigation of damages. Nash v. Miller, 1 A.J.R., 61.

Evidence in Mitigation of Damages — Previous Publication by Another Person.]—In an action for the publication of a libel, evidence of a previous publication by another person of a similar libel, which did not, however, name the plaintiff, or in any way point to the plaintiff, is not admissible in mitigation of damages. Tracy v. Luke, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 64.

But where such evidence has been received, and a verdict found for the defendant, a new trial will not be granted, since in this case it could have no effect on the verdict, for evidence in mitigation of damages could not have been taken into consideration until there was a verdict for the plaintiff. Ibid.

Evidence—Cross-Examination of Plaintiff as to Previous Conduct, in Absence of a Plea of Justification.]—H. sued M. for libel contained in a letter written by M. to a co-director, commenting on H.'s conduct as manager, and insinuating dishonesty. There was no plea of justification. Held, that questions put to the plaintiff as to his previous conduct were admissible, even in the absence of such a plea. Horne v. Milne, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 296; 3 A.L.T., 23.

New Trial—Verdict Against Evidence—Misdirection—Costs.]—W., the owner of a racehorse, sued G. for libel; the libel complained of consisting of articles in a newspaper commenting on a meeting at Sandhurst, at which the stewards disqualified the jockey and W. for the pulling of W.'s horse in a steeplechase. To two of the alleged libels G. pleaded "Not guilty," i.e., fair comment, and to the other justification. The jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff. Rule nisi for new trial on grounds (1) against evidence, (2) misdirection in telling the jury not to consider the conduct of the crowd in hooting the plaintiff, (3) that plea of justification was proved. The Court made the rule absolute on the ground that it was against the weight of evidence, some members of the Bench intimating their opinion that the conduct of the crowd should have gone to the jury. Under the circumstances, costs of the rule were made costs in the cause. Walker v. George, 5 A.J.R., 29.

New Trial—Plagiarism—Verdict Against Evidence—Verdict for Plaintiff Where His Oral Evidence Conflicted with Documents.]—T. sued C. for a libel, which consisted in a statement in C.'s paper that T. (a former agricultural correspondent) was no longer connected with the paper, and accusing T. of plagiarism. C. justified the libel in his plea, by comparing three articles which had been written by T. with previous articles to the same effect. It appeared that T. had written these previous articles, but, as to the third, T. contended it was original, but the Court thought that it bore a very striking resemblance to the compared article previously published. The jury found for plaintiff. Rule nisi for a nonsuit or new trial on ground of verdict being against weight of evidence. Held that there was some evidence to go to jury, but that the verdict was unsatisfactory, as the plaintiff's oral testimony conflicted with a written document. Rule absolute for new trial. Treen v. Cameron, 5 A.J.R. 32.

See S.P., Stephens v. Shire of Belfast, 5 A.J.R., 79.

Trial in Absence of Defendant's Evidence—Verdict for Plaintiff—New Trial on Terms.]—The defendant in an action for libel resided in the interior of New South Wales, and shortly before the sittings negotiations, with a view to compromise, were pending. On their falling through, a commission to examine witnesses for the defendant in New South Wales was granted, but on terms which necessitated the attorney communicating with the defendant. Meanwhile the trial came on, and the jury found for plaintiff. At the trial defendant was represented by counsel, but his evidence, to be taken on commission, was not forthcoming. Under the circumstances, the Court granted a new trial on terms of the defendant admitting the publication (which was proved to the satisfaction of the Court,) withdrawing his plea of justification, and paying the costs of the trial and rule. Johnston v. Jackson, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 331; 1 A.L.T., 49.

What Damages Will Carry Costs.]—In an action for slander a verdict for £10 damages will carry costs; if the verdict is for a less amount, the Judge can certify for costs. Nash v. Miller, 1 A.J.R., 61, 64.

Certificate for Costs—"Common Law Procedure Statute," Sec. 429—Personal Malice.]—In an action for libel plaintiff recovered a verdict with nominal damages. On application for certificate of costs, under Sec. 429 of the "Common Law Procedure Statute," Held, that the malice in Sec. 429 must be personal as distinguished from the malice which is implied by law in every libel case, and, there being no evidence of such malice, certificate refused. Walker v. George, 5 A.J.R., 99.

Two Counts on Same Publication—Damages.]—A declaration contained two counts for the same publication complained of as a libel; the first contained an innuendo that words were written of plaintiff as a member of parliament, the second as an accountant and auditor. Damages were given separately on each count. Held, that the damages on both counts could not stand, but the plaintiff might elect which he would retain. Langton v. Syme, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 30.

Damages—Imputation of Unchastity—Jury Not Confined to Proof of Special Damage.]—In an action for slander, imputing unchastity to an unmarried woman, though the action is not maintainable without proof of special damage, the amount of damage proved is not necessarily to be the measure the jury are to adopt in awarding their damages. When they have decided to find a verdict for the plaintiff, the amount of damages to be awarded is in their discretion. White v. Jordan, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 11; 1 A.L.T., 135.

Question of Privilege and Fair Comment Question for Jury.]—See Creek v. Newlands and Horne v. Milne, ante column 363, and DeMestre v. Syme, ante column 364.

Writing and Publishing, and Causing to be Written and Published."]—"Writing and publishing, and causing to be written and published," are not two offences, but merely the same thing stated twice, and either in an information is sufficient. King v. The Queen, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 17.

Publishing Malicious Libel, Knowing it to be False—Inquiry into Truth—No Plea of Juitification.]—Upon a charge under Sec. 7 of the "Statute of Wrongs 1865," of maliciously publishing a defamatory libel, "knowing the same to be false," the prosecutor necessarily undertakes to prove the falsity of the libel to the knowledge of the accused, and the accused may therefore prove its truth if he can, although no plea of justification be entered upon the record. Ibid.

Information in the Name of Prothonotary—"Judicature Act," No. 502, Sec. 22—Trial at Bar.]—An information for libel by a private prosecutor, brought in the name of the Prothonotary of the Supreme Court, under Sec. 22 of the Act No. 502, where no warrant of nisi prius has been obtained, must be tried at bar. Regina v. Trenwith, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 250; 6 A.L.T., 99.

Such an information, though "penal" in its consequences, is "civil" as to procedure. Ibid.

Complainant Obtaining a Commitment for Trial by Justices.]—See the Queen, ex parte Farrell, v. King, ante column 283.

II. SLANDER OF TITLE.

Evidence of Malice.]—Plaintiff was a selector of land, and was entitled to a lease from the Crown. The lease was sanctioned by the Lands Department, but before it was issued from the Titles Office, a caveat was lodged by direction of defendant, in which it was claimed that the Queen had an equitable interest in the land. It subsequently appeared that the Crown did not claim any interest in the property, and defendant stated that the only reason he knew why the caveat was lodged was that it was to protect a bank which had a claim against the land. He stated that he acted under the direction of the Minister of Lands, but could not remember the reason why the order was given. The caveat was removed in a few weeks, but plaintiff suffered damage. Held, in an action for slander of title, that there was evidence of malice to go to the jury. Matthews v. Morrah, 6 A.L.T., 9.

DETENTION OF PROPERTY (ILLEGAL.)

See OFFENCES (STATUTORY.)

DETINUE.

Although the action of detinue partakes both of the nature of an action founded on contract and on tort, yet a verdict for one of several defendants in detinue does not enure to the benefit of all, as in other actions founded wholly on contract. Plaintiffs do not stand in the same position as in actions wholly on contract, and, by parity of reasoning, the defendants do not so stand, and all are therefore not precluded by a verdict passing only against one but in favour of the others. The Board of Land and Works declared with an informal count of detinue against S., G. and T. T. treated the count as in tort, and pleaded (1) not guilty, (2) traverse of delivery of goods. S. and G. treated it as in contract, and pleaded (1) non detinet, (2) traverse of possession.

The day before the trial, S. took out a summons to stay proceedings on giving up the goods, paying one shilling damages and costs, and an order was made as upon summons, but S.'s name was not removed from record. There was a verdict for plaintiff, damages one shilling against G., and a verdict of "Not guilty" against T., but a special finding that he did detain goods but not wrongfully. Three rules nisi were obtained, (1) by G. to arrest judgment, (2) by plaintiffs on behalf of T., to enter a verdict for plaintiff on the second finding, and for a new trial on the first finding, (3) by plaintiffs to enter a suggestion of Judge's order to stay proceedings against S. The Court discharged the first rule, made absolute the second rule as to new trial, giving leave to amend pleadings, and discharged the third rule as being useless. Board of Land and Works v. Glass, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 58.

G. taxed his costs, and issued a fi. fa. for them. The Board did not proceed to a new trial, but signed judgment and gave notice of taxing final costs. Summons by G. to set aside the judgment signed. Held, that rule for new trial was not so expressed as to justify the plaintiffs in signing judgment against any of the parties, and G.'s summons granted. Summons by Board to set aside fi. fa. issued by G., or to set off against the costs of the action, the costs for which the fi. fa. was issued. Held, that the interlocutory costs of G. could not be set off against the final costs of the action, because it was still undetermined and the costs were unknown. Summons dismissed. Ibid, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 197.

Demand of Property.]—In an action of detinue for the recovery of books and other property belonging to a mining company, it appeared that the authority to the company's attorney to demand the property was not signed by a quorum of directors, or by the manager in the capacity of manager. Held that the evidence of authority to make the demand was insufficient. Aladdin and Try Again Company v. Schaw, 2 V.R. (L.,) 18; 2 A.J.R., 20.

Damages—Substantial.]—Substantial damages may be awarded for the detention, in an action of detinue, although the chattels be given up. Wilson v. Thomson, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 281.

Action for Crown Grant—Title of Grantee Not in Issue—Defence.]—In an action of detinue for a Crown grant, the fact that the grant has issued in the name of the plaintiff, is prima facie sufficient to entitle him to recover the deed. The title to the land comprised in the deed is not in issue; and the fact that the plaintiff has not complied with the "Land Act" does not form a defence to such action. Humffray v. Humffray, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 221.

Jurisdiction of Judge in Chambers.]—A Judge in Chambers has jurisdiction where, in an action of detinue, the plaintiff has tendered the defendant the amount of his lien on the goods, and the defendant has refused to receive it, to make an order staying further proceedings, and directing that the defendant should give up the goods on the plaintiff paying the amount due upon them. *Hellas v. Affidavit in Support—By Whom Made—"Statute of Evidence 1864," Sec. 19.]—Per Molesworth, J., (in Chambers.) The affidavit in support of an application for discovery of documents under Sec. 19 of the "Statute of Evidence, 1864," must be made by the party seeking the discovery, and not by his solicitor. White v. Hoddle, 1 A.L.T., 116.

Books of Company.]—In an action by a bank to recover a sum overdrawn by a company on cheques, the bank applied for leave to inspect the company's books, supporting their application by an affidavit that the company refused to admit the cheques, and that they could only prove the cheques by an examination of the company's books. Held, that the bank was entitled to the inspection applied for. Bank of New South Wales v. Undaunted Gold Mining Company, 1 V.R. (L.,) 99; 1 A.J.R., 90.

A Judge of the Court of Mines has No Power to Order Inspection of the Books of a Company by a Person Not a Party to the Suit.]—Park Company v. South Hustler's Reserve Company, 8 V.L.R. (M.,) 37, post under MINING—Practice and Procedure—Jurisdiction of Courts of Mines.

(c) Of What Documents.

Bill of Costs—Bank Pass Books — Privilege — "Statute of Evidence 1864," Sec. 19.]—A defendant inserted in his affidavit a list of documents which he objected to produce on the ground of privilege, as being communications with his solicitor in relation to long past proceedings to enforce his liability as a shareholder in a bank. A bill of costs in respect of this and other matters was one of these documents. The affidavit also admitted that the defendant had in his possession his pass-books with another bank for certain years, but alleged that they contained nothing material to the plaintiff's case. Held, per Molesworth, J. (in Chambers,) that the defendant was bound under Sec. 19 of the "Statute of Evidence 1864," as extended by English cases, to produce these documents and the pass-books, though if the defendant had alleged that he ran any risk, or would be in any manner prejudiced by permitting inspection, the matter would be differently dealt with. White v. Hoddle, 1 A.L.T., 147.

Report of Medical Men—Privilege.]—Plaintiff, who had been injured in a railway accident, was examined by three medical men on behalf of the defendants. It was sought to compel the defendants to allow the plaintiff to inspect the report sent in by these gentlemen. Held, per Higinbotham, J. (in Chambers,) that the report being privileged under the old procedure, and the action being a pending one, to be dealt with according to the procedure in force at the time it was commenced, the application could not be granted. Bradshaw v. Victorian Railway Commissioners, 6 A.L.T., 20.

Solicitor of Assignor—Application of Assignee—Summary Jurisdiction.]—The Court has summary jurisdiction to order solicitors to produce documents for inspection of assignees of their clients, but the application must be made in privity with or upon notice to, or with consent of the assignors. B. and T., as solicitors for G. and W., prepared and retained deeds relating to a Government contract, in which G. and W. were interested. G. and W. assigned all their interest to H. W. and C. There was a suit pending against H. W. and C. with reference to the contract. On motion made by H. W. and C. for inspection by B. and T. the order was made after a verified consent to the application had been made by G. In re Bennett and Taylor, 2 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 15.

Solicitor of Party—Summary Jurisdiction.]—The Court has summary jurisdiction to order a solicitor claiming a lien on deeds to produce them. Jamieson v. Allen, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 47.

II. INTERROGATORIES.

The plaintiff bank sued on a bill of exchange. The defendant, E., pleaded a release. The bank obtained an order to exhibit interrogatories to the defendant whether the agreement for a release was made with B., late manager of the bank, who was now in England. Held that B. might be regarded as the bank, he having been its manager, and the fact of his being in England, and no longer a servant, did not affect the question. Order for interrogatories rescinded. Colonial Bank of Australasia v. Ettershank, 3 V.R. (L.,) 30; 3 A.J.R. 34.

What may be Asked—"Common Law Procedure Statute," Sec. 277.]—S. sued H. for the unpaid residue of purchase money for a station property. H. pleaded a deed of composition under the "Insolvency Statute 1865," Secs. 115, 117. There was no replication of fraud. The plaintiff then took out a summons under Sec. 277 of the "Common Law Procedure Statute" for leave to adminster interrogatories. The Court struck out such of them as referred to such particulars as seemed to point towards impeaching the deed, e.g., instigation to execute the deed, and to obtain the assent of the creditors and other particulars. Stewart v. Hogg, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 139.

When Interrogatories Not Necessary—Contempt of Court.]—In re Thompson, ante column 181.

Interrogatories as to Documents in Defendant's Possession—When Refused.]—Learmonth v. Bailey, 5 A.J.R., 93, post under PRACTICE AND PLEADING—In Equity—Answer.

Husband and Wife—Absence of Co-Plaintiff from Colony.]—An action was brought by a husband and wife as co-plaintiffs, and an order was made requiring them to answer interrogatories and staying proceedings until answered. It appeared that the wife was absent from the colony, and the husband did not know where she lived and could not find her. Summons to set aside the order refused. Griffiths v. Victorian Permanent Building Society, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 177; 3 A.L.T., 7.

Wife and Husband Co-Plaintiffs.]—In an action in which the husband and wife were co-plaintiffs, the defendant obtained an order calling upon the wife to answer certain interrogatories. Summons by husband to set aside the order on the ground that the wife could not be found. Held that the husband must show to the Court's satisfaction that he had exhausted all reasonable means within his power of ascertainnig where his wife was. Griffiths v. Victorian Permanent Building Society, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 304.

To What Discovery Plaintiff is Entitled.]—In an action for slander, Held that plaintiff might administer interrogatories to the defendant as to whether he uttered the words complained of, and as to whether he had been told by some person what he afterwards repeated; but, per Stawell, C. J. (dissentiente Barry, J.,) he might not ask who that person was. The Daily Telegraph Company v. Berry, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 343, 346, 348; 1 AL.T., 51.

Party Interrogating Having Means of Knowledge.]—Although the party may have the knowledge he seeks or means of knowledge, it is no longer a good objection, for the party may wish to have this information corroborated. Unless the interrogatories are scandalous, or the party interrogated is privileged, either party may administer any interrogotary which he could ask in examination in chief if that person were in the witness box, provided such questions do not relate exclusively to the case of the party interrogated. Daily Telegraph Company v. Berry overruled. James v. Davies, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 140; 5 A.L.T., 29.

To What Discovery a Plaintiff is Entitled.]—Per Holroyd, J. (in Chambers.) A defendant is not compelled to answer interrogatories as regards admitted facts, since these are not matters in question in the cause, and are therefore irrelevant. No doubt a plaintiff is entitled to discovery, not only of facts within the defendant's knowledge, or means of knowledge, which will support his own title or claim, but also of facts which will repel what he anticipates will be the case set up by the defendant. But his right does not extend to a discovery of the evidence upon which the anticipated case of the defendant is to be supported. Still less can he be allowed to extract evidence on which an argument might perhaps be founded, tending not to rebut a case, but to impugn the defendant's veracity. Wainman v. Hansen, 6 A.L.T., 67.

An interrogatory for the discovery of documents is not warranted by an order for interrogatories. Ibid.

An interrogatory which is a mere cross-examination to impeach credit is not allowable. Ibid.

For circumstances in which certain interrogatories were allowed and others disallowed, see Ibid.

Action for Libel.]—In an action against the publisher of a newspaper for damages in respect of a libellous letter, interrogatories asking the defendant if he were not the writer of the letter in question, if he knew the name and address of the writer, will not be permitted. Smith v. Powell, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 79; 5 A.L.T., 194.

An objection to interrogatories that the answer might criminate the person interrogated will not be allowed, unless such person makes an affidavit to that effect. Ibid.

Per Higinbotham, J., (dissentientibus Stawell, C.J. and Holroyd, J.) Whichever of the specified grounds of objection might be taken by a witness, and however sincere his apprehension of conviction might seem to be, the Court should disallow the objection, and should enforce an answer to a penal, disgracing, or criminating question, if relevant and material, unless it should seem to the Court reasonably probable that the answer will lead to his prosecution, or in the event of a prosecution being instituted, materially tend to his conviction. Ibid.

Action for Libel—Answer.]—Per Holroyd, J. (in Chambers) — If, in an action for libel, interrogatories are delivered by the plaintiff as to the publication, &c., the defendant will not be permitted to insert in his answering affidavit matters which are intended as a justification for his conduct. Roper v. Williams, 6 A.L.T., 87.

Practice—Affidavit—Act No. 274 ("Common Law Procedure Statute,") Sec. 278.]—An attorney's clerk is not an "agent" for a corporation within the meaning of Sec. 278 of Act 274, so that an affidavit in support of a summons for interrogatories is not sufficient when made by a clerk of the plaintiff's attorney, when such plaintiff is a corporation. Daily Telegraph Company v. Berry, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 343, 346, 348; 1 A.L.T., 51.

Costs.]—Semble, per Stawell, C. J.—It is not in the power of a Judge in Chambers to award costs on a summons to administer interrogatories. Ibid.

Practice Under "Judicature Act 1883"—"Supreme Court Rules 1884," Order 31, Rule 1.]—A Judge on an application for leave to deliver interrogatories, will not go into the form of them so as to allow of any objections being taken as to their nature. Meudell v. M'Lay, 6 A.L.T., 69.

Order 30, Rules 1 & 2 of "Supreme Court Rules 1884"—Application for Leave to Deliver.]—Per Williams, J.—"In all cases where leave is sought to deliver interrogatories, if the pleadings are before me, I shall be satisfied with a statement from counsel of the nature of the interrogatories, and shall not require their nature to be otherwise set out." Holt v. Henry, 6 A.L.T., 98.

Leave to Deliver—Order 30, Rule 3—Order 31, Rules 1, 26.] — (Per Higinbotham, J.) If an application for leave is made specially it should be made ex parte, and copies of the proposed interrogatories need not be served; and the Judge should satisfy himself by inquiries as to the nature of the action, the issue involved, and the general scope of the interrogatories, and as to any offers made by the parties sought to be interrogated to deliver particulars, make admissions, or produce documents. An application for leave to deliver should be made under general summons for directions under Order 30, Rule 3. And where the applicant applied specially and by summons, he was made to pay the costs of the defendant's appearing on the summons. Nixon v. Milton, 6 A.L.T., 114.

Summons for Further and Better Answer to Interrogatories.]—On a summons for further and better answer to interrogatories, the plaintiff gave notice that he intended on the hearing of the summons to use two affidavits filed on an application under Order 14, Rule 1, for leave to enter final judgment. Held, per Holroyd, J. (in Chambers,) that these affidavits ought not to be used, but that the Judge should only look at the pleadings to ascertain whether the interrogatories have been sufficiently answered. Wainman v. Hansen, 6 A.L.T., 67.

DISTRESS.

STATUTES.

"Distress Act," 15 Vic., No. 4, repealed and re-enacted by "Landlord and Tenant Statute 1864," Part 4.

"Landlord and Tenant Statute 1864," No. 192, Part 4.

1. WHO MAY DISTRAIN.

Agent Under Avowry Without Warrant—"Distress Act," Sec. 1.]—An agent under avowry of a landlord mortgagee, proved a warrant to the bailiff to distrain for rent, but did not prove any warrant by the landlord to himself. Held that notwithstanding the negative words of "The Distress Act," 15 Vic., No. 4, Sec. 1, the seizure was valid and the avowry good. Harker v. Barwick, 1 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 165.

Some of Several Trustees.]—Since one joint tenant is at liberty to distrain on behalf of the others, though he is accountable to the others, it is not necessary that trustees, being joint tenants, should all join in a distress. Trustees are not recognised at law, and a Court of Law can only deal with them as holders of the legal estate. Where, therefore, a distress warrant was signed by two out of three trustees, Held sufficient. Moore v. Lee, 2 V.R. (L.,) 4; 2 A.J.R., 16.

Mortgagees.]—See Moore v. Lee, 2 V.R. (L.,) 4; 2 A.J.R., 16, post under MORTGAGE—Rights and Liabilities of Mortgagees, &c.

What Tenancy Will Sustain Distress.] — On 25th January, 1869, D. signed an agreement to lease an hotel to C. for five years, from 24th June, 1869, at £700 a-year, the lease to contain the usual covenants. C. entered into possession, and a dispute occurred as to what were usual covenants, and an Equity suit was instituted for specific performance. On 3rd October, 1870, D. distrained for rent in arrear up to 30th September, 1870. The lease directed by the decree in Equity was dated November 15th, 1870, and demised the premises from June 24th, 1869, and contained a covenant to pay the rent from that date. It was contended that the lease dated subsequent to the distraint did not justify D. in distraining. Held that a tenancy sufficient to justify a distress might be proved by possession of the premises and actual payment of rent, or an admission that rent had been paid, and that C. having entered into possession and executed a deed by which he was estopped from saying that rent had not been paid, there was evidence of a tenancy to go to the jury, and that D. was justified in distraining. Coleman v. Dean, 2 V.R. (L.,) 87; 2 A.J.R., 60.

"Landlord and Tenant Statute," No. 192, Sec. 81—Purchase by Landlord of Goods Distrained Within Five Days of Distress—Lien for Rent Still Good.]—M. held a bill of sale over certain chattels of his tenant, and seized them and bought them from the tenant. D. also held a bill of sale over the same chattels, and claimed them from M., but M. refused on the ground of his seizure under the bill of sale. At the trial, M. relied upon the seizure as a distress for rent due. Held, on appeal from County Court, that though the Act only allowed him to sell after five days, yet, as landlord, he had a right to keep the chattels until the rent due was tendered. Verdict for defendant M. Molloy v. Dolphin, 5 A.J.R., 84.

Mesne Landlord Whose Term is Determined.]—A landlord leased land for a term to M., who sublet to E. After the determination of M.'s term, the landlord without any notice to M, the mesne landlord, granted a lease to E. Held that this was a sufficient determination of M.'s tenure to disable him from distraining upon E., after the expiration of his (M.'s) lease, as upon a continuing tenancy at will, or on sufferance. Martin v. Elsasser, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 481.

A married woman cannot demise land to her husband, and therefore cannot distrain upon him for rent in arrear. Regina v. Templeton, ex parte Allen, 4 A.J.R., 70.

2. What may be taken.

Distress—Abandonment of—"Insolvency Statute 1871," No. 379, Sec, 108—Trustees' Liability.]—The provisions of Sec. 108, Act No. 379, do not apply to a case of two lessees as joint tenants where distress has been made on the goods of both, and one subsequently sequestrates his estate. Quære, whether goods of a tenant passing by a bill of sale are protected by Sec. 108 of Act 379, upon his subsequent insolvency. A. and B. were lessees of certain property as joint tenants, and on February 1st, 1875, owed £115 for rent. O., a trustee, urged upon H., the other trustee, to distrain. H. delayed, and O., on February 9th, distrained the goods of both. H. prior to this took by assignment a bill of sale over goods of A. and B. for his own benefit. February 15th B. sequestrated his estate, and O. abandoned the distress. Held that B.'s sequestration under Sec. 108, made the abandonment of distress necessary, but that beneficiaries were not on the pleadings and the frame of the suit entitled to an account for this rent as on the basis of wilful default, and that certain wheat having passed to H. to to be sold by him, and the proceeds to be applied by him as part payment of the rent, H. was liable for these proceeds. Officer v. Haynes, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 115.

Goods Seized Under Bill of Sale—Distress for Rent—Insolvency—"Insolvency Statute 1871," Sec. 108.]—Sec. 108 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871," is for the protection of general creditors against the superior powers of landlords distraining, and does not vary the rights of landlords and mortgagees. In re Sweeney, ex parte Diggins, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 1, 6.

S., a tenant of O., gave M. a bill of sale over his goods, and M. seized them thereunder. D. subsequently distrained the same goods for rent due, and S. then voluntarily sequestrated his estate, and an arrangement was made by M. and the official assignee that the latter should sell the goods, and, after deducting his commission, should pay the surplus to M. The goods were then sold, and the assignee paid the amount of D.'s distress into a bank, under Sec. 89 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871," as money not claimed by him, and handed the surplus, less his commission, to M. Held that D. was entitled to proceed with his distress, as against M., and was entitled to be paid his rent in full out of the proceeds of the sale of the goods. Ibid.

Distraint Before Sequestration — Selling Goods After—"Insolvency Statute 1871," Sec. 108.]—A landlord distrained a tenant's goods for rent, and the tenant then sequestrated his estate. The landlord proceeded to sell the goods under the distress. Held that, under Sec. 108 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871," he was prohibited from so doing, and should pay to the assignee the value of the goods and costs. In re Nichol and Payroux, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 81.

Cattle of Strangers on Demised Premises—"Landlord and Tenant Act," No. 192, Sec. 55.]—Under the "Landlord and Tenant Act," No. 192, Sec. 55, the landlord may distrain the cattle of strangers on the premises demised, as well as those of his tenant. The first four lines of the Section, which are adapted from 11 Geo. II., Cap. 19, Sec. 8, have not been carefully embodied in the section, and must be deemed to be not a restriction of the common law right of a landlord to distrain the cattle of strangers on the premises demised, but an unnecessary declaration of that part of the common law of distress which, without any statutory authority, entitles the landlord to destrain the stock of his tenant on the land demised. Heaney v. Harper, 3 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 128.

Seizure of Sheep as Distress for Rent.]—Plaintiff had turned his sheep out into an unenclosed common, and they strayed from that into other land, also unenclosed, where the defendant, as agent for the owner of the land, seized them as a distress for rent. Held, that being distrained as distress for rent in arrear, they might be so seized at once, and it was not necessary for them to be on the ground levant and couchant, the plaintiff being to blame for having no one in charge of them. Maguire v. Dixon, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 227; N.C., 25.

Money—No. 267, Sec. 118.]—M., being entitled to a portion of a sum of money, which was under R.'s control, had a distress warrant issued against him at the instance of R. When the constable came to levy, R. drew a cheque in favour of M., and put the proceeds in a packet, marked with M.'s name, on his desk, and pointed it out as M.'s property to the constable, who levied on it. R. had no directions from M. to cash the cheque. Held, that there had been no appropriation of the money in favor of M., and that the money could not be levied on under Sec. 118 of the "Justice of the Peace Statute 1865," No. 267. Reeves v. McGuinness, 2 V.R. (L.,) 187; 2 A.J.R., 108.

Crown Property.]—The property of the Crown is not subject to distress for arrears of rent due to the landlord of the premises on which that property is found. Regina v. Tucker, 1 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 193.

3. Effect of Distress and Proceedings thereon.

Illegal Distress—Seizure of Growing Plants—Liability of Principal for Agent.]—S. was C.'s tenant, and the rent being in arrear, C. instructed his agent to distrain. The agent seized and sold some growing plants and the whole of the nursery stock, and C. received the proceeds. S. sued C. for illegal distress and recovered a verdict. On rule nisi for a nonsuit, Held that the distress was illegal, and that there was evidence of C.'s receiving the proceeds of the sale, and of his being aware of his agent's acts, sufficient to justify the jury in arriving at the conclusion that C. ratified those acts. Sherwood v. Courtney, N.C., 68.

Illegal Distress—Goods Seized Under—Bill of Sale Paramount to Faulty Distress.]—Regina v. Templeton, ex parte Allen, ante column 108.

Distress Warrant — Signature by Agent.]—A warrant to distrain began—"I., B., of, &c., as the duly constituted agent of the — Bank of —, do hereby authorise you to distrain, &c.;" and was signed, "The — Bank of —, by its attorney, B." Held that the warrant was sufficient. Cowper v. Ninham, 2 A.J.R., 15.

Illegal Distress — Tender of Amount Due Not Accepted]—Barry v. Dolan, 2 A.J.R., 114, post under JUSTICE OF THE PEACE — Jurisdiction and Duty—In other cases.

Excessive Distress—Damages.]—The measure of damages in an action for excessive distress is the loss sustained by the plaintiff by the deprival of the use of the goods. Where the plaintiff has not been deprived of the use of his goods, he can only have nominal damages. Roach v. Martin, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 41.

Excessive Distress—Action for Does Not Survive Against Executors.]—See Buchner v. Davis, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 444, post under EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS—Suits and Actions By and Against.

Irregular Distress — When Landlord Liable — Plaintiff Not Tenant—Special Damage.]—Where the plaintiff in an action for irregular distress is not the defendant's tenant, in order to sustain the action he must prove special damage. Peck v. Smith, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 16.

Irregular Distress—When Landlord Liable.]—A landlord is not liable to a third person when in an irregular distress the goods of such third person have, by the mistake of the agent selling, been sold, though they had not been seized, unless the landlord authorised such sale, or accepted the proceeds, with full knowledge of the circumstances. Ibid.

Sale — Irregularity — Remedy — "Landlord and Tenant Statuts 1864," Sec. 84.]—Where goods have been duly seized by the landlord under a distress for rent actually due, as sale by private contract instead of by public auction, is an irregularity only, and does not render the seizure void, or the landlord a trespasser ab initio, and the only remedy available by the tenant, or where the tenant has consented to the sale, of a third person whose goods have been so disposed of, is the remedy provided by Sec. 84 of the "Landlord and Tenant Statute 1864," i.e., a special action of trespass, or on the case at the plaintiff's election. Stewart v. Fishley, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 3.

Irregular Sale—Measure of Damages.]—A bank (lessor) distrained upon a tenant's goods for arrears of rent, and put up the goods seized for sale by auction, at which sale a clerk of the bank bought as agent for the bank. The tenant became insolvent, and the bank re-sold. On action of trover by the Official Assignee, Held, per Stawell, C. J., and Holroyd, J., (dissentiente, Higinbotham, J.) that the sale was void, as the auctioneer as agent for the bank sold to the clerk as agent for the bank, and that the measure of damages was the value of the goods, and not the amount realised by the wrongful sale. Davey v. Bank of New South Wales, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 252; 5 A.L.T., 85.

Excessive Distress—Tender—Refusal to Accept—Subsequent Demand not at once Complied with—Willingness to Pay.]—D., a tenant, when his rent became due but before demand, tendered it to the landlord's agents, who declined to receive it on the ground that their authority was stopped. Three days later he again tendered the rent, which was again refused. A written demand was subsequently made upon D., who did not at once comply with it, being at the time very busy on his farm. A distraint was a few days afterwards made upon D.'s chattels, who tendered the rent to the agents, and served a notice on them to withdraw the distress. Later on D. paid the rent to the agents, but not the expenses, and would not accept a receipt for it on account of rent and expenses. The agent then offered D. his money again, but D. would not take it. After this the landlord's bailiff stopped D. getting in a part of his crop, and a few days later got in a part of it and sold it. In an action by D. for trespass and asportavit, and for excessive distress, Held that it was for the jury to determine whether there was a bona fide continued readiness and willingness on D.'s part to pay his rent, and that if they so found, D. was entitled to a verdict. Quinlivan v. Darcey, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 370; 2 A.L.T., 67.

Act No. 192, Sec. 72—Warrant—Signature—Excessive Damages.]—A tenant being in arrears with his rent, the landlord distrained. The warrant of distress, in the body of which the agent wrote the landlord's name, and which had no other signature, claimed rent and another sum as rent for furniture which the landlord had purchased from the tenant and then sublet to him. The tenant, though the distress was excessive, was not deprived of the use of the furniture. Held that the signature of the warrant was sufficient under Sec. 72 of Act No. 192, and the extra claim did not make the warrant void ab initio and the landlord a trespasser, and that the tenant was only entitled to nominal damages for the seizure in excess. Nicol v. Brasher, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 270; 5 A.L.T., 82.

DISTRIBUTIONS, STATUTES OF.

"Intestates Act," No. 230, Sec. 4 — Married Woman—Real Estate—Husband's Share.]—D., a widow, married G., a bachelor, and died intestate, seized of real estate, leaving no issue by G., but leaving children by her former marriage. Held that G. was entitled under Act 230, Sec. 4, to one-third only, and not one half of D.'s real estate. Sec. 4 should be construed sensibly and not literally, and in that way it would read—"A widower shall stand in the same position with respect to the distribution of such land of his deceased wife's, regard being had to her leaving or not leaving children, as she would have stood in with respect to the distribution of his personal estate, regard being had to his leaving or not leaving children." Martin v. Dalton, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 69.

"Administration Act," No. 427, Sec. 6—Death Intestate Before Act—Administrator ad Litem.]—Where an infant, T., died in 1864 or 1865, intestate and unmarried, entitled to an estate in fee, Held that the estate was in his heir, but would vest in his administrator under Sec. 6 of the Act. Real estate does not, under Sec. 6, vest in an administrator ad litem. M'Gregor v. M'Coy, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 162, 173.

22 & 23 Car. II., Cap. 10, Sec. 6—1 Jac. II., Cap. 17, Sec. 6—Grandfather and Grandmother—"Married Women's Property Act" No. 384, Sec. 10.]—An infant died intestate leaving as next of kin a paternal grandfather, and paternal and maternal grandmothers. Held, by the Full Court, affirming Molesworth, J., that Sec. 10 of No. 384 vested the share of the paternal grandmother in her as separate property, and that by the "Statutes of Distributions" the next of kin were each entitled to one-third of the property, they being all next of kin to the infant in equal degrees. *Skeeles v. Construction of Contemporaneous.]—Courts of Equity so regard documents given contemporaneously, and in one transaction, that if one of them fixes a date, and thereby gives a right to a time for payment which the others do not give, the Court will give to the whole that meaning as to time which is given by the one document only. *Murphy v. DOMICIL.

Of Choice — How Acquired — Incarceration.] — Proof of a voluntary residence for a few months in Victoria, followed by incarceration there, will afford no presumption of a domicil in Victoria. Confinement in prison cannot give a domicil. Moffatt v. Moffatt, 3 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 87.

In order to constitute a domicil, there must be a residence freely chosen, and not dictated or prescribed by any external necessity, such as the duties of office, the demands of creditors, or the relief from illness; and it must be a residence fixed not for a limited time, period, or particular purpose, but general and indefinite in its future contemplation. Buisson v. Warburton, 4 A.J.R., 119.

DONATIO MORTIS CAUSA.

Delivery of Cheque—Gift of Part of Thing..]—There cannot be a good donatio mortis causâ, by the delivery of a cheque drawn by the donor; or by the gift of part of an entire thing. Edwards v. Graham, 3 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 112.

What is—Bank Deposit Receipt.] — Semble a gift of a bank deposit receipt proved only by the affidavit of the donee, is a good donatio mortis causâ. In the goods of Tully, 4 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 15.

Deposit in Post Office Savings' Bank.]—F. had a sum of money deposited in a post-office savings' bank, and shortly before her death gave K. her depositor's book, and an order for payment to K., and at the same time sent to the savings' bank a notice of withdrawal. K. presented this order with the book, and also the Postmaster-General's warrant for payment, but F. died before payment was actually made. Held that F. having done all in her power to divest herself of the property in the deposit money, and to vest it in K., such a gift was a good donatio mortis causâ. Per Stephen and Higinbotham, J.J., it was good as a gift inter vivos. Curran v. Kavanagh, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 21; 2 A.L.T., 119.

Gift of Government Debentures — Delivery of —Certificates for Bank Shares]—N. made a will providing for application of his estate to provide medals as prizes in the Sydney and Melbourne Universities. After execution of his will, he delivered certificates of bank shares, and Government debentures issued under the "Railway Loan Act," 21 Vic., No. 36, to the defendant A. on February 19th, 1882, and died on 28th February, 1882. Suit by the the executors of the will against A. for delivery of the debentures and certificates of shares. Held that, as to the debentures, A. was entitled to them, as by the Act they were assignable by delivery, the Court not entering into the question whether they passed as a donatio mortis causâ, or as a gift inter vivos; and that as to the bank shares, the deed of settlement directing registration of the transfer, they did not pass by manual delivery, and in themselves were not such indicia of ownership that Courts of Equity would perfect an intention of transfer by ordering acts to complete it, and the delivery did not constitute a good donatio mortis causâ. Clark v. Andrews, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 18; 4 A.L.T., 139.

Bank Deposit—Receipt.]—Where a person in expectation of death had a deposit receipt for certain moneys in a bank drawn up in the joint names of himself and his housekeeper, and handed it to her, saying, "Put this under lock and key, child, keep it safe;" and she locked it up in his desk and kept the key for some time, but after his decease handed the key to his executors. Held a good donatio mortis causâ, and that the giving up the key did not vary her rights. Semble, it could have been claimed as a gift inter vivos. Tierney v. Halfpenny, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 152.

DRUNKENNESS.

Effect on Contract—Degree of Drunkenness at Law and in Equity.]—The degree of drunkenness which should make an agreement bad in equity, is less than that which should avoid it at law, and equity should not interfere for either party in enforcing or resisting the agreement. Scales v. King, 1 V.R. (E.,) 100; 1 A.J.R., 71.

Effect on Contract.] — In a suit for specific performance of a contract to sell to plaintiff certain land, the defence was that the defendant had signed the written agreement when in a state of incapacity through drink. Held, that the evidence of capacity on the day, 1st March, 1876, when contract was signed, greatly preponderating, and the defendant not proceeding with reasonable promptitude to repudiate it (October, 1877,) the defendant was bound by the contract. Howard v. Currie, 5 V.L.R. (E..) 87.

DURESS.

Setting Aside a Deed Obtained by—Conveyance Executed Under Fear of Prosecution of Embezzlement—When a Deed Purporting to be Absolute is to Considered as Security Only.]—M, the plaintiff, was for many years in the employment of the defendant, P. M. appropriated some of the defendant's moneys, and after being watched for some time was cross-questioned closely and admitted having received sums which he could not account for. Under fear of prosecution for embezzlement, the plaintiff by deed conveyed all his property to defendant for several unreal considerations set out in the deed, but really in consideration of a sum of £150, and of being allowed to go to Sydney without anything further being said or done in the matter of his embezzlement. Bill by plaintiff to set aside deed as obtained under duress. Held, that if the defendant obtained from the plaintiff, under fear of prosecution, property of greater value than amount owing, equity would relieve, or if the amount owing were capable of ascertainment, it would be referred to Master to ascertain it and make the property assigned stand as security only; that from the evidence it did not appear that the property was of greater value than the debt, and as the method of dealing in the defendant's business had been very loose, there was no means of ascertaining the debt due except on plaintiff's evidence, which was not to be trusted; that in order to make such an assignment illegal, as amounting to compounding a felony, there must be a distinct agreement to forbear prosecuting upon the assignment being made; and that, even if the assignment were so illegal, equity would not relieve the plaintiff. Bill dismissed. Munro v. Perry, 5 A.J.R., 20, 46.

DUTIES ON THE ESTATES OF DECEASED PERSONS.

How Scale of Duty Fixed—Act No. 388, Sec. 24 — "Amending Act," No. 403 — Contingent Bequest — Remainder to More Distant Relative.] —H. by will left certain property to children of his son, to be paid on their attaining age of 25, if sons; or on attaining age of 21, or marrying under that age, if daughters, with remainder over in failure, to testator's brother. Petition by trustees of will under "Statute of Trusts 1864," for advice of Court, whether this came within the exception of Sec. 24 of No. 388, and Act No. 403. Held that the obvious policy of the Acts was to obtain payment at once of all duty with which estate might be chargeable, and that it did not deal with contingencies that might arise after many years; that the estate must pay the higher duty, the case not coming within the exceptions. In re Hamilton, 3 A.J.R., 95.

Under Sec. 24, where an intestate leaves children but no widow, the full rate of duty must be paid. Graham v. Graham, post column 393.

And the tax is upon the corpus of the estate. Ibid.

How Scale of Duty Fixed—Act No. 388, Sec. 24—Defeasibility of Gift to Children.]—Per Privy Council, overruling Molesworth, J.—Sec. 24 is not to be construed strictly against those who invoke its benefit, because it is an exception to a general rule. Where a testator devised and bequeathed the whole beneficial interest in his estate to a widow and children, with limitations in favour of grandchildren as the issue of such children, with a gift over to nephews and nieces, the defeasible character of the interests of the children only affecting children and grandchildren inter se, and not affecting the gift over, except in the event of a remote contingency, Held, per Privy Council, overruling Molesworth, J., that duty was chargeable at the lower rate under Sec. 24, notwithstanding that additional duty might be claimed if the gift over took effect. Armytage v. Wilkinson, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 41; L.R., 3 App. Ca., 355.

How Scale of Duty Fixed — Widow — Child En Ventre—"Duties on Estates of Deceased Persons Statute 1870" Secs. 18, 24.] — A widow of an intestate, who has a child en ventre, may obtain a grant of letters of administration under Sec. 18 of the "Duties on the Estates of Deceased Persons Statute 1870," and thus become entitled to the issue of such letters upon payment of duty at one-half the full percentage, under Sec. 24, upon an affidavit verifying her pregnancy, and stating that the unborn child is the only next of kin of the intestate. In the estate of Kershaw, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 62.

Partial Intestacy—Lost Will—"Duties on the Estates of Deceased Persons Statute 1870," Secs. 8, 24.]—Where the will of a testator could not be found, but two codicils, which disposed of part only of the estate, were forthcoming, and the testator thus died partially intestate, and left only a widow and collateral relatives, and by the first codicil he gave all his estate to his widow for life, and, subject thereto, directed that it should devolve according to the terms of the will, save that any provisions of such will in the wife's favour should lapse, and appointed her sole executrix, and by the second he confirmed the first and made provision for his sister-in-law. Held that, under Secs. 8 and 24 of the "Duties on the Estates of Deceased Persons Statute 1870," duty was payable at one-half the full percentage upon the widow's life estate, and upon her moiety of the residue, and at the full percentage upon the other moiety. In the estate of Henty, 4 V.L.R. (I., P. & M.,) 54.

How Duty Payable—Act No. 388—Annuity.]—Upon petition by trustees for advice, Held that "annuity" (payable quarterly) means a series of legacies payable at quarterly intervals during life of annuitant, and that the duty payable under the Act should be deducted from such quarterly payments, and a similar deduction should be made from any funds appropriated to secure the annuities. In the will of John Moffatt, 3 A.J.R., 99.

Testator Dying Before Act No. 523 — Probate Granted Afterwards.]—B. died before the coming into operation of the Amending Act, No. 523, of the "Duties on the Estates of Deceased Persons Statute 1870;" but probate was not granted of his will till after that Act had come into force. Held, per Molesworth, J., that the Act No. 523, was in some degree retrospective as to persons who died between its commencement and its passing, but that his estate was not subject to the increased duty imposed by that Act. On appeal, Held that the estate was subject to the increased duty. On appeal to the Privy Council, Held, reversing the Supreme Court, that the duty payable under the "Duties on the Estates of Deceased Persons Statute 1870," having been directed by Sec. 10 of that Act to be deemed a debt of the testator to Her Majesty, accrued due at the moment of his death, at the rate prescribed by that Act, though the amount of such duty might have to be ascertained at a subsequent time. In re Bell, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 71, 87; L. R., 2 App. Cas. 560, sub. nom. Bell v. The Master in Equity of the Supreme Court of Victoria.

Held also, that the duty imposed by the "Duties on the Estates of Deceased Persons Statute 1870," is not the like English Probate Duty, a stamp duty payable upon the value of the property the subject of the probate when it is granted, but is more in the nature of a succession duty, payable whether probate be sought or not, on the value of an estate at the time of the testator's death. Bell v. the Master in Equity of the Supreme Court of Victoria, L. R., 2 App. Cas., 560.

Act No. 388, Sec. 3—Death of Testator Before the Act.]—P. made his will dated February 1864, and died January 1868, before Act No. 388 came into force. Administration c.t.a. was in May, 1877, granted to his estate. Held, reversing Molesworth, J., that no duty was payable under the Act. In re Powell, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 117.

Succession Duty—Effect of the "Administration Act 1872," and "Duties on the Estates of Deceased Persons Statute 1870."]—The "Administration Act 1872," has not a retrospective effect combined with the "Duties on the Estates of Deceased Persons Statute 1870," as to succession duty. In re Quinlan, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 17.

Upon What Property Payable—Act No. 388, Sec. 7, Clause 2.]—Under Clause 2 of Sec. 7 of the Act No. 388, duty is not payable on real estate which the testator had not the power to devise at his discretion. In the estate of Mater, 4 A.J.R., 7.

Upon What Property Payable—Act No. 388, Secs. 7 (Sub-Sec. 2,) 8 — Purchase-Money of Station in N.S.W. Secured by Mortgage and Collaterally by Promissory Notes Payable in Melbourne — Testator Domiciled in Victoria.]—A testator domiciled in Victoria sold a station in N.S.W. to F., the balance of the purchase-money being secured by a mortgage of the station, and collaterally by promissory notes payable in Melbourne, and lodged in a bank there. Held that the purchase-money secured by the promissory notes was property in respect of which, under Sec. 7, Sub-Sec. 2, the testator's estate was liable to pay duty. Regina v. Williamson, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 218; 3 A.L.T., 6.

Upon What Property Payable—Act No. 388, Sec. 7, Sub-Sec. 2—Lex Domicilii—Lex Loci.]—Per Privy Council.—Although the lex domicilii governs the foreign personal assets of a testator for the purpose of succession and enjoyment, yet those assets are for the purpose of legal representation, of collection and of administration, as distinguished from distribution amongst the successors, governed by the law of their own locality and not by the lex domicilii. B. died domiciled in Victoria, and possessing real and personal property in New South Wales and New Zealand. Held, by the Privy Council overruling the Full Court, that the statement to be made by the executor under Sub-Sec. 2 of Sec. 7, should be confined to the property which the probate entitles him to administer, i.e., what comes under his control by virtue of the Victorian Probate, and that duty was payable only upon such property. Blackwood v. the Queen, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 400; L.R. 8, App. Cas., 82.

Upon What Property Payable—Domicil — Personalty.]—B. was born in Ireland, but resided in Victoria for a considerable time acquiring property there, but died in Ireland, having been domiciled there for the last fourteen years of his life. It was sought to make B.'s estate pay duty upon £45,000 worth of personal property in Victoria. Held that his estate was not liable to pay such duty. In the will of Bagot, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 106; 3 A.L.T., 54.

Domicil—Master in Equity.]—The Master in Equity has power to and should decide questions of domicil on the materials brought before him. In the will of Phelps, 7 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 114.

Upon What Property Payable—Act No. 388, Secs. 2, 7, 12, 13, 24—Victorian Personalty of Person Domiciled Abroad.]—M. died in England, and domiciled there leaving certain personalty in Victoria. Held, dubitante curiâ that the balance of the Victorian assets over the debts is liable to duty under the Act No. 388. Regina v. Smith, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 404; 5 A.L.T., 124.

Finality of Master's Certificate—Secs. 12, 13.]—The certificate of the master is not final against the Crown as to the amount of the duty, and consequently cannot be final as to the balance upon which the duty is calculated, nor as to the items of which that balance is made up. S.C., 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 416.

Practice—Duty on Deceased Persons' Estates—Application to Sell—Act No. 427.]—Before the passing of the "Administration Act 1872," No. 427, which allows an executor to sell real estate of the testator in order to pay duty without an application to the Court, an application was before the Court for leave to sell, but was postponed, and after the passing of the Act an application for leave was made. Held that the application was unnecessary. In the will of Howey, 4 A.J.R., 6.

Insufficiency of Personal Estate to Pay Duty—Act No. 388, Sec. 10.]—The Court will not make an order for sale of the real estate under Sec. 10, in case of insufficiency of the personalty without notice to the persons beneficially interested in the real estate; but if there is an affidavit that such persons are out of the jurisdiction, an order will be made. In re Howie, 3 A.J.R., 127.

Power to Order Sale of Real Property—Act No. 388, Secs. 5, 9.]—Per Molesworth, J.—The Court has power, under Sec. 9, to order the sale of real property for the payment of duty, notwithstanding that an appeal to the Privy Council in respect of the amount of duty payable is pending. In re Bell, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 26.

Notice—Rules of November, 1876.]—Per Full Court—The Rules of November, 1876, are ultra vires, because they do not fix the length of notice after which an application should be made, under Sec. 9 of Act No. 388, and on this point an appeal against the above decision was allowed. Ibid.

Act No. 388, Secs. 10, 13, 23, 24—Intestate Leaving Children but No Widow—Additional Sum Found Due—Fund in Court—Whether Master in Equity a Necessary Party.]—Intestate died before Act No. 403 (Amending Act,) but after passing of Act No. 388. The defendant, as widow, obtained administration, and paid duty, as in case of an intestate leaving a widow but no children, to wit, half duty on her half share, and full duty on the other half. Afterwards sons of the intestate appeared, and a suit for administration was instituted by them in 1872, in which it was declared that defendant was not intestate's widow. Motion on behalf of Attorney-General and Master in Equity for half duty on half the share claimed by the alleged widow; there was in Court a sum of £2000, sufficient for payment of this extra duty. Held that under Sec. 24 of Act No. 388, the full rate was payable where intestate left children but no widow; that though under Secs. 10 and 13 the administrator or person paying duty is the person liable to pay the balance in case of too little being paid, yet Sec. 23 indicates that the previous part of the Act gave a remedy in rem direct, and not merely in personam; that the Master in Equity was not a necessary party; that this was virtually an application by a creditor to prove under a decree after a report and final decree, and as such would only be granted upon payment of costs. Graham v. Graham, 5 A.J.R., 100.

Practice—Act No. 388, Sec. 7—Service on Crown.]—Upon an application to the Court for its opinion where the Registrar was doubtful as to the amount payable, service upon the Crown is necessary. In the estate of Rutherford and Aird, 1 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 19.

Practice — Master Refusing Probate Without Order of Court.]—Where the Master refuses to grant probate except upon payment of duty without an order of the Court, the proper practice is to take out a rule nisi calling upon him to show cause, the Crown being served. In the will of Bagot, 7 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 106; 3 A.L.T., 54.

Mandamus to Master.]—The Supreme Court of Victoria has power to make an order in the nature of a mandamus upon the Master in Equity in relation to the duties under Act No. 388, whether in his capacity as an officer of the Court or as a revenue officer responsible to the Court. Armytage v. Wilkinson, L.R., 3 App. Cas., 355.

Rule Nisi Calling on Master to Issue Probate Without Payment of Duty—Fresh Evidence—Reference Back to Master.]—On a rule nisi calling on the Master in Equity to show cause why probate should not be issued without paying duty on personalty of the deceased situated outside Victoria, on the ground that the domicil of the deceased was not Victoria, evidence was adduced before the Court which was not brought before the Master, and the Court thereupon ordered a reference back to the Master for reconsideration on such additional evidence as might be adduced on either side. In the will of Peters, 8 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 30; 4 A.L.T., 64.

EASEMENTS.

In Respect of Adjoining Lands and Houses—Flow of Drainage—Nuisance.]—To a declaration in an action for trespass, among other pleas there was pleaded an agreement between former owner of plaintiff's land and former owner of defendant's land, by which it was agreed that water from defendant's land should flow over plaintiff's land. A verdict was entered for defendant, but a rule nisi to enter a verdict for plaintiff was applied for on the ground that the pleas were not proved, as it appeared that houses from which water flowed were erected after the agreement. Held that the agreement was for water to flow from the houses as they then existed, and that did not entitle defendant to the flow of water from houses subsequently erected. Mitchell v. Burns, 3 A.J.R., 113.

A license to work puddling mills does not, under Sec. 15 of the "Waterworks Statute," No. 288, confer an easement as regards flow of sludge over Crown lands. Regina v. M'Intyre, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 25, post under WATER, WATER COMPANY, &c.

By Express Agreement—Reversioner—Obstruction by Tenant—Merger.]—Action by administratrix of the lessor against the lessees for injury to the reversion by obstructing a right of way appurtenant to the demised premises. The lease was executed after the obstruction (a permanent one) was erected, and granted the land, "together with all ways, &c." Held that the plaintiff was entitled to maintain her action during the continuance of the lease; that the demise of the way negatived the presumption that landlord in granting a lease of a way on which the obstruction existed intended to grant a licence for its continuance; that the fact of the unity of the defendants' title as owner of the servient tenement with their interest as owners of the dominant only suspended the easement during the lease quoad the defendants, and did not extinguish it; that the acceptance by a wrongdoer of a lease of property in respect of which the lessor had a previously existing cause of action at the time of the lease is not a release of that cause of action, and no bar to the Statute of Limitations, if pleaded. M'Carthy v. Cunningham. 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 59.

Extinction by Unity of Possession—Revivor—Registration.]—An easement was created which was afterwards destroyed by unity of possession of the dominant and servient tenements. M., the owner of the two tenements, conveyed the dominant tenement to N., who, in turn, conveyed to D. by a deed which described it as "bounded on the south by a right-of-way 12 feet wide reserved." Held that such reference to the right-of-way was a sufficient recognition of it in D.'s favour so as to revive it and give D. a right to it. Semble, per Higinbotham, J., a registered memorial of the deed, following the deed in mentioning the right-of-way as a boundary, is sufficient registration. Cuvet v. Davis, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 390.

Where in a grant the land granted was described as "bounded on the west by another road and reserve to the Port Philip Bay," the grantee was held to have a right to insist against the grantor, that as between them the grant gave a right to the use of the road and reserve as a highway, whether it was so in fact or not. Webb v. Were, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 28.

Where in a grant the land granted was described as "bounded on the west by a public promenade extending in width to the high-water mark of Port Philip Bay," the grantor was held debarred from preventing the use by the grantee of the public promenade as a promenade. Ibid.

A deed granting in general words "all ways, &c.," belonging or appertaining to the land granted does not create a right-of-way. Blyth v. Parlon, 2 V.R. (E.,) 111; 2 A.J.R., 75. See S.C., ante column 352. Under DEED.

Easements under the "Transfer of Land Statute."]—See cases post under TRANSFER OF LAND—Easements.

Easements under Leases under Sec. 45 of "Land Act 1869."]—The Governor has no power, under Sec. 45, to grant leases of Crown lands with an easement over adjoining Crown lands, whether covered or not with water in the course of a river, or with a right to take water from such river. Brooks v. The Queen, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 100, 109; 5 A.L.T., 199.

Creation of Public Easement.]—There is no authority to show that a public easement other than a right-of-way can be created simply by the owner dedicating the land without deed, and the public accepting it. Webb v. Were, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 28. For facts see S.C., post under WAY—Highway—General Principles.

Right-of-way Passing Under Will.]—J., a testator, was owner of a block of land, and devised to his son "the yard and premises, together with the buildings erected thereon, now in his possession and occupation absolutely;" and devised to his daughter for life "my land and premises in Percy-street, together with shop and iron store and other buildings erected thereon." There was evidence that the testator had used during his life a strip of land, being part of the portion in his son's occupation as a right-of-way to the iron store. Held that under the will the daughter of necessity had the same right-of-way over the strip of land which the testator had exercised during his lifetime. Campbell v. Jarrett, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 137; 3 A.L.T., 49.

EDUCATION.

"Common Schools Act," No. 149, Sec. 10—Regulation by Board of Education—Ultra Virss.]—Sec. 10 of the Act provides that "No new school, not being an infant school, shall receive aid from the consolidated revenue which shall be established within two miles of a school already receiving aid," unless under certain circumstances which did not happen in the case. The board framed a regulation—"The existence in any locality of a school not vested in the board shall not be regarded as a hindrance to the establishment of a vested school in that locality, should such be applied for, although the granting of aid by the board to such school should, according to Sec. 10 of Act No. 149 necessitate the withdrawal of aid from the non-vested school." Held that the regulation was entirely opposed to the provisions of Sec. 10, and was ultra vires. Bourke v. the Board of Education, 3 V.R. (L.,) 148; 3 A.J.R., 67.

Dismissal of Teacher — Sanction of Board of Education—"Common Schools Act" (Act No. 149,) Sec. 14.]—The committee of a common school engaged a teacher to teach till his employment should be determined by one month's notice in writing. At the foot of the agreement was written Sec. 14 of the "Common Schools Act," No. 149, providing that no teacher should be dismissed without the sanction of the Board of Education. The committee gave the teacher a month's notice, but the Board refused to sanction his dismissal, and the committee disconnected the school from the Board. Held that the contract was with the committee, and that the reference to the section at the foot of the agreement formed no part of it, but only showed the relations of the committee with the Board, and that the teacher was only entitled to one month's notice, or one month's salary on dismissal without notice. O'Dowd v. Dogherty, 4 A.J.R., 81.

Non-attendance at School—Certificate of Teacher—Parentage of Child—"Education Act Amendment Act 1876," Sec. 8.]—A certificate under the "Education Act Amendment Act 1876," No. 541, Sec. 8, of a head teacher, that a child has not been sent to school by its parents, is evidence only of what the Act requires it to contain, not of the parentage of the child. Regina v. Learmonth, ex parte McKay, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 162.

Board of Education—Application of Funds—Mandamus—"Common Schools Act," No. 149, Sec. 6, iv.]—In re Board of Education, ex parte Stevenson, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 133, see post under MANDAMUS.

EJECTMENT.

Venue.]—The venue in ejectment is local, notwithstanding Act 19 Vic., No. 19, Secs. 67 and 235. Fairbairn v. Monaghan, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 109.

Demand of Possession—When Necessary.]—R. entered into possession of land under a contract with G. Subsequently G. mortgaged the land to a bank, who obtained a certificate of title to part, and had their mortgage registered. The bank, without giving notice to R., brought ejectment against him and succeeded. On rule nisi to enter a verdict for R., Held that the bank was bound to give R. notice, both as to the land comprised in the certificate and that not comprised in it before they could succeed in ejectment, and a nonsuit entered. Colonial Bank v. Roache, 1 V.R. (L.,) 165; 1 A.J.R., 136.

Who May Maintain.]—H. and P. brought ejectment for certain lands against S. H. and P. claimed under a series of mortgages, the first from one G. to C., the second from G. and C. to H., who assigned it to P. Subsequently to the mortgages G. contracted to sell the land to S., who took possession, and afterwards all his interest in the land was sold at a Sheriff's sale, under a fi. fa. to P. The mortgage from G. to C. contained after the habendum the words "subject nevertheless to a certain indenture of mortgage," dated some years prior to the mortgage from G. to C., "and made between G. and G. G. of the one part, and R. of the other part, whereby a portion of the hereditaments hereinbefore described were conveyed and assured to the said R. as security," &c. The mortgage to R. was not produced at the trial, and there was no proof whether the land included in it formed the subject of the action or not. It was submitted that the mortgage from G. to C., by referring to the mortgage to R., showed that the legal estate was outstanding in R., and that P. could not maintain the action. For P. it was submitted that the Sheriff's sale gave him a good title as against S., though it might not be good as against others. Held that P. was entitled to all the land not included in the mortgage to R.; but, that there being no evidence of what land was so included, P. should be nonsuited on S. undertaking to give up the land not included in the mortgage to R. Haggetton v. Southern, 1 A.J.R., 165.

By Heir-at-Law—"Administration Act," No. 427, Sec. 6.]—The plaintiff claimed, as heiress-at-law of an intestate who died in 1852, and administration of the estate had not been granted. Held that, until administration is taken out, the legal estate vests in the heir-at-law, subject to its being divested on grant of administration being made to another person. Larkin v. Drysdale, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 164.

By Married Woman Having Separate Estate—Husband Need Not be Joined—Land Acquired Since Act No. 384 — Marriage Before the Act.] — Somerville v. M'Donald, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 206, post under HUSBAND AND WIFE — Wife's Rights, &c. — Separate Estate—Actions, &c., in Respect of.

By Holder of Miners' Rights — Such Holder's Interest in Claim Not Sufficient to Support Ejectment.]—Jennings v. Kinsella, 1 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 47, post under MINING — Interests in Mines—Claim—Generally.

Who May Maintain—Parties Entitled.]—On 31st August, 1866, an agreement was entered into by M., as agent for "the parties entitled" to let to B. and McD. a certain property, "from the 1st of October next ensuing until the parties entitled to the said premises, their attorney, or agent, shall require the said premises for the purpose of selling or attempting to sell the same," then followed a provision as to notice—"and such notice shall thereupon be a termination of the tenancy created hereunder," and the notice was only to be given when the premises were required for the purpose of selling or attempting to sell them; but the notice when given was to be absolute. The lessees were to expend a certain sum in repairs, and to pay rent till they received notice to quit; and in case of notice being given during a quarter, a proportionate amount of the rent till the expiration of the tenancy. Notice was given during a quarter by persons describing themselves as the "parties entitled," and by M. The land was settled by will on the "parties entitled," and M. was receiver by order of the Supreme Court. At the trial a verdict was returned for the plaintiffs (parties entitled,) but a nonsuit was moved for on the grounds that notice to quit was not given by the "parties entitled;" that the notice should have been a six months' notice, ending with the period at which the tenancy commenced, and that, after the expiration of the term, and before notice, an infant interested in the premises died, and the tenancy as to his share still existed, and no actual ouster was proved. Held that as the tenancy was a tenancy at will on the terms of the agreement, and the words, "the parties entitled," having been advisedly inserted instead of "landlord," the plaintiffs had practically proved their title, and rule for a nonsuit discharged. Bowman v. Carnaby, 1 A.J.R., 172.

Who May Maintain—Administrator of Crown Grantee.]—An administrator appointed under the "Administration Act 1872," of a person who died before that Act, and in whose name a Crown grant has been issued after his death, cannot maintain ejectment in respect of the land comprised in the grant, since he took only such title as the intestate had, and in this case he had not the fee simple. Semble, that the legal estate was in the heir-at-law. Edmondson v. Macan, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 422.

Title of Plaintiff—Certificate of Title—Transfer of Land Statute, Sec. 159.]—The title of a plaintiff in ejectment, which is based on a certificate of title to a lease under the "Amending Land Act 1865," is not affected as to its conclusive character as evidence for the plaintiff, by Sec. 159 of the "Transfer of Land Statute;" and a plaintiff relying on such certificate alone, without going into evidence prior to the title, cannot be nonsuited. Miller v. Moresey, 2 V.R. (L.,) 193; 2 A.J.R., 115.

Necessary Title to Maintain—Registered Proprietor under Transfer of Land Statute but Without Legal Estate.]—M., an uncertificated insolvent, became lessee of an allotment under part II. of the "Land Act 1865." His official assignee was registered as proprietor under a Judge's order, made under Sec. 118 of the "Transfer of Land Statute," but not under the "Land Act 1865." The assignee sold and transferred to the plaintiff, who obtained a certificate of title, and had the transfer registered under Sec. 22 of the "Land Act 1865." In ejectment by the plaintiffs against M., plaintiff put in his certificate of title, and also the Judge's order and lease, with endorsement of registration of transfer under the "Land Act." Held, that if plaintiff had rested his case merely on the certificate of title, he would have succeeded, but that since he had chosen to go further and produce evidence which showed that he had not the legal estate, but that it was in somebody else, he must be nonsuited. Ibid.

Title—Proving Defendant's Possession.]—Where a defendant appeared to defend an action of ejectment, and the plaintiff gave as evidence of title a certificate of title under Act No. 301, Held that the plaintiff need not prove defendant's possession. Vallence v. Condon, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 83.

Title of Plaintiff—Certificate of Title Under Act No. 140.]—An owner of land, out of possession who receives a certificate of title under the Act No. 140, subject to rights subsisting under any adverse possession, receives evidence of a good title until those rights are proved. Murphy v. Michel, 4 W.W. & a'B. (L.,) 13. For facts see S.C., post under LIMITATIONS STATUTES OF—Lands, &c.

Proof of Title.]—A duplicate copy of a certificate of title under the "Transfer of Land Statute," No. 301, is admissible as primâ facie evidence of title in ejectment. Wilkinson v. Brown, 1 V.R. (L.,) 86; 1 A.J.R., 88.

Statutory Title—Possession by Defendant as Caretaker.]—In ejectment where the plaintiff has a good conveyancing title, possession by the defendant for the statutory period as a mere caretaker will afford no defence. M'Cracken v. Woods, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 222.

In County Court—Title of Plaintiff—Mortgagee.]—A mortgagee having an absolute transfer by a certificate of title under the "Transfer of Land Statute," with a defeasance in a separate document, the two together constituting a mortgage, must, under Order 3, Rules 90 and 96 of the "County Court Rules," in suing for ejectment in the County Court, state his title in the plaint summons as mortgagee, and not as holder in fee. Delaney v. Sandhurst Building Society. 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 270.

Annuity Deed—Estate Conveyed.]—Rule nisi for a nonsuit discharged, where in an action for ejectment upon an annuity deed the defendant attempted to show that the deed, which contained covenants for payment which were broken, conveyed no estate to support the action. Gillard v. Watson, 3 A.J.R., 29.

Title—How it may be Proved—Several Lines of Proof.]—Plaintiffs in ejectment, in support of their title, proved a Crown grant to W., but no conveyance of any estate from W. to them. They also proved possession by one plaintiff, T., and assurances from T. to the other. Plaintiffs obtained a verdict, and defendant obtained a rule nisi for a nonsuit. Held, that inconsistency, not multiplicity, forms the test by which a plaintiff's several modes of proof may or may not be deemed admissible; that the grant to W. was not inconsistent with the presumption of seisin arising from the possession of one of the plaintiffs, and rule discharged. Thurlow v. Perks, 1 W. W. & a'B. (L.,) 142.

Plaintiff's Title—Splitting Case.]—A plaintiff does not split his case by relying on his certificate of title, and afterwards bringing forward evidence to rebut a case made by the defendant that the certificate is subject to the defendant's occupation by virtue of the provisions of the "Transfer of Land Statute," or of the "Mining Statute 1865," since the plaintiff does not by his rebutting evidence attempt to improve the case he had made by the production of his certificate, but answers the case put forward by the defendant. Munro v. Sutherland, 4 A.J.R., 166.

Adverse Possession — Interruption of such Possession.]—B. brought an action of ejectment, relying on a certificate under Act No. 301. H. set up as a defence adverse possession for more han fifteen years. It was proved that S., at tenant of B's., used the land fourteen years before action brought. B. recovered a verdict. On rule nisi for a new trial, held that S.'s use might be of right or a trespass, and it was open for jury to say in what light they regarded it. Rule refused. Bicknell v. Heymanson, 3 A.J.R., 22.

Adverse Possession—Fence.]—To prove adverse possession, it must be shown that there has been a continuation of acts apparently of trespass, but with a desire and intention to complete the inchoate title, affording evidence that the plaintiff claiming under a documentary title was not in possession. Plaintiff, in ejectment, launched his case on a certificate of title. Defendant proved occupation by a stranger more than twenty years ago, the erection of a fence by that person, the continuation of the fence until removed, and the erection of a new one in the same position; but then a long interval, during which no occupation was proved. Held that such fence, in the absence of occupation, was not evidence of continuous possession, and that defendant had not established adverse possession. Grave v. Wharton, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 97.

Inference to be Drawn from Fence Across Boundary—Misdirection.]—Plaintiffs held a certificate of title for an allotment of land, including the portion in dispute. Defendant's mother owned an adjoining allotment, which she had purchased a few years before. The dispute was as to the right to a small strip of ground on the boundaries of the two allotments, plaintiffs claiming the ground under the certificate of title, and defendant as under adverse possession for more than fifteen years. A fence was proved to have been in existence within the fifteen years, over a portion of the property which marked the boundary between the two allotments. The County Court Judge told the jury that they might infer that it had been continued across the boundary between the two allotments, and the jury gave a verdict for the plaintiffs. On appeal, Held that the direction was wrong, and appeal allowed. Hall v. Warburton, 6 A.L.T., 12.

For meaning of words "adverse possession," in Sec. 49 of Act No. 301, see cases under TRANSFER OF LAND (STATUTORY.)

New Trial—When Granted.]—In an action of ejectment the defendants proved a conveyance for value from plaintiff's donor, and the plaintiff was nonsuited. Upon the subsequent discovery that defendants' deeds did not cover the whole land, a new trial was granted. Hodgson v. Wellwood, 4 A.J.R., 82.

Summary Procedure by Warrant of Justices—When Applicable.]—The summary procedure for ejectment by warrant of justices under Secs. 90 and 91 of the "Landlord and Tenant Statute 1864," is applicable at the expiration of a term of seven years, during the whole of which the tenant has occupied under a lease, which was void as being executed by an agent not authorised thereto in writing, for no notice to quit is necessary. Holmes v. North, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 84.

One Defendant not Appearing—"Common Law Procedure Statute," Sec. 160.]—In an action for ejectment, one defendant appeared and defended, but the other defendant did not appear; the plaintiff failed to prove his title. Held that plaintiff could not, under Sec. 160, enter a verdict as against the non-appearing defendant. Welsh v. Hackett, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 155.

Plaintiff in Ejectment put into Possession—Disseisin—Remedy.]—Where a plaintiff in ejectment obtains judgment, and is put into possession by the Sheriff, and the defendant subsequently disseises him, the proper course for the plaintiff to pursue is to obtain a rule requiring the defendant to show cause why he should not restore the land, or, in default, be attached. M'Bride v. M'Crone, 3 A.L.T., 101.

Action for—Writ—Several Parcels.]—Several parcels of land, held under distinct titles, may be joined in one writ of ejectment. Sec. 120 of the "Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," does not prohibit such a joinder, but the joinder of other kinds of actions with that of ejectment, and the causes of action in ejectment for two different pieces of land are not causes of action of a different kind. Stewart v. Bolton, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 305; 4 A.L.T., 79.

Tenancy at Will, Defence of—How Set up.]—If, in an action of ejectment, the plaintiff relies on certificates of title, which he producee, and the defendant sets up as a defence a tenancy at will, and absence of any demand of possession, he must show distinctly that such tenancy at will has been created. Ibid.

Amendment of Writ of Habere Nunc pro tunc—Refused in Absence of Other Party.]—Neil v. Whelan, 5 A.J.R., 77, post under PRACTICE AT LAW—Amendment.

Forfeiture of Lease—Act No. 274, Sec. 181—Action for Mesne Profits.]—After the determination of a tenancy by forfeiture through breach of covenants, mesne profits may, under Sec. 181, be recovered in the action of ejectment. Hume v. Dodgshun, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 83.

1. JURISDICTION.

Allowance of Debts by Court of Mines in the Winding-Up of a Mining Company—No Appeal.]—Where the Judge of a district Court of Mines had allowed proof of debts by shareholders in the winding-up of a mining company, and there was no appeal from such decision, Held that a Court of Equity had no jurisdiction to review such allowance of proof. Smith v. Seal, 3 A.J.R., 8.

Courts of Mines—Injunction—Act No. 291, Sec. 101—"Transfer of Land Statute"—Cancellation of Certificate of Title.]—The Supreme Court, in its equitable jurisdiction, has concurrent jurisdiction with the Courts of Mines, but will not readily interfere to restrain proceedings in the Courts of Mines unless it can grant the other relief prayed in the Bill, independently of the injunction. The Supreme Court, in its equitable jurisdiction, has no jurisdiction to order certificates of title to be cancelled, the proper relief being to order the inequitable holders to transfer. Gunn v. Harvey, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 111.

For facts, see MINING—Jurisdiction of Court of Mines.

Illegal Execution Sale.]—Certain mining plant was sold under a distress warrant at great undervalue, and, as alleged, made in collusion with the officer selling, after tender to him of the money recovered, and at the sale certain fixtures not properly saleable were sold. At the hearing the charge of collusion was dropped. Held that the remedy, if any, in respect of the illegality of the sale was at law and not in equity; that the fact of a sale of such plant in a locality where it could not be replaced without great expense and delay was no ground for equitable relief. Perkins v. Willcock, 2 V.R. (E.,) 222; 2 A.J.R., 127.

Partnership — Fraudulent Misrepresentation — Deceit.]—Courts of Equity have concurrent jurisdiction with Courts of Common Law as to deceit, especially where measuring damages might involve complicated calculations. In a partnership where transactions were terminated by a sale by one partner to the other of his share therein, the partner purchasing filed a bill to have the sale set aside and the partnership revived on the ground that he was induced to enter into the purchase through the fraudulent misrepresentations of the other partner (defendant) as to value. On demurrer for want of equity, Held by the Full Court, affirming Molesworth, J., that there was equity to maintain the suit. Longstaff v. Keogh, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 175.

Costs in Ejectment Suit—Injunction—Variation of Decree.]—Where A., on obtaining a decree in an equity suit declaring B. a trustee for him, obtained as incidental relief an injunction restraining proceedings under a judgment in ejectment obtained by B. for recovery of land, on motion to vary decree by inserting words in decree declaring that B. was not restrained in proceeding for his costs in ejectment, Held that the alteration was unnecessary, the question of costs being left to the Court of Law by the form of the decree. Hunniford v. Horwood, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 250; 1 A.L.T., 65.

Administrator of Personalty—Rents of Realty—Remedy at Law.]—A creditor, in 1865, took out administration to the personalty of an intestate, who died in 1858, and entered into possession of a portion of the real estate, receiving the rents therefrom. The intestate's heir-at-law, in 1881, brought a suit for conveyance of real estate, and for an account of rents and profits, and also administration accounts of personalty. At the hearing the bill was amended by striking out relief as to personalty, owing to a difficulty arising about want of parties, the other next of kin. Held that plaintiff claiming under a legal title, had a complete remedy at law, and in the absence of complication of accounts, a Court of Equity would not grant relief. Bill dismissed. M'Vea v. Aitken, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 178; 3 A.L.T., 71.

"Local Government Act 1874," No. 506, Sec. 519.]—Sec. 519 of the "Local Government Act 1874," which gives the minister of the Crown, as defined by the Act, power to settle disputes enumerated in that section, gives a concurrent remedy only, by reference to the minister, and does not oust the jurisdiction in equity. Attorney-General v. Shire of Wimmera, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 24; 1 A.L.T., 125.

Accounts Against Trustee—Summary Relief under Act 7 Vic., No. 19.]—The summary relief granted by 7 Vic, No. 19, Sec. 9, to a debtor assigning his property to trustees in trust for creditors against the trustee for accounts, does not oust the jurisdiction of the Court; but where a plaintiff has commenced proceedings under the summary procedure and abandoned them, he must show sufficient grounds for such abandonment before seeking relief in equity. Arthur v. Moore, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 207; 1 A.L.T., 29.

Suit by Mortgagees for Sale of Mortgaged Lands, and Declaration that they might rank as Specialty Creditors of Intestate Mortgagor for Deficiency—Sequestration of Estate pending Suit by Administration—Supreme Court in Equity not Deprived of Jurisdiction by 5 Vic., No. 17.]—See Australian Trust Company v. Webster, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 148; Fairnbairn v. Clarke, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 333, post under INSOLVENCY—Effect of.

Insolvent Estate—Overplus.]—The Court sitting in Equity has no jurisdiction to made an order dealing with the overplus of an insolvent's estate after the creditors have been paid in full. An application should be made to the Court of Insolvency. Cohen v. Lintz, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 222; 6 A.L.T., 63.

A single Judge sitting in Equity, ecclesiastical jurisdiction and insolvency only, has no jurisdiction to made an order in a common law action. Farie v. Frost, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 56.

A single Judge sitting in Equity has no jurisdiction to discharge a prisoner from custody under an attachment for contempt granted by the Full Court in banco at law. In re Burton, 3 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 8.

A single Judge in Equity is not bound by a decision of the Court in banco on a matter of law. Dallimore v. The Queen, 3 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 18.

Primary Judge.]—Semble, The Primary Judge in Equity has power to hear a motion to turn over a prisoner in the Sheriff's custody, on a Thursday, although the Equity Appeal Court be sitting. Sturgeon v. Murray, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 41.

Primary Judge.]—Quære, whether the Primary Judge in Equity is bound by a prior decision of the Court in Banco at law. Per Higinbotham, J. (Primary Judge)—He is. But semble, per Molesworth, J. (Full Court)—He is not. Chun Goon v. Reform Gold Mining Company, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 128, 138, 139, 145; 3 A.L.T., 81.

Power of Primary Judge to Rescind Order of Full Court.]—Although the Full Court may have made an order on appeal, the Primary Judge has power to deal with subsequent proceedings and motions in the cause upon matters subsequently arising, in a way not inconsistent with its orders; and it is specially convenient that he should have such power, because the Full Court sits at long intervals. Where, therefore, in an interlocutory application in a cause the Full Court sent issues of fact to a jury, and directed the impounding of the proceeds of certain mines, but mentioned no time for the determination of the order, the Primary Judge granted an application, on motion by the successful party, to rescind so much of the order as related to the impounding of proceeds. Learmonth v. Bailey, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 85.

Interpleader—Jurisdiction at Common Law under "Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," No. 274, Sec. 189.]—The established jurisdiction of the Court in Equity to make interpleader orders, is not ousted by a similar jurisdiction having been conferred upon the Court at common Law by the "Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," Sec. 189. Ham v. Benjamin, 4 A.J.R., 184.

Jurisdiction — Salvage Claims — Account.]—Where one of the co-owners of a derelict cargo recovered the greater part of it and sold it, and a suit was brought for an account deducting costs and expenses, Held that such a case came within the equitable jurisdiction of the Court as one for arranging contributions as in cases of average. Melhuish v. Miller, 3 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 61, 66.

For facts see S.C. under SHIPPING—Salvage and Towage.

Jurisdiction in Cases of Mistake.]—See MISTAKE.

Execution of Trusts—Estate Claimed by Adverse Possession.]—Per Molesworth, J., The Court will not in a suit for the execution of trusts, determine the validity of a claim to part of the estate by adverse possession, but will leave the trustees of the will to proceed by ejectment. *Tierney v. 1. BY MATTER OF RECORD.

By Decree in Previous Suit.]—See Taylor v. Southwood, ante column 6.

Minutes of Consent Decree.]—The K. Company sued the B. Company in a Court of Mines for a piece of auriferous land, and to restrain registration thereof, and obtained an interim injunction. Pending the suit the G. Company sued both companies for the same land, and obtained an injunction against both. Pending the second suit the two defendant companies appointed deputies to make a compromise in the first suit. The deputies signed a document reciting their appointment and its object, and agreeing to end the suit, and that each company should take half the land in manner to be pointed out and approved by their respective surveyors, the ratification of each company's right to the ground so divided to be confirmed by a decree of the Court of Mines. On this document the solicitors of the companies prepared a draft consent decree, and obtained a plan of the land from the G. Company. Both parties waived the employment of surveyors to mark the dividing line, and it was marked by the solicitors, with their approval, and in the presence of some of them, on the plan. On the plan the land was bounded by two concentric circles and two common radii thereof, cutting off common segments thereof; and the line of division was drawn midway between the other two. The K. Company subsequently repudiated the consent decree, alleging that the plan upon which it was based was erroneous in a very material particular. At the hearing of the second suit, all parties signed a written consent that the Court of Mines, and in case of appeal, the Appeal Court, should first decide whether the B. and K. companies were bound by the proposed consent decree, and the plan referred to by it. The Court of Mines held that the contract would have been effectually carried out by the decree, which was binding, and must be confirmed. The K. Company appealed. Held that the document in question was no more than minutes of a decree, subject to alteration by either party; that the land was not equally divided between the parties by the arrangement actually made; and the minutes of decree not carrying out the contract, were not finally binding; and appeal allowed. Nicholas v. James, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 255.

Certificate of Justices—Subsequent Proceedings in County Court—Act No. 267, Sec. 107.]—Where R. sued F. before Justices and they dismissed the case, R. subsequently sued F. in the County Court. The certificate of dismissal was produced as a bar to the action, but the Judge overruled that objection, and heard the case. Held that he was right; that by Sec. 107 of Act No. 267, a certificate of Justices is only a bar to Courts of co-ordinate jurisdiction, and not to Courts of superior jurisdiction. Rule nisi for a prohibition discharged. Regina v. Skinner, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 39.

Certificate by Justices of Dismissal of Complaint—Act No. 267, Sec. 107.]—A complaint had been dismissed by justices, and a plaint was issued to a County County Judge to hear the same cause, and the Judge, on receiving the certificate of dismissal, decided that he could not hear the case. Held that under Sec. 107 of Act No. 267, such certificate of dismissal was only a bar to a second proceeding in petty sessions for the same cause of complaint. Rule absolute for a mandamus. Regina v. Trench, ex parte Chambers, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 55; 4 A.L.T., 163.

Administration Suit—Decree in Previous Probate Suit.]—A decree for the plaintiff in a suit in the probate jurisdiction, seeking to set aside a rule to administer, and obtain one for himself, and in which his relationship is in issue, is conclusive as to the plaintiff's right as against the same defendant in a suit in equity for a distributive share. Dryden v. Dryden, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 74.

Applicant for Rule to Administer—Affidavit that Lands Were a Part of Estate.]—Semble, that where a person, seeking to obtain a rule to administer, swears that certain lands belong to the estate, he is debarred from setting up a continuous possession in himself as beneficial owner. Ibid.

But an inquiry was directed by the Full Court, on appeal, as to the ownership of the land. Ibid, p. 153.

Per Molesworth, J., "I know of no authority for saying that if a person, acting by the direction of another or a corporation, commits a trespass on land, and the owner brings an action against him, which he defends under the advice and direction of his employer, and is beaten, that the employer should be estopped by the result as if made a defendant, although it should operate as very strong evidence." Park Company v. South Hustler's Reserve Company, 9 V.L.R. (M.,) 4; 4 A.L.T., 135.

By Adjudication of Warden in Proceedings Between Other Parties—Res inter alios acts.]—Critchley v. Graham, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 211, post under MINING—Interests in Mines—Claim—Effect of Forfeiture, &c.

By Decree.]—Where M. and H. concluded an arrangement as to land selected by M. which the Court held to be a mortgage, and subsequently to this arrangement, M. being indebted to another person, all his interest was sold under a fi. fa. to B., and B. brought a suit, B. v. H., to redeem H., which was dismissed, and B. subsequently assigned his interest to M., Held that the decision in the suit, B. v. H., was no bar to M.'s right to redeem, B. having subsequently assigned to M. Murphy v. Mitchell, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 194.

And see cases post under JUDGMENT—Conclusiveness of and Estoppel by.

Defendant Putting in Further Answer—Bound by First.]— A defendant mortgagee (a bank) by its answer in support of a plea, denied that a sale, impeached by the bill, was made by virtue of the power of sale in the mortgage. Upon argument of the plea, it was ultimately ordered that the benefit of the plea be saved to the hearing. Defendant put in a further answer, claiming that the sale should be deemed an execution of the power of sale in the mortgage. Held, at the hearing, that the defendant bank having disclaimed any such defence in its answer accompanying the plea, could not rely upon it. Brougham v. Melbourne Banking Corporation, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 214, 226; 2 A.L.T., 81, 84.

Decree in Equity Suit in County Court—Dismissing Plaint for Specific Performance.]—A decree in the County Court dismissing a plaint for specific performance of a contract for the purchase of land, which plaint alleged the agreement for sale, payment of the purchase-money, delivery of possession to, and expenditure of money on the land by the plaintiff, is an estoppel to the plaintiff's setting up such agreement, payment of money, delivery of possession and expenditure on the land, as a defence to a subsequent action against him for trespass to the land in question. Marks v. Aspinall, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 116; 4 A.L.T., 2.

Per Stawell, C.J.—All the reasons given for a judgment are not necessarily so much a part of the decision as to amount to an estoppel on the points referred to in those reasons. But, if the Judge finds that certain facts exist, every one of which separately may be necessary to his decision, his decision may then operate as an estoppel on each of such facts. Ibid.

Plea of—Admissibility of Evidence When Issue of Facts Taken.]—A judgment in the County Court, in a suit for specific performance of an alleged contract for the sale of land, was recorded simply as "suit dismissed." Such judgment was pleaded as an estoppel in another action to recover money alleged to have been paid under such contract, and issue of fact was taken on such plea. Held that evidence was admissible to show on what grounds the Judge of the County Court had dismissed the suit. Aspinall v. Marks; Marks v. Aspinall, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 217.

2. By Deed.

N.G., R.G. and J.W., by deed, February, 1860, assigned all their property to trustees in trust for creditors. In this deed the parties were described as "N.G., R.G., and J.W., carrying on business at Geelong, in co-partnership under the style of N. and R.G. and Co., and the said N.G. and R.G., carrying on at Melbourne a separate business under the style of N. and R.G., of the first part." In the schedule to the deed there was a column headed "Estate;" and in this column, opposite each creditor's name, was inserted either N. and R.G. and Co., or N. and R.G. In a suit to administer the trusts of the deed, the Master certified, that in the business of a certain railway contract, N.G., R.G. and J.W. carried on such business at Geelong under the style of N. and R.G. and Co., and in Melbourne under the style of N. and R.G., and that certain debts set out in the first schedule of the report were respectively contracted in relation to the contract. Upon exceptions, the most material being that the two firms of N. and R.G. and Co., and N. and R.G. were separate and distinct firms, Held, by Molesworth, J., that the schedule did not operate by way of estoppel, so that it could not be contradicted as to the nature of the claims of the several creditors, but that the deed afforded strong evidence that the firms were distinct; that the evidence before the Master supported this view, and exception allowed. Held, by the Full Court, that no part of the deed bearing on the question was so clearly and distinctly the words of a person executing as to amount to an estoppel; but that the deed afforded evidence of an admission which was more than outweighed by the other evidence, and that as regarded the creditors generally, there was only one firm. Appeal allowed, and exception overruled. Heape v. Hawthorne, 2 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 76.

At Law and in Equity—Effect of Recitals.]—Where a marriage settlement recited an agreement by the fathers to settle each £500 on the marriage, and then recited the payment, which was not in fact made, in a suit by the trustees of the settlement against the executors of one of the fathers to recover his contribution, Held that, though the only evidence to satisfy the "Statute of Frauds" was the deed itself, and as it contained an assertion of the fulfilment of the agreement, its parts could not be separated at law, so as to insist upon the first and deny the second, coupling the Statute with the estoppel of the deed; yet that in equity relief could be granted, and that the trustees, by executing the deed, made themselves responsible to the cestuis que trustent for the £1000; and that since the deceased would be guilty of a fraud if he did not indemnify them, his executors should pay the deceased's share out of his estate. Gordon v. Murphy, 4 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 120.

Recital in Bond—Crown not Estopped by.]—The Secretary of the Board of Agriculture being required to give a bond for the faithful discharge of his duties, gave one to the Queen, reciting that he had been appointed to a certain office "in the service of the Government of Victoria." On a petition by the secretary against the Queen for a retiring allowance, under Sec. 40 of the "Civil Service Act," No. 160, Held that the Crown was not concluded by the recital in the bond, or by the fact that the security was given to the Crown instead of to the Board, the secretary's employer. Matson v. The Queen, 2 V.R. (L.,) 233; 3 A.J.R., 27.

Surrendering Interest in Lease by Dissolution of Partnership.]—W., who was in possession of land under a lease, entered into partnership, and by the deed of partnership the land was declared to be partnership property. By the terms of dissolution of the partnership, which was dissolved during the currency of the lease, the assets devolved on a third partner, W. declaring to an incoming partner that he had no further interest in the partnership property. In an action for ejectment by W. against an assignee of his former partners, Held that the deed of partnership, the terms of the dissolution, and the letter did not estop W. from claiming under the lease. Wood v. Hutchings, 2 A.J.R., 58.

Recital that Grantor was Seised in Fee Simple in a Conveyance Upon Trust.]—G., by a deed of January, 1857, conveyed land to S. in fee. By a deed of July, 1857, which recited that G. was seised in fee, and to which S. was an executing party, G. conveyed to T. upon trust for S.'s wife for life, and by a deed of December, 1863, T. conveyed, with the consent of S.'s wife, to S. upon certain trusts, S. executing this deed also. In an action of ejectment as to the land, plaintiff claimed as a trustee in place of S., and the defendant claimed directly from S. as beneficial owner. The jury found a verdict for defendant. Upon rule nisi to enter verdict for plaintiff, Held that S. and those claiming through him beneficially were not estopped by the recitals in the deeds of July, 1857, and December, 1863, as to G.'s being seised in fee; that such recitals might be sufficient to satisfy the "Statute of Frauds" in establishing a trust in S., but that they were proved to be untrue, and that plaintiff had not established a trust. Rule discharged. Moore v. Hart, 5 A.J.R., 177.

Creditor's Deed—5 Vic., No. 9, Secs. 33, 34, 36—Recital—Schedule—Execution by a Creditor.]—A. executed a deed of assignment in favour of creditors under 5 Vic., No. 9. The deed recited that A. was indebted to creditors in sums specified in the schedule opposite their names, and contained a release as to such debts. B., a creditor opposite to whose name in the schedule a sum of £834 appeared, executed this deed with other creditors below the schedule. B. filed a bill for payment of a dividend on a larger sum of £1300, which the bill alleged to be due to him at the date of the deed. Held that B. was estopped by his execution of the deed from claiming a dividend on such larger sum, and that nothing in the Act 5 Vic., No. 9, affected such estoppel. Hermann v. French, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 15.

Creditors' Deed—"Insolvency Statute 1865"—Trustees not Estopped by Execution of an Invalid Deed from Paying Dividend to Creditor.]—In re Upton and Bowes, 2 V.R. (E.,) 117; 2 A.J.R., 68, post under INSOLVENCY — Composition Deeds.

Grant by Person Having no Estate—Subsequent Acquisition of Fee—Conveyance in the Meantime by Grantee.]—Where a person, who has no actual estate in land, purports to grant it by deed, and subsequently obtains the fee, though an estate may pass by way of estoppel, the subsequent acquisition, though feeding the estoppel, does not vest the estate in the grantee by relation, as from the date of the execution of such deed, so as to vest, as a matter of course, the estate in a person to whom the grantee has conveyed the property between the dates of the deed and of vesting the fee in the grantor. McVea v. Pasquan, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 347, 361, 362; 4 A.L.T., 101.

Mining Lease—Provision in ultra vires—Lessee Executing Estopped from Objecting.]—Matt v. Peel, 2 V.R. (M.,) 27; 2 A.J.R., 133, post under MINING—Interests in Mines—Leases; but see contra, Barwick v. Duchess of Edinburgh Company, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 70; 3 A.L.T., 68, 121, post ibid.

Recital as to Consideration.]—A mortgagee of land and a life policy compromised with an insurance company, selling the land to the company for £1170, and receiving £1293 as for the policy. The transfer of the land (an instrument under Act No. 301) stated the consideration to be £2463—the total amount received from the company. Held that it was not unusual in conveyances to state the whole payment as the consideration for each conveyance, notwithstanding that the parcels in each may have been separately valued, and that at most the mistake as to the consideration put upon the party making it, the burden of showing clearly what the real consideration was, and that the statement of consideration in the instrument was not conclusive. Walpole v. Colonial Bank, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 315, 331; 6 A.L.T., 147.

3. By MATTER IN PAIS.

Admission of Right of Person to Goods Stored.]—C. and W. stored goods with J. C. and W. sold some of the goods to P., but the goods were not to be delivered until the price was paid. P. sold fraudulently to B., and left Victoria without paying C. and W. J. had acknowledged C. and W.'s right, and on the sale to P. signed a memorandum to the following effect:—"Received for storage from P." The goods had not been set apart, and could not be identified. B. brought an action of trover against J., and obtained a verdict. On rule nisi for a nonsuit, Held that an estoppel can only be used by the person in favour of whom the matter of estoppel arises, and that J.'s admission in P.'s favour could only be used by P. alone and not by B., to whom P. had fraudulently sold. Rule absolute. Beckx v. Jones, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 313.

Between an Incorporated Company and an Individual.]—As between individuals the principle of estoppel is equitable in results, but as between a company and an individual, to say that members having assented to and acted upon a rule, not binding the company and all its members because illegal or beyond its powers of law-making, should be estopped would be most unjust, as absentees and minorities themselves being free, might enforce liabilities and obligations to which majorities voting for such rule would be bound. Nolan v. Annabella Company, 6 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 38; N.C., 19.

For facts, see S.C., ante column 153.

Director of Company—Assent as Director—Private Capacity.]—Semble, that a director of a company who has, qua director, knowingly assented to the company's giving a mortgage is, in his private capacity, precluded from raising objections as to the validity of such mortgage. Commercial Bank v. M'Donald, 2 V.R. (L.,) 211; 2 A.J.R., 120.

Director of Company—After Ceasing to Act as Such not Estopped from Getting Possession of Company's Mining Claim Through Information Received Whilst Acting as Manager.]—Lennox v. Golden Fleece and Heales United Company, 4 A.J.R., 154, post under MINING—Interest in Mines—Claim—Effect of Forfeiture, &c.

Acting on a Document as a Final Certificate.]—Where it was provided in a contract for the performance of certain public works that nothing should be deemed due to the contractor from the Board of Land and Works till the Engineer-in-Chief had presented his final certificate that the works were properly completed, and the Engineer, on the request of the contractor, sent him a document purporting to be a final certificate, but which was a mere return, and the contractor, in good faith, acted on such document, Held that the Engineer, as a servant of the Board, having at the contractor's request forwarded him a document purporting to be a final certificate, and the contractor having acted upon it, the Board were estopped from denying that it was a final certificate. O'Keefe v. Board of Land and Works, 1, A.J.R., 145.

Allowing Informal Affidavit to be Used.]—A person who has had an opportunity of objecting to an affidavit on the ground that there was an erasure in the jurat, but who does not take such objection and allows the affidavit to be used, cannot afterwards set aside a proceeding founded on the affidavit, on the ground of the defective jurat. Ex parte Usher, 2 V.R. (I.E. & M.,) 3; 2 A.J.R., 37.

Party Suing to Rescind His Own Act.]—A person is not allowed, as plaintiff in a Court of Law, to rescind his own act on the ground that such act was a fraud on some other person, whether the party seeking to do this has sued in his own name only, or jointly with such other person. Nichol v. London Chartered Bank of Australia, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 324, 329.

Depriving Person of Estate on Ground of Estoppel—What the Conduct of the Person Must be.]—Atkinson v. Slack, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 128, post under WAIVER.

Acts and Words.]—Per Williams and Holroyd, J.J., A person may, by his acts and words, i.e., by electing to take advantage of the contract, so conduct himself as to estop him from saying that a written contract is not a sufficient memorandum within the "Statute of Frauds." Ford v. Young, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 93, 105, 107; 3 A.L.T., 128.

Vendor Answering Requisitions and Producing Title.]—The production of the title to land, and answering "without prejudice" requisitions on the title, does not estop the vendor from afterwards disputing the validity of the contract of sale. Per Molesworth, J. Ross v. Victorian Permanent Building Society, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 254, 264; 4 A.L.T., 17.

Lease Under Seal to A.—Written Agreement to Accept B. as New Tenant, and Acceptance of Rent from B.—Lessor Estopped from Enforcing Covenants Against A.]—Sabelberg v. Scott, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 414; 1 A.L.T., 101, post under LANDLORD AND TENANT—Termination of Contract—Surrender.

General Principles.]—Per Full Court. A person is bound to disclose his rights if he knows that another will be injuriously misled by their concealment. But the duty of making disclosures is particular not general. A man is not bound to disclose his rights to all the world, lest somebody should be injured by ignorance of them, nor liable if anybody is injured by such ignorance without his knowledge.

J. was owner of certain property and allowed his son, who had the same name, to possess himself of the title deeds of this property. The son mortgaged this land, representing himself as owner, to Z. and C., and J. afterwards confirmed the mortgage. The son, still representing himself to be the owner, mortgaged the property by way of second mortgage to E., which J. refused to confirm. Held, affirming Molesworth, J., in a suit by E. against Z. and C. seeking to redeem them, that the son had really nothing to mortgage, and that E. was not really a mortgagee, and that J. was not estopped from setting up his title against E. Ettershank v. Zeal, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 333, 343; 4 A.L.T., 90.

1. Admissions, Declarations, and Entries Against Interest.

Of Agent—"Without Prejudice."]—Evidence cannot be excluded on the ground that the person, who was the mere conduit-pipe in the offer of compromise, has afterwards become involved in a transaction not then existing. An agent may quâ agent guard himself against all contingencies by making an offer of compromise "without prejudice, not only to this suit, but to all future transactions;" but where an agent makes a communication pending an action with a view to compromise, and other proceedings not then contemplated are afterwards instituted, such a communication ought not to be excluded simply because it is made "without prejudice;" that reservation of "without prejudice" being made, not with respect to the agent personally, but to the person whose interest was then affected. Goodman v. Hughes, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 202, 221, 222.

Admissions of a defendant may be used as evidence of a case made by the bill, though not put in issue. Bruce v. Ligar, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 240.

Admissions in Sworn Answer.]—See Allen v. Lane, 2 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 1, 8; and Cunningham v. Platt, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 55, 67; 3 A.L.T., 126, post under Practice and Pleading—In Equity—Answer.

Of Person Since Dead—Testimony in Person's Own Favour.]—Courts are disinclined to act upon the testimony of parties in their own favour deposing to transactions between themselves and deceased persons. In a suit to establish a resulting trust in land purchased with plaintiff's money, but conveyed in trust for his wife and children without his consent, an admission by the wife that she had received the purchase-money for the land from her husband held inadmissible after her death. Mason v. Sawyers, 2 V.R. (E.,) 36; 2 A.J.R., 12.

By Leaving Letter Unanswered.]—Where a person is addressed by letter on a subject that does not concern him, he is not under any legal obligation to answer any statement in that letter, and his silence is not to be taken as an admission by him against himself of the truth of the matter stated. On the other hand, if the matter do concern him, it is his duty to reply, and if he abstain from so doing, his silence affords strong evidence to go to a jury of an admission by him that he had no excuse to make, and no defence to offer to the charges. Newcomen v. O'Grady, 2 V.R. (L.,) 214; 2 A.J.R., 123.

O., a contractor for the formation of a railway, had a letter addressed to him as follows:—"I have been instructed by N. to inform you that your men have removed the fence from his ground, and his horses and cattle are straying about the country. Unless they are replaced he will hold you responsible for their loss, and will proceed against you for the trespass." O. did not answer this letter, as regards the injuries complained of. Held that since any injury done to the fence mentioned in the letter, by whomsoever committed, could not concern O., unless done by his authority or subsequent confirmation, O.'s silence did not amount to an admission against him that he was liable for the trespass complained of. Ibid.

As to Age.]—Admissions made by a plaintiff as to his age are inadmissible against him, when his own evidence as to his age is inadmissible for him. In re Peebles, Hall v. Nelson, 2 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 52; 2 A.J.R., 38.

Voluntary Settlement—27 Eliz., Cap. 4.]—The act of executing a conveyance for value is only evidence of an admission that the settlor has parted with property under the Statute 27 Eliz., Cap. 4; and then it is only evidence against a person who, but for the voluntary settlement, would be owner of the settled property; and is not evidence against beneficiaries where the settlor has after insolvency conveyed for value. Sugden v. Reilly, 5 A.J.R., 36.

By Executors.]—Executors have power to make admissions respecting the liability of their testator binding on them as executors. Morrison v. Sellar, 4 A.L.T., 49.

Admission in Equity Suit—Ejectment at Law.]—An unqualified admission in the answer in an equity suit, in which the answer was read, that the person through whom the plaintiff claimed the land the subject of the suit, was seized in fee of such land at a certain date, is binding on the defendant, and concludes him, as a matter of fact and of law, in a subsequent action of ejectment in respect of the same land by the same plaintiff against him. McVea v. Pasquan, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 347, 363; 4 A.L.T., 101.

Where a person in possession of land as caretaker for the owner states to a third person his intention of holding the land on his own account, such statement is not against his interest, and is not therefore admissible as evidence after his death. M'Cracken v. Woods, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 23.

(c) Entries Against Interest.

Of a Testator.]—In an action by executors for goods, &c., supplied by testator, a book of accounts was produced showing an account between the testator and defendant, showing credit and debit entries. Held that such evidence was admissible. Per Fellows, J., objections against evidence should be taken at the trial. Williamson v. Langley, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 52.

Of a Deceased Trustee.]—Documents signed by a deceased trustee, comprising accounts tendered to a cestui que trust of interest received upon mortgages effected by such trustee with trust moneys in his own name, are admissible in evidence against persons claiming from such trustee after his death. Chomley v. Firebrace, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 57.

2. Presumptions.

As to Letters.]—A letter properly addressed and posted will be presumed to have reached the person to whom it is addressed in the ordinary course of post, unless evidence to the contrary can be produced. M'Kenzie v. Shire of Swan Hill, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 299.

See also Regina v. Turner, ante column 292.

Arrival of Letter at its Destination.]—Per Full Court—The presumption that a letter properly addressed, stamped, and posted, and which is not returned to the writer, arrived at its destination, is conclusive if not denied, and so strong that mere non-recollection of its receipt would be insufficient to outweigh it. Cushing v. Lady Barkly Gold Mining Company, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 108, 122; 5 A.L.T., 98.

Presumption of Death.] — See Death, ante column 342.

Presumption of Marriage Ceremony Duly Performed.]—See Regina v. Young, and Regina v. Griffin, ante columm 287.

3. Witnesses.

Proof of—Lunatic Witness.]—Where an inmate of a lunatic asylum is tendered as a witness it is for the person producing him to satisfy the tribunal that his evidence is receivable. White v. Hoddle, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 82, 91; 1 A.L.T., 193.

Interested Persons.]—Although the law now allows interested persons to give testimony, not much weight should be attached to their evidence. Hasker v. Summers, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 204, 208.

Uncorrohorated Evidence of Interested Person.] —Per Molesworth, J. The evidence of a witness, deeply interested for himself as to transactions with a person since dead, should be regarded with strong distrust, but should not be rejected altogether. Dryden v. Dryden, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 148, 154.

The Court is always reluctant to act upon the evidence of interested parties as to conversations between them and deceased persons. Bennett v. Tucker, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 20; 3 A.L.T., 108, 111.

Chinese—How May be Sworn.] — A Chinese witness, though not a Christian, may be sworn on the Bible, since the form of administering the oath is immaterial; the substance of the oath, the bringing of himself under a solemn obligation to tell the truth, by the witness only is essential. If a witness declare that a special form is binding on his conscience, the Court is obliged to accept it. Regina v. McIlree, 3 W.W. & a'B. (L.,) 32.

When Answer May Criminate—Decision of Judge.] —Per Holroyd, J. (in Chambers)—The Judge must, when an objection is taken that to answer an interrogatory would tend to criminate the person answering, decide whether in his opinion the question may have such a tendency. Roper v. Williams, 6 A.L.T., 65.

Question that May Tend to Criminate—Objection on Oath.]—Per Higinbotham, J., (in Chambers.) Where a party objects to answer an interrogatory on the ground that it may tend to criminate him, he must take the objection on oath. Paterson v. Luke, 6 A.L.T., 86.

Evidence Given by or for One Defendant Against a Co-defendant.]—Held, per Molesworth, J., that persons are in no way affected by the evidence called by other parties, but that the case as between plaintiff and each defendant should be rested upon the evidence which they have each respectively offered, but the Court allowed the co-defendant's counsel to examine a defendant, G., who was giving evidence, which it was objected was not admissible against the co-defendant. G. was then cross-examined by plaintiff's counsel, but not by counsel for co-defendant. Held by the Full Court that a defendant may cross-examine a co-defendant as he may any other witness, and that this right is necessarily based upon the assumption that the testimony of a witness (and therefore of a co-defendant) is admissible against the party desiring to cross-examine. Meadway v. Garlick, 4 W.W. & a'B. (E.,) 157.

Practice Upon Taking Evidence—Limits of Re-examination.]—Where in cross-examination evidence is allowed to be given which might have been successfully objected to, the right to re-examine upon it depends upon circumstances. If the evidence is wholly immaterial in any shape or form no explanation of it can be given; if it is material, then it may be explained; and much depends upon the intention with which the question in re-examination is asked. Ireland v. Chapman, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 242.

If a plaintiff's witness in cross-examination makes a statement material to the issue in the case, evidence may be adduced to contradict such statement, if by such contradiction a material fact is proved, even though it has the effect of impeaching the credit of such witness. Litton v. Thornton, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 4.

Evidence of Witness Ordered Out of Court and Refusing to Go.]—The evidence of a witness who remains in Court after an order that all witnesses should leave the Court, cannot be rejected; but the witness may be punished for his disobedience. Regina v. Guthridge and Brennan, ex parte Campbell, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 77.

4. COMMISSION FOR EXAMINATION OF WITNESSES.

When Granted or Refused.]—An application for a commission to examine witnesses should be regarded almost as of right if made bonâ fide; but when one of the parties makes an application for his own examination, the question of bona fides requires close attention. Where the defendant, who was in the jurisdiction when bill was filed, and put in an answer and then left for England, after express notice that an application to take his evidence by commission in England would be opposed, Held, by Molesworth, J., and affirmed, that such defendant was not entitled to a commission to examine him in England as a witness on his own behalf. Bruce v. Ligar, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 240, 253, 263.

When Granted or Refused—Judge's Discretion.]—The Court will not interfere with the discretion of a Judge in granting a commission to examine witnesses. Bartley v. Worthington, 2 V.R. (L.,) 92; 2 A.J.R., 63.

When Granted or Refused—Discretion of Judge in Refusing.]—An application in Chambers by the defendant for a commission to examine witnesses in France, the place of his birth, in support of a plea of infancy, was refused. Held, per Stawell, C J, and Stephen, J., that such a defence was not dishonest in the absence of fraud, and it is the duty of the Judge and the Court to consider what is conducive to the due administration of justice; per Stawell, C.J., that in the absence of questions of inconvenience of whether the application was made bonâ fide or for the purpose of delay, the applicant is almost as of right entitled to a commission; per curiam that the Judge has a discretion in refusing a commission, but that the Court may review such discretion. Rule absolute for a commission. Dé Saxe v. Schlesinger, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 127; 3 A.L.T., 1.

When Granted or Refused—Discretion of Judge — "Statute of Evidence 1864," Sec. 4.]—The issue of a commission under Sec. 4 of the "Statute of Evidence 1864," is a matter within the discretion of the Court, or the Judge to whom the application for the commission is made. Ordinarily, where the application is made bonâ fide, and where no other means exist by which material evidence might have been or can be procured, the application is readily granted; but the grant of a commission under the Statute is not a matter of right; still less is it a matter of course. Merry v. the Queen, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 135.

See also S.C., APPEAL, ante columns 39, 40.

When Granted or Refused.]—Higinbotham, J. (in Chambers,) made an order on behalf of the plaintiff for the examination of an important witness on the day of his departure from the colony, the plaintiff paying the costs. Forrest v. Eisert, 2 A.L.T., 136.

Witness Within Jurisdiction—"Statute of Evidence 1864" (No. 197,) Sec. 4.]—Where a commission issued to examine a witness within the jurisdiction, Held that evidence given under it was admissible, inasmuch as the commission was based on an order which sufficiently complied with Sec. 4 of Act No. 197. Hatt v. Hatt, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 227.

Form of Order.]—Where the order provided that signatures of witnesses should be attached, which was not done, Held that such a provision was merely directory, and that the proper time for taking such an objection was at the taking of evidence, and not at the hearing. Ibid.

Appointment of Commissioner.]—The Act No. 112, Sec. 87, authorises the appointment as commissioner of one of two persons named in the alternative in the commission. In re Brookfield, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 110.

Duty of Commissioner.]—It is the duty of a commissioner to use his own discretion as to the competency of witnesses examined by him, and to certify to the Court his opinion. White v. Hoddle, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) at p. 87.

Return of Commission—Validity.]—Upon the return of a commission for the examination of a witness abroad, it appeared that witnesses were first examined as to his sanity, and the witness, an inmate of a lunatic asylum, was then tendered, but objected to as incompetent, and his examination on the voir dire desired. By consent he was examined, without prejudice to objections as to his competency. Upon the hearing, objections were taken that the commission was not receivable, that the lunatic was not a competent witness, and that his evidence was inadmissible. Held, that as the examination had proceeded subject to all proper objections as to the competency of the witness, but not to the objection that the commissioner did not take the proper course to examine the witness, and that as the witness had stood examination and cross-examination satisfactorily, and the commissioner had furnished the Court with all the necessary materials to enable it to form an opinion of the witness's competency, the objections should be overruled and the commission held receivable. White v. Hoddle, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 82; 1 A.L.T., 193.

Rules in Taking Evidence Under.]—Per Molesworth, J. The rules as to the examination of witnesses under a commission should be the same as in taking evidence before the Court. Bell v. Clarke, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 283, 292.

Semble, that the proper time for striking inadmissible evidence out of a commission is at the hearing and not on an application to a Judge in Chambers before the hearing. Ibid.

Admissibility at Hearing of Objections not Noticed by Commissioners.]—Where evidence has been taken before a commissioner, and objections not noticed by the commissioner were urged at the hearing, Held, following an English authority, but without any definite ruling on the subject, that such objections might be heard at the hearing. Graham v. Graham, 3 A.J.R., 55, 56.

Objections as to Reception of Evidence—Notice to Produce.]—Where copies of letters were put in before a commissioner, the originals having been called for by notice to produce but not produced, and the notice itself was not put in or proved, Held that the objection as to the evidence was taken too late, and that it should have been taken at the time the copies were admitted as evidence. Hatt v. Hatt, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 227.

Evidence Taken Under—Who May Use.]—Where in an inquiry before the master as to next of kin, evidence had been taken under commissions in support of the claims of certain persons, and another claimant coming in to prove subsequently thereto sought to use such evidence in support of her claim also, which was refused by the master, upon application to the Court, Held that such evidence could be used only by consent of the other claimants, the Court having no jurisdiction to make an order in invitum to that effect against them. Attorney-General v. Huon, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 216.

An order was subsequently made as moved for upon terms of payment by applicant of a share of the costs and expenses of the commission. Ibid.

Costs.] — Certain evidence taken on commission related mainly to the matters on which a plaintiff succeeded. Held that the Prothonotary was right in allowing the plaintiff his costs of the commission, and disallowing those of defendant. Urquhart v. Macpherson, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 159.

Abortive Commission—Injunction—"Statute of Evidence 1864," No. 197, Sec. 8—Costs.]—A commission to examine witnesses in Hamburg had failed, owing to the law of the country not allowing private persons to receive oaths, the oaths being only administered by the Court. The plaintiff had obtained an interim injunction. Upon application by summons for a fresh commission directed to the British Consul, the Primary Judge refused it, except upon terms of dissolving the injunction. Upon appeal, the order was made upon terms of the plaintiff paying the costs of the abortive commission, and giving an undertaking to answer damages to defendant if the injunction were dissolved at the hearing. Wolfe v. Hart, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 52.

Agent's Charges—Commissioner's Fees—Taking Evidence on Commission.]—Per Higinbotham, J. (in Chambers)—A London agent (solicitor,) who has received instructions to take evidence on commission, is entitled to his charges on the commission, it being his duty to proceed with the commission until instructions have been sent to settle the claim unconditionally; and his charges after the time for the return of commission has expired are also to be allowed, as he has a right to assume that steps will be taken to extend the time. Commissioner's fees allowed under similar circumstances. Anderson v. Berridge, 3 A.L.T., 35.

Costs and Expenses—Commission not Proceeded With—Preliminary Expenses.]—It will not be laid down as a general rule that a party who has joined a commission is not justified in making preparations to take part in fulfilling the object of the commission, and in incurring costs payable between party and party, until he has received notice through the commissioner of an appointment for the examination of witnesses. And where the London agents of a party to a suit, who had joined in a commission, the moment the commission arrived took the necessary and proper steps to support his case before the commissioners, and the commission was not proceeded with, Held, per Higinbotham, J. (in Chambers,) that the agents were justified in not delaying to take such steps. Austin v. Mackinnon, 6 A.L.T., 19.

5. Affidavits and Depositions.

And see also Affidavit.

Deposition in Court of Insolvency—Use of in Suit in Equity.]—Depositions made by a person in the Court of Insolvency, subsequently a defendant in equity, are admissible in evidence in a suit to set aside a voluntary settlement made by the insolvent in favour of such person, and may be sufficient to establish the plaintiff's case. The whole of such deposition will be considered as in evidence, and the Court will attach such weight as it thinks fit to the different parts of it. Davey v. Bailey, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 240.

6. Judicial, Official and other Documents.

Press Copies—Act No. 197, Sec. 29.] — The "Evidence Act," No. 197, makes a press copy evidence without comparison and without any notice to produce the original, but does not make it primary evidence, except as to dispensing with notice to produce. Harrison v. Smith, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 182.

Press Copy of Letter.]—At a trial for uttering a cheque, a book was produced containing what purported to be a press copy of a letter addressed to the prisoner in due course of business by a clerk then in the employ of the drawer of the cheque. Evidence was given of the death of the clerk, and a witness, on seeing the document, said, "That's deceased's handwriting." Held that the copy was admissible under Sec. 29 of the "Evidence Statute." Regina v. Ryan, 1 A.J.R., 27.

Inadmissibility of Press Copy of Letter.]—A witness as to transactions between himself, a deceased plaintiff, and the defendant, produced in corroboration thereof a press copy of a letter, in which reference was made to such transaction. The witnesses proved that it had been written and posted to the defendant, and had never been returned. Held inadmissible, being detached, unsought, and unexpected. Atkinson v. Lansell, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 236.

Plan—Unnecessary Reference to in Deed.]—Where an unnecessary reference is made in a deed to a plan, not part of the deed, and the parcels are sufficiently described without the reference, the Court is not justified in looking at the plan merely on account of such reference. Lee v. Melbourne and Suburban Railway Company, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 34.

Similar Plan to a Lost One Admitted to Prove the Latter.]—To prove the lost plan of a reservoir, which had been deposited in obtaining the Act, as required by the Standing Orders, in the office of the Board of Land and Works, the Court admitted as secondary evidence, a similar plan lodged with the clerk of the Legislative Assembly. Connolly v. The Shire of Beechworth, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 1.

Proof by Secondary Evidence—Lost Deed.]—Where a deed is shown to be probably in the hands of a person out of jurisdiction, that dispenses with necessity for further inquiry as to loss, and secondary evidence of its contents is admissible. Hunniford v. Horwood, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 250.

Documents Verified by Affidavit.]—Such documents must be marked by the commissioner before whom the oath is sworn, and are not sufficiently identified otherwise, though referred to in the affidavit and inseparably annexed to it. Rossiter v. O'Shanassy, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 121.

Judicial Proceedings — What are — "Evidence Act," No. 100, Sec. 37.]—Proceedings before justices in New Zealand, sitting merely to commit for trial and not to hear and determine, acting ministerially in fact, and not judicially, are within the meaning of Sec. 37 of the "Evidence Act," No. 100, and may be proved in Victorian Courts in the manner prescribed by the Act. Eastwood v. Bullock, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 92.

Extract from a Marriage Register of a Parish in Middlesex, England—52 Geo. III., Cap. 146—Independent Evidence of the Existence or Place of Book from which Extract is Taken.]—Where the only evidence of the existence of a marriage register from which an extract was taken which was put in evidence, was an English Statute 52 Geo. III., Cap. 146, by which the existence of parish registers was enacted, such extract was admitted, though hesitatingly, as evidence. Graham v. Graham, 3 A.J.R., 55, 56.

Pound-Keeper's Book—Act No. 197, Sec. 25—"Pounds Act," No. 478, Sec. 21.]—Under Sec. 21 of the Act No. 478, the pound-keeper is a public official required to keep a book for special purposes, and to insert in it certain specified particulars in which the public are interested; and such book is accessible to the public, and cannot be removed from his residence without inconvenience to the public. Such a book is therefore within Sec. 25 of the "Evidence Statute," No. 197, and entries in it may be proved by a certified extract, giving information necessary to support an action for wrongful impounding. Jones v. Falvey, 5 V.L.R., (L.,) 230; 1 A.L.T., 23.

Banker's Books.]—See ante column 76.

Proof of Bank Charter — Copy of Supplemental Charter.]—Regina v. Dickson, ante column 299.

Exhibits—Notice to Admit.]—A deed admitted by the defendant's solicitor, on the usual notice to admit, if put in and marked as an exhibit, is in evidence, even if the admission itself is not put in. Glass v. Simson, 2 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 67, 74.

Using.]—An exhibit put in by the plaintiffs for one purpose may be used by the defendants for all purposes. St. George and Band of Hope Company v. Band of Hope and Albion Consols, 2 V.R. (E.,) 206; 2 A.J.R., 81.

Exhibits—Custody of in Master's Office.]—The rule of Court (Rule 15 of Cap. 6,) requiring exhibits to be lodged in, and retained by, the Master's office, is only intended to preserve such exhibits until the hearing; and when that purpose is served, the custody should terminate. Selwood v. Burstall, 1 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 96.

Return of Exhibits—Certificate of Title.] — In a suit to rectify certificates of title, these certificates of title were deposited as exhibits. Held that as Court had no power to correct the certificates themselves, and as the suit was concluded, these exhibits must be returned. Campbell v. Jarrett, 7 V.L R. (E.,) 137.

Exhibit—Application for Delivery Out of.]—Deeds were exhibited in a redemption suit by a defendant. After decree, a Bank claiming a lien on the deeds (alleged to have been lent to the defendant for another purpose, viz., bringing the land under Act No. 301, on an undertaking to return them) moved, on notice to the parties to the suit, for delivery out to the bank of the deeds. Held that the matter could not be dealt with on a summary application, and motion refused with costs without prejudice to the institution of a suit. Jamieson v. Johnson, 1 V.R. (E.,) 102.

7. Admission of Extrinsic Evidence.

To Contradict Statement of Consideration in a Deed.]—Parol evidence to contradict the statement of consideration in a deed is always admissible both at law and in equity, to sustain an allegation or to rebut a charge of fraud. Gladstone v. Ball, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 277, 287.

Voluntary Settlement.]—In a suit to support a settlement as against a subsequent conveyance, evidence was held admissible to show consideration for the settlement other than that expressed in the deed. Ronalds v. Duncan, 2 V.R. (E.,) 65, 80; 2 A.J.R., 30, 45.

To Explain Latent Ambiguity in Policy of Marine Insurance.]—Wright v. Imperial Marine Insurance Company, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 334; 2 A.L.T., 65, post under INSURANCE—Marine—Construction of Policy.

Mining—Inconsistent Plan—Surveyor's Evidence Inadmissible.]—Where two mining companies were bound by an agreement to which was attached a plan showing boundaries, and this plan was inconsistent with itself as to course of boundary lines in reference to certain landmarks, a surveyor's evidence to explain the discrepancy was held inadmissible in determining the true construction of the agreement and plan in a suit for an injunction to restrain an encroachment. Semble, it would be admissible in a suit to rectify agreement according to the intention of the parties. The Band and Albion Company v. St. George United Company, 3 A.J.R., 20.

Against Heir-at-Law of Equitable Mortgagor.]—Where there has been a written memorandum accompanying a deposit of deeds as security by a person since deceased, parol evidence of the relative position of the parties and of the surrounding circumstances is admissible as against the heir-at-law, but not so if such verbal evidence amounts only to a promise or admission by the deceased. Brent v. Jones, 1 V.R. (E.,) 76, 82; 1 A.J.R., 2, 51.

To Limit Reduction of Money Payable under a Contract.]—Where under a contract between C. and B. and the Queen, the Crown put in evidence to show that a large sum of money should be deducted from that claimed by C. and B. on account of non-performance within a certain time specified, Held that evidence by C. and B. to show that the completion was delayed by the action of the Crown was admissible. Bruce v. The Queen, 2 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 193, 216.

In a correspondence relating to the sale of certain pipes there was no identification, express or by reference, of any of the pipes. On an action brought by the vendor for goods sold and delivered, Held that extrinsic evidence was inadmissible to identify any particular pipes. Wilkie v. Hunt, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 66.

For facts see S.C., post under SALE—The Contract—Statute of Frauds.

8. COSTS AND EXPENSES OF EVIDENCE AND WITNESSES.

Scientific Witnesses—Taxation of Costs—Allowance.]—Where the Master, in taxing the costs, did not allow the costs of scientific witnesses qualifyir g themselves to give evidence following the English Chancery practice of 1853, Held that he had acted on the right principle, but, where surveyors were employed and paid for underground surveys and inspectiou, and to inspect and enlarge a map in the Mining Department on which the case turned, a reasonable allowance should have been made therefor. Review of taxation ordered. Band of Hope and Albion Consols v. Young Band Extended Company, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 71; 5 A.L.T., 12.

Costs of Witnesses—Where Allowed.]—In an action on a policy of re-insurance for the amount of an original insurance, less the amounts received from other offices, the expenses of the witnesses who had been called to prove the amounts so received, were allowed on taxation. National Marine Insurance Company of South Australia v. Halfey, 1 A.L.T., 135.

Witnesses' Travelling Expenses—"Supreme Court Rules," Cap. 11, Rule 16—"Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," Sch. 38.]—Rule 16 of Cap. 11 of the "Supreme Court Rules" of February 1st, 1854, as to the travelling expenses of witnesses, does not apply to civil actions. Such expenses are now governed by the "Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," Sch. 38. Cudmore v. M'Pherson, Brooks v. M'Pherson, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 208.

Maintenance Money for Detention as a Witness—Damages for Breach of Contract.]—In assessing damages for breach of contract, the jury are not at liberty to include in such damages, as a separate item, the plaintiff's maintenance as a witness during the time he has been awaiting the trial; and in respect of such maintenance, the Prothonotary has a discretion to make such order as he may think reasonable. Norton v. Williamson, 6 A.L.T., 128.

Master of Ship When Entitled to Detention Money as Witness.]—See post under SHIPPING—The Master.

Conduct Money of Debtor Under Debtor Summons—"County Court Statute 1869," Sec. 83.]—Henry v. Greening, ante column 261.

And see cases ante column 421, under COMMISSION.

9. GENERALLY.

Overruling Decisions as to Admission or Rejection of Evidence.]—Decisions on matters of mercantile law, or on points affecting the established practice of conveyances, or other similar matters, should not be lightly overruled; but on such a matter as the reception or rejection of evidence (where the consequences of overruling a prior decision are comparatively trifling, and can only affect the particular case in which it happens,) the same reason does not exist. Tracy v. Luke, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 64.

Appeal—Where it Lies as to Admissibility of Evidence.]—Per Molesworth, J.—An appeal lies to the Full Court against the ruling of the Supreme Court as to the admissibility of evidence given at the taking of evidence. Hatt v. Hatt, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 227.

Statutory Declaration—Act No. 197, Sec. 34.]—A statutory declaration need not state that the declarant had conscientious scruples against taking an oath. Regina v. Mollison, ex parte Warne, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 17.

Proof of Signature—Comparison.]—At a trial for forging a bill of lading it was desired to prove the handwriting of the master of a vessel to certain other documents, and a Customs officer produced a document described as the ship's manifest, which purported to be signed by the master, but which signature was not proved, and the other documents were compared with it. Held that the manifest was admissible in evidence as an original, since it was signed by a person (i.e., the master) ostensibly performing the duty of passing entries at the Custom-house in the ordinary way of business, and that being so the comparison was admissible. Regina v. Wright, 2 V.R. (L.,) 204; 2 A.J.R., 119.

Comparison of Handwriting—"Evidence Act," Sec. 18.]—Regina v. Nathan, ante column 314.

Official Signature.]—Evidence as to the signature of the Deputy Registrar-General by a person who had never seen him sign his name, but who had seen it on many official documents known by him to be genuine is admissible. Kozminsky v. Schurmann, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 474.

Signature of Deputy Registrar-General—Judicial Notice.]—The Court will not take judicial notice of the signature of the Deputy Registrar-General under Sec. 54 of the "Statute of Evidence 1864." Therefore a memorandum, signed by the Deputy Registrar-General, endorsed upon a stock mortgage that such mortgage has been filed, is not evidence of filing unless the signature be proved. Teague v. Farrell, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 480; 2 A.L.T., 98.

Admissibility of Evidence—Judge's Discretion as to Admitting Evidence at a Certain Stage in the Proceedings.]—The Full Court will not interfere with the Primary Judge's discretion in admitting evidence in any stage of the proceedings. In re Hodgson, 5 A.J.R., 133.

See also S.P., Vernon v. Mollison, 5 A.J.R., 123.

Admissibility of Evidence—Recalling Witnesses or Calling Fresh Ones After Plaintiff's Case is closed.]—Though it is the practice of Courts to allow omissions which have occurred through mere oversight in the conduct of a case to be supplied, this does not apply where the plaintiff has closed his case and the defendant has called several witnesses to rebut it before the plaintiff thinks of recalling his witnesses. In such a case the plaintiff will not be allowed, contrary to the wish of the defendant (though if the defendant consent the Court may sometimes allow it,) to recall any of his witnesses or call fresh witnesses, and if such evidence be taken it will be inadmissible. (In re Hodgson, 5 A.J.R., 133 distinguished;) Bell v. Clarke, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 283, 292-3.

Hearsay Evidence—When Inadmissible.]—Hearsay evidence is not admissible on cross-examination; and if admitted subject to objection a new trial will be granted. Williams v. Spowers, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 82, 104; 3 A.L.T., 113.

Res Inter Alios Acta.]—Where, upon an issue to determine the value of land taken for a railway, evidence by a witness that he had offered a certain price for the land to the claimant, shortly before, was offered and rejected. Held, that it was properly rejected as being res inter alios acta. Kilpatrick v. Board of Land and Works, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 122.

Admissible Evidence—Inquisition at Coroner's Inquest.]—In a suit upon the construction of a policy of life assurance—the policy being void in case of suicide by the assured—the inquisition at a coroner's inquest is admissible in evidence against the representatives of the assured. Walpole v. Colonial Bank, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 315, 318, 319; 6 A.L.T., 147.

Forged Will—Admissibility of Statements of Deceased Witness to Will.]—In re Buckley, 5 A.J.R., 5.

Per Williams, J.—If counsel in the course of the trial seeks to get in certain evidence, not at the moment admissible, and it is admitted on an undertaking by counsel to do something to make it evidence, and he fails to carry out such undertaking, it would be the duty of the Judge to strike out such evidence from his notes, unless it would be admissible on other grounds than that on which it was tendered. Horne v. Milne, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 296.

Admissibility.]—S., in order to prove his title, tendered in evidence a deed from A. to himself. The County Court Judge refused this on the ground that A's. title to the land was not established. Held, on appeal, that the deed was admissible. Slack v. Terry, 5 A.L.T., 120.

To Prove Contents of Destroyed Will.]—Statements by a testator to a witness as to the contents of a destroyed will, set up in opposition to another will, were held inadmissible. Macoboy v. Madden, 5 W.W. & A'B. (I.E. & M.,) 38.

Admissibility of Evidence of Conversations Showing a Fraudulent Intention.]—Where a trader being in debt made a voluntary settlement of the greater part of his property, on a suit by the official and trade assignees to set aside such settlement, Held that evidence was admissible of a conversation by the settlor, some time prior to the settlement, showing a fraudulent intention, though it was in respect of an intended settlement of a somewhat different character, and was not put in issue by the bill, and also evidence of other indebtedness, under a general allegation that the settlor was "also indebted to divers other persons." Goodman v. Boulton, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 86.

Admissibility of Conversations—To Prove Intent.]—N., a trader, being largely indebted to M. and Co., and still more largely to other creditors, by bill of sale assigned to M. and Co. all his stock in trade and available assets, to secure their antecedent debt, and an alleged present advance; evidence was tendered of a conversation about the state of N.'s property between N. and his solicitor shortly before executing the deed, and of another shortly after the execution; also of a conversation between N. and R., one of his other creditors, shortly after the execution. These conversations were offered as evidence of N.'s intent in executing the deed. Held that the statements made by N. to his solicitor shortly after executing the deed as to his intent in making it, were not admissible in evidence; but that the statements made by N. to R. were admissible. Shaw v. Solomon, 1 V.R. (E.,) 153; 1 A.J.R., 139.

Subsequent acts may be regarded as evidence of a previous intention. Shaw v. Scott, 3 A.J.R., 16, 128.

The statements of an insolvent, whether on oath or otherwise, made after the execution of the settlement, are not evidence against the trustees. Ex parte Wright, in re Mahoney, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.) 1.

Admissibility of Evidence—Deceased Witness.]—Where a witness at a former trial had died before a new trial was granted, permission was granted to the defendants to read the evidence of such witness from a certified copy of the Judge's notes at the former trial. Polynesia Company v. Bank of N.S.W., 3 A.J.R., 52.

Privilege—Letters Written Without Prejudice—Use of by Defendant.]—Where a defendant had in a previous application in an action used the fact that he had offered to compromise the action, Held that evidence of such offer was admissible on behalf of the plaintiff at the trial, though the offer purported to be made without prejudice, since the previous use of the offer by the defendant divested it of the character of a privileged communication. Johnston v. Jackson, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 1; 1 A.L.T., 133.

Letter to Solicitor — Privilege.] — Nolan v. Connell, ante column 362.

Professional Confidence.]—Papers of a testator showing rights of the executors as a class against one of the number individually, and put by that one in the hands of the solicitor for the executors, may be produced by that solicitor without breach of professional confidence in a suit by some of the executors against the executor who placed it in the solicitor's hands. Bruce v. Ligar, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 240, 255.

Privilege—Letters from Husband to Wife.]—A plaintiff in equity relied upon certain letters from the defendant to defendant's wife, which were set out in the bill. The defendant, in his answer, admitted these. The primary Judge overruled an objection to admit these, and admitted them as evidence. Upon appeal to the full Court—Held, per Stawell, C.J., and Williams, J. (dissentiente Molesworth, J.,) that letters from husband to wife are privileged communications, and cannot be read against husband, but quære whether these letters admitted by him could on his objection at the hearing be read against him. Larnach v. Alleyne, 2 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 39, 54, 64.

And see Regina v. Dowling, ante columm 314.

For other cases of Privilege, see White v. Hoddle and Bradshaw v. Victorian Railway Commissioners, ante column 375; and see post under SOLICITOR.

Onus of Proof—Offence against "Gold Fields Act," No. 32, Sec. 116.]—There are some exceptions to the general rule that onus of proof lies on the party sustaining the affirmative, one of them being where proceedings are criminal. On an information for offence against Act No. 32, by carrying on business without a business license, such a proceeding is not criminal, and the onus of proof lies on the defendant to prove he has such a license, and not on the prosecutor to prove the negative. McCormack v. Murray, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 122.

Onus of Proof—Voluntary Conveyance—False Recitals.]—Wherever there is a variance between recitals in a deed and facts, the onus of reconciling the facts with the operative part of the deed lies upon those claiming under the deed. Symonds v. Williams, 1 V.L.R. (Eq.,) 199.

For facts, see S.C., UNDUE INFLUENCE.

Onus of Proof—Facts in the Knowledge of One Party.]—T. guaranteed to become responsible to S. in a certain amount, in consideration of his supplying building materials to the contractor "on completion of the house to T.'s satisfaction." S. sued on the guaranty, and proved that timber had been supplied to the contractor, that the house had been finished, and that T. lived in it. The County Court Judge nonsuited the plaintiff. Held that the facts were sufficient to launch the case against the defendant, and that then the onus of proving that the house was not completed to T.'s satisfaction lay on T. Appeal allowed; case to be re-heard. Sharp v. Turnbull, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 103.

As to Age.]—The statements of a sister as to her brother having attained his majority were rejected where the sister was only two years older than her brother, and the brother's own evidence as to his age had been rejected on the ground that he was not old enough to be able to recollect facts as far back as the number of years that he stated his age to be. In re Peebles, Hall v. Nelson, 2 V.R. (I.E. & M.,) 52; 2 A.J.R., 38.

As to Age.]—The evidence of one person as to the age of another will not be admitted when the witness's means of knowledge are not shown. Ibid.

Proof of Majority.—Where the only evidence as to a person having attained his majority is the statement of the person himself, and where such person from his appearance has at the outside just attained his majority, his own statement cannot be received as evidence; but in the case of a person who is of sufficient age to recollect events for twenty-one years back, the statement of such a person as to his having attained his majority will be received. Ibid.

Evidence to Rebut User of Land as a Public Park.]—If the case for the Crown, i.e., setting up a user, depends upon public documents and public user, the nature of the case renders minute and specific allegations by the Crown seeking an injunction against mining on such land less necessary, and comparatively vague statements are sufficient to launch the bill and throw on the defendants the burden of contradiction by special allegation and proof. And see also for the nature of the evidence, Attorney-General v. Southern Freehold Company, Attorney-General v. United Hand in Hand and Band of Hope Company, 4 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 66, 78, 80 et seq.

For facts see S.C. under MINING—PRACTICE, &c.—In Equity—Injunctions Generally.

How Plaintiff may Prove His Case—Several Modes.]—Inconsistency, not multiplicity, forms the test by which several modes of proving the plaintiff's case may or may not be deemed admissible. Thurlow v. Perks, 1 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 142.

Rebutting Case—Donatio Mortis Causa.]—A bill for an account against executors, charged them with the receipt of a sum of money standing to the testator's credit at his death. In their answer the defendants insisted that they were entitled to this sum as a donatio mortis causâ. Held, on the taking of evidence, that the plaintiffs might reserve their evidence against the donatio for a rebutting case. Edwards v. Graham, 3 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 112.

Oath of One Witness Against Answer.]—Where notice of a fraud is denied by the answer, and directly proved by the evidence of one witness only, if there are circumstances tending to corroborate the oath of the single witness, the Court will act upon his evidence, although the answer is only directly contradicted by the one witness. Ronalds v. Duncan, 2 V.R. (E.,) 65, 81; 2 A.J.R., 30, 45.

Unsworn Statement of Accused Person—Act No. 197, Sec. 44.]—Sec. 44 of the Act places the unsworn statement of an accused person in this position: that if it is not inconsistent with the sworn evidence, it should be received as evidence. Mack v. Murray, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 416.

Withdrawal of from Jury.]—On the trial of an action for libel, a letter written by one of the two defendants was read to the jury as evidence of malice; but the Judge, holding it inadmissible, withdrew it from the jury, and a verdict was found for plaintiff. On a motion for a new trial on behalf of defendants, Held that the application could not succeed, because, if the letter were evidence, the plaintiff was the person to complain of its withdrawal; and, if it were not evidence, the defendants had nothing to complain of. O'Malley v. Elder, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 117.

Omitted from Judge's Notes.]—Evidence is not excluded by its being omitted from the Judge's notes if the parties and the Judge are agreed that such evidence was in fact given at the trial. Coker v. Spence, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 273.

And generally as to improper admission or rejection of evidence see CRIMINAL LAW and NEW TRIAL.

EXECUTION.

What May be Sold Under.]—Semble, Mining shares may not be sold under a County Court execution. Eddy v. Working Miners' Gold Mining Company, 2 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 110.

For facts see S.C., ante column 152.

County Court Judgment—When Execution May Issue—Order that Damages Were to be Reduced to Nominal Damages if Goods Sued for Were Returned.]—Phillips v. Johnston, ante column 260.

Effect of in Equity Proceedings.]—A judgment creditor has no locus standi to bring a suit in equity to set aside a conveyance by a judgment creditor as fraudulent under 13 Eliz., Cap. 5, until he has sued out execution at law. Yandell v. Hector, 4 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 1.

See S.C., post under FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCE.

Improper Sale.]—Semble, that impropriety on the part of an officer selling under an execution at a legal sale is not a ground of relief as against the purchaser. Perkins v. Willcock, 2 V.R. (E.,) 222; 2 A.J.R., 127.

Duty, Liability, and Fees of Sheriff and Other Officers.]—See SHERIFF.

Sale of Land Under Fi. Fa.—Provisions of Act No. 301 Relating to.]—See cases post under TRANSFER OF LAND (STATUTORY)—Transfers—Under Sale by Sheriff.

Notice to Assignee—"Common Law Procedure Statute," No. 274, Sec. 285.]—S. was the assignor, by means of a bill of sale in favour of A., and gave instructions for the preparation of it by H., an attorney. H. had knowledge that the writ had been delivered to the Sheriff, and it was contended that H.'s knowledge was notice to A. Held, that there was no evidence that A. had made S. his agent to employ a solicitor to prepare the bill of sale, or that H. had acted as A.'s agent, and that H.'s knowledge was not notice to A. within the meaning of Sec. 285 of the Statute. Anderson v. Maritime and General Credit Company, 3 A.J.R., 28.

"Common Law Procedure Statute," Secs. 307, 308—Contract in N.S.W.—Judgment Obtained in N.S.W.—Execution in Victoria.]—The writ was in an action upon a contract made in N.S.W., defendant was living in Victoria, and the writ was endorsed for service out of the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of N.S W., and judgment was in default signed in N.S.W., a memorial being duly filed in Melbourne. Held, that defendant could not now plead to the jurisdiction of the Court, to whom he owed implicit obedience. Ordered that execution in Victoria should issue. Mullins v. Ditchburne, 5 A.J.R., 119.

"Common Law Procedure Statute," Secs. 307, 308—Execution Issuing on Foreign Judgment—Corporation — Showing Cause Against.] — Ruby Extended Tin Mining Company v. Woolcott, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 301, post under JUDGMENT—Foreign Judgment—Effect of.

Entry of Satisfaction—Orders to Registrar-General.]—The Court has no power to make orders upon the Registrar-General to enter upon the register satisfaction of a registered execution. Such orders are quite unnecessary, since, when satisfaction is entered upon the judgment roll, a purchaser must know that the incumbrance has been removed. Bear v. Race, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 225.

What May be Sold Under Fi. Fa.—Patent.]—A patent cannot be levied on under a fi. fa. Brown v. Cooper, 1 V.R. (L.,) 210; 1 A.J.R., 162.

Sale of Land Under Fi. Fa.—Advertisement—No. 19, Sec. 176.]—Land was levied on under a fi. fa., and the sheriff published advertisements of his intention to sell the land—one in the local newspaper of the 1st December, 1870, stating that he would sell the land on January 3rd, 1871, and one in the Government Gazette of December 9th, 1870, fixing the date of the sale as January 10th, 1871. The sheriff held the sale on the 10th, and executed a transfer to the purchaser on the 31st of January. Held that this was a substantial compliance with the Act 19 Vic., No. 19, Sec. 176, and the land being under the "Transfer of Land Statute," an application to compel the Registrar-General to issue a certificate to the purchaser was granted. In re "Transfer of Land Statute," ex parte Ross, 2 V.R. (L.,) 10; 2 A.J.R., 19.

And, for cases of sale of land under fi. fa., under the "Transfer of Land Statute," see post under TRANSFER OF LAND (STATUTORY.)

What May Not be Seized Under Fi. Fa.—Goods Assigned for the Benefit of Creditors.]—Goods assigned by deed to trustees for the benefit of creditors are protected by Sec. 285 of the "Common Law Procedure Statute," No. 274, and where a debtor assigned goods under such a deed to trustees for creditors, obtaining a release, and the deed was executed bona fide by the debtor after a writ of fi. fa. had been delivered to the Sheriff by a judgment creditor, but before seizure, and neither the debtor nor the trustees had knowledge or notice of the delivery of the writ, Held that the goods were not liable to seizure under the writ, and that the release was a sufficient consideration to the debtor for executing the deed. Whitehead v. Griffith, 1 V.R. (L.,) 18; 1 A.J.R., 29.

What May be Seized Under Fi. Fa.—Property Vested in Administratrix, c.t.a.]—Property which is vested in an administratrix c.t.a., in trust for the use of herself and others, cannot be seized in execution for her personal debt, notwithstanding that her legal estate be coupled with a beneficial interest in herself for life. Colonial Bank of Australasia v. Cooper, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 41.

What Passes Under Writ of Fi. Fa.]—At law a legal estate (whether the equitable and beneficial interest may or may not be in the legal owner) can be sold and conveyed by the Sheriff under a writ of fi. fa. against the legal owner. Horwood v. Murdoch, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 358.

Alias Writ—Scire Facias.]—An alias may at any time be issued and executed without a scire facias where a writ of fi. fa. has been issued within six years after recovering judgment and returned. Platts v. Wright, 1 A.L.T., 131.

Equitable Execution by Appointment of a Receiver—"Judicature Act 1883," No. 761, Sec. 9, Sub-sec. 8.]—See Ettershank v. Russell, 6 A.L.T., 140, post under RECEIVER—Appointment of and Discharge.

Staying Execution Pending Criminal Proceedings.]—N. commenced an action against an insurance company on a policy of fire insurance. The company abandoned all defences except as to the amount; an order was issued from chambers referring the amount to arbitration. The arbitrators made an award in favour of plaintiff, and judgment was signed. Before execution was issued N. was committed for trial for arson, and Barry, J., made two orders staying execution. Rule nisi granted to set aside the orders. Nangle v. Graham, 3 A.J.R., 53.

Staying Execution—Against a Company Where All the Directors had not Consented to the Judgment.]—Robinson v. Melbourne Newspaper Company, 4 A.J.R., 66, see post under INJUNCTION—Restraining Proceedings at Law.

EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS.

I. RIGHTS, POWERS, DUTIES, AND LIABILITIES.

Substitution of Trustees upon Executor's Application to be Relieved.]—Where an executor was placed in a troublesome position in managing a station property, and after four years of careful management, applied to be relieved, the Court made an order appointing two trustees to act in his place—the co-executor was an infant directed by the will to superintend the station and did so, though he had not obtained probate. Farrell v. Evans, 3 A.J.R., 71.

(2) Power to Charge, Pledge, or Mortgage Estate.

Administrator Entitled to Part of Property—Mortgage.]—A husband, administrator of his wife's lands, and entitled to one-third thereof, mortgaged, as administrator, to a bank, and expended the money in building on the lands; the bank subsequently entered as mortgagee in possession. Upon bill by the children, entitled to two-thirds of the land, for redemption, Held, per Molesworth, J., that they were entitled to redeem two-thirds of the lands, but subject to payment of two-thirds of the increase of the value of the property by the improvements, inasmuch as the mortgage must be taken to operate as a mortgage of the administrator's own third interest, and of his claim against the entire land to be re-imbursed for buildings, &c. Affirmed on appeal, and held, that the administrator had power, during the minority of the children to make such a mortgage. Droop v. Colonial Bank of Australasia, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 228, 233. On appeal, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 71; 2 A.L.T., 90; 3 A.L.T., 13.

Administrator Holding Certificate of Title—Mortgage.]—An administrator holding a certificate of title cannot, by the joint operation of the "Transfer of Land Statute," and the Act No. 427 ("Administration Act 1872,") Sec. 7, effect mortgages which would be invalid in the case of land not under the "Transfer of Land Statute," and a mortgagee taking a mortgage from such executor is not protected. Droop v. Colonial Bank of Australasia, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 228, 232; 2 A.L.T., 90.

Land Under "Transfer of Land Statute"—Duties of Administrator Relating to.]—Per Stephen, J. An administrator of land under the Act No. 301 can sell or mortgage, and is only accountable to his cestui que trust for what he does. Droop v. Colonial Bank, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 71, 78.

See also Swan v. Seal, infra column 437.

Carrying on Business Improperly—Liability for Loss Resulting.]—A testator directed that his business should be carried on by his executors, under proper management, for the support of his wife and children; and if, after sufficient trial, it were found that the business could not be carried on without encroaching on the capital, to sell it and invest the proceeds. The executors appointed the testator's son manager, and left the entire control to him. He added other businesses not authorised by the will, and from the joint carrying on of them and the original business, loss resulted to the estate. Held, affirming Stawell, C.J., that the executors were liable for the loss, inasmuch as it was their duty to ascertain whether the business was being carried on profitably, and if not being carried on profitably under the management of the son, whether it could be carried on profitably under any management, and if not, then to sell it and invest the proceeds. Graham v. Gibson, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 43.

Affirmed, on appeal. Ibid, and 3 A.L.T., 106.

How Discretion to Sell or Retain Should be Exercised.]—Even though executors have a discretion given them by the testator to sell and convert the property, or retain it as it was at his death, they should wind up a business carried on by the testator as quickly as they can. Knight v. Knight, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 195; 6 A.L.T., 62.

Administrator — Pledging Real Assets.]—An administrator is not warranted in carrying on trade with the deceased's assets, though he may mean to give the estate the benefit of the trade, and if he pledges any part of the real assets for the purpose of such trade to a person advancing money knowing that he means to apply it to such trade, such person cannot sustain his right to the security in a Court of Equity. Swan v. Seal, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 57; 5 A.L.T., 196.

Quære, per Holroyd, J., whether an administrator having assets in his hands before answer and not having asserted his right of retainer before a common decree for administration has been made can assert his right in Master's Office; and whether, if he can do so, plaintiff (creditor) can then give evidence to show that defendant has waived that right although plaintiff has obtained a common decree only. Bailey v. Wright, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 111; 3 A.L.T., 53.

Creditor Obtaining Administration—Member of a Firm—Debt Due to Firm—Commission.]—Where a member of a firm of creditors obtains administration to an intestate's estate he is entitled to retain out of the assets an amount equivalent to the debt owing to his firm by the intestate's estate. Quære whether in such a case commission would be allowed if retainer allowed. Bailey v. Wright, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 67.

Application of Capital to Maintenance.]—Where a testator directed his executors to carry on his business, under proper management, for the support of his wife and children, and if it could not be carried on at a profit, after sufficient trial, to sell it, and invest the proceeds, and, the business not beng profitable, the executors applied capital to maintenance, Held by Stawell. C.J., and affirmed, that they could not be allowed such sums of capital. Graham v. Gibson, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 43; 3 A.L.T., 106.

Payment Out of their Own Funds for Maintenance.]—Where executors had made themselves personally liable for certain sums of money for the purpose of carrying on a business directed to be carried on by the will, Held, by the Full Court, that they should be allowed these sums. Graham v. Gibson, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 43, 53; 3 A.L.T., 106,

Before the Act No. 427—Testator Domiciled in New South Wales.]—A testator domiciled in N.S.W. left personalty in Victoria and N.S.W., and appointed B., a resident in Victoria, as his executor. At that time the rules of the Court in N.S.W. allowed a commission to executors. Held that B. was entitled to a commission at rate of 2½ per cent. on the personal estate collected in Victoria. In re Chadwick's Estate, 2 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 50

Allowance of Commission Before Act No. 427—15 Vic., No. 10, Sec. 16.]—The Court will not act in pursuance of Sec. 16 of 15 Vic., No. 10, allowing commission to executors and administrators, unless there are special circumstances justifying a departure from the rule that a trustee shall make nothing by his trust; on the principle that the long practice of the Court in not doing a thing which it had power to do, should have the effect of a law against doing it, unless under special and exceptional circumstances. In re Hawkins, 3 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 73.

Cases Before Act No. 427—Parol Agreement by Testator—Agreement by Beneficiaries—15 Vic., No. 10, Sec. 16.]—Suit by beneficiaries to administer trusts of a will. On further directions executors put in a claim to commission, based—(1) Upon an agreement by testator, which did not appear in the will. (2) A bargain with the beneficiaries for allowance of commission. Held, upon (1,) If it were not void by the "Statute of Frauds," as not in writing, being an agreement not to be performed within a year, the executors' duties not closing before a year after testator's death, or an agreement which partly affected an interest in lands, it was void, as contrary to the policy and letter of the "Wills Act." Upon (2) That such a bargain would be contrary to public policy; but as these bargains showed some ground for remuneration, the Court would allow it under 15 Vic., No. 10, Sec. 16. A commission of 2½ per cent. for past services on corpus of personalty, and a future commission of 5 per cent. on the money coming to their hands and on the income allowed. Carter v. Murphy, 6 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 166.

Cases Before Act No. 427—No Direction in Will—Law of New South Wales.]—A testator domiciled in New South Wales, the owner of sheep stations in that colony, and of other property in New South Wales and Victoria, after bequeathing his property, appointed a solicitor resident in Victoria sole executor. The will contained no legacy or other provision for the remuneration of the executor. By the law of New South Wales an executor is entitled to commission on the personal estate coming to his hands. Held, per Molesworth, J., that having reference to the practice in New South Wales, the executor should be allowed the same commission on the personalty in Victoria as he would have received had it been personalty in New South Wales, and there accounted for. Held, on appeal against the allowance of commission, that the Court has jurisdiction under 15 Vic., No. 10, Sec. 16, to grant such commission in any case; that the discretion is one properly exerciseable by the Court, and not in the Master's office; and that, as an exercise of discretion by the Primary Judge, the allowance of such commission would not in any case be reviewed on appeal. Chadwick v. Bennett, 1 V.R. (E.,) 109.

Cases Before Act No. 427—Zealous and Judicious Conduct of Executor.]—Although the Court has the power to give commission to an executor, testators may be assumed to have made their wills without reference to its exercise. The zealous and judicious conduct of an executor is not sufficient ground for giving commission. Commission refused to an executor whose conduct had been such, where no commission was directed by the will. Nixon v. Goldspink, 1 V.R. (E.,) 92; 1 A.J.R., 56.

When Commission Allowed or Refused on ex parte Applications—"Administration Act," No. 427, Sec. 25—Testator Dying Before Act in England—Executor Coming to Victoria to Wind Up a Complicated Business—Executor of Executrix.]—A testatrix died in England in 1870, appointing executors there. C., one of the executors, came to Victoria to wind up the business, which was very large and complicated. The testatrix was also executrix of J. McE. Held that the Act is retrospective, but the Court has a discretion. Commission allowed at rate of 2½ per cent., as compensation for C.'s pains and trouble (not as a matter of general right) over and above his expenses. No order as to J. McE.'s estate. In re McEwan, 5 A.J.R., 90.

A testator died in 1866, and the estate was administered in 1884. The Court allowed the executors and trustees a commission at the rate of 4 per cent. Shevill v. Affleck, 6 A.L.T., 131.

Act No. 427, Sec. 25—Executors Obtaining Probate in 1872—Legacy to Executors on Condition of Accepting Executorship—Real Estate Devised to Trustees Before Act No. 427.]—The testator died in December, 1871, and the executors obtained probate February, 1872; hy the will the testator gave a legacy of £100 to one of the executors, on condition of his accepting the office. Held that the executors were to be allowed commission at the rate of 2½ per cent. upon all personal estate received by them after the passing of the Act; that the circumstances under which the legacy of £100 was given did not necessarily import that it was given as a remuneration; that the Court has no jurisdiction where no suit is pending to allow commission, or to direct accounts of real estate devised to trustees before the passing of the Act No. 427. In re Rolfe, 5 A.J.R., 92.

Where a testator died in 1866, before the Act came into force, Held, following in re Rolfe, that in such a case the Court had no jurisdiction to make a summary reference for accounts and commission as to real estate. In the will of Pain, 9 V.L.R., (I. P. & M.,) 54.

Where Remuneration Given by Will—Promise of Remuneration by Testator—Inadequate Legacy.]—A testator by will appointed two executors, leaving them a legacy for their trouble. By codicil he revoked the appointment and appointed two other executors, leaving them the legacy conditionally upon their accepting the office. Before his death the testator had verbally promised that he would remunerate the executors for their trouble. The executors considered the legacy insufficient. Upon their applying to be allowed commission, Held, considering that the testator had verbally promised the executors compensation for their trouble, that the language of the codicil was different from that of the will, and that the "Administration Act 1872," No. 427, allowing the Court to grant commission (Sec. 25) had been passed, that commission should be granted. In the will of Pender, 4 A.J.R., 141.

Legacy Given to Executors on Condition of Accepting Executorship—No Bar to Commission.]—In re Rolfe, ubi supra.

"Administration Act 1872," Sec. 25.]—The "Administration Act 1872," Sec. 25, does not overrule the intention of testators, so that commission should be allowed contrary to their wish. In the will of Millin, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 58.

And where a testator had by a codicil to his will (both executed just before the Act) bequeathed a legacy of £100 a-piece to his executors and trustees, or to trustees appointed in substitution for the trustees originally appointed "if they should act," the Full Court, overruling Molesworth, J., Held that it was not a clear intimation on the part of the testator that the executors were not to have commission, and referred it to the Master to allow what commission he thought proper, having regard to the fact that legacies were left. In the will of Millin, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 58, 86.

Remuneration Given by Will.]—Executors will be allowed commission, although the testator has in accordance with an intention previously expressed to them of remunerating them, given them each a legacy as an acknowledgment for the trouble of executing the trusts of the will. In the will of Kay, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 94.

The order was that the Master might allow commission without prejudice at the rate of 4 per cent. on the corpus of all principal monies and at the rate of 5 per cent. for rents and profits "which came or might come to their hands," the applicants to be deemed to have renounced their legacies, and not to charge otherwise for any costs and expenses in collecting the said rents and profits. Ibid.

Remuneration Given by Will for Services.]—Where a testator gives legacies to his executors in a manner clearly indicating that they are given as a remuneration for their trouble, the executors will be allowed no commission. In the estate of Riley, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 28.

That executors have had increased trouble, thereby incurring expenses which may be charged against the estate, affords no ground for granting commission. Ibid.

Legacy Left to Executors Proving the Will.]—Where a testator left a legacy to such of his executors as should prove his will, Held that this was not to be considered as to whether the commission should or should not be granted, but only as to the amount of the commission. In the estate of Sargood, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 43.

Direction that Executors Should Retain a Certain Sum to Repay themselves for Services.]—Where a testator directed that the executors should retain and divide equally between themselves a sum of £150 for the trouble they would have in the execution of the trusts, Held, affirming Molesworth, J., that the words implied a payment for services, and the gift was not by way of bounty, and that the executors were not entitled to commission. In the will of Fellows, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 82; 1 A.L.T., 53.

Legacy to Executors for their Trouble.]—The Court cannot consider the adequacy or inadequacy of a legacy given by a testator to executors as remuneration for their trouble, and if one be given, however small, will refuse commission. In the will of Richmond, 8 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 22.

Small Commission Fixed by Will.]—Where a will gives a small commission to executors (1 p.c.) as a remuneration for services, the Court will not make an order for commission. In the will of Stanway, 9 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 36.

Commission—Executor Excluded by Will.]—The Court refused to allow commission to an executor where the testator had, by his will, bequeathed a commission to executors, excepting the applicant by name, who, moreover, took an interest under the will. In the will of Bell, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 100; 2 A.L.T., 92.

Commission—Rate—Verbal Expression of Intention of Testator.]—In allowing commission to executors the Court will not regard any verbally expressed intention of the testator as to the rate to be allowed. In the estate of Sargood, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 43.

Act No. 427, Sec. 25—Act 15 Vic., No. 10, Sec. 16.]—Per Stephen, J., the Court will not grant on an ex parte application, permission to executors to pass accounts and retain a commission. In the estate of Dean, In the estate of Richardson, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 46; 3 A.L.T., 14.

But, per Holroyd, J., the Court has jurisdiction on ex parte applications to make such orders, which should not be prospective. In the estate of Swan, In the estate of Newton, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 49; 3 A.L.T., 41.

"Administration Act 1872," No. 427, Sec. 25—Commission on Taking Accounts in Suit—Interest on Balances—Personalty and Rents Received Prior to Act.]—In an administration suit (reported 5 A.J.R., 25) it was referred to Master to take an account of trustees' receipts and disbursements "giving them all fair credits and allowances." The Master in his report allowed trustees, who were also executors—(1) Commission at rate of 5 per cent. on personalty received in 1865; (2) commission at rate of 5 per cent. on rents and profits of realty received prior and subsequent to Act No. 427; (3) commission at rate of 5 per cent. on interest received by trustees upon investments made by them; and (4) the Master disallowed a surcharge seeking to charge trustees with interest upon balances in their hands. On case coming before Court on exception to Master's report as to several items, the Court overruled exceptions to 1 and 2 and allowed exception to 3. Exception to 4 also was overruled because Master should not charge trustees with interest on balances unless so directed by decree. Westwood v. Kidney, 1 V.L.R. (Eq.,) 65.

Commission on Taking Accounts in a Suit.]—The Master, in taking the accounts in an administration suit, may allow commission to executors, without the express direction of the Court. Pinnock v. Hull, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 18.

"Administration Act 1872," Sec. 25—On Taking Accounts in Suit—Power of Court to Reduce Rate Fixed by Master.]—Per totam curiam. The Supreme Court has jurisdiction to interfere with the amount allowed by the Master, under Sec. 25, as commission, and may reduce or take away the amount so allowed. An administrator employed a stock and station agent to sell part of the real estate. The agent deducted 1½ per cent. as commission, which was charged against the estate, but returned half per cent. to the administrator, who retained it for himself until the fact was discovered in the Master's office, when he refunded it. Under the circumstances, the 2½ per cent. allowed by the Master was reduced to two per cent. Attorney-General v. Huon, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 30; 2 A.L.T., 130, 132.

Narrowing Commission — One Executor Dead—Property Out of Victoria.]—Where a large portion of the work had been done before the Act No. 427, came into force, and one of the executors who shared in that labour was dead, the Court as to property only in Victoria, allowed two per cent. on the corpus, and two per cent. on the income of all property, the corpus of which had not borne commission. In the will of Brown, 1 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 41.

No Commission Allowed on Property Out of Victoria.]—Where a testator dies possessed of property in this and other colonies, his executors, on passing their accounts, are only allowed commission on the property in Victoria. In the estate of Sargood, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M..) 43.

Future Commission—"Administration Act 1872"—Sec. 25.]—The Court in allowing executors to pass their accounts and receive commission, under Sec. 25 of the "Administration Act 1872," will not make an order for future commission on moneys to be received after passing the accounts. In the estate of Hine, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 64.

Form of Order.]—For form of order allowing executors to pass accounts and receive commission, see In the will of Short, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 25; 2 A.L.T., 114.

Contest Between Surviving Executor and Executors of a Deceased Executor.]—The executors of a deceased executor must arrange with a surviving executor as to the proportions in which the commission is to be divided; the Master will not have the additional trouble of apportioning commission put upon him. In re Henry, 1 A.L.T., 92.

Surviving Executor.]—F. and B., as executors, acted together till B.'s death. The Court allowed commission to F. and B.'s representative during B.'s life to be equally divided, and to F. alone a commission for assets received since B.'s death. In the will of Wilsmore, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 60.

Application for by One of the Executors.]—On an application by an executor for leave to pass accounts and for commission, the co-executrix who was entitled to all the property, did not concur in the application. The applicant had undertaken the office at the request of the testator, had done all the work, and had attempted to get the co-executrix to agree to the commission, and had sent her a letter intimating his intention to apply to the Court. The Court refused the application on the ground that an application by one executor to pass accounts without the concurrence of his co-executor should be refused; and intimated that if the applicant was entitled to a commission he should pay himself, or file a bill for administration. In re Cameron, 1 A.L.T., 128.

Carrying on Testator's Business—Rate Left to be Fixed by Master.] — Where executors were directed by will to carry on the testator's business, the Court granted an order for them to pass their accounts, with liberty for the Master to allow such commission as he thought fit. In the will of Hodges, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.) 68.

Notice to Party Entitled to Surplus—Costs of Application.]—Where executors carried on the business of a testator who was in embarrassed circumstances, paid the creditors in full, and had a balance which was insufficient to pay them at the ordinary rate, and to which a person in England was entitled, Held that they should have given such person notice of their intention to apply for a commission, but order made for commission at rate of 5 per cent. under the circumstances. Executors must bear their own costs of passing the accounts. In the will of Klemm, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 90.

On What Property Commission Chargeable.]—The Court will not grant executors commission on income derived from investments of the corpus, on which corpus they have already received a commission. In the estate of M'Lean, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 19; 2 A.L.T., 106.

See also S.P., Westwood v. Kidney, ante column 442; and Sawyers v. Kyte, 4 A.J.R., 144.

Allowance of Commission — When there are Unpaid Creditors.]—Where the creditor of an insolvent took out administration to his estate and paid creditors a dividend, the court made the usual order for commission and passing accounts. In re O'Connor, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 75.

But quære, whether the Court had power to do so when there were unpaid creditors; and where executors proved a will of an insolvent, paid the creditors 10s. in the pound, and seven months' after probate applied for commission, held that the Court would not sanction an ex parte adjustment so soon, and quære, whether it had power to do so at all. In re Murdoch, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.) 77; 1 A.L.T., 19.

No Commission to Trustees—Act 15 Vic., No. 10, Sec. 16—No. 427, Sec. 25.]—The Court will not extend the power to refer to the Master to take accounts and allow commission under No. 10, Sec. 16, which relates only to executors and administrators, to trustees beyond the period of executorship under No. 427; though such trustees may be entitled under No. 427, when they are accounting under a proper proceeding. In the will of Froomes, 1 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 17.

Commission Granted as to Original Executors Only.] — Where a testator appointed three trustees as executors, and one of them renounced and disclaimed, and another trustee was appointed in his place, on a motion by the two original and the substituted executor and trustee to pass their accounts, the Court granted the motion as to the original executors and trustees only. In the estate of Sargood, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 43.

Where an application was made for commission to an executor and a trustee, the Court granted the order as to the executor only. In the will of Haines, 4 A.L.T., 176.

A testator appointed two executors and an executrix; the first two were also appointed trustees. All three took probate and acted, and then the real estate was handed over to the trustees. All three applied for liberty to account and for commission. Held that there was no jurisdiction to allow summary accounting by trustees. The Master was directed to take the accounts of the executor and executrix, but not of the execution of the trusts, with usual directions as to commission. In the will of McMahon, 9 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 39; 5 A.L.T., 81.

Application for Commission by Creditor.] — An application by a creditor, who has taken out administration to the estate of his debtor for commission, should be made in the first instance to the Master in Equity. And if it be necessary to apply to the Court, the affidavit should state the amount of the debt, for the Court is adverse to the practice of small creditors taking the profitable administration of large property. The next of kin should also be informed of the application. In the goods of Sanders, 1 A.J.R., 2.

Trustees, Executors, and Agency Company—Act No. 644, Secs. 2, 8—Administration, c.t.a.]—Held, per Full Court, reversing Molesworth, J., that where the Company was appointed administrator, c.t.a., under power of attorney of an executor resident out of the colony, the company had power under their Act, Secs. 2 and 8, to fix the rate of commission. In the will of H. Reynolds, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 61; 2 A.L.T., 142, 156.

Commission—Of Trustees, Executors, and Agency Company—How Determined—Act No. 644, Sec. 8.]—Where a testator appointed an executor who resided in N.S.W., and the executor appointed the Trustees, Executors, and Agency Company his agent to obtain administration, c.t.a. in Victoria. Molesworth, J., granted the application, but reserved to the Court the power to measure the rate of remuneration to be paid to the company in respect to the administration of the estate; and, according to the interpretation put upon Sec. 8 of Act No. 644 by Molesworth, J., a distinction was drawn between cases in which the testator had appointed the company, and cases in which it was appointed as an attorney for an executor. Upon appeal, Held that the Court had no power to reserve to itself the right of fixing the amount of commission, but that the commission allowed should be that fixed by the Board of Directors, subject to the review of the Court. In re Reynolds, 2 A.L.T., 142, 156; 3 A.L.T., 29.

Residuary Legatee Opposing ex parte Proceedings.]—Where a residuary legatee opposed an application for passing accounts, and filed an affidavit stating his dissatisfaction with the accounts filed, Held that by 15 Vic., No. 10, Sec. 16, the Court had power to make an order to pass accounts, leave being given to the legatee to appear thereon, and making him bound thereby. In the will of Wright, 5 V.L.R., (I. P. & M.,) 61.

Accounts Not Filed in Time.]—In considering the amount of commission to be allowed executors, the Court will take into consideration the fact that they have not filed their inventory within fifteen months of the time of probate being granted. In the estate of Sargood, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 43.

Time Within Which an Application for Commission Should be Made.]—Per Molesworth, J. Executors should wait a year or so after taking out probate before making the application for commission. In the estate of Allison, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 93; 6 A.L.T., 143.

Part Payment of a Dishonoured Promissory Note Made Twice Over by Administrator Partly Through His Own Fault Party Through Default of Intestate.]—In a suit for administration against an administrator of an intestate, it appeared that the intestate had accepted a promissory note for £110 in favour of one G., from whom he had purchased land, this note being in part payment of purchase money. At time of death deceased had £90 in a bank to his credit, and the bank with whom the promissory note was deposited appropriated this amount towards part payment of promissory note. The defendant administrator afterwards paid the £110 to G., and the costs of conveyance in completiug the sale. Held that the loss of the double payment must fall on the defendant, and an exception against the Master's report in not giving credit to the estate for the sum of £90 so appropriated by the bank allowed. Mulloy v. Mulloy, 3 A.J.R., 7.

Commission paid by administrators to persons becoming sureties for the due administration of the estate will not be allowed as administratiou expenses, notwithstanding the fact that such commissiou was paid before the Rules which forbid such payments being treated as expenses were promulgated. Attorney-General v. Huon, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 30, 41, 46; 2 A.L.T., 130.

Payment of Legacy to Married Woman Who had Obtained a Protection Order Under 21 and 22 Vic., Cap. 108, Sec. 6—Her Receipt an Effectual Discharge of Executors in Absence of Return to Cohabitation.] — In re Dickason's Trusts, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 184; 3 A.L.T., 85, post under HUSBAND AND WIFE—Maintenance and Protection Orders.

Filing Accounts—Regulæ Generales, June, 1873, Rule 16—Vouchers.] — An administrator filed his accounts before the Master, but had not produced vouchers. Held that that was sufficient compliance with Rule 16, and there was no authority to compel him to produce vouchers. In re Benjamin Crosby, 3 A.J.R., 117.

In Master's Office—Balance in Hands of Executors and Trustees—Interest.]—The Master should not charge the trustees with interest on balances unless so directed by the decree. Westwood v. Kidney, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 65.

Power to Direct—Funds Received by Administrator, c.c a., in England—15 Vic, No. 10, Sec. 16.] —The Court has no power, under 15 Vic.,

No. 10, Sec. 16, to direct accounts as to funds received in England by an administrator, c.t.a., who acts as agent for executors in Victoria. In the will of Kay, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 94.

Liability to File Accounts—Act No. 427, Sec. 17—Rules, June 23rd, 1873, Rule 16.]—Rule 16 of the Rules of June 23rd, 1873, made under Sec. 17 of Act 427, directing executors and administrators to file accounts, is not ultra vires. Where, upon a rule nisi calling upon an administrator to show cause why he should not file an account under Rule 16, the administrator, in defence, showed a statement filed, which the Court regarded as totally insufficient, the rule was made absolute. In the estate of Wolff, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 44.

Filing Statsment of—No. 427, Sec. 17, and Rules, June 1873—Practice—Costs.]—A rule nisi had been obtained calling upon an administrator to file an account, and on the day before it was returnable the administrator's proctor handed to the proctor of the next of kin a statement of accounts, stating that it was to be filed forthwith, and offered to pay costs incurred up to date. Held that the next of kin being entitled to their costs, a tender of costs should be as nearly as possible according to the rules of law as to tender, and that a mere offer to pay was insufficient, that cash enough to cover the costs should have been tendered. The Court made an order for costs of the application to be paid by the administrator. In the estate of Orr, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 51.

Liabilty to Fils Accounts—Attachment.]—A rule nisi for attachment had been obtained upon materials relating to a rule to administer real estate, but the rule nisi referred to an order for the administration of the personal estate. In both of these the duty of filing within fifteen months was disregarded. The Court discharged the rule nisi without costs on the ground of the irregularity. In re Spurling, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 86; 1 A.L.T., 67.

Rule nisi for Attachment Against Administrator for Not Filing "Three Months" Inventory.]—See In re Dowling, ante column 66.

Executor Not Filing Accounts—Rule for Attachment—Notice.]—If an executor has not filed his accounts as required by Rule 16 of Regulæ Generales, of June 23rd, 1873, the proper course is to move for an order nisi for an attachment for not filing accounts. But a letter should first be written calling the attention of the executor to the fact that the application will be made forthwith, if accounts are not immediately filed. In the will of Oliver, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 28.

Semble, that a week's notice to the executor of such application is sufficient. Ibid.

Probate Granted in 1857—15 Vic, No. 10, Sec. 16.]—Under the rules in force in 1857 an executor is only required to file accounts when required to do so by the Court. In the will of Lord, 1 A.L.T., 114.

For Other Cases of Passing Accounts Before Master.]—See under COMMISSION, ante.

Wilful Default.]—A testatrix appointed W.L., M., O'F., and T.L. executors and trustees. At the time of her death M. owed her £440, T.L. £400, and there was in the hands of O'F., who was her solicitor, a sum of £250 awaiting investment. T.L. left Victoria without paying the debt, and O'F. left the colony without accounting for the £250, which was lost to the estate. Bill by beneficiaries under the will against W.L. and M. charging wilful default as to O'F.'s loss and T.L.'s unpaid debt. The Bill alleged erroneously, as the evidence showed that £500 was lost to the estate through O'F. W.L., in his answer admitted this, but M. insisted in his answer that £250 only was lost to estate through O'F. Held that W.L. was estopped from contradicting his own answer, and as O'F. was solvent for years after the death of the testatrix, that it was the duty of W.L. to have enforced the investment of the £500, and that he was liable for its loss, and to a decree with wilful default; that M. was liable for the loss through O'F. because he allowed the misappropriation of funds coming to O'F.'s hands after the death, but that such neglect did not warrant a decree for wilful default; that T.L. was never since the death of the testatrix able to pay his debt, and so neither W.L. nor M. was chargeable with wilful default in respect of it. Allen v. Lane, 2 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 1.

Chattel Real Taken by Administrator as Part of Personalty.]—G. and M. were partners in a station property. G. sold his interest to M. for £2500—£500 cash and £2000 in bills, which was further secured by a mortgage of whole property by M. to G. During partnership M. and G. applied for a Crown grant of a pre-emptive section to 640 acres. Some station agents advanced the £500 to M., and also the purchase and other moneys for the section secured by a mortgage from M. of the station, which was to have priority over G.'s mortgage. The station agents obtained the Crown grant of the section, and on M.'s making default in payment, sold the station and handed the surplus (£700) and the grant of the section to A.G., a brother of G., who had taken out administration to him, and A.G. held this as security for the £2000 still owing by M. to G.'s estate. A.G. died intestate, and Mrs. A., a sister of G., took out administration de bonis non to G. and administration to A.G., and entered into possession with her husband of the section. On suit by G.'s next of kin for administration, Held that Mrs. A., having taken possession of the section as personalty, and under no other colour of title, was bound to account for it as personalty. Gordon v. Allan, 3 A J.R., 95.

Duties—Administrator, c.t.a., being Attorney under Power of Trustees and Executors Rssident in England.]—A. was attorney under power of executors appointed by a will of a testator who died in England, and A. obtained administration, c.t.a., in Victoria. Held, that A. should send to England personal property received, and as to produce of real estate (after debts paid) he was a mere trustee under Act. 427, Sec. 9, without working duties, for the executors and trustees in England. In the will of Ruddock, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 297; 1 A.L.T., 89.

Promise to Pay Debt of Intestate.]—A promise in writing by an administrator absolutely to pay a debt of his intestate with interest, one month after notice, whether such administrator were administrator at the time of the promise or not, discloses sufficient consideration, i.e., a promise to forbear for one month, and will render the administrator liable to pay the debt out of his own property. Wilson v. Luth, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 73; 1 A.L.T., 162.

Liabilities of Persons Dealing With.]—Persons dealing with executors who are also trustees, are not bound to enquire whether the executorship has or should be turned into a trusteeship, and consequently a person parting with assets to one of three executors also trustees, is not liable for a misappropriation made by that one without the knowledge of the other two executors and trustees. K. and D. were trustees of a marriage settlement. Pursuant to a power contained in the settlement, R.W. made a will appointing K.G. and W. executors and trustees. K. sold some bank shares, part of the property comprised in the will and settlement, and applied the proceeds to his own use. D. joined in the assignment of these shares, but K. treated them in the balance-sheet furnished to his co-executors as part of outstanding trust estate. Held that D. was not liable for K.'s misappropriations. Sawyers v Kyte, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 61, 70.

Misappropriation of Assets — Liability of Co-Executor.]—A. and B. were appointed executors, and both of them signed a cheque by which A. obtained possession of part of the trust estate, A. representing that he was going to invest it at higher interest than could be got in the banks, and A. then misappropriated it. Held that A. and B. were both liable, as having realised all the assets, their duty was simply to pay it to the person entitled. Jones v. Taylor, 2 V.R. (E.,) 15.

Mining Shares Retained.]—Where part of a testator's property at his death consisted of mining shares, and he gave his executors a discretion to sell his property or retain it as it was at his death, and the executors retained the shares, Held that they were not chargeable for retaining them, having regard to the will, but that mining shares are, from their fluctuation in value, inconvenient as a continuing investment, and, where property is limited distinguishing corpus from income, are undesirable, owing to the prolonged responsibility they cause in regard to calls, &c. Knight v. Knight, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 195; 6 A.L.T., 62.

Duty to Inform Devisee of the Nature of an Application to Bring Land Devised Under the "Transfer of Land Statute."] — See Campbell v. Jarrett, post column 454.

Liability for Costs.]—See ADMINISTRATION for costs in Administration Suits, and WILL—Probate and Letters of Administration for Costs in Propounding Will or Opposing Will.

Power of an Administrator After Obtaining Administration to Disaffirm Acts Before Administration.]—J.A.S., the mortgagee of land with power of sale, died intestate in England. F.R.S., the devisee of the heir-at-law of J.A.S., appointed O. his attorney under power to take out administration in Australia to the personal estate of J.A.S. O., without taking out administration in Victoria, sold to S., who sold to H. O. absconded without accounting to F.R.S for purchase money. W., having been appointed attorney under power of F.R.S., took out administration, and in conjunction with F.R.S. brought a suit for foreclosure making H. a party to avoid his alleged title, and dispossess him. Held that the sale by O. to S. might be set aside by W. notwithstanding his obtaining administration, for if F.R.S. himself had sold instead of O., and afterwards taken out administration in Victoria, he would have been entitled to disaffirm his own acts and maintain this suit. Walduck v. Corbett, 4 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 48.

"Administration Act," No. 427—Administration Suit—Real Estate—Sale pendente lite.]—An administration suit was instituted against the administratrix, who during the suit moved for liberty to sell the real estate. Held that an administration suit does not suspend an administrator's power to sell the personal estate; and, therefore, under Act No. 427, does not suspend the power to sell the real estate. An administrator has power to sell real estate pendente lite without applying to the Court. Motion refused, as unnecessary. Dawson v. Dawson, 1 V.L.R., (E.,) 182.

Power of Sale.] — A testator devised the income of real estate to certain persons during the life of one of them, and directed that the estate should be sold at the death of such person, and the proceeds divided amongst the others; but did not say by whom the sale was to be effected and the division made, and appointed executors, of whom all but one died. Held that the surviving executor had power to sell. In the will of Crosby, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 96; 1 A.L.T., 194.

Power to Sell for Payment of Duty Under Act No. 388.]—See ante columns 392, 393.

Executor Reserving Right to Prove Will if Terms of Bargain Offered by Him to His Co-executor Not Acceded to.]—Held, per the Full Court, that a person appointed executor of a will cannot make a legal bargain with his co-executor respecting the testator's property for his own benefit, reserving to himself the right of proving the will if the co-executor refuses to accede to his terms; but, per Privy Council, there is not necessarily any objection to his so acting. Clark v. Clark, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 303, 320; L.R., 9 App. Ca., 733, 742.

Purchase of Testator's Estate by an Executor Who Has Not Proved.]—Held, per the Full Court, that until a person appointed executor unmistakeably divests himself of that character, or by his solemn act puts it out of his power ever to clothe himself with it, he is as much incapacitated from purchasing from his co-executor as if he had obtained probate; but, per the Privy Council, a sale is not to be avoided merely because where entered upon the purchaser may at his option become the trustee of the property purchased, as, for instance, in the case above put by obtaining probate, though in point of fact he never does become such trustee. A purchaser under such circumstances is under no disability, and to avoid the sale there must be shown such a use of his power as to render it inequitable that the transaction should stand. Clark v. Clark, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 303, 321; L.R., 9 App. Ca., 733, 737.

II. Administration and Distribution of Estate.

15 Vic., No. 10, Sec. 16—Act No. 112, Sec. 51.]—The law imposes upon administrators the necessity of acting upon a doubtful state of facts, and they are bound at their peril to ascertain what the facts really are. The Court will not, under 15 Vic., No. 10, Sec. 16, assume a jurisdiction to determine matters of fact. And Sec. 51 of No. 112, does not mean that the Court is to investigate facts and advise the administrator. It expressly requires the administrator to bring the facts before the Court for its opinion as to the law applicable to them. In the goods of Holdsworth, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 113.

Under Direction of the Court—Executors Protected.]—Courts of Equity have established, in a series of cases, that executors will be protected in distributing assets under the direction of the Court, if they fairly give it all the information they possess; but it has never been expressly decided in a suit against a future contingent creditor that they will be so protected. Pinnock v. Hull, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 18.

A testator, shareholder in a life and general insurance company, was, as such, at his death entitled to profits and liable for losses. His executors sold the shares, but refused to pay certain legatees under the will, on the ground that there might be some question as to the liability of the testator, or his assets, for contracts of the company after the assignment of the shares. They published notices under "The Statute of Trusts 1864," No. 234, Sec. 60, as to the distribution of assets, and protecting executors from claims not sent in in pursuance of the advertisements. On Bill by the legatees praying the Court to direct payment, and to make regulations as to bonds or undertakings for the indemnity of the trustees as might be fit, or to direct administration accounts, Held that the Court could only protect the executors by a decree in a suit for administration of assets; that the publication of the notice was unimportant, as to debts or liabilities of which the executors had notice. Decree made directing usual administration accounts, and advertisement for persons with claims against the testator as a shareholder; and service of the decree on the company. Ibid.

Mining Shares—Calls—Dividends.]—Calls paid by a testator on mining shares held by him at his death should be treated as paid out of the corpus of the estate, and the dividends on them be added to the income. Knight v. Knight, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 195; 6 A.L.T., 62.

III. Executor De Son Tort.

"Administration Act 1872," No. 427, Secs. 7, 10—Rents of Real Estate.]—A plaint in the County Court in its equitable jurisdiction alleged that A., without obtaining administration, had received rents of certain real estate to which certain infants were entitled. The infants so entitled brought the plaint against A. and B., who had subsequently obtained administration, c.t.a. In the County Court the Judge dismissed the plaint without taking evidence on the grounds that A. had not made himself liable as executor de son tort, and that the remedy was by an action at law by B. against the tenants who had paid to the wrong person. Held, on appeal, that by the operation of Secs. 7 and 10, of No. 427, A. was liable as executor de son tort, and that a suit in equity would lie against A. and B., making them joint defendants. Case to be re-heard before Molesworth, J. Barnicoatt v. Williams, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 22.

Note.—A decree for administration accounts was afterwards made, A. being charged with an account of the rents received by him.

Widow of Intestate Married to a Second Husband Sued Jointly with her Husband as Executrix and Executor de son tort of Land Held by Intestate Under Residence Area License.]—See Fitzgerald v. Elliott, 5 A.J.R., 3, post under Mining — Jurisdiction, &c.—Of Warden.

IV. Suits and Actions by and Against.

Action Against Executors Generally—No Consideration.]—S. "ordered C. to put stone steps to his residence, also general repairs to the house; in fact, all that Mrs. S., who was present, required." C. began the work and S. died. The agent of his executors, without informing them, told C. that some of the work was of immediate necessity, and must be done; and, subsequently, after seeing the executors, told C. "to complete the work as originally directed by S." C. did work under these orders to the value of £622, and his work was approved of by the executors. C. did other work, which could not be regarded as work done "as originally directed by S." The executors paid on account of a larger bill a larger sum than was sufficient to cover the items not done "as originally directed by S." C. sued the executors personally, and obtained a verdict for the full amount, and leave was reserved to move for a nonsuit. Held, dubitante sed non dissentiente Molesworth, J., that the executors were not liable as executors, there having been no new consideration for any fresh contract with them, and no evidence to go to the jury of a contract between them and C. by which they ever intended to make themselves personally liable. Cutler v. Barber, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 128.

Plea of Plene Administravit—Evidence to Support.]—Action against executors on a bill of exchange. Plea plene administravit. In support of the plea the executors gave evidence that the only personal estate of the testator consisted of his share in a partnership which was not realised, and of certain furniture specifically bequeathed. Held that the partnership share formed assets, and that the plea was not sufficiently supported, and judgment for plaintiff. Mooney v. Plummer, 2 V.R. (L.,) 52.

Power to Bring Ejectment.]—Where an executor has allowed a universal legatee to remain in possession of leaseholds for more than 15 years after testator's death, he cannot maintain ejectment against her. Where a testator had granted a sub-lease for 31 years in 1847 to G., which was the whole of the original term granted to him, Held that the executor had no power to maintain ejectment in respect of such property. Mills v. Mills, 3 A.J.R., 80.

An administrator appointed under the Act No. 427 to the estate of a person who died before the Act. and in whose name a Crown grant of lands has been issued since his death, cannot bring ejectment as to such lands. Edmondson v. Macan, see ante column 398.

Non-Production of Probate.]—In an action against an executrix the probate to her was not produced. Held that it was not necessary that the probate should be produced, and that proof of acts from which the grant of probate might be inferred was sufficient; that the proof was not negatived by the production of letters of administration, and certainly could not be contradicted by production of a probate in which the defendant was named as executrix, though whether it could be negatived by production of a probate in which the defendant was not so named quære. Buisson v. Warburton, 4 A.J.R., 43, 119.

Contract by Testator—Liability of Executors.]—A contract, involving the exercise of a testator's personal discretion, does not bind his executors; it falls within the maxim, actio personalis moritur cum personâ. A testator promised an auctioneer in whose hands lands of his were placed for sale, to leave the lands always in his hands for sale, and to allow him full commission on future sales, in consideration of the auctioneer giving up half the commission already earned. Held that such an arrangement must be taken with the qualification "if ever the testator should determine to sell," and as such was a question involving the exercise of personal discretion, the promise did not bind the executors. Buckland v. M'Andrew, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 430; 1 A.L.T., 102.

For Wrongful Act of Testator—Act No. 274, Sec. 411.]—B. sued the executors of a testator for excessive distress committed by the testator more than six months before his death. The action was commenced in testator's lifetime, and continued by entering a suggestion of his death, and that defendants were his executors. Held that the action did not survive against the executors, the maxim actio personalis cum persona moritur applying. Buchner v. Davis, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 444.

Executors of Past Shareholder of a Mining Company Not Liable for Contribution on Winding-Up of Company.]—Cooper v. Bath, 2 V.R. (L.,) 136; 2 A.J.R., 86, post under MINING—Company—Winding-Up.

Action of Detinue—One Executor Pledging Testator's Property for Debt of His Own—New Trial.]—An action of detinue for property of their testator cannot be maintained by all the executors, where one of such executors has pledged the property with the defendant for a debt of his own, even though he were not executor at the time of the pledge. A new trial will be granted on this ground, though the objection was not taken at the trial. Hartney v. Higgins, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 65; 1 A.L.T., 161.

"Transfer of Land Statute"—Will—Executor—Costs.]—A testator devised a portion of a block of land to his daughter, and the other portion to his son who was appointed executor. The son induced the daughter to bring the land under the Act No. 301. In a suit brought by the daughter to rectify the certificates of title issued, Held that the son was liable to pay plaintiff's costs because it was his duty as executor to see that plaintiff understood the application for the certificate of title. Campbell v. Jarrett, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 137; 3 A.L.T., 49.

EXHUMATION.

Ordered on Behalf of Prisoner on Trial for Murder—Post Mortem Evidence.]—On the application of counsel for a prisoner committed to take his trial for murder, an order was made by a Judge of the Supreme Court permitting exhumation of the body of the person alleged to have been murdered from its grave in the Melbourne cemetery for the purpose of anatomical investigation by surgeons appointed by the Crown and the prisoner. Regina v. Beâney, 3 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 73.

EXTRADITION OF CRIMINALS.

Crimes Against Insolvency Laws—Sufficiency of Warrant—6 & 7 Vic., Cap. 34, Sec. 3.]—A prisoner was committed for detention, with a view to his being sent to New Zealand, whence he had absconded, under a warrant reciting that he had been charged with felony, in that his affairs being in the course of liquidation, he did within four months of the commencement of the liquidation, "feloniously" quit New Zealand, and take property to the amount of, &c. Held that the warrant disclosed sufficient evidence of criminality to justify the detention of the prisoner under 6 and 7 Vic., Cap. 34, Sec. 3, although it did not expressly state that the property was the prisoner's or divisible among his creditors, the Court considering that the word "feloniously" negatived the presumption that the property was not the prisoner's or so divisible. In re Fishenden, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 143.

Sufficiency of Warrant — "Fugitive Offenders' Act 1881," Sec. 5.]—A warrant from New Zealand for the apprehension of an offender against the insolvency law of that colony, stated that insolvency proceedings had been instituted in an inferior Court, and set out in general terms that the Court was competent, that the proceedings were regular, that the offender had been charged with an offence to which Part I. of the "Fugitive Offenders' Act 1881," was applicable, and stated the offence, though without stating that the punishment therefor was imprisonment with hard labour for twelve months. Held that there was sufficient evidence to comply with Sec. 5 of the Act, and that the warrant was sufficient. In re Ryan, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 327; 4 A.L.T., 87.

"Fugitive Offenders' Act," 44 and 45 Vic., Cap. 69—Extradition—Illness of Prisoner.]—S. had been in the employ of a bank in New Zealand and had been transferred to a branch of the same bank in Melbourne. He was in such employ until his arrest on a charge of embezzlement. On a writ of habeas corpus, Held that he was a fugitive within the meaning of the Act, and amenable to extradition. An application made on affidavits showing that he was in bad health so that a voyage to New Zealand might endanger his life, that he might be allowed out on bail to be cared for by his friends, was granted. In re Smyth, 9 V.L.R. Extortion—"Justices of Peace Statute," No. 267, Sec. 37—Fee.]—The Justices had convicted M., a Clerk of Petty Sessions, under Sec. 37 of Act No. 267, for taking and receiving for the issue of a summons a higher fee than allowed by the Act; M. did not apply the money to his own use, but paid the whole into the Treasury. Held that the Act contemplated that the taking of the moneys should be wilful and for an improper purpose. Order absolute for prohibition. Regina v. Lloyd, ex parte Munce, 3 V.R. (L.,) 64; 3 A.J.R., 40.

FELON AND FELONY.

42 Vic., No. 627, Secs. 6, 8, 9, 11, 17—Felon's Estate—Curator.]—A., a lessee of a mining lease, was convicted of forgery March 16th, 1882, and B. was, under Sec. 8 of Act No. 627, appointed curator of his estate. August 31st, B. applied to Registrar of Titles, to be registered as proprietor of the lease. Early in September, A., being then released from imprisonment, lodged a caveat, and on September 13th, A. transferred to C. and D. all his estate and interest in the lease. Bill by A. C. and D. against B. and Registrar to restrain B.'s registration. Held, on demurrer, that A. having served his sentence became again entitled to his former estate, and B. became a trustee for him, and that any defence B. might have on the ground of his right to be reimbursed the various charges detailed in the bill should be made by answer. Semble, where the curator is warranted in conveying he may become a registered proprietor in order to convey, but he must show why he should acquire this power conclusively protected against the felon's rights. *Mitchell v. FENCES.

Replication to Plea of Breach of Agreement to Fence—When Bad—Agreement to Fence under "Fences Statute 1874"—Circuity of Action.]—A replication to a plea of damage feasant in an action for seizing sheep, stated that the plaintiff and the defendant were adjoining owners, that they had agreed, under the "Fences Statute 1874," that each should fence half the common boundary, that the plaintiff had done so, but not the defendant, and that three months had not expired from the time of the agreement, but that a reasonable time had, at the time of the trespass. Held bad, since it did not show that the defendant was in fault, since he had three months in which to fence under the "Fences Statute 1874," and there could therefore be no circuity of action to be avoided. O'Shea v. D'Arcy, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 142; 1 A.L.T., 170.

A replication to such a plea, which stated an agreement (independently of the "Fences Statute") to fence forthwith, and that the trespass occurred through the defendant's default, was held good. Ibid.

Act No. 479, Secs. 7, 8—Notice to Fence.]—C., the owner of land adjoining that of R., served upon him a notice under Sec. 7 to join in the cost of fencing, and proposed that he should fence one-half between certain specified points, and that R. should fence the other half. R. agreed to that, but afterwards discovered that C. had taken the less expensive half, and refused to carry out the arrangement. Under Sec. 8 the justices ordered R. to fence his half as arranged. Held that Sec. 7 had been sufficiently complied with to give the justices jurisdiction, and rule nisi for prohibition refused. Ex parte Ryan, 5 V.L.R. On a rule to prohibit, it was contended that unless complainant's fence was a "sufficient fence" within Act No. 479, it was not a "substantial fence" within Act No. 478. Held, it was for the Justices to decide whether the fence was a "substantial fence" within Act No. 478, and they were not governed by the meaning of a "sufficient fence" in Act No. 479. Rule discharged. Regina v. Hutchinson, ex parte Jessell, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 332; 6 A.L.T., 161.

FISH AND FISHERY.

Taking Fish of Less Weight Than Prescribed by Law—Evidence—"Fisheries Act 1873," Sec. 34.]—T. was fined, under Sec. 34, of the "Fisheries Act 1873," for "taking" fish of less weight than prescribed by that Act. The evidence was to the effect that the Market Inspector found a basket of fish in the possession of a third person in which there were fish under weight. In the basket there was an invoice purporting to be signed by T., but beyond this there was no evidence that T. did "take" the fish, or that the invoice was signed by him. Held that there was no evidence to support the conviction. Ex parte Tobias, 6 A.L.T., 10.

FIXTURES.

Determination of Tenancy at Will — Rsasonabls Time for Rsmoval.]—C. and B. were assignees of gold mining leases issued by the Crown to K. and F. C. and B. allowed the Alma Company to work the land on tribute, and on September 27th, 1866, £600 was due to them for tribute. On September 27th C. and B. required the managers of the company to pay the amount due, and on the same day wrote, instructing him to retain possession of the mine for them, holding them responsible for expenses. The manager, on the 28th September, obeyed by going through the form of discharging himself from the company's service, and entering as the servant of C. and B. The company had erected machinery on the land and made it a fixture to the soil. On September 27th some of the company's workmen had sued the company for wages, and obtained an order from magistrates for payment. On September 29th, under warrants of distress issued under this order, M., a constable, levied on the machinery and took possession. C. and B. asserted their claim, and on an interpleader summons, the magistrates decided against them. Held, on appeal, that the company, although being only tenants at will, should have had a reasonable time after the determination of that tenancy, to remove their fixtures; that the company had not under the circumstances abandoned their right to sever the fixtures, and that the magistrates were right. Clarke v. Tresider, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 164.

On the outer wall of the corridor, but not within the boundaries coloured on the plan nor within the parcels of the lease, were certain ornaments, amongst others a pier glass attached to the wall. L. removed the pier glass, and A. sued him for conversion. Held that the corridor did not pass under the demise nor any of the ornaments adorning it, and that plaintiff could not maintain his action for conversion. *Aarons v. Undue influence is only one of the instances of fraud, and undue influence is manifested in a variety of ways, but it is bottomed in fraud,

Actions for — Deceit — Onus Probandi.] — Per Higinbotham, J.—An action for deceit cannot be based upon a mere statement of intentions, however misleading the statement may be. The onus of proof that the plaintiff was not led into a contract by a misrepresentation is upon the defendant; the defendant must show that, although there may be a misrepresentation, the plaintiff did not rely upon upon it. Allan v. Gotch, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 371, 377.

Action for Deceit—Misrepresentations by Directors of a Company.] — In order to make directors liable in an action of deceit for misrepresentation in a balance-sheet representing the company as in a flourishing condition, it must be shown that they knew, or but for culpable negligence might have known, that the statements were false, there must in fact be moral fraud. Paternoster v. Hackett, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 232; 2 A.L.T., 24.

In such a case the directors are liable if they make the statements, being indifferent or reckless as to their truth or falsity, although they may not have actually known them to be false. Semble, that if they made them believing them to be true, but with no reasonable grounds for such belief, they would be liable. S.C., 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 396; 2 A.L.T., 77.

Actions for Deceit—When Maintainable—Fraudulent Representation on Sale of Horse—Knowledge of Defendant.]—An admission by the defendant that he had heard that the horse had run away once when in harness was held to be sufficient evidence of his knowledge to support a verdict against him for damages occasioned by the running away of a horse when being driven that he had sold as being quiet in harness. Green v. Messiter, 4 A.J.R., 170.

Actions for—Pleadings—Plea of Fraud.]— A plea alleging generally that the defendant was induced to enter into the contract declared on by the fraud of the plaintiff, is good, but it must be taken to include an allegation that the defendant disaffirmed the contract, otherwise it will be bad. M'Millan v. Sampson, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 74; 5 A.L.T., 193.

The defence of fraud may be pleaded in actions of contracts, in a short form, and, whenever that form is used, it imputes an allegation not of fraud only, but of all circumstances necessary to render fraud a good defence in each particular case. Ibid.

There is no principle of equity by which trustees for creditors fairly making a bargain for the adjustment of complicated rights representing their cestuisque trustent, and acting for them as they would for themselves, are to have their bargains defeated because the person who assigned to them fraudulently induced another party to the bargain to enter into it. Evans v. M'Pherson, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 65, 75.

Per Privy Council (affirming the Full Court) —Contracts which may be impeached on the ground of fraud are not void, but voidable only at the option of the party who is or may be injured by such fraud, subject to the condition that the other party, if the contract be disaffirmed, can be remitted to his former state. *Urquhart v. The jury returned a verdict for plaintiff, assessing damages, which consisted of the difference between the prices at which plaintiff bought and resold, a certain sum paid for forfeits by plaintiff, and a sum for "keep" from the time of purchase until plaintiff discovered the deceit. Held, on rule for new trial, that damages must be reduced by amount of "keep," that the "forfeits" were a natural consequence of the false representation of the horse as "untried." *Jellett v. 1. WHAT ARE AND WHAT ARE NOT.

Under 13 Eliz., Cap. 5—Voluntary Settlement to Defeat Person with Cause of Action.]—A voluntary settlement made for the express purpose of defeating a person who has a cause of action against the settlor, but has not issued his writ, is fraudulent within the "Statute 13 Eliz.," Cap. 5, both as between the creditors and official assignee of the settlor and the trustees of the voluntary settlement, and between such creditors and assignee, and a purchaser from the trustees for value, but with notice that the cause of action had accrued before the settlement. Goodman v. Hughes, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 202, 219.

Under 13 Eliz., Cap. 5—Voluntary Settlement of Bills of Exchange.]—G., the settlor, was the owner of two adjoining sheep stations; the plaintiff was induced by advertisements of sale to visit and inspect them, G. representing to the plaintiff that the sheep were looking unhealthy owing to bad shepherding. The plaintiff ultimately purchased the stations and sheep, March, 1864, and in the receipt for the property when taken possession of, G.'s guarantee as to the soundness of the sheep was inserted. On May 10th, G. voluntarily settled upon defendant as a trustee certain bills of exchange, being part of the purchase money for the stations, upon trusts in favour of G., his wife, and children. Shortly afterwards the plaintiff found that the sheep had the fluke, and recovered £2500 for damages and costs in an action for breach of warranty and deceit against G., who, besides the bills of exchange in the settlement, had no property to satisfy the judgment. On a suit by plaintiff to set aside the settlement as void against creditors, Held that as the settlement was executed to defeat apprehended litigation, the settlement was void under 13 Eliz., Cap. 5; that bills of exchange were not liable to execution, at the date of 13 Eliz., Cap. 5; yet the modern law making them so, the Act operated upon them. Per Molesworth, J., the Court will receive evidence of the settlor's intentions, but not evidence of his statements of his motives. Richmond v. Dick, 2 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 143.

13 Eliz., Cap. 5—Valuable but Inadequate Consideration.]—Post-nuptial settlement, August 13, 1858, of property worth £10,000 in consideration of a widow releasing her dower to certain property worth £950, upon trust for sale, and as to the proceeds upon trust for the wife for life, then in trust for the settlor for life, with remainder to children. The settlor at the time of the settlement was involved in various speculations on which he was a heavy loser, and under heavy liabilities, and though perhaps not in insolvent circumstances yet he was pressed by creditors, and had lost the confidence of his bankers. His estate was compulsorily sequestrated, March, 1860. On bill by official assignee to set aside the settlement as void, Held that the settlement was void under 13 Eliz., Cap. 5, and it was set aside; but the Court held that the wife was entitled to the value of her dower released, she being at the time of the settlement a feme covert, and without independent professional advice. Held, also, that the effect of an order absolute sequestrating an estate as between the official assignee and the insolvent conclusively vests property in such assignee, and makes him a representative of the insolvent, although it may be open to a third person to dispute the fact of the insolvency, and the validity of the order. Shaw v. Salter, 2 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 159, 162, 170.

Under 13 Eliz., Cap. 5 — Part Payment of Purchase Money before Certificate of Discharge Under First Insolvency — Subsequent Acts of Settlor as Evidence of Intention.]—H. became insolvent in 1861, and obtained a certificate of discharge December, 1867, J. being official assignee. Under this insolvency creditors were paid 3s. in the pound. Before H.'s discharge he got assistance from his wife's family, and worked as a cabman, saving and making money. By these means he purchased land April 3rd, 1867, paying £200 in cash, and agreeing to pay £200, the balance, in one or two years at his option, the conveyance being executed in escrow to secure the vendor. J. did not interfere in these transactions. H. paid the balance of the purchase-money after obtaining his discharge from the first insolvency, and the conveyance being delivered up was cancelled, and H. voluntarily settled the land upon trustees in trust for his wife and children, remainder to H.'s heirs, April, 1868. H. spent £650 in improvements on land since April, 1869. In December, 1870, the land was brought under the "Transfer of Land Statute," and a certificate issued to J., subject to the rights of the beneficiaries under the settlement. H. became insolvent again in March, 1871, and S. was appointed assignee. Bill by S. against the defendant trustees, the beneficiaries under the settlement, and J., to have the settlement declared void and fraudulent as against the creditors under the second insolvency, and for a right to redeem J.'s claim on the £200 paid before his discharge. Held, by Molesworth, J., and affirmed, on appeal, that the expenditure of £650 in improvements, although made after the settlement, was evidence of a fraudulent intention, and that the settlement was void as against the creditors under the second insolvency under 13 Eliz, Cap. 5; and that J. was entitled to be paid out of the settled lands a sum not exceeding £200 towards satisfaction of debts under the first insolvency. Held, per Molesworth, J., dubitante totâ curiâ that the existence of creditors under the first insolvency, and the settlement being void as to them so far as regards the £200 paid before discharge, would not entitle the second assignee to impugn the settlement. Shaw v. Scott, 3 A.J.R., 16, 128.

Fraudulent Settlement under 13 Eliz, Cap. 5—Discharge—Second Insolvency—Surplus.] — By decree, May, 1868, a voluntary settlement was set aside as void under 13 Eliz., Cap. 5, and the settled property was conveyed to the plaintiffs, the trade, and official assignees, and it was realised, and after paying all debts there was a surplus of £750. The settlor got his certificate of discharge in 1870, and in 1871 his estate was again sequestrated, and J. appointed official assignee. Motion by trustees of settlement, settlor and cestuisque trustent all now sui juris for order that plaintiffs should be at liberty to pay over surplus to J. Held that decree set the settlement aside altogether, and not pro tanto, that the Court had no power to make an order to protect the plaintiffs against persons having a subsequent lien on the surplus, which could only be done by an application under first insolvency to vary plan of distribution. Order for plaintiffs to be at liberty to hand over surplus to J. on receiving consents of all concerned and a sufficient indemnity. Goodman v. Boulton, 3 V.R. (E.,) 20; 3 A.J.R., 2.

Voluntary Settlement—Evidence.]—K., a trader, and being in debt, made a voluntary settlement of all his property upon trust for his wife and children. After K.'s insolvency the official assignee brought a suit to set aside the settlement as being fraudulent and void, the bill alleging that K. was "indebted to other persons, and that many of the debts were unpaid and still owing." Held, reversing Molesworth, J., that a conversation which K. had had with a proposed trustee some time before the settlement, showing a fraudulent intention, was admissible, even although it was in respect of an intended settlement somewhat different in its character, and although this evidence was not put directly in issue by the bill; also that under the allegation in the bill evidence of general indebtedness was admissible to show the fraudulent intent. Goodman v. Boulton, 5 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 86, 90, 95.

Under 13 Eliz., Cap. 5—Release by Official Assignee—Debts Due at Time of Settlement Remaining Owing at Time of Insolvency.]—D., on 4th March, 1863, purchased by one entire contract station and freehold property from C. and B., and mortgaged same to C. and B. to secure purchase money. D. subsequently in 1864 mortgaged other lands not in sale to C. and B. C. and B. sub-mortgaged to defendant bank. Shortly before 1st October, 1870, C. and B. had brought an action against D. on the covenant for payment, and on that date D. (married in 1840) executed a post-nuptial voluntary settlement by which he granted equity of redemption in all his lands to a defendant in trust for appointee of wife, and in default of appointment upon certain trusts in favour of his wife and children. On 1st June, 1871, D.'s estate was sequestrated, and Goodman was appointed assignee. At time of sequestration certain debts other than mortgage debts due at time of settlement were still owing. C. and B. assigned all their interest to bank, and Goodman released his right to the equity of redemption to bank, but release did not comprise certain lands set out in the bill. On 22nd March, 1874, D.'s estate was released from sequestration. Held, in a redemption suit by beneficiaries under settlement, that under the circumstances the settlement was void against bank as to land comprised in Goodman's release by virtue of 13 Eliz., Cap. 5. Sec. 70 of "Insolvency Statute 1871," is not retrospective. Dallimore v. Oriental Bank Corporation, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 13.

Under 13 Eliz., Cap. 5—Post-Nuptial Settlement in Pursuance of Ante-Nuptial Agreement.]—A bill by a creditor impeached a post-nuptial settlement by a father upon his daughter and her husband as voluntary, and the answer alleged that it was executed in pursuance of an ante-nuptial agreement to settle the property in consideration of the marriage, and the bill was not amended so as to attack the ante-nuptial agreement. It appeared that the father was heavily indebted at the date of the settlement (April, 1880,) but that neither the daughter nor her husband knew of his position. The post-nuptial settlement was dated 11th January, 1881, and the father became insolvent March, 1881. In a suit by a creditor to set the settlement aside, Held that it was not enough that there should be a scheme against creditors by the insolvent alone; it should be shown that there was such a scheme between the father, daughter, and her husband: that the ante-nuptial settlement was good as against creditors. Sinnott v. Hockin, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 205; 4 A.L.T., 10.

Mortgage by Wife to Husband of Wife's Separate Property—13 Eliz., Cap. 5.]—A wife had money as her separate property, which she lent to her husband. The husband had promised in writing to mortgage his land as a security for this, and afterwards executed a legal mortgage not strictly in compliance with the promise, but bonâ fide with the intention of carrying it out. Held that such a mortgage might be for valuable consideration, and not void as against creditors under Cap. 5 of 13 Eliz. Smith v. Hope, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 217; 5 A.L.T., 75.

What is a Voluntary Deed—Consideration—When Void under 27 Eliz., Cap. 4.]—B., in August, 1852, by a post-nuptial settlement in consideration of "natural love and affection," conveyed land to trustees upon trust for his wife and children. Afterwards in February, 1855, being pressed by creditors, G. and Co., he sent a letter in which his signature appeared on the second page, and on the third page was a schedule, unsigned, of his property (including the settled property) which B. proposed to mortgage to G. and C. This agreement was carried out, except that the settled property was excluded, and the plaintiffs (G. and Co.) realised on the property, and there being a balance of £8000 due to them brought a suit to set aside the settlement as void against them under 27 Eliz., Cap. 4. Evidence was tendered that B. had received money from his wife's father on the understanding that B. was to make a settlement in favour of his wife and children. Held (1) that the evidence was admissible, but not sufficient to made good consideration; (2) that the "Statute of Frauds" was satisfied as to the agreement to mortgage; (3) that the deed of settlement as voluntary was void as against the plaintiffs, under 27 Eliz., Cap. 4. Gladstone v. Ball, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 277.

Who is a Purchaser Within 27 Eliz., Cap. 4.]—A creditor holding an equitable mortgage is a purchaser within the 27 Eliz., Cap. 4. Ibid.

Two Voluntary Conveyances — Conveysnce by Grantee under Second Voluntary Deed to a Purchaser—Application of 27 Eliz., Cap. 4.]—If there are two voluntary conveyances, and the grantee under the second conveys to a purchaser for value, such purchaser has the benefit of 27 Eliz., Cap. 4, against the first volunteer. Moorhouse v. Rolfe, 4 A.J.R., 159, 160.

Voluntary—Subsequent Marriage When Consideration for a Deed.]—In order to set up a voluntary settlement by reason of the subsequent marriage of a feme cestui que trust, it must be shown that her beneficial interest under the settlement was the inducement for such marriage. Gladstone v. Ball, 1 W. &. W. (E.,) 277, 290.

Family Arrangement—Reciprocal Gifts—27 Eliz., Cap. 4.]—A.R. died intestate, entitled to the equity of redemption in certain land and personal property. His heir-at-law agreed to settle the land equally between the widow and the children, and it was so settled, he taking the personal property and paying debts. Afterwards the heir purported to convey his share in the settlement to a purchaser for value, but really conveyed all the land under the settlement. On a suit by the beneficiaries under the deed other than the heir to set aside the purchase, Held by Molesworth, J., that the settlement was voluntary, the consideration being mere reciprocal gifts, and as such void as against a purchaser for value. Semble, by the Full Court, that the bill might be maintained on the ground of the settlement being for value, and good as against a purchaser. Ronalds v. Duncan, 2 V.R. (E.,) 65, 71, 80; 2 A.J.R., 30, 45.

Voluntary Settlement.]—C., in June, 1872, recovered a judgment against P.P. for £229 14s. 6d., including costs. On the 23rd November, 1871, while the action was pending, P.P. settled land in trust for his wife W.P., the consideration for the settlement being stated to be natural love and affection. On the 20th May, 1872, P.P. and W.P. conveyed the property to J.P., brother to P.P., the consideration being stated as £250, for which a receipt was professed to be given. P.P.'s estate was sequestrated on the 1st of August, 1872. The trustee of P.P.'s estate instituted a suit to have the settlement and conveyance set aside. There was no evidence that J.P. had paid the £250 alleged to have been paid. Held that the settlement was void, and the conveyance fraudulent, and land ordered to be given up to the trustee; also an account of the rents received by J.P., and of expenses incurred by him was directed. Bibby v. Prendergast, 4 A.J.R., 12.

27 Eliz., Cap. 4, Sec. 2—Sale by Settlor After Insolvency, with Concurrence of Assignee.] — In order to set aside a prior voluntary settlement in favour of a subsequent sale for value, it is necessary that the settlor must be the same person who conveys for value, and that he must stand in such a relation to the land that if all previous voluntary settlements were out of the way, he would be the owner of the land he sells for value. Where, therefore, S. settled lands in 1856 voluntarily upon trustees for his wife and family, became insolvent in 1860, and afterwards the assignee, with S.'s concurrence, conveyed the land for value, Held that the beneficiaries under the settlement were entitled as against the purchaser, S. being not in the position of owner of the land, even if the settlement were obliterated since in that case the land would be in his assignee. Sugden v. Reilly, 5 A.J.R., 36.

Voluntary Settlement—27 Eliz., Cap. 4—"Insolvency Statute," No. 379, Secs. 129, 131—"Transfer of Land Statute," No. 301, Secs. 3, 49. 139.]—W., in August, 1874, voluntarily transferred to A. and B. certain lands under Act No. 301, and by an indenture of even date A. and B. declared they held as trustees. February, 1875, W. became insolvent, but obtained his certificate of discharge in August, 1875. W., in January, 1876, being indebted to M., and requiring further advances, he executed a deed reciting that transfer of August, 1874, was voluntary, and falsely reciting that W. had agreed to sell to M. for a sum of £1700, comprising the debt due and the further advances. W. then executed a transfer of the land to M., which the registrar refused to register. On bill by M. against W. and beneficiaries and trustees under settlement, Held that, under 27 Eliz., Cap. 4, though a purchaser or mortgagee could set aside a settlement truly setting out a real bargain, the settlor himself could not set it aside, nor plan a scheme for another to to do so; that by Act No. 379, Secs. 129 and 131, W. having obtained his discharge, was in the same position to defeat the settlement as if no insolvency had occurred; that Court would not act upon false recitals in deed of January, 1876, but as there was then a real debt then due, the transfer of August, 1874, was void as against M. to the extent of that debt under 27 Eliz., Cap. 4; but having regard to Sec. 139 of Act 301, Court would not make M. proprietor, but directed the trustee, who was the registered proprietor, to execute a mortgage under the Statute to M. Moss v. Williamson, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 221.

Voluntary—27 Eliz., Cap. 4—Volunteer Holding a Certificate under "Transfer of Land Statute," No. 301—Specific Performance by a Purchaser.]—A. was owner of land, and brought it under No. 301 the certificate of title being issued to his son B. Nine months afterwards A. contracted to sell it to C. C. filed a bill for specific performance, and to have issue of certificate to B. declared void as against him. Held, that transaction was void as against C. under 27 Eliz., Cap. 4, and that it was not protected under Secs. 49 and 50, the protection afforded under those sections being intended for real purchasers under the Act, and persons dealing with them, not to sons taking presents from their fathers. Specific performance decreed. Colechin v. Wade, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 266.

Voluntary Settlement—Mortgage of Settled Property by Settlor—Reconveyance in Settlor's Name—Effect of.]—M. voluntarily settled property upon his wife and family, and subsequently mortgaged such property, and when paying off the mortgage obtained the reconveyance from the mortgagee in his own name; but M. did not attempt to disturb the possession of his wife and family. It was contended that M. acquired an interest adverse to the settlement under 27 Eliz. in the settled property to the extent of the mortgage. Per Molesworth, J.—"If he takes a reconveyance to himself and leaves those entitled under the settlement in undisturbed possession, I think he could not afterwards disturb them in his character of assignee of the mortgage." In re McDonald, 2 V.R. (I.E. & M.,) 12; 2 A.J.R., 131.

Voluntary Settlement—Subsequent Mortgage Defeating it pro tanto.]—A settlor by a voluntary settlement settled certain real estate, subsequently mortgaged it with other property, and died. Held that the mortgage only defeated the settlement pro tanto. Johnston v. Brophy, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 77, 89.

Voluntary Settlement—27 Eliz., Cap. 4—Subsequent Mortgage.]—D. voluntarily settled land on his wife; she died, and D. took out administration to her estate, and subsequently mortgaged land to defendant bank. Held, per Stephen, J., in Court of Appeal, that the mortgage pro tanto extinguished the settlement under 27 Eliz., Cap. 4, but when such a defence i.e. of the statute is raised it should be put forward on the pleadings distinctly. Droop v. Colonial Bank, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 71, 77.

Under 27 Eliz., Cap. 4—Voluntary Settlsment—Consideration—Release of Dower.]—H. married C. in 1853. By deed, May, 1868, H. conveyed certain land to trustees upon trusts in favour of H. and C., in consideration of C. releasing her dower out of land of which H. then was or might be seized. H. at no time had any land save that in the settlement. H. in 1881 sold the land to A. after C.'s death, and A. applied to bring it under the Statute. Suit by C.'s heir to restrain registration and for declaration of trusts. Held that the release of the dower was not a valuable consideration for the settlement, and that sale to A. was protected under 27 Eliz., Cap. 4. Conols v. Horigan, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 239; 4 A.L.T., 22.

Voluntary Settlsment—5 Vict. No. 17, Sec. 7.]—H. moved, under 5 Vict., No. 17, Sec. 7, to set aside a settlement by C. on his wife and children, so far as H. was thereby prevented from receiving the full amount of his debt, on the ground that the settlement was executed by C. after he had contracted the debt, or the cause thereof had arisen, and within twelve months preceding the insolvency, and without valuable consideration. The debt claimed by H. was due for a sum covenanted to be paid for rent of a hotel. Part of this rent had accrued before and part after the settlement. Held that rent accrued due is a debt within the meaning of the words, "whose debt was contracted," of the section, and the existence of the remedy of distress does not prevent the operation of the Statute; but that the rent of a current quarter not actually accrued due at the date of a voluntary settlement, does not come within the words, "or the cause of whose debt had arisen," so as to be a ground for setting aside a settlement "in so far as such creditor would thereby be prevented from receiving the full amount of his said debt." The words, "The cause of whose debt had arisen," have no other meaning than "cause of action;" and Semble, per Chapman, J., that they are even narrowed to such causes of action as result in a debt. In re Coates, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 122.

Assignment for Benefit of Creditors—Sequestration—Acts 5 Vic., No. 9, and 5 Vic., No. 17, Secs. 5, 6, 8.]—See Goodman v. M'Callum, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 135, post under INSOLVENCY—Fraudulent Preferences and Protected Transactions.

5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 6—Payment of Pre-existing Debt.]—An alienation which is pro tanto a discharge of a pre-existing debt is not a fraudulent alienation "without valuable consideration," within the meaning of 5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 6.

R. and Co., who had consigned goods to D. and Co., sent out to H. a power of attorney to take possession of the goods consigned. H. not only took the goods but also all the property of D. himself, leaving him "without a sixpence in the world." D. was largely indebted to R. and Co., and the transfer thus operated in payment pro tanto of his debt. Held, not a "fraudulent alienation without valuable consideration." Downie v. Graham, 1 W. &. W. (L.,) 195.

Compare Sec. 70 of Act No. 379.

Settlement—"Insolvency Statute 1865," No. 273, Sec. 30.]—Sec. 30 of the Act is not retrospective. Rule nisi to set aside a voluntary post-nuptial settlement executed by an insolvent within twelve months of his insolvency discharged, the insolvency being under Acts 5 Vic., No. 17, and 7 Vic., No. 19. In re Mahony, 4 W. W. & A B. (I. E. & M.,) 5.

Voluntary Settlement, No. 379, Sec. 70—13 Eliz., Cap. 5.—Subsequent Mortgage of Part of Settled Lands—Investment of Mortgage Moneys—Right of Assignee to Follow.]—K. made a voluntary settlement of lands on his wife and children, appointing S. and T. trustees on June 19th, 1871. In July, 1872, a sum of £1000 was raised by mortgage of part of settled lands, settlement being treated as voluntary and void against mortgagee. K. alone executed mortgage. The trustees received the £1000, and applied it under K.'s directions in the purchase of a part interest in a ship. On September 26th, 1873, K.'s estate was sequestrated, and plaintiff appointed assignee. In a suit by plaintiff against T., as defendant, Held that settlement was void as against plaintiff under Sec. 70 of Act No. 379, and under 13 Eliz., Cap. 5, and that assignee could follow mortgage moneys invested in part purchase of ship as being proceeds of the settled property which he could indentify and which were subject to the same liability as the settled property itself. Halfey v. Tait, 1 V.L.R. (Eq.,) 8.

"Insolvency Statute," No. 379, Sec. 70—Voluntary Settlements—Jurisdiction of Judge of a District Court.]—D. on 4th March, 1863, purchased station and freehold property and mortgaged it to vendors to secure purchase money. On October 1st, 1870, D. executed a voluntary post nuptial settlement by which he granted the equity of redemption to a defendant as trustee in favour of his wife and children. On June 1st, 1871, D.'s estate was sequestrated, and an order was made by Judge of District Court of Insolvency that settlement was void as against official assignee. Held, that Judge of District Court had no jurisdiction under Sec. 70 to declare settlement void, and that Sec. 70 is not retrospective. Dallimore v. Oriental Bank Corporation, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 13.

See S.C., ante column 469.

Voluntary Gift to a Married Woman—"Insolvency Statute 1871," No. 379, Sec. 70.]—M., in 1870, agreed to execute when requested a transfer of land to his daughter, a married woman, in return for her services in washing, cooking, &c. The land was transferred, May 26, 1877, and in August, 1878, M. became insolvent. Held that the agreement being void for uncertainty, and there being nothing but the land to pay debts, the transfer was void as against official assignee under Sec. 70 of Act No. 379. Shiels v. Drysdale, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 126; 2 A.L.T., 14.

13 Eliz., Cap. 5—Act No. 379, Sec. 70.] — A married woman received small sums of money from her relatives, saved money out of money allowed her for household expenses and from boarders' payments. Her husband, about eight months before insolvency, invested the money saved by the wife in land, which was mortgaged to a building society, the equity of redemption being reserved to the wife. Held that as the money was not the wife's separate estate, the conveyance reserving the equity of redemption was fraudulent and void under 13 Eliz. and Act No. 379, Sec. 70, and that the trustee in insolvency was entitled to redeem. Smith v. Smith, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 2.

Settlement on Wife—Management of Property by Husband—Land Purchased in Name of Wife with Profits.]—S., in 1862, settled real estate on his wife to her separate use without power of anticipation, remainder to himself. This settlement had never been acted on so far as the public could see, for S. gave leases of the land and received the rents, and generally treated it as his own, keeping a banking account in his own name, which he paid incomings into and outgoings out of, but, as the wife alleged, as her agent. In November, 1882, it was brought under the "Transfer of Land Statute," and the wife then for the first time dealt with it, conveying it for no consideration to a nephew, who leased it to S. Out of the profits of this land S. bought other land in the name of the wife in October, 1883, and a little more than two months afterwards became insolvent, and his assignee brought a suit to have her declared a trustee for the assignee of the allotments purchased in 1883. Held that the wife's acquiescence in her husband's dealing with the property settled in 1862 as his own disentitled her from claiming the profits as against her husband's estate, and that the trustee was entitled to the land bought with such profits. Hasker v. Summers, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 204; 6 A.L.T., 80.

Settlement—Executed in Anticipation of Result of Pending Litigation.]—Per Molesworth, J.—A settlement executed in anticipation of the possible result of pending litigation may be as fraudulent as if executed after the result is known. In re Solomon, 1 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.) 45.

Fraudulent Conveyance.]—M. recovered judgment against H.M. on 21st December, 1870; execution was issued, and the bailiff seized the property of H.M., and was about to sell, when L. claimed it under a bill of sale. On an interpleader summons it appeared that L. had recovered judgment against H.M., and issued execution. Instead of enforcing it, he took a bill of sale over H.M.'s property, dated 29th November 1870, and registered on the 2nd December. It recited the debt, the judgment and costs of fi. fa. that H.M. had applied to L. not to enforce the execution, but to grant him further time for payment, which L. agreed to on having the repayment secured, and that, in consideration of L. so agreeing, H.M. assigned the property; provided that if H.M. paid a certain sum with interest, L. covenanted to re-transfer the property. Held that there was nothing fraudulent in this transaction. Lynch v. Massey, 2 A.J.R., 17.

Conveyance to Defeat a Judgment Creditor.]—T. was sued in an action at law by G. and M., and on July 24th they recovered a verdict, and the land was shortly afterwards sold to the plaintiff at a sheriff's sale under a writ of fi. fa. On July 23rd T. purported to convey the land for value to his brother, which conveyance was registered July 26th. On bill by plaintiff to set aside the conveyance, Held, upon the evidence, that the conveyance was a sham, and that T.'s brother was a trustee for the plaintiff, who had acquired a valid interest under the sheriff's sale. Angove v. Tregonning, 1 A.J.R. 80.

2. Setting Aside.

How Set Aside—5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 7.]—A voluntary settlement made by an insolvent within twelve months' of his insolvency on his wife and infant children, may be set aside as against a creditor by a rule nisi under 5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 7, served on the trustees and father, and without a suit instituted for the purpose. The section is quite independent of the solvency of the settlor at the time of executing the settlement. In re Rogers, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 98.

Voluntary Settlement—Summary Remedy under 5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 7.]—Sec. 7 of Act No. 17 gives to a creditor who is entitled under it a summary remedy, and not merely a declaration of right which it would require a bill in equity to make available. In the case of a voluntary settlement executed within twelve months of insolvency, the Commissioner of Insolvent Estates was ordered to sell as much as was necessary for payment of creditor's debt; the official assignee, the trustees of the settlement, and the insolvent, were ordered to join in conveyance, and the trustees to stand in creditor's place with respect to any dividend he would be entitled to. Ex parte Wright, in re Mahoney, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 1.

Who May Maintain Suit.]—A judgment creditor before he sues out execution at law has no locus standi to set aside a conveyance made by the judgment debtor as fraudulent under 13 Eliz., Cap. 5, even although upon the evidence it appears that the conveyance was fraudulent as against creditors. Yandell v. Hector, 4 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 1.

Who May Maintain Suit—Trustees of a Creditor's Deed under the "Insolvency Statute 1865."]—Held, reversing Molesworth, J., trustees of a creditor's deed under the "Insolvency Statute 1865," executed by a majority, but not by four-fifths of the creditors, may maintain a suit to set aside, under 13 Eliz., Cap. 5, a voluntary settlement executed by the debtor at a time when he was indebted to a creditor, who continued such at the date of the creditor's deed. Toohey v. Steains, 1 V.R. (E.,) 49; 1 A.J.R., 51.

Defrauding Creditors under 13 Eliz., Cap. 5—Who May Sue to Set Aside.]—An execution creditor, whose judgment is unregistered, though he has not a lien upon the lands of his debtor, may, as on behalf of himself and the other creditors, maintain a suit (as an assignee in insolvency may) to set aside dealings with such lands, as being intended to defraud the general body of creditors, the true aspect of the suit not being whether judgment creditors have a lien upon the land, but that it seeks redress for an execution creditor frustrated by fraudulent conveyance of the property, the same as if the property were chattels personal. Colonial Bank of Australasia v. Pie, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 38; 1 A.L.T., 156.

Parties to Suit to Set Aside.]—An equitable mortgage of a transferee with notice of such lands is not a necessary party to such suit. Ibid.

Voluntary Settlement—Setting Aside—Who May Sue—Assignee—Creditor.]—Suit by a creditor on behalf of himself and all other creditors to have a conveyance and two transfers of land declared void, both under 13 Eliz., Cap. 5, and under the "Insolvency Statute 1871." The assignee had been requested to take proceedings, but had refused. Held, per Molesworth, J., that the suit could not be maintained by a creditor, that the assignee was the only person entitled to sue, and that the bill could not be amended by adding the assignee as co-plaintiff. Bill dismissed without costs. Douglas v. M'Intyre, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 249; 6 A.L.T., 90.

Voluntary Settlement — Suit to Set Aside — Parties.]—In a suit by the trustee in insolvency of a deceased person whose life was insured, against the trustee and cestuique trust of the settlement, seeking to set aside a settlement of the policy as being voluntary, the personal representative of the deceased need not be a party, but, per Molesworth, J., the next-of-kin must be parties. On appeal, affirmed by the majority of the Full Court (Higinbotham, Williams, and Holroyd, J. J.) sed per Holroyd, J., that since the assurers did not raise any objections to the suit for want of parties, the Court should not consider the objection, when raised by the trustee defendant. Davey v. Pein, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 306; 6 A.L.T., 131.

"Insolvency Statute 1871," No. 379, Sec. 70—Burden of Proof.]—In a suit to set aside a settlement as voluntary under Sec. 70 of Act 379, the onus of proof of valuable consideration lies on those who claim under such settlement. Gray v. Faram, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 270.

Costs of Setting Aside a Voluntary Settlement Under Sec. 7 of No. 17.]—Though there has been some conflict as to the power of the Court to give costs in cases where voluntary settlements are sought to be set aside under Sec. 7 of 5 Vic., No. 17, the precedent of M'Donogh's Case should be followed, and costs be given to the creditor. The clause should be so construed that the creditor should be paid his debt in full, which would not be the case if he were deprived of his costs. The trustees of the settlement should, where infants are concerned, have their costs in priority out of the estate. In re Rogers, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 98.

Voluntary Conveyance in Fraud of Creditors—Costs of Suit and Conveyance.]—M., in December, 1873, conveyed the equity of redemption in a mortgage to S. as in consideration for £500, but it did not appear that any consideration was in fact paid, and in February, 1874, M. became insolvent. Suit by M.'s official assignee to set aside conveyance and for reconveyance. S. did not resist the demand, but claimed the costs of conveyance. Conveyance set aside, defendant to abide his own costs of the conveyance, and to pay plaintiff's costs. Jacomb v. Stephens, 5 A.J.R., 96.

Property Apparently Husband's—Evidence in Support of Wife's Claim—Costs.]—As to cases made by wives as to the apparent property of their husbands' money in bank to their credit, or crops upon land apparently farmed by them, the wives should, to prevent distrust, supply accurate evidence besides their own to obtain credence. Where the Court thought that there was a possibility of its having misconceived the wife's rights, and of her being disabled by poverty from bringing forward witnesses to support them, the Court did not award costs against her. Hasker v. Summers, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 204; 6 A.L.T., 80.

FRIENDLY SOCIETY.

STATUTES.

"Friendly Societies' Act 1865," No. 254.
"Friendly Societies' Act 1877," No. 590.

"Friendly Societies' Act," No. 254, Sec. 36—Liability of Officers.]—A., the secretary of a society, made default in his accounts, and afterwards became insolvent. Under Sec. 36 of Act No. 254, an order was made by justices for double the amount. Rule nisi for a prohibition. The Court expressed a strong opinion that the society had a double remedy, one against the insolvent for double the amount, and the other a preferent claim from the official assignee. Held, there was no such want of jurisdiction on part of magistrates as to justify a prohibition. Regina v. Call, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 225.

"Friendly Societies' Act," No. 254, Sec. 36—Suspension of Lodge.]—A certain lodge (No. 3) of Odd Fellows was suspended by the committee of the grand lodge for violating certain rules, &c., of the grand lodge; and the trustees of the lodge No. 3 were summoned by a summons reciting that fact, and that a demand had been made for payment of money belonging to lodge No. 3 in their possession. Held, affirming the justices, that Sec. 36 was a penal one relating to misapplication of money, which defendants were not doing, but only holding as trustees under directions from the lodge that appointed them, and that case did not come within Sec. 36. Darton v. Knight, 6 W. W. & A'B., (L.) 106.

Suspension of Member—Dispute How Decided.]—Any dispute between a member of a friendly society, who has been merely suspended and not expelled, and the officers of the society in respect of such suspension, must be decided in the manner provided by the rules of the society; and there is no jurisdiction on the part of justices to hear such complaint unless in default or disobedience of the decision under the rules, as provided by Sec. 31 of the "Friendly Societies' Statute 1865," No. 254. Hunter v. Barnes, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 120.

Proof that Business is Conducted in Furtherance of Objects of Registration—Certificate of Registration.]—The certificate of registration of a Friendly Society under the "Friendly Societies Statute," No. 254, is merely a certificate of the registration, and is not proof of the fact that the society has conducted and continued all its operations in furtherance of the objects for which it was registered. McEwan v. Blair, 1 V.R. (L.,) 178; 1 A.J.R., 141.

Society not Conducting Business as a Friendly Society—Liability of Shareholders.]—A society registered for one object under the provisions of the "Friendly Societies Statute," No. 254, but conducting its business for another object, not being one of those mentioned in the Act, is not afforded any protection by the Act, and its shareholders may be held personally liable as co-partners. Ibid.

Person Holding Himself Out a Member—Liability Where Company is Illegally Trading.]—A Friendly Society was conducting business in pursuance of objects different from those mentioned in its certificate of registration, such objects being none of those mentioned in the "Friendly Societies Statute," No. 254. A defendant sued as a member had been appointed and acted as trustee, and was a member of the first directory. He drew one or more cheques, interfered in the business, and attempted at a public meeting of the society to move the adoption of the first report. Held that there was evidence that he held himself out to third persons as a member, and that such persons were at liberty to infer that as regarded his liability to them he was to be deemed a member, and that he was personally liable as a co-partner. Ibid.

Trustee Executing a Creditor's Deed—Officer—No. 254, Secs. 24, 27, 36.]—Sec. 36 of the "Friendly Societies Statute," No. 254, shows that a trustee of the society is an "officer" within the meaning of Sec. 24 of the Act, and may thus receive moneys of the society. Where, therefore, a trustee of a Friendly Society, in July, received money on behalf of the society, and in November executed a deed of assignment for creditors, and in February following the trustees of the society demanded the money from the trustees of the creditor's deed, Held that since it was not to be presumed that the trustee had been guilty of embezzlement he must be taken to have still had the society's money when he executed the deed of assignment, and that the trustees of the deed, as his assignees, must under Sec. 27 pay it over to the society. Eastwood v. Scott, 2 V.R. (L.,) 101; 2 A.J.R., 64.

"Friendly Societies Statute," No. 254, Secs. 24, 36—Construction.]—Sec. 36 of the Act No. 254, shows that a trustee is an "officer" within the meaning of Sec. 24. Ibid.

Action by Friendly Society on a Promissory Note—What Declaration Must State.]—In an action by the trustees of a Friendly Society on a promissory note, the declaration must state that the note is the property of the society. Wilkie v. Wright, 4 A.J.R., 75.

Action by Friendly Society on a Promissory Note—Who May Sue.]—The trustees of a Friendly Society may sue on a promissory note payable to the treasurer, which has been delivered to the society without endorsement by the treasurer, since by Sec. 16 of the "Friendly Societies Statute 1865," all the property, real and personal, of the society is vested in the trustees. Ibid., p. 117.

Meetings—Duly Convened Special Meeting.]—The rules of a Friendly Society provided that the master of a lodge could call a special meeting; that it was the secretary's duty to prepare and sign all notices, &c., required by the rules; and that the trustees might be removed at a specially summoned meeting duly convened for that purpose. A meeting was called by a notice which had no reference to the master or the secretary, was signed by nobody, and which did not indicate who gave the order. Held not a duly convened special meeting. King v. Fulton, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 100.

Appointment of Trustees—Evidence of.]—A copy of resolutions appointing trustees of a society, and registered under the "Friendly Societies Statute 1865," Sec. 16, is prima facie, but not conclusive evidence of the appointment. Ibid.

Power and Liability—Registered under Act No. 254, and Subsequently Incorporated under Act, No. 493.]—A Friendly Society registered under the "Friendly Societies Statute 1865," received deposits from persons not members, and borrowed money, and before repaying such moneys was incorporated under the "Building Societies Act 1874." Upon action by a bank which had lent some of the money borrowed by the society, Held that the limit placed upon the powers of building societies by Sec. 25 of the "Building Societies Act 1874," could not apply to societies before that Act, and that the society had power to borrow; that Sec. 16 of the "Friendly Societies Statute 1865," by allowing the trustees to sue and be sued did not take away the common law right to sue the members of the society, and that the members were liable for the moneys borrowed. Colonial Bank of Australasia v. Curtain, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 38.

Building Society Registered as a Friendly Society —Power to Borrow—"Friendly Societies Statute," No. 254, Secs. 4 (Sub-sec. 7,) 16—Liability of Members.]—The plaintiff bank lent money to a building society registered as a Friendly Society, and sued on the common counts for money lent to an individual member and for moneys lent to the society. Held that such a society had under Act No. 254 power to borrow money with proper limitations, but that a person who wishes to rely upon the fact that the proper limitations have been exceeded must specially plead that fact, and although Sec. 16 makes the trustees the persons to borrow, and therefore to be sued, yet the trustees borrow on behalf of the society, and every individual member of the society is interested in such loan, and is answerable for the debts of the society, and may be sued therefor. Colonial Bank of Australasia v. Draper, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 527.

Act No. 590, Sec. 15, Sub-sec. 8—Illegal Detention of Books by Secretary.]—Sec. 15, Sub-sec. 8, of the Act enables the trustees of a society to recover from "any person" the society's property in his possession; such "pereon" includes a person claiming to be a secretary to the society as well as a stranger. Jones v. Milne, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 3; 2 A.L.T., 117.

Action Against Officer for Withholding Property of Society — How Case Launched — "Friendly Societies Act 1877," Sec. 15, Sub-sec. 8]—On a complaint against an officer of a friendly society, under Sec. 15, Sub-sec. 8, of the "Friendly Societies Act, 1877," for withholding property of the society, Held, per Stawell, C.J., and Higinbotham, J., that to bring the case within the section, it was sufficient to prove that the officer had become possessed of the property, and had declined to give it up when required, and that it then became necessary for the officer to prove that he had a lawful reason for so withholding the property, or was unable to give it up. Per Williams, J. (dissenting)—The case is not launched without evidence of something in the nature of fraud, mala fides, or some kind of wilful misconduct. Francis v. McDonald, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 237; 4 A.L.T., 42.

GAME.

Trespassing in Pursuit of Game — "Police Offences Statute 1865," Sec. 17, Sub-sec. 6.]—An entry upon land to "seek" game is not within the protection of Sec. 17, Sub-sec. 6, of the "Police Offences Statute 1865," as to the entry upon land in "pursuit" of game. Plier v. Trumble, 4 A.J.R., 26.

GAMING AND WAGERING.

Betting on the Result—What is.]—M. contributed a sum towards some stakes for which two pedestrians were to compete, and deposited it with defendant. A custom was proved that the persons who found the money for a competitor, in the event of his winning, received the whole stakes on each side, but that they might make a present to the man they backed. The race resulted in a draw, and the stakes were divided between the competitors. Plaintiff sued the stakeholder for his deposit. Held that the contribution by the plaintiff amounted to betting on the result, and was therefore a contract by way of wagering within Sec. 51 of the "Police Offences Statute," and void. Miller v. Harris, 1 V.R. (L.,) 142; 1 A.J.R., 127.

Recovery of Deposit from Stakehold r—"Police Offences Statute," No. 265, Sec 51—Game Unfinished and Stakes Unpaid—Locus Penitentiae.]—M. had lodged a sum of money with P. to abide the event of a wager on a game of "Yankee grab." The game was unfinished, and the stake was not paid over. Held that M. was at liberty to demand back the money from the stakeholder before it was paid over. Melville v. Pendreigh, 5 A.J.R., 84.

Bill of Exchange—Arrangement to Pay Legal Debt—Consideration Not Severable.]—S. lost money to C. in January, and gave him bills for the amount, which he was unable to pay when due. S. then arranged with C. that C. should pay off a legal debt for which S.'s creditors were pressing, and that S. should give C. bills for an amount less than that of the original bills. This was done, and one of the last mentioned bills was for an amount not greater than that of the debt paid off by C. Held that the whole transaction was one and could not be separated, nor could the consideration be severed, and that C. could not recover on the last mentioned bill. Collin v. Stewart, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 211.

Contract Divisible—Security Not.]—If part of a contract arises upon a good consideration and part of it upon a bad one it is divisible. But it is otherwise as to the security; that being entire is bad for the whole. Ibid.

Cheques Given in Payment of a Gambling Debt.] —In an action by the holders of a cheque against the drawer it was proved that the defendant had signed the cheque, and it was admitted that it was given to the original payee in payment of a gambling debt. Held that the cheque having been given for an illegal consideration it was for the plaintiff to prove that he had given value for the cheque, not for the defendant to prove that he had not. Carey v. Stewart, 3 A.L.T., 105.

Under Sec. 15 of "Land Act 1865," and Sec. 26 of the "Evidence Statute 1864," the notice in the Gazette of forfeiture under the "Land Act" is only prima facie evidence of forfeiture. M'Dowall v. Myles, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 16.

But Sec. 101 of "Land Act 1869," makes the notice conclusive evidence so that as regards the public the land so gazetted as forfeited is open for selection. Thorburn v. Buchanan, 2 V.R. (L.,) 169; 2 A.J.R., 109.

GIFT.

Imperfect—Death of Donor Before Perfecting.] —G. requested B. to break up his establishment and remove to Melbourne. B. consented, and G. requested him to select a suitable house at a price not exceeding £1000. B. selected a house subject to a mortgage, on which £540 was due, the purchaser having the option of buying, subject to the mortgage, for £309 16s. 6d., or discharged from the mortgage for £850. B. informed G. of the offer, who instructed him to buy for £850, and signed and gave to him a blank cheque, and told B. that he wished to make a gift of the house to his sister, who was B.'s wife. At the same time he handed a deposit receipt for £1000 to his brother, one of the defendants, and told him to transfer the amount of the deposit to his current account to meet the cheque which he had given B. to fill up. B., thinking it was advantageous to do so, bought subject to the mortgage, and took a conveyance in his own name. He told G., who said, "Why did you not buy out and out? I intended the house for Annie (B.'s wife.) The house is Annie's, and we can settle the matter when we come to Melbourne." G., B., and his wife came to Melbourne, lived in the house which G. referred to as his sister's, and gave her money from time to time to meet the instalments falling due on the mortgage. After G.'s death a friendly suit was brought to determine whether the executors of his will were bound to effectuate his intention of completing the purchase of the house. Held that, as a gift, the transaction was incomplete, and that, as a business arrangement, the evidence did not support it, and that the executors were not bound to carry out the intention of G. Blair v. Grant, 1 V.R. (E.,) 130; 1 A.J.R., 121.

S., a father, occupied land as caretaker for his son J., the owner. On J.'s leaving the colony he said to S.: "If I never come back you are to keep it," but there was no delivery of possession. GRANT.

Crown Grant — Construction.]—In a Crown grant the land sold was described by the acreage, and by measured boundaries, and was also described as being bounded on the south by a road one chain wide. No starting point for the measurements was given in the description of the parcels, but on the ground itself the angle of the road, and the south-eastern point of the land, were marked by a peg put in by the Government surveyor. According to the position of the peg and boundary, the land was some acres less than the quantity mentioned in the grant, and the eastern boundary was one chain shorter than the grant asserted it to be. The Judge at the trial rejected evidence which was tendered by the plaintiff to show that by measuring from the starting point of an allotment north of the allotment in question, the plaintiff could only obtain the proper quantity by including the road, and directed the jury that the land conveyed was not that mentioned in the grant, but the portion actually marked out by the Government surveyor, and that this could not be controlled by the measurements in the grant. On motion for a rule for a new trial, Held that the question was one for the jury; that the direction to them was right; and rule refused. Scott v. the Shires of Eltham and Heidelberg, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 98.

Crown Grant—By Presumption of Law—Right to Road ad medium viae filum.]—D. was Crown grantee of land purchased by him from the Crown in 1853, and described in the grant as inter alia, "bounded on the south by Wellington-street." In a plan exhibited at the time of the sale, Wellington-street was shown to be a street five chains wide. In 1868 the Crown advertised for sale land in the centre of Wellington-street, leaving a carriage way on either side 72 feet wide. On a petition to the Crown and bill against the Board of Land and Works by D., seeking an injunction against the Board of Land and Works selling the land, Held by the Full Court, reversing Molesworth, J., that by presumption of law, the land forming the highway ad medium filum viae passed under the grant to the grantee; and to ascertain the grantee's right, the plan showing the width of the street might be referred to, not to vary or explain the deed, but to show what land passed thereby, i.e., what the words, "Wellington-street," meant. And interlocutory injunction granted, limited to the land forming the street extending for the frontage of the allotment granted, and from that frontage to the centre of the street, its width being deemed to be that shown in the plan exhibited at the time of sale. Davis v. The Queen, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 106.

The doctrine of Davis v. The Queen as to the right ad medium filum viae has been followed in the following cases turning upon cases of mining under a street:—Western Freehold Company v. Great Western Company, 4 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 44; Victoria United Mining Company v. Prince of Wales Company, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 93; Extended Hustlers' Freehold Company v. Moore's Hustlers' Company, 5 A.J.R., 116; Band of Hope Company v. Williams' Freehold Company, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 257.

Crown Grant—Ownership of Road ad medium filum viae.]—C. was owner of land by Crown grant, abutting on a street, such land being described by metes and bounds as "bounded by" the street. The defendants were mining under the half of the street adjoining C.'s land, and C. sued them in trespass. Held, dissentients Stephen, J., on rule nisi to enter a verdict for defendants that the doctrine of Davis v. The Queen applied, nothing in the Act 360 controverting this doctrine, and that the soil ad medium filum viae passed to the plaintiff, and that the enclosure and plantation of part of the land by the Town Council did not decrease its width as at law. Rule discharged. Carvalho v. Black Hill South Extended Company, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 225.

Injunction to Restrain Sale of Street Fronting Land.]—See Pike v. The Queen, ante column 323.

Ownership of Road ad medium filum viae.]—Per Higinbotham and Williams, J.J. Property in the soil in a public street, road or highway in Victoria cannot be and never has been created by virtue merely of a grant by the Crown of land adjoining such street, road, or highway. Davis v. The Queen overruled. Holroyd, J., concurred in thinking that Davis v. The Queen was wrongly decided. Garibaldi Company v. Craven's New Chum Company, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 233.

Crown Grant—Issued in Name of Purchaser After Death—Legal Estate.]—The legal estate in Crown lands comprised in a grant issued in the name of a purchaser who died before the "Administration Act 1872," after his death is not in the purchaser's administrator appointed under the Act, and semble that the legal estate is in his heir-at-law. Edmondson v. Macan, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 422.

Crown Grant — Proof of.] — Enrolment of Crown grants in this colony has no existence. The grant may be proved by production of the grant with a memorial of registration. Ibid.

Crown Grant—Detinue for—Who May Maintain.] —See Humphray v. Humphray, ante column 373.

Crown Grant—Mistake in Issuing—How Pleaded.] —Where concealment or mistake in the grant or present disposition to act is alleged in pleading, it should have reference to the mind of the Governor himself, and not to his subordinate agents, and he personally should be described as deceived or mistaken, under which averment evidence of the facts as to those through whom he acts as agents having been deceived may be given; but it would be more convenient, as preparatory to evidence, that the real actors should appear, and the fact of His Excellency having acted by their advice only be stated. Attorney-General v. Sanderson, 1 V.R. (E.,) 18; 1 A.J.R., 21, 24.

Crown Grant—Incorrect Description.]—A description in a Crown grant setting out and purporting to describe parcels, but which description is obviously and by demonstration incorrect, as not enclosing a space, should be rejected as wholly inoperative and incorrect. Stephen v. the Shire of Belfast, 1 V.R. GUARANTEE OR INDEMNITY.

I. OPERATION OF STATUTE OF FRAUDS.

Guarantee on Separate Paper—Construction of Guarantee.]—S. borrowed on hire certain goods from D., the payment of which McE. guaranteed. McE. took the account, and wrote on a separate paper—"We hereby guarantee the goods had from you on hire, £133, and if returned, hire, £24," and signed it. The jury found that the guarantee was attached to the account by "folding the corners of both papers several times." Held that this annexure of the two documents made an instrument fulfilling the requirements of the Statute; and that the guarantee was an alternative guarantee to pay for such goods as were not returned, but if all the goods were returned, then to pay for the hire; and that, as all the goods were not returned, the latter condition of the guarantee was not performed, and no liability attached in respect of it, and the guarantor had only to pay for goods not returned. McEwan v. Dynon, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 271.

Another Guarantee Executed at Same Meeting.]—N. gave a guarantee to McE., "in consideration of your having executed a guarantee to" a certain bank. There was conflicting evidence as to which guarantee was signed first, but they were both signed at same interview, and M'E.'s guarantee had not been parted with when N. signed his. Held that the circumstances showed that the whole was substantially one transaction, and that the consideration for N.'s guarantee was not a past consideration. McEwan v. Newman, 5 A.J.R., 167.

II. Construction of Contract.

Guarantee Against Losses Caused by Neglect of a Bank Manager.]—It was the duty of a manager of a branch bank to inspect weekly the accounts of the clerks under him. The manager neglected to do so, and in consequence the embezzlements of a clerk extending over a year were undiscovered, and the bank suffered loss thereby. Held, that the loss was covered by a guarantee policy against losses, "by reason or in consequence of the wilful default or culpable neglect" of the manager "in or arising out of his employment" in the bank. Colonial Bank of Australasia v. European Insurance and Guarantee Society, 1 W. W. & A. B. (L.,) 15.

Guarantee Against Misconduct of a Bank Official.]—The A. company issued a guarantee policy to a bank which provided that the company should reimburse, &c., "the full amount of any loss whatsoever," that "the funds of the company for the time being should be liable to make good any loss," &c., no member thereof being liable beyond his liability in respect of such funds, and that "immediately upon discovery the assured must forward a written notice of all particulars thereof to the board, and the policy should be void if for thirty days after such discovery such statement should not be sent." The policy was signed by B. and G. as "directors," Nov. 20, 1862. The deed of constitution was made July 1, 1862, executed by B. Jan. 1863, and by G. in Dec. 1862. A clerk's defalcations were first discovered May 11, and owing to his immediately absconding a bare statement was sent in on May 29 claiming £747. After some correspondence, details of the defalcations, and a claim for £765 were sent in Dec. 5. The jury awarded £747 damages. On rule nisi for a non-suit or new trial, Held, that the word "immediately" might embrace a period of twenty-nine days, and that the offers of compromise contained in the correspondence afforded evidence to go to a jury as to the performance of the conditions as to time and particulars of claim; that the deed reciting that G. and B. were parties was evidence that they were members, although they had not executed the deed at the time of the issue of the policy; and that the "funds for the time being" did not mean the balance after deducting existing liabilities, and that evidence as to such liabilities was properly rejected. National Bank of Australasia v. Brock, 1 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 208.

Guarantee for Fidelity—New Appointment.]—A guarantee was given for the due and faithful performance by a bank clerk of the duties of his situation as clerk of a branch at Melbourne, "or of any office or other situation to which he may be appointed in the service of the said corporation at the said branch bank or elsewhere." The clerk was without the guarantor's knowledge or consent appointed manager of a branch bank at Ballarat, and while acting as such embezzled moneys of the bank. Held that the fact of his having been promoted to the situation of manager did not discharge the guarantor since he had undertaken to guarantee the clerk's fidelity in whatever capacity he was engaged. London Chartered Bank v. Sutherland, 2 A.J.R., 17.

Guarantee of Fidelity—Undertaking by Insured to Prosecute.]—In a contract of guarantee of the fidelity of a clerk the insured undertook to use due diligence in prosecuting the clerk for criminal defalcations. The clerk having become a defaulter escaped from and was captured while out of the jurisdiction. Held that the insured was not bound to incur the expense of bringing him back. Dougharty v. London Guarantee and Accident Company, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 376; 2 A.L.T., 79.

Guarantee of Fidelity—Fraud Committed During Currency of Policy, but Discovered After its Termination.]—A policy of guarantee against losses by the frauds of an employé committed and discovered during the continuance of the policy, was subject to conditions endorsed thereon as conditions precedent, to the effect that on the discovery of any fraud the employer should give the company immediate notice thereof, and any claim made in respect thereof should be made in writing within three months of the discovery, and that the company should be entitled to call for particulars and proof of the correctness of such claim; also that the policy should extend to cover only such losses as might have been incurred within the period of twelve months previous to the date of claim that might be made under it. The company terminated the policy at the end of the first year, and a fraud was committed within that year, but was not discovered till after its expiration. Held that the company were not liable in respect of such fraud. Fanning v. London Guarantee and Accident Company, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 8; 5 A.L.T., 169.

Continuing.]—F. wrote a letter of guarantee to G., an incumbent of a church, to the effect that, "In consideration that you will engage a curate for the parish of C., I undertake that he shall be paid at least £300 a-year, &c. P.S. This will bind executors." Held that such guarantee was a continuing one, and was not limited to the appointment of the first curate, and that such guarantee was binding on F.'s executors, and that they were not at liberty to revoke the guarantee upon giving reasonable notice, unless such notice was given during a vacancy, and before a new appointment had been made by the incumbent. Guinness v. Box, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 381; 1 A.L.T., 57.

Alteration After Execution—Immaterial Clause.]—A contract of guarantee was executed on a common printed form, and contained a clause with unfilled blanks, which clause was irrelevant and inoperative. After execution the party to whom the guarantee was given struck out the clause. Held that the contract was not thereby avoided, since the operation of the instrument was not thereby avoided. Colonial Bank of Australasia v. Moodie, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 354; 2 A.L.T., 61.

Per Stawell, C.J. The question is really whether the altered instrument would operate differently from the original, whether to the prejudice of the other party or not. Ibid.

Manufacturer—Keeping More than the Prescribed Quantity—"Gunpowder Statute 1864," Sec. 18.]—Although there is no restriction upon a manufacturer as to the quantity of gunpowder he may keep at his own manufactory, he may not keep more than the prescribed quantity at any other place. Dobson v. Lyons, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 232.

HABEAS CORPUS.

Where Granted or Refused.]—The Supreme Court will not interfere by habeas corpus if the person charged be properly before a Court of competent jurisdiction. Where, therefore, a prisoner was properly before the Court of General Sessions, and was convicted by a jury of whom nine had not been sworn, Held, that though this might be good ground on which a Court of Error could proceed, the Court had no power to interfere by habeas corpus. Regina v. Cleary, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 85.

Prisoner Wrongly Designated.]—Where a warrant for commitment designated a prisoner under a different name from that which he had borne in the prior proceedings, the prisoner was discharged. In re Slocombe, see ante column 348.

Motion for—Affidavit that Committing Justices had no Jurisdiction.]—On motion for habeas corpus ad subjiciendum to discharge a prisoner from custody, the Court has power to go behind the warrant of conviction, although it be admitted to be good, and to inquire into the question of the jurisdiction of the committing justices on affidavits of the prisoner that they had none. In re Cornillac, 1 W. & W. HACKNEY CARRIAGE.

Stage Carriage.]—K. held a license for a "stage carriage" carrying seven passengers, and plying between Buninyong and Dowling Forest. He took passengers from Ballarat to Dowling Forest, and was summoned for plying for hire in a hackney carriage not being licensed under the by-laws. Held that upon the evidence K. had not used his carriage as a hackney carriage. Appeal allowed. Kane v. M'Cullagh, 3 A.J.R., 39.

HARBOUR TRUST.

"Melbourne Harbour Trust Act 1876," Sec. 46—Notice of Action—Person.]—The Melbourne Harbour Trust commissioners are a "person" within the meaning of Sec. 46 of "The Melbourne Harbour Trust Act 1876," so as to be entitled to the one month's notice of action prescribed by that section before the commencement of an action against them for anything purporting to be done in pursuance of the Act. Affirmed on appeal to the Privy Council. Union Steam Shipping Company of New Zealand v. Melbourne Harbour Trust Commissioners, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 167; 4 A.L.T., 28; L.R., 9 Ap. Ca. 365.

Appointment of Commissioners—"Melbourne Harbour Trust Act," No. 552, Sec. 16.]—The Melbourne City Council, under the powers given it by the Act, proceeded to appoint two commissioners for the first time. At such election only one commissioner was appointed by the requisite majority, and there were two candidates, M. and S., for the other post; the council failing on the day appointed for the first election, left it to the Governor, as under Sec. 16, to make the appointment, and he appointed M. Held, by Stawell, C.J. and Fellows, J. (dissentiente Molesworth, J.,) that Sec. 16 did not apply to such a case, and that the appointment was invalid. Regina v. M'Ilwraith, ex parte Smith, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 166.

Election of Commissioner—Act No. 552, Sec. 6.]—A borough council empowered to elect a commissioner elected one by ballot. Held, that such election might be by ballot; and the circumstances excluding the possibility of fraud, the fact that no means had been provided for a scrutiny did not invalidate it. In re Dowman and Melbourne Harbour Trust, ex parte Clark, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 287.

Act No. 552, Sec. 108, Sub-secs. x. and xxiii.—Licenses for Ballast Lighters—Regulations 214, 215.]—L. was convicted before justices for being in charge of a ballast lighter without a license. It appeared that L. had never been refused a license without payment of a fee, but that he had never applied for one. Held that though Regulations 214, 215, providing for the necessity of a license and the mode of issue, provided that a license should be issued "upon payment of the fee fixed by the regulations," and no fee was so fixed by any regulation, yet the conviction was good under the circumstances, notwithstanding that a license might have been granted without payment of a fee. Regina v. Leigh, ex parte Lumsden, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 282; 1 A.L.T., 42.

Harbour Regulations at the Port of Melbourne—Act No. 255, Sec. 40—Act No. 552, Sec. 107.]—A master of a steamer was summoned and convicted for obstructing a custom-house officer in the execution of his duties, in breach of a regulation made under Act No. 255; the defendant contended that these regulations were repealed by the regulations made under Act No. 552, and therefore he could not be possibly prosecuted under the former. Held that the jurisdiction of the Harbour Trust Commissioners was not exclusive within the limits of the Trust in matters relating to the general government as well as in nautical matters; and that Sec. 107 of Act No. 552 did not repeal regulations made under Act No. 255, which were not inconsistent with No. 552. Conviction affirmed. Beaver v. Justices of Williamstown ex parte Hammond, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 454. 5 A.L.T., 130.

HAWKERS AND PEDLERS.

Who is a Hawker—Act No. 281.]—A fruit grower who sells his fruit wholesale to a retail dealer is not a "hawker" within the meaning of Act No. 281 ("Hawkers and Pedlars Statute 1865"); and the mere fact that he solicited one dealer to buy, after a refusal by a prior dealer, does not constitute him such, or render him liable for hawking without a certificate. Hanson v. Tweedale, 1 V.R. (L.,) 30; 1 A.J.R. 36.

HEALTH (PUBLIC).

I. Powers and Jurisdiction of Local Boards.

Borough Council Acting as Local Board—Public Health Statute (No. 310), Secs. 15, 47, Act No. 184, Sec. 138—Forming Private Lane.]—It is not necessary that a special meeting of a Borough Council acting as a Board of Health, should be called to consider resolutions as to the forming of a private lane, since Sec. 138 of the "Municipal Corporations Act (No. 184) does not apply, and no special meeting is provided for by sec. 15 of the "Public Health Statute" (No. 310). It is sufficient if such resolution be agreed to at an ordinary meeting. It is not necessary, in order to enforce payment from an adjoining owner for the forming of a private lane, that the lane was in existence at the passing of the "Public Health Statute"; it is sufficient if it he in existence at the time of dissatisfaction expressed by such owner, for the Act is not limited to lanes in existence at the time of its passing. It is for the Board to consider what proportion should be paid for the forming of a private lane by an adjoining or abutting owner; and a private owner cannot refuse to pay his proportion of the charges for outlet works which were necessary to the lane in question, on the ground only that his property abutted on the lane, and not on any part of the outlet-works. Gurner v. Municipal Council of St. Kilda, 1 A.J.R., 102.

Order to Form Street—What it should state.]—An order under Sec. 47 of the "Public Health Amendment Act" (No. 310), by a Local Board of Health, requiring the owner of premises to "form, pave, level, drain, or make good" any street, lane, or right-of-way, should specify the manner in, and the levels at which the required works are to be executed. Woolcott v. Richmond Local Board of Health, 2 V.R., (L.,) 153; 2 A.J.R., 97.

Street on Private Property—Act No. 310, Secs. 47, 52—Evidence.]—Where a Local Board of Health institutes proceedings to enforce compliance under sec. 47, with an order requiring a street to be formed on private property, it is necessary for the Board to prove that the street was set out upon private property. Semble, per Fellows, J.,) Sec. 47 does not give the Board power to proceed for a penalty. Regina v. Woods, ex parte Emmott, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 101.

Where the order nisi was addressed to the mayor, councillors, and burgesses, as the parties interested in maintaining the conviction, and the Local Board was the Council only of the Borough (Sec. 15), an objection against the order was overruled. Ibid.

Expenses of Lane set out on Private Property—Service of Notice—Subsequent Owner—Act No. 310, Secs. 47, 57, 59.]—A notice was served upon G. reciting that notice had been served upon M. (the then owner,) requiring her to execute certain works; that she had not executed them, and requiring G. to pay a proportionate part of the expenses incurred by the Board in executing them. G. was proceeded against, and ordered to pay the amount. Held that sec. 59 only applies where ownership changes during the execution of the works, and that the effect of the Act was that the charge was personal, and only affected the land in the event of the owner at the time being unknown, or not to be found, and that G. becoming the owner of the land after the work was executed, was not liable. Regina v. Clarke, ex parte Gunst, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 412; 1 A.L.T., 101.

Formation of Private Streets—Apportionment of Expense.]—Under Sec. 47 of the "Health Amendment Act" (No. 310,) a Local Board of Health, when forming two communicating private streets, may apportion the whole expense amongst all owners in both streets, and is not bound to charge the expense of forming each street exclusively upon the owners in that street. Harding v. Local Board of Health of Geelong West, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 6.

Expenses of Formation—Demand of Payment.]—Where the Local Board of Health of any place is constituted of the Borough Council of the place, a demand of payment of the expenses of forming a private street by that body is sufficient. Ibid.

Act No. 782, Sec. 131—Formation of Street upon Private Property.]—After giving notice requiring C. to pave a street, the Local Board has power to sue for the penalty, even although it has elected to execute the work, provided that the works have not been executed at the time the complaint is made. Regina v. Alley, ex parte Clauscen, 6 A.L.T., 150.

Act No. 310, Secs. 47, 62, 63—Ownership of Property.]—A Local Board of Health served P. with notice under Sec. 47, requiring him to form a private lane adjoining his property. A complaint was brought against H. under Secs. 62, 63, for non-compliance, but the justices held they could not go into the question of ownership. Held that the notice under Sec.

47 was not conclusive, and the justices should have received evidence as to ownership. Regina v. Templeton, ex parte Peck, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 21.

Act No. 310, Secs. 47, 62.]—D. was informed against under Sec. 62, for an offence under Sec. 47, in not obeying the notice served upon him as owner of the land. D. objected that a non-compliance with the notice was not an offence for which a penalty could be imposed under Sec. 62, and the justices thereupon dismissed the information. On rule nisi, held that a double remedy was not intended, that sec. 47 specially provided for the punishment of an offence under its terms within the meaning of the words "not otherwise specially provided for" in Sec. 62, and that the justices were right. In re Day, ex parte Kingston, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 289.

Act No. 310, secs. 47, 62—Disobedience of Notice to Pave a Lane.]—Held (dissentiente Higinbotham, J.,) following In re Day, that neglect of a notice to pave and level a lane is not an offence within sec. 62 of Act 310. Per Higinbotham, J. It is not necessary that the notice under Sec. 47 should set forth the particulars of the levels and specifications; it is sufficient if it state that they have been prepared and are open for inspection at a certain place and hour. Fitzroy Local Board of Health v. Howell; Regina v. St. Kilda Local Board, ex parte Lamborn, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 47; 2 A.L.T., 125.

Act No. 310, Sec. 38—Order to Raise Surface of Land.]—A Local Board of Health had ordered the relator to "raise the surface of the land . . to such height as will cause the surface-water off the land to flow away into S. or B. streets." And the relator was fined for non-compliance. Held on order nisi for prohibition, that the order was bad as being in the alternative, it should have told the relator definitely into which street the water was to flow. Order absolute. Regina v. Lloyd, ex parte Godfrey, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 300.

(2) Taking Lands and Compensation.

"Public Health Amendment Act" (No. 310), Sec. 48—Power of General Sessions—Act No. 267, Sec. 143—Jurisdiction as to Costs.]—The Borough Council, acting as a Local Board of Health, appealed to the General Sessions under No. 310, Sec. 48, to fix the amount of compensation to be awarded to occupiers of land they wished to take for the purpose of making a drain. The justices took evidence upon the necessity of the drain, made an order stating the appeal was dismissed with costs, "subject to special case." No special case being stated a rule nisi was obtained for a certiorari to quash the order. Held that the order was invalid; that this was not an appeal in the proper acceptation of the term, therefore the justices were not authorised to give costs under Sec. 143 of No. 267; that the General Sessions, as arbitrators, could not inquire into the necessity for the work, but only into the amount of compensation: Rule absolute. Regina v. Pohlman, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 109.

Semble, that the payment of the money is a condition precedent to going on the land. Ibid.

(3) Proceedings for and against Local Boards.

Summons for Causing a Nuisance, in What Name—No. 310, Sec. 32.]—A summons, under Sec. 32 of the "Public Health Statute" (No. 310), taken out for causing a nuisance, being in the nature of a criminal proceeding for a penalty, may be taken out in anybody's name, and need not necessarily be in the name of the Local Board of Health; but at the hearing proof must be given that the complaint was laid at the instance of the Local Board of Health. Cruikshank v. Kitchen, 1 V.R. (L.,) 29; 1 A.J.R., 37.

(4) Offences against Public Health Statute.

Selling Improper Food—"Public Health Statute" (No. 264), Sec. 39—Coffee Adulterated with Chicory.]—Selling a compound of coffee and chicory under the name of "coffee" is a breach of Sec. 39 of the "Public Health Statute" (No. 264). Fullerton v. Bergin, 1 V.R. (L.,) 8; 1 A.J.R. 25.

Selling Improper Food—Act No. 264, Secs. 38, 39, 40—"Bakers Statute" (No. 243) Secs. 3, 4.]—A charge was brought against W. under Secs. 38 and 39 of No. 264 for selling bread in which large quantities of alum had been used. Held that the charge was properly brought, and that the previous passing of an Act applicable to bakers (Act No. 243) did not take them out of the general enactment in No. 264; that Sec. 40 disposes of the difficulty as to sec. 39 apparently applying only to manufacturers; that the omission of the word "knowingly" from Act No. 264 throws upon the seller the onus of proving ignorance of the adulteration, whereas by Secs. 3 and 4 of Act No. 243 it must be proved that seller had knowledge of the adulteration. Fullerton v. Weedow, 3 V.R. (L.,) 15; 3 A.J.R., 30.

"Public Health Statute"—Bye-law under—Night-soil.]—A bye-law under the "Public Health Statute" (No. 310) forbade the deposit of "night-soil, blood, offal, or other offensive matter" on any land or garden. Held that a person who poured drainage matter from a pig-stye on his garden had not offended against the bye-law. Regina v. Templeton, ex parte Mow Sang, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 55.

Act No. 310—Information under Sec. 62 for Offences under Sec. 47—No Penalty can be inflicted under Sec. 62 for such offence.]—See In re Day, ex parte Kingston, ante column 497.

Neglect of Notice to Pave and Level a Lane is not an offence within Sec. 62 of Act No. 310.)—See Fitzroy Local Board of Health v. Howell, and Regina v. St. Kilda Local Board, ex parte Lamborn, ante column 497.

Creating a Nuisance—Jurisdiction of Justices—Adjournment of Case—"Public Health Act," Sec. 32.]—Where the hearing of a complaint under Sec. 32 of the "Public Health Act" (No. 310), for creating a nuisance, has been adjourned in order to allow an opportunity of abating the nuisance, the case, when it comes up on the adjourned hearing, must, under Sec. 12 of the "Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," be adjudicated upon by two justices who were present throughout the whole of the proceedings. Regina v. Marsden, ex parte Corbett, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 30.

HOSPITAL.

Act No. 220—Secs. 5, 6, 10—Liability for Contracts.]—The contracts and liabilities of an old institution (i.e., a hospital managed by a committee prior to 1872) do not, upon its incorporation in 1872 under Act No. 220, devolve upon the new corporation under sec. 10, which merely enacts that real and personal property held in trust shall be vested in the incorporated institution. Where G. was appointed surgeon to a hospital and continued to act in that capacity till December 1871, being paid all his salary up to that time, and the hospital was incorporated early in 1872 and dismissed G. in April 1872, Held that the committee of the corporation was not liable for breach of contract or for salary up to 11th March, when the new committee was formed. Gummow v. Swan Hill District Hospital, 3 V.R. (L.,) 251; 3 A.J.R., 123.

Election to Committee—Act No. 220, Sec. 11—Term of Office.]—It is not necessarily to be implied from sec. 11 of the "Hospitals and Charitable Institutions Act 1864" (No. 220) that elections to committees of hospitals under that Act should be for three years. They might be for two years or other times, and the office terminates by mere effluxion of time, without applying the provisions of the section. Logan v. Hocking, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 120, 126.

Although no qualification is imposed by the Act No. 220 on a candidate at a general election to a hospital committee, yet a bye-law of the hospital which imposes a qualification similar to that which the Act imposes on candidates to fill a temporary vacancy is not ultra vires, since the qualification is reasonable and within the power of the committee. Ibid.

Secretary.]—For all that appears to the contrary, the secretary of a hospital incorporated under the Act No. 220 is a mere servant of the committee, holding his place at their will, and bound to obey their commands. As such he is not a proper party to a bill impeaching the validity of an election of members of the committee. Ibid.

VII. Wife's Rights, Property and Liabilities.

I. Marriage.

Proof of—Registration—Acts No. 70, Sec. 17 and 16 Vict., No. 26, Sec. 20.]—Where under Sec. 20 of 16 Vict., No. 26, only one original registration form of a marriage had been filled up, instead of duplicate originals, and only a copy of the original, instead of one of the duplicate originals, had been registered, Held that under Sec. 17 of No. 70, the irregularly registered copy of the original and a copy of that copy, were sufficient proof of the marriage. Crowl v. Flynn, 1 W. W. & a'B. (L.,) 62.

Marriage within Three Months after a Decree dissolving Prior Marriage—Act No. 125, Sec. 39.]—M. and E. M., his wife, sued W. for money due for goods sold and delivered to him by E. M., while carrying on business as a feme sole under a protection order, and under her former name of E. F. Before trial admissions were made that E. M.—then E. F.—on 13th October, 1862, presented a petition praying that her marriage with R. F. might be dissolved, and that a decree was made as prayed, 18th December, 1862: and that the plaintiffs (M. and E. F.) were "duly married" 28th February, 1863. At the County Court an objection was taken that the marriage was invalid, as it took place before the expiration of the three months given for appeal by Act No. 125, Sec. 39, and the Judge allowed this and granted a nonsuit. Held on appeal affirming the Judge, that the words "duly married," in the admissions were controlled by the dates and by the legal results of a premature marriage under Sec. 39, and that the nonsuit was right. Moore v. Widdicombe, 4 W. W. & a'B. (L.,) 109.

Marriage of Minor without Consent—Act No. 268, Sec. 14.]—The "Marriage and Matrimonial Causes Statute 1864" amounts to this:—The marriage of a minor should not take place without the consent specified in Sec. 14; but, if it does take place without it, it is valid. Regina v. Griffin, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 278.

Marriage of Minor without Consent.]—Semble, that a marriage of a female minor, whose husband was aware of her age, without the consent of her parents or guardians is valid. Gullifer v. Gullifer, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 109.

Marriage Contract when One Party a Lunatic—Lucid Interval.]—In the estate of Doull, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 70, post under Lunatic—Property, Powers and Contracts.

Minister Ordinarily Officiating as such—Pastor—Act No. 70, Sec. 3.]—The person who celebrated a marriage was described as pastor of a church meeting at the old Temperance Hall, Russell-street, and called "Christian Disciples." On a trial for bigamy, Held that this description brought him within the words "some minister of religion ordinarily officiating as such," in Sec. 3 of the Act No. 70, and that the marriage, which was the first, was valid. Regina v. Benson, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 21.

What is a Suit for Nullity—Jurisdiction of Single Judge.]—A suit by a husband to set aside a marriage with his deceased wife's sister is a suit for nullity, and not for dissolution; and a single Judge has jurisdiction to annul such a marriage. Wade v. Baker, 5 W. W. & a'B. (I. E. & M.,) 63.

Appeal.]—And an appeal on the ground of want of jurisdiction of the single Judge will lie. Ibid.

Evidence of Affinity.]—The relationship of the reputed wife with the deceased wife may be proved by the evidence of repute among friends and relatives, and of the manner in which both wives were treated and received by their reputed parents; and the evidence of the husband as to the latter point is also admissible. Ibid.

When Sustainable—Mistaken Identity.]—Marriage is a contract, and to constitute a contract both parties must know what they are entering into—no mistake of identity must exist. M., the respondent, had been convicted of a crime, and afterwards followed an industrious course of life; he was introduced to the petitioner A. (falsely called G.) as Mr. G., and represented himself as belonging to a very respectable family G., in Scotland, well known to the petitioner. The petitioner was married to him believing him to be G., and swore that had she known his proper name she would not have married him. Held that it was not merely a mistake of name, but of identity, and decree of nullity pronounced, the fraud having been unquestionably and distinctly proved. Allardyce v. Mitchell, 6 W. W. & a'B. (I. E. & M.,) 45.

Act No. 268, sec. 84.]—The Court has jurisdiction to order a suit for a decree of nullity of marriage to be tried as to questions of fact before a jury. Bishop v. Bishop, 5 A.J.R., 43.

Delay—Inspection.]—A woman delayed in instituting a suit for nullity of marriage on the ground of her husband's incompetence. The delay was explained by her ignorance of any means of redress, and that she had no intimate friends at hand with whom to consult. There was evidence that the parties had cohabited for nearly twenty years, and that the petitioner was virgo intacta. The Court excused the delay, made a decree, and, under the circumstances, dispensed with a medical inspection of the respondent, who had left the colony. Mulligan v. Boyce, 3 V.L R. (I.P. & M.,) 69.

Practice—Costs of Petitioner.]—In a case where the judge was not satisfied that the means of a petitioner's wife were sufficient, he (Higinbotham, J.) made an order in Chambers for payment of the petitioner's costs de die in diem by the husband. Hunt alias Rennie v. Rennie, 3 A.L.T., 19.

Bigamy—No Conviction.]—The Court has jurisdiction to declare a marriage null and void on the ground of bigamy, although there has been no prosecution or conviction for the bigamy. Armstrong v. Batty, 9 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 55.

Irregular Marriage in Scotland—Evidence of Witnesses who Knew that Husband and Wife Lived Together in Same Place and were Received as Husband and Wife—Such Evidence not Going Back to Date of Plaintiff's Birth—Baptismal Certificates.]—Suit as to right to administer real estate of an intestate, T. D. E. D., a nephew of the intestate, had administered the personal estate of the intestate, and, hearing of claims of the plaintiff and his sisters, as next-of-kin, had sent a power of attorney to them in England appointing a person here to receive their share, which was paid to such person. Plaintiff then came to Victoria to inquire after his interests in intestate's real estate, and the defendant (E. D.) required proof of his identity. The plaintiff then brought the suit, and, in the bill, alleged that he was a nephew of the intestate, which the answer denied. E. D. was a son of J. D., a brother of the intestate's, and the plaintiff and his sisters claimed to be children of W. D., another brother. It appeared that plaintiff's father (W. D.) contracted in Scotland an irregular but legal marriage, and there was the evidence of witnesses who knew and spoke of the father and mother as living for a long time in the same place, and being received as man and wife, but such evidence did not go back as far as plaintiff's birth. Baptismal certificates were produced showing plaintiff and his sisters to be children of W. D. and his wife. Held that the legitimacy of the plaintiff was sufficiently established from such evidence, and order made declaring plaintiff to be one of the next-of-kin of T. D. Dryden v. Dryden, 5 A.J.R., 27.

II. MARRIAGE SETTLEMENTS.

(1) Agreements to Settle and Matters Relating Thereto.

Agreement by Husband's Father—Statute of Frauds.]—A marriage settlement was executed on the marriage of O. to C. It recited an agreement by the fathers of O. and C. to settle £500 each, and then proceeded to settle the £1000. The money was not paid into the bank, as recited, but the deed was executed by the parties, their fathers and the trustees. O.'s father died without paying the £500, and the trustees of the settlement brought a bill against his executors to obtain that sum out of his estate. Held, that though the only writing to satisfy the "Statute of Frauds" was the deed, which recited that the sum had been paid, its parts could not be separated, and it would amount to an estoppel at law, but not in equity; that the trustees, in executing the settlement, made themselves liable for £1000, and the deceased would be guilty of fraud if he did not indemnify them. Decree made for payment. Quære, whether if a contract is partly in consideration of marriage, and partly of some other act to be done, the "Statute of Frauds" is applicable. Gordon v. Murphy, 4 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 120.

Impotence of Husband—Decree of Nullity.]—Suit by B. against F., the trustee of a marriage settlement of date 24th March, 1864, by which certain property was assigned to S. upon trust for B. until solemnisation of marriage, and then in trust for F. for life; remainder in trust for children of marriage, and remainder in trust for B., his executors, administrators, and assigns. B. and F. were married 30th March, 1864. On 31st July, 1873, a decree was made that marriage between B. and F. was a nullity on ground of B.'s impotence. The bill sought to establish plaintiff's rights to settled property, and for a transfer. Held, per Molesworth, J., and the Full Court, that such a marriage is voidable only, and not void, and that there is in such a voidable marriage sufficient consideration upon its solemnisation to bring into operation the trusts in favour of wife, and that plaintiff could not enforce the prior trust in the settlement, that is in favour of himself until solemnisation of the marriage. Bishop v. Smith, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 313.

(3) Varying or Altering on Decree for Divorce or Judicial Separation.

Restraint on Anticipation—"Marriage and Matrimonial Causes Statute," Sec. 54.]—By indenture of settlement, executed in anticipation of a marriage, real and personal property of the wife's was settled upon trust, during the joint lives of herself and husband, for her separate use, without power of anticipation. The wife subsequently obtained a decree for judicial separation, and instituted a suit against the trustees of the settlement praying a declaration that she was absolutely entitled, as a feme sole, to the trust property, and for a conveyance to her of such property. Held that the property was not acquired, and had not come to or devolved upon her since the decree within the meaning of Sec. 54 of the Act No. 268; that though a woman entitled to property, with a clause against anticipation, &c., may, whilst still unmarried, require it to be discharged of such restriction; yet a woman judicially separated is not, for all purposes, to be deemed unmarried. Suit dismissed with costs. Mackintosh v. Clarke, 3 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 77; affirmed on appeal, ibid, p. 123.

Practice—Notice to Wife.]—When a divorce has been granted against a wife who has not appeared, and a motion is made for variation of the settlement, she should have notice thereof. Hickling v. Hickling and Bromfield, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 44.

Variation of Settlement where Divorce Obtained at Suit of Husband.]—Where the wife's settled property brought in an income of about £980 per annum, and there were five children of the marriage, of whom one was living with the wife and four with the husband, the husband's salary being £700 per annum, the Court, after a divorce had been obtained at the suit of the husband on the ground of the wife's adultery, ordered that the trustees should pay £250 per annum to the wife for her own benefit, and £50 per annum for the maintenance and education of the child living with her, and should pay the balance of the income to the husband for the benefit of himself and the four children living with him. Ibid.

III. Judicial Separation and Divorce.

Conduct Conducing to Adultery.]—In a suit against a wife for divorce on the ground of adultery, the adultery was proved. It was also proved that before the adultery the conduct of the wife had not been what it ought to have been, and that upon the husband remonstrating with her she expressed her intention to persist in that conduct, and said that if not allowed to continue visiting the places her husband disapproved of, she would not stay with him. He replied that she might "suit herself;" and, thereupon, she left him. The petitioner being asked what he thought his wife would have to do after she left him, at first said he had not thought about it, but on being further questioned, added, "No, I never thought she would misconduct herself; I never thought she would do that." Held that the husband had not been "guilty of such wilful neglect or misconduct as had conduced to the adultery" of the wife; and had not disentitled himself to the relief he sought. Myles v. Myles, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.) 204. See also Roulston v. Roulston, ibid p. 206.

Husband's Conduct Conducing to Wife's Adultery.]—Absence in the pursuit of a proper avocation should not always tell against a petitioner. A husband is not bound to be suspicious; but he ought not to put his wife in a position of temptation: and if he is aware that she has fallen into such a position and is meditating to do wrong, he is bound to take steps to prevent her from carrying out such intention, and to remove her from that position. Where a miner left his home and was for some time absent on the gold-fields, and, though hearing that his wife had opened a boarding-house and was placed in a position of temptation, made no effort to see her or to remove her from the danger; his petition for dissolution on ground of wife's adultery refused, decree for judicial separation made. Bathgate v. Bathgate, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 129.

Misconduct Conducing to Adultery.]—With reference to a charge of having by his conduct conduced to his wife's adultery, it is right that the whole conduct of a husband petitioning for divorce, from the contract of marriage to the commencement of the suit, should be considered—his conduct in reference to his marital duties alone, the Court not having the power to look at any other offence of omission or commission by him. Terry v. Terry, 1 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 78.

Misconduct Conducing to Adultery.]—In a suit by a husband for divorce on the ground of adultery, the evidence showed that several acts of adultery had been committed by the wife, of which all but the last had been condoned, without reference to any penitence on the part of the wife. It also appeared that, being fully aware of the wife's tendency, the husband, when she left his house, took no measures to ascertain whither she had gone, or what she was doing; and that the act of adultery on which the petition was based, took place during such absence. Held that the husband had been guilty of misconduct conducing to the adultery. Ibid.

Adultery—What Conduces to or does not.]—A wife having obtained a decree for judicial separation against her husband on the ground of cruelty, subsequently committed adultery, and her husband filed a petition for divorce. Held that the decree for judicial separation had not conduced to her adultery, and divorce granted. Bailey v. Bailey, 3 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 89.

Adultery of Wife—Husband's Conduct—Marriage not Consummated.] — A husband and wife agreed before marriage that after celebration of the rite, the marriage should not be consummated for twelve months, the husband going to Adelaide to earn money to enable him to support her, and remitting her sums of money from time to time. The wife lived with her parents, and committed adultery, and the husband petitioned for a divorce before the marriage was consummated. Held that the husband's conduct had not conduced to her adultery, so as to disentitle him to a decree for dissolution of marriage, and that the reserved judgment of a Court of three Judges may be delivered by one of such Judges sitting alone. Osborne v. Osborne, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.) 112.

Conduct Conducing to Adultery—"Marriage and Matrimonial Causes Statute 1864," Sec. 70.]—A wife, who was extremely jealous of her husband, but who had not misconducted herself and had received some harsh treatment, requested her husband not to go on a theatrical tour with, amongst others, a woman of whom she was jealous, threatening that if he did so, she would leave him and not return. The husband, however, went, leaving his wife with some funds and the furniture of the house. As soon as possible after her husband had left, she sold everything, and departed to live elsewhere, and would not return to her husband, though he endeavoured to persuade her. Nearly a year after this she committed adultery. Held that the husband's conduct had not led to her adultery, though there was very little doubt that she would not have committed it, had she lived with her husband, and that the husband's conduct was not the neglect or misconduct contemplated by Sec. 70 of the "Marriage and Matrimonial Causes Statute 1864." Maxwell v. Maxwell, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 117.

Cruelty—How Considered.]—Although the acts of alleged cruelty are some of them very remote, and separated by considerable intervals, it is not so much the practice of the Court to dwell on such acts as detached charges, resting on independent grounds, as to endeavour to discover whether they are recurring instances of unjustifiable and inexcusable behaviour on the part of the husband, forming parts of a regular series of annoyances. The domestic life of each party must be examined together as a continuous whole, and the general conduct of the respondent inquired into, in order to see what light is thereby thrown on the particular transactions. Casey v. Casey, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 34, 45.

Cruelty—What is Sufficient.]—Not only actual personal violence, but everything that tends to bodily hurt or peril, is a ground for judicial interposition; and a reasonable apprehension of personal violence is enough. Words of menace accompanied with threatening attitudes, and an ability to inflict injury, do amount to legal cruelty, and the wife must be protected from the peril of bodily injury, as well as from actual injury itself. What must be the extent of the injury, or what will reasonably excite the apprehension, must be deduced from various circumstances, while the complexion of individual acts may almost change their very essence in consequence of the circumstances by which they are attended, but the causes must be grave and weighty, and must be such as show an absolute impossibility that the duties of the married life can be discharged. Ibid p. 46.

Cruelty—What is and how Inferred.]—Mere words of abuse taken alone are not a sufficient ground for a judicial separation on the score of cruelty, but when the Court is examining a series of allegations, including direct acts of cruelty, it is entitled to look into all the circumstances, and into the whole cluster of events so to speak, which have occurred during a series of months, or perhaps of years, including those threats and expressions of abuse, whether intervening between or accompanying the different acts of violence. Again, tyrannical conduct alone, on the part of the husband, is not a ground for pronouncing a decree of judicial separation; but if it be of such a nature as to endanger the health of the wife, then separation may be granted. Where words are used not amounting to threats, but which are exceedingly abusive, and are coupled with violent and threatening demeanour, the Court will infer threats from them; and in all cases where there is direct testimony of violence, threats and abusive language may be taken into consideration to enable the Court to test whether there is likely to be a recurrence of the violence. A single act of violence alone may not be enough to found a decree for judicial separation; but where preceded by such conduct as to give a colour of cruelty to the act, that has been held sufficient. There must be some well-founded apprehension of injury; not necessarily danger to life or limb. On the principle obsta principiis, the Court steps in to prevent the future carrying out of threats already made à fortiori where there have been previous assaults. Mackintosh v. Mackintosh, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 70.

Insults to the wife's relatives can form no ground for a judicial separation on the ground of cruelty. Ibid.

Cruelty—Provocation.]—Great provocation on the part of the wife may prevent violence on the part of the husband prevailing as a ground for separation; but slight provocation on her part is no justification for the infliction of violent injuries by the husband. Ibid.

Cruelty—How Considered—Provocation.]—In considering evidence of cruelty, it is all-important to view the facts charged in relation to all their surrounding circumstances, and not to look merely at those facts isolated. Individual circumstances, which in themselves seem trivial, or even comic, may, when taken in connection with others which interpret and perhaps increase their effect, become important in proof of real cruelty. The position of the two parties must be regarded. If a wife, exhibiting an utter contempt for her husband on account of his dissolute behaviour, and a determination to get rid of him, thinks herself justified in treating him in a contemptuous manner, she provokes very strong acts on his part in retaliation; and though she might deem herself morally justified in the conduct she pursued towards him, yet she is not entitled to divorce for acts which she herself, by such conduct, has to a great extent provoked. Beck v. Beck, 1 W. & W. (I.E. & M.,) 199.

Cruelty.]—For remarks upon the character of cruelty amounting to sævitia, see Trestrail v. Trestrail, 3 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 90.

Cruelty.]—Where, in a suit by a wife for divorce on the ground of adultery and cruelty, the husband had, once only, used actual violence to the wife, but had frequently used insulting language to her before her children and the servants, and threatened her with violence; and after the institution of the suit the husband departed to San Francisco, taking another woman with him, with two children by her and three of his children by his wife (taking the latter without his wife's consent and forcibly), and leaving the wife totally unprovided for, Held that, though the one act of violence, taken by itself, would not have been sufficient to justify a decree, yet such act taken in connection with the husband's previous and subsequent heartless conduct, afforded sufficient grounds for a decree on the grounds of adultery and cruelty. Campbell v. Campbell, 5 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 59.

Cruelty—What is.]—Mere threats or an isolated act of passion do not constitute cruelty sufficient to support a decree for a judicial separation; there must be reasonable apprehension of bodily harm. Nor will cruelty to the children be taken into consideration unless done under circumstances which amount to cruelty to the mother. Cruelty to the children should not, except under the circumstances mentioned, be taken into consideration in a suit between husband and wife; but should, where a decree has been pronounced on other grounds for separation, be considered with reference to the question whether husband or wife should have the custody of the children. Kennedy v. Kennedy, 4 A.J.R., 106.

Wife's Petition — Cruelty — Evidence of.]—A wife petitioned for dissolution on ground of husband's cruelty and adultery. It was proved that the husband had been guilty of habitual drunkenness, had frequently used abusive language to his wife, and had occasionally been violent towards her, but not so as to endanger her health or safety. Held that cruelty must consist of some ill-treatment which endangers the life, the person, or the health, or renders cohabitation unsafe, and that there was no evidence of such in this case. Petition dismissed. Macartney v. Macartney, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 81.

Evidence that the husband has been bound over to keep the peace towards the wife is admissible in such cases. Ibid.

Cruelty of Wife—What is Cruelty—Act No. 268, s. 50—Costs.]—A husband petitioned for a decree of judicial separation on the ground of his wife's cruelty. Held that if the wife becomes the assailant and uses such violence as is likely to incite the husband to retaliate and to use violence in self-defence, that is sufficient cruelty. Decree made as prayed upon terms as to allowance to wife. Petitioner to pay costs. Terry v. Terry, 5 A.J.R., 50.

"Marriage and Matrimonial Causes Statute" (No. 268,) Sec. 70—Discretion of Court to Refuse Divorce when Petitioner has been Guilty of Cruelty.]—In a petition for a divorce where the wife's adultery was proved, but it appearing that the petitioner had been guilty of acts of cruelty to his wife, even where such cruelty did not, in the opinion of the Court, amount to cruelty conducing to the adultery, the Court exercised its discretion given by Sec. 70 and refused a divorce, but granted judicial separation. Bythell v. Bythell, 3 A.J.R., 68.

Wife's Petition—Adultery and Desertion—Proof of Adultery—Venereal Disease.]—A wife petitioned for dissolution of marriage, on the ground of husband's adultery and desertion. The desertion was proved, the only evidence of the adultery was that the wife, being perfectly chaste herself, was infected with venereal disease shortly after intercourse with her husband. Held, that was not sufficient proof of the husband's adultery, and the petitioner was allowed the option of taking a decree for judicial separation or of adducing additional proof of the adultery. Dean v. Dean, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 116.

Adultery and Cruelty—Venereal Disease.]—Proof by the wife that the husband was affected with venereal disease, that he knew it, and, while so affected, had sexual intercourse with her, and that she then became similarly affected, was held sufficient to entitle her to a decree for divorce on the ground of adultery and cruelty. Davis v. Davis, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 105.

The Court, for its own greater satisfaction, obtained from the petitioner a denial of any unchastity, though her chastity was not impeached on the pleadings. Ibid.

Desertion—What is.]—The meaning of desertion is that the husband leaves the wife contrary to her wish; it is a misconception to speak of desertion in a case where both parties separate by mutual consent. Beck v. Beck, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 199.

Desertion.]—Where a husband resides away from his wife against her wish, the mere giving to the wife support which might be deemed sufficient alimony is not inconsistent with desertion. Desertion is the depriving either the husband or the wife of the society of the other by such other. Where, therefore, a husband resided away from his wife against her wish, but allowed her a sufficient sum for maintenance, she was held entitled on proof of his adultery to a decree for divorce. Sayers v. Sayers, 1 V.R. (I.E. & M.,) 33; 1 A.J.R., 138.

Petition by Wife—Adultery and Desertion.]—There was no doubt about the husband's adultery, and the husband had left the wife for three years, during which time he sent her comparatively large sums of money; the petitioner refused to live with him unless he prepared a home. Held that the wife was entitled to more than mere support; she was entitled to her husband's society, and the support must be such as would enable them to live together; that there was sufficient desertion. Decree for divorce. Nimmo v. Nimmo, 3 A.J.R. 132.

Separation and Neglect of Husband.]—On a petition for divorce where the adultery was proved, but the petitioner had deserted his wife (the respondent) in London shortly after the marriage, the Court refused a decree for divorce, but granted a judicial separation. Schaefer v. Schaefer, 3 A.J.R. 132.

Desertion — Imprisonment during the Two Years.]—The fact that a husband who has left his wife with the intention of permanently deserting her has been imprisoned before the "desertion for two years" has been completed, and has continued in prison till the commencement of the suit by the wife for a divorce, does not prevent the period from running. Drummond v. Drummond, 2 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 78.

Desertion — Agreement to Separate a Conclusive Answer.]—An agreement to separate, unless it be procured by fraud, is a conclusive answer to a charge of desertion where the only evidence of desertion consists of the fact that the husband and wife are living apart, and their separation is in consequence of their express voluntary agreement to live apart. Hayle v. Hayle and Henry, 10 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 59, 63.

Condonation — When Applicable.]—Condonation is only possible where both parties are aware of the acts condoned; and is not absolute, but is granted upon the implied condition that the same injury be not repeated or any other inflicted. Casey v. Casey, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 34, 48.

Condonation—How Effect of Destroyed.]—A subsequent act of cruelty after condonation of a previous one, though it be insufficient to found a legal sentence, may yet suffice to destroy the effect of condonation and to revive the right of complaint, and to entitle the injured party to connect the acts condoned but revived by the fresh injuries with the subsequent acts which are uncondoned. Ibid.

Condonation.]—For adultery there is only one mode of condonation—cohabitation must be renewed; whereas for cruelty, lapse of time, acts by the wife, living in the same house, may all amount to evidence of condonation of the cruelty, although these facts would not afford evidence of condonation in case of adultery. Sutherland v. Sutherland, 8 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 49; 3 A.L.T., 133.

Evidence of Condonation—How Considered.]—See Casey v. Casey, post under sub-heading Evidence.

Adultery on Part of Petitioner and Respondent—Condonation by Respondent—Discretion of Court.]—Where both petitioner and respondent had been guilty of adultery, but the wife had condoned the petitioner's adultery, the Court, having regard to the conduct of the petitioner towards his wife, refused, in the exercise of its discretion, to grant a divorce. Hayle v. Hayle and Henry, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 59.

Adultery of Husband—Condonation by Wife—Duty and Discretion of Court.]—If the husband has committed adultery, and this is raised as a counter-charge, though the wife has condoned it, such condonation does not bind the Court or relieve it from the duty of inquiry, and the exercise of the judicial discretion which is imposed upon it by law. Ibid, p. 63.

Collusion—What Is or Is Not.]—In a suit for divorce, the mere fact that the respondent is not adverse is not sufficient to constitute collusion with the petitioner. Treacy v. Treacy, 3 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 85.

Collusion.]—Where a suit for divorce was partly heard and adjourned, and, pending the adjournment, the wife abandoned her defence, and wrote a letter to that effect, the Court ordered a copy of it to be sent to the Attorney-General, considering that it was not for the Court to investigate it, and adjourned the case to allow the Attorney-General time for investigation. Dunn v. Dunn, 1 A.J.R. 41.

Connivance.]—Where the evidence did not show that the husband desired, intended, contemplated, or winked at his wife's offence, Held that a charge of connivance was not established. Terry v. Terry, 1 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 78.

Connivance—What is.]—Connivance implies consent, active or passive, and an intention on the part of the person charged with conniving that guilt shall ensue. Hayle v. Hayle and Henry, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 59, 62.

Objections on the Ground of Neglect, Connivance, or Condonation—How Raised.]—The Court may itself take cognisance of objections to a petition for divorce by the husband on the ground of neglect, connivance or condonation if they appear upon the evidence; but such objections cannot be made by the respondent unless they appear upon the pleadings. Terry v. Terry, 1 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 78.

Delay.]—Where a husband proved unfaithful to the wife's knowledge in 1856, and he again left her in 1858, and refused to live with her, and the wife sued for divorce in 1869, the Court refused a decree for dissolution, but granted a decree for judicial separation. Stone v. Stone, N.C., 24.

Where a husband ceased cohabiting with his wife on account of her adultery in 1861, and was unable through poverty to institute proceedings for divorce until 1869, the Court under those circumstances made a decree for dissolution of marriage. Young v. Young, N.C., 24.

Delay by Husband—Extenuating Circumstances.]—Where a husband petitioned for a divorce in 1872, the adultery having taken place in 1854. In 1861, when the Court had jurisdiction in divorce matters, the petitioner lost his eyesight, and was unable to work, and in very poor circumstances in consequence. Shortly before petition brought the petitioner recovered his eyesight, and was able to work. Held that his delay, under the circumstances, was no bar to his obtaining a decree for divorce. Daniel v. Daniel, 3 A.J.R., 132.

Petition by Lunatic's Committee.]—The Court has no jurisdiction to decree dissolution of marriage on petition by committee of a lunatic husband, although it will grant judicial separation on such a petition. Millar v. Annand, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 137.

Case must be Proved to Satisfaction of Court.]—Before a decree for dissolution of marriage can be granted, it is necessary that the Court, as well as the jury, should be satisfied that the petitioner has proved his case. Fisher v. Fisher, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 102.

Jurisdiction of Court—Marriage of Minor without Consent.]—The Court will exercise jurisdiction to dissolve a marriage on the ground of the wife's adultery, although the marriage was celebrated when the wife was a minor to the husband's knowledge, but without the knowledge or consent of her parents, and upon a false declaration. Gullifer v. Gullifer, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 109.

Jurisdiction—Husband Respondent Domiciled Abroad.]—The Court has jurisdiction under Secs. 61, 62, and 87 of the "Marriage and Matrimonial Causes Statute 1864" to dissolve a marriage, on the petition of the wife, celebrated in Victoria between a woman domiciled there and a foreigner who has not abandoned his domicil of origin, though such foreigner be resident and domiciled in his domicil of origin at the commencement of and duration of the suit. Ho-ah-Mie v. Ho-ah-Mie, 6 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 113; 2 A.L.T., 93.

Per Higinbotham, J.—The jurisdiction conferred by these sections (Secs. 61, 62, and 87 of the "Marriage and Matrimonial Causes Statute 1864,") is practically unlimited. But it does not follow that the Court will in all cases exercise the jurisdiction it possesses . . . . The petitioner is entitled to insist on the rule that where a Court has power conferred on it to do a judicial act, and the object of the power is to effectuate a legal right, it is imperative on the Court to exercise that authority at the instance of a party interested and having the right to make the application. Ibid.

Jurisdiction—Domicil.]—A husband and wife were married in England, and shortly afterwards came to Victoria, where they acquired a domicil, and while there the wife eloped with the co-respondent. The husband, not finding employment in Victoria, returned to England. Afterwards he came again to Victoria to bring his suit for dissolution of marriage, and stated he would remain in Victoria if he could get employment. There was proof of due service upon, but no appearance for respondent or co-respondent. Held by Stawell, C.J., and Fellows, J. (dubitante, Molesworth, J.), that the service of the citation did not confer jurisdiction; that the husband had acquired no new domicil in Victoria after his return to England so as to give the Court a jurisdiction, and that these facts must be considered, even in the absence of appearance by the wife and co-respondent. Petition dismissed. Duggan v. Duggan, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 71.

Jurisdiction of Court — Domicil of Husband (Respondent).]—The Court has no jurisdiction in a suit by a wife for dissolution of marriage where the husband has never been in the colony and the wife has only come to the colony since the marriage. Kretzschmar v. Kretzschmar, 4 A.J.R., 131.

Petition—Supplemental Petition—Matters of Pleading—Divorce Rule 58—Equity Rule 11.]—The petition ought not to state acts of adultery with any person not made a co-respondent unless the Court has dispensed with his being made a co-respondent. Where a respondent has committed, after service of the petition, adultery with another person not a co-respondent, the petitioner may obtain leave to file a fresh petition, in the nature of a supplemental petition, setting forth the acts of adultery and making such other person a co-respondent. Smith v. Smith, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 122.

Granting Judicial Separation at Request of Respondent in Suit for Divorce.]—On trial of the issues in a suit for divorce, the jury found that the allegations of adultery against the respondent and co-respondent had not been proved, but that counter allegations by the respondent against the petitioner of adultery and cruelty were proved. The respondent thereupon requested leave to amend her answer, by inserting a prayer for judicial separation and permanent alimony. Held that the Court had no power, even if the answer prayed it, to grant the request of the respondent in the same suit. Smith v. Smith, 4 A.J.R., 129.

Costs.]—The Court, however, dismissed the petition with costs. Ibid.

Petition—Omission of Co-respondent's Name from Title—Amendment—New Citation.]—Where the name of the co-respondent has been omitted from the title of the petition, but is mentioned in the body of the petition, there is no occasion to amend the petition, but a new citation must be issued and served. Fisher v. Fisher, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 102.

Amendment of Petition.]—The Court allowed an amendment of a petition for dissolution of marriage at the trial, by inserting a fresh charge of adultery, where no injustice was thereby occasioned. Cameron v. Cameron, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 105.

Second Petition disclosing facts not previously mentioned—When it will be heard.]—See Trestrail v. Trestrail, post column 520.

No Replication—Admissions in Answer.]—A husband in a suit against his wife and the co-respondent for divorce on the ground of adultery, did not claim damages against the co-respondent, who did not appear. The wife answered admitting some of the formal allegations in the petition, but denying the adultery, and charging adultery and cruelty against the husband. The petitioner did not put in a replication, and a Judge's order was made for trial by the Court only, without a jury. Held by the Full Court, that on the Judge's order the hearing should proceed, and that the admissions in the wife's answer did not need to be proved, unless the Court required it for its own express satisfaction. Carnaby v. Carnaby, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 65.

Paragraph Struck Out as Scandalous and Irrelevant.]—The seventh paragraph of a petition stated that the respondent had been guilty of incest with her brother two years before marriage, and the eighth paragraph stated "that these matters," i.e. the matters contained in the seventh paragraph, and a statement in the eighth paragraph that the respondent had had a child before marriage, "so seriously affected the petitioner's health, &c." On a summons by the respondent to strike out the seventh paragraph as scandalous and irrelevant, Higinbotham, J., ordered the seventh to be struck out, and the eighth paragraph to be amended as follows, "that this matter and further circumstances connected with the life of the respondent previous to marriage, which came to the knowledge of the petitioner while residing at ——, so seriously affected, &c.," the petitioner to have forty-eight hours to amend, and the respondent to have the same period to put in her answer. Belcher v. Belcher, 6 A.L.T., 21.

Service of Amended Petition.]—It is not necessary when amendments are made in a petition for the amended petition to be presented de novo to the Judge. Molesworth v. Molesworth, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 139, 147.

Service upon Law Officer of the Crown.]—When it appeared in the course of the proceedings that the petition had not been served upon the law officer on the day of its presentation to the Court, the Court allowed the cause to stand over, the petitioner to get the consent of the Attorney-General to the proceedings in the meantime. Carnaby v. Carnaby, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 65.

Service Upon Law Officer of Crown.]—Proof of due service of petition upon law officer of the Crown must be given before case is entered into upon merits. Where it appeared that the law officer received copy of petition on 12th November, and that it was presented to the Judge on the 11th of November, Held by Barry and Williams, JJ. (diss. Stawell, C.J.,) that that was service, although Judge did not accept service not sufficient until 14th November, and per totam curiam that Court will not sanction an adjournment in order to ascertain whether law officer was satisfied with service, reversing Carnaby v. Carnaby. Molesworth v. Molesworth, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 139.

Act No. 268, Secs. 61, 65—Service of Petition.]—A petition is under Sec. 61 presented to the Judge if it is presented to his associate, and on the same day a copy may be served upon the Crown law officer, even although the Judge has not then endorsed his acceptance of the petition. Gullifer v. Gullifer, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 109; 1 A.L.T., 53.

Citation—Service of, Out of the Jurisdiction.]—Semble, that it is unnecessary to have an Order of Court for service of the citation out of the jurisdiction except in cases of substituted service, in which case an application should be made in open Court in order to give the matter publicity. Pasmore v. Pasmore, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 56.

Petition—Substituted Service—Citation—Advertisement.]—A petitioner for divorce had not heard of her husband for four years, and in the last letter from him, addressed from England, he had requested that all communications as to his private affairs should be forwarded to his uncle, also resident in England. Leave was granted by the Court to make substituted service of the petition on the uncle in England, and the citation was ordered to be advertised in the Times, or other newspaper circulating in England, on any three occasions, and in some paper circulating in Victoria on three occasions, with intervals of a month between each advertisement. Homer v. Homer, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 33.

See, also, Wright v. Wright, ibid, p. 198.

Service of citation should be proved by viva voce evidence, and not by affidavit. Jewell v. Jewell, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 136.

Service of Citation and Petition—Substituted Service.]—In a suit by a wife for judicial separation, the respondent had absconded, and the affidavit of the petitioner stated that she had been unable, after diligent inquiries, to gain any intelligence of him, and believed from the answers to her inquiries, that he had left the colony. The Court, nevertheless, refused to dispense with service upon the respondent, but required the affidavit of some other persons stating where the respondent was supposed to be, and upon such affidavit being filed, directed substituted service by advertisements in the place where he was supposed to be. M'Nulty v. M'Nulty, 1 W.W. & A'B. (I.E. & M.,) 85.

Service of Citation.]—Affidavits of persons resident in England, verifying the service of the citation on the respondent there, were accepted by the Court as sufficient evidence, since the service was effected out of the jurisdiction, and the affidavits were explicit and satisfactory. The Court intimated, however, that it must not be understood as laying down a general rule that a mere formal affidavit of service abroad would satisfy the Court, or that where service is effected within the jurisdiction, or even in the adjacent colonies, it might be proved by affidavit. Constable v. Constable, 1 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 88.

Service—Personal Service out of Jurisdiction.]—Where a respondent serving a sentence in New South Wales was personally served with the petition and citation in New South Wales in proceedings for dissolution of marriage, Held, that this was sufficient, and that a special order for that purpose was not necessary. Parke v. Parke, 6 W.W. & A'B. (I.E. & M.,) 51, N.C., 28.

Service of Citation and Petition—No Appearance.]—Service of the citation may be effected in the long vacation, and when so effected, no objection can be taken to a defect in the service of petition without first entering an appearance; the objection as to service of the co-respondent is not one which the respondent can take. Fisher v. Fisher, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 86.

Petition—Service of.]—A petition may, under Reg.-Gen., 1st February, 1854, Cap. 1, Sec. 15, be served during the Long Vacation. Fisher v. Fisher, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 68.

But see S.C., at pages 88, 94, where the Court held that service of the petition during the Long Vacation was forbidden, and although there was nothing forbidding the service of the citation during the vacation, yet the two must be served together.

Service of Petition and Citation when Dispensed with.]—In a suit by a wife against a husband for divorce, an application was made by the wife to dispense with service of the petition and citation upon the respondent. The affidavits in support of the application set forth, in addition to the statements required by Rule 7 of the Rules of 18th September, 1861, that the petitioner was utterly unaware of the whereabouts of the respondent, and had no means of ascertaining where he was. Under these circumstances Holroyd, J. (in Chambers,) dispensed with service as requested. Lutgens v. Lutgens, 4 A.L.T., 76.

Petition for Dissolution of Marriage—Dispensing with Service of Citation and Petition upon Respondent resident in China—Act No. 268, Sec 87—Reg-Gen. Rule 7.]—Higinbotham, J. (In Chambers) made an order dispensing with service of the citation and petition upon a respondent who had deserted his wife and gone to live in China, where he had married again. Ah Nang v. Ah Nang, 4 A.L.T., 178.

Trial—No Defence by Respondent—Issues of Fact.]—Where the respondent leaves a suit for divorce undefended, there can be no issues of fact to go to a jury, as between the petitioner and respondent, there being no fact contested between them, since the respondent, by leaving the suit undefended, admits the case as against herself. Bury v. Bury, 1 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 20; N.C., 29.

Issues—Adultery.]—Issues for trial by a jury need not give the times and places of commission of alleged acts of adultery, as the times and places are sufficiently stated in the petition. Fisher v. Fisher, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 102.

Order for Trial by Jury—Divorce Rules, 18, 22, 23.]—Where a cause is ready for issue by service of the citation and petition, an order for a trial by jury may be obtained before the expiration of the twenty days mentioned in rule 18. Smith v. Smith, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 122.

Verdict.]—The Court in its Matrimonial Jurisdiction will accept a three-fourths verdict upon issues sent for trial. Fisher v. Fisher, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 86, 93.

Practice on Taking Evidence—Belief.]—It is contrary to the rules of evidence to ask a witness his belief of adultery from facts he proved on the examination-in-chief, but such question may be asked on cross-examination. Ibid.

Undefended Suit—Trial by Jury—Act No. 268, Sec. 84.]—In an undefended suit for divorce, the Court has no jurisdiction to order a trial by jury as to facts raised in the petition. Dowling v. Dowling, 9 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 58.

Trial of Issues—Formal Proof When Given.]—Proof of service of the petition and citation upon the Attorney-General, and all formal proofs, need not be given at the outset of a suit for dissolution where a jury has been impannelled to try issues in the suit, but should be reserved till the verdict of the jury has been given. Belcher v. Belcher and M'Kenzie, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 52.

Dispensing with Co-Respondent.]—Though a Judge's order has been obtained dispensing with a co-respondent, the petitioner must, at the trial, satisfy the Court that such order was necessary. Kerr v. Kerr, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 101.

Proving Service upon Respondent.]—An appearance for the respondent, by counsel, does not dispense with the necessity of proving service upon her. Ibid.

Dispensing with a Co-Respondent.]—The Court dispensed with a person as co-respondent in a suit for dissolution by a husband where the husband had already in an action for crim. con. in New South Wales, before a jurisdiction to dissolve marriage was established there, obtained a verdict against such person for committing adultery with his wife. Lawrence v. Lawrence, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 107.

Cause when at Issue.]—Semble, that upon the expiration of twenty-one days from the filing and serving of the answer, a cause is, without any replication, at issue. Carnaby v. Carnaby, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 65.

Setting down for Trial—Suit for Divorce and Damages—Jury—Striking Out Claim for Damages.—In a suit by a husband against his wife and the co-respondent for divorce on the ground of adultery, and for damages against the co-respondent, the wife had entered an appearance to the citation, but put in no answer. The co-respondent did not enter an appearance to the citation. The petitioner set down the cause for trial by the Full Court without a jury, without a Judge's order giving him leave to do so. When the cause was called on, the petitioner's counsel stated that the petitioner would forego the claim for damages, and asked for leave to amend by striking out the claim for damages. Held per Full Court, that when damages are claimed the cause must be heard by a jury; that a petitioner claiming damages by his petition cannot forego them at the hearing, but must obtain leave from a Judge to amend the record before setting the cause down for trial; and that a cause cannot be set down for trial, whether before a jury or not, without the order of a Judge, and the cause was ordered to stand over till next sittings. Tyers v. Tyers, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 63.

Trial of Issues—Rules 1861, Rule 25.]—Where the jury have found for the petitioner, the Court will not pronounce a decree until after the first four days of the next term, in order to afford the usual opportunity of a motion for a new trial. Bathgate v. Bathgate, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 129.

Act No. 268—Case Not to be Heard by Jury—Setting Down for Trial.]—A cause was set down for hearing before the Court without a jury; the respondent had not entered an appearance, but an affidavit of personal service of the petition was filed. Held that Rule 9 did not make a Judge's order in such a case necessary where there had been personal service, and that the order was unnecessary. Julius v. Julius, 5 A.J.R., 131.

Setting Suit Down before at Issue—Objection—Waiver.]—If the petitioner set a suit down for hearing before it is properly at issue, the respondent should move to have such setting down set aside, otherwise any objection on that ground is waived by the respondent, and cannot be maintained when the cause comes on for hearing. Maxwell v. Maxwell, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 117; 2 A.L.T., 93.

Setting down for Trial before Single Judge—Act No. 787—Application Unnecessary.]—Per Higinbotham, J. (in Chambers)—It is unnecessary under the "Marriage and Matrimonial Causes Statute Amendment Act 1883" (No. 787), to obtain a Judge's order for the trial of a cause before a single Judge. Causes may be set down for trial without a Judge's order, directing them to be tried by one or more Judges. Cameron v. Cameron, 6 A.L.T., 26.

Single Judge—Power to hear Rule nisi for New Trial—Act No. 787, Sec. 15.]—Under the combined effect of Sec. 99 of the "Marriage and Matrimonial Causes Statute 1864," and Sec. 15 of the "Marriage and Matrimonial Causes Statute Amendment Act 1883," a single Judge sitting in the divorce jurisdiction has power to hear an application for a rule nisi for a new trial, and to make the rule absolute. Belcher v. Belcher and M'Kenzie, 10 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 52. The application for a rule should be made before the decree is pronounced. Ibid.

Death of Respondent—Entering Suggestion.]—A husband petitioned for dissolution of marriage on the ground of adultery. Issues were tried before a jury, and the verdict established the marriage and adultery, and gave the petitioner £25 damages against the co-respondent. On the case coming on to be heard upon the petition, an affidavit was filed, stating that respondent had died since the trial. Held that suggestion of death should be stated on the record, and order to be drawn up on next sittings of the Court for payment of damages and costs by the co-respondent. Richardson v. Richardson, 2 W.W. & A'B. (I.E. & M.,) 62.

Petition Dismissed, and Counter Petition brought by Respondent.]—A husband filed a petition for divorce, on the ground of adultery by the wife. The wife and co-respondent filed an answer denying the charges on oath, and the petition was dismissed for want of prosecution. The wife afterwards petitioned for divorce on the grounds of adultery, cruelty, and desertion, and no answer was put in by the husband, nor did he defend the suit. The Court examined the wife and the former co-respondent, who denied on oath the adulteries charged against them in the former petition, and being satisfied with their denials and explanations, made a decree for divorce. Treacy v. Treacy, 3 W.W. & A'B. (I.E. & M.,) 85.

Second Petition for Divorce Disclosing Facts not Previously Mentioned.]—On a petition by a wife for a divorce on the grounds of adultery and cruelty, the Court was of the opinion that the adultery was established, but that the acts of cruelty did not amount to legal cruelty, and gave the petitioner the option of having her petition dismissed or taking a decree for judicial separation. The petitioner, instead of exercising the option, presented a second petition alleging, in addition to the facts already stated, that her husband had wilfully communicated to her venereal disease, but that from motives of delicacy and ignorance that it amounted to wilful cruelty, she had omitted to mention it in the former petition. The Court, considering the exceptional circumstances of the case, and intimating that it was not to be regarded as a precedent, consented to accept the second petition on the terms of the wife paying the costs of the former suit. Trestrail v. Trestrail, 3 W.W.& A'B. (I.E. & M.,) 90.

Second Petition—Adultery and Desertion.]—A wife petitioned for dissolution of marriage on the ground of adultery and desertion for two years. The adultery was proved, but the two years' desertion was not then completed. On hearing the petition at the completion of the time, Held that a fresh petition must be presented. Seehusen v. Seehusen, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 149.

Summons—Certifying for Counsel.]—A summons in chambers in the matrimonial jurisdiction referred to the Court is not an appeal to the Full Court under Secs. 104 and 105 of Act No. 268, and may therefore be heard by two Judges sitting in Banco in the common law jurisdiction. On a summons in Chambers in the matrimonial jurisdiction, it is not necessary to certify for counsel, as it is only ex gratiâ that a proctor may be heard in such matters. Smith v. Smith, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 65.

Practice—Hearing Counsel.]—The rules as to practice in the Supreme Court in its matrimonial and divorce jurisdiction provide that where a jury is resorted to the proceedings shall be as at Nisi Prius, and that seems to limit the rule to that mode of trial. By rule 59, it is provided that where there is no jury the practice at Equity shall be followed. The hearing of counsel being a point of practice, where in a suit for judicial separation there is no jury, the Court must hear two counsel on each side if they be present, and the petitioner has the right of reply. Mackintosh v. Mackintosh, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 70.

Co-respondent's Right to be Heard.]—A co-respondent who had not entered an appearance, but had by counsel addressed the jury upon the question of damages at the time of issues, has no right to be heard at the hearing. Millar v. Annand, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 137.

New Trial—Witness Put Out of the Way—Discretionary Power of Court.]—On a motion for a new trial on the ground that a witness for the petitioner, whose evidence was material, was fraudulently put out of the way, it appeared that the evidence was material, but that the respondent and co-respondent were not privy to the abstraction of the witness, even if the abstraction had been shown to be fraudulent. No application had been made at the trial for the production of this witness, so the Court refused a new trial, holding that the extraordinary and discretionary powers vested in it to call for evidence were intended to prevent collusion, fraud, and deception, and not to help out a petitioner's case. Smith v. Smith, 4 A.J.R., 87.

Non-appearance of Petitioner.]—Where a petitioner does not appear at the hearing the Court will not dismiss the petition except upon notice to him. Rule nisi to dismiss granted. Anderson v. Anderson, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 128.

Taking Evidence under a Commission.]—See post under heading—(3) EVIDENCE.

(c) Costs.

Husband's Petition — Wife's Costs.]— Where there was no evidence to support the issues of husband's cruelty raised in her answer by a respondent, Held that in such a case she raised them at her own risk, and that she could only be allowed the costs of traversing the statements made by the petitioner. Lewis v. Lewis, N.C., 24.

Costs—Vexatious Issues.]—In a suit for divorce on the ground of adultery, the respondent denied the adultery, and charged her husband with desertion, neglect, and cruelty. Issues on all these points, including the wife's adultery, were found in favour of the husband. On the question of costs, Held that the wife was not entitled to the costs of any of the issues except those charging her with adultery, and of an issue raised by her answer of condonation, since evidence was given to support it. Miller v. Miller, 1 A.J.R., 41.

Wife's Costs.]—A wife, a respondent, not having separate property, is indemnified against costs unless her proceedings are vexatious. Smith v. Smith, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 122.

Payment into Court of Sum to meet Wife's Costs—Poverty of Husband—Reduction of Sum.]—In a suit for dissolution of marriage instituted by the husband, an order had been made for payment into Court of a sum to meet wife's costs. The petitioner applied on affidavit that he was not poor enough to sue in forma pauperis, but was earning barely enough to support himself. The Court, under the circumstances, reduced the sum to be paid in from £90 to £15. Batch v. Batch, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 120.

Payment into Court of Wife's Costs—No Order for Payment in Decree.]—A respondent had been ordered to pay into Court a sum to meet the wife's costs. The wife's petition for judicial separation had been dismissed, no mention being made of the costs, the decree containing no reference to them. Barry, J. (in Chambers) refused to make an order for payment of the wife's costs of that sum. Held on appeal, by Stawell, C.J., and Stephens, J. (dissentiente Barry, J.) that the wife, though unsuccessful, was entitled to obtain a subsequent order for payment of her costs out of such sum. M'Mahon v. M'Mahon, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 121.

Costs—Of Wife—Unfounded Countercharges.]—Where, in a suit for divorce by the husband, the wife made unfounded countercharges, which her proctor, by careful inquiry, might have discovered to be unsustainable, the Court disallowed the wife's costs in respect of such counter charges, and deducted the petitioner's costs in respect of such charges from the costs allowed to the wife. Lawrence v. Lawrence, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 107; 2 A.L.T., 64.

Costs—Wife's Costs de die in diem—Costs of Trial.]—On an application by the wife, respondent in a divorce suit, to be allowed her costs de die in diem, and to have a sum of money fixed for her costs at the trial, the petitioner filed an affidavit stating that he had no means. Higinbotham, J. (in Chambers), ordered the petitioner to pay the costs of the wife de die in diem, such costs to be paid within five days of taxation, and to pay £25 into Court towards the wife's costs of the suit, within one month of the application. Hayle v. Hayle, 6 A.L.T. 18.

Costs of Petitioner—Dismissal of Petition.]—When the time for appearance to the citation elapsed without the respondent (wife), who had been personally served with the citation, appearing, the petitioner was allowed to have his petition dismissed without costs. Pasmore v. Pasmore, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 203.

Costs of Petitioner—Co-respondent ordered to pay Costs of Issue as to Adultery found against him.]—On a petition for divorce the Court found that the wife had committed adultery, but refused a dissolution because the petitioner had also committed adultery. Nevertheless the co-respondent was ordered to pay the petitioner's costs in respect of the issue as to the wife's adultery. Hayle v. Hayle and Henry, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 59, 66.

Costs of Petitioner.]—Semble, it being the duty of the petitioner's proctor to show what is a sufficient sum to pay into Court for the wife's costs in bringing a suit for judicial separation, the Court will not increase the amount so paid in. Cawkwell v. Cawkwell, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 69.

Respondent's Costs—Countercharges Unproved—Payment into Court.]—In a suit by a husband for divorce on the ground of adultery, the husband paid £178 into Court to meet his wife's expenses of defending the petition. She brought countercharges of desertion and connivance, the investigation of which materially lengthened the suit. Both of these charges were determined in favour of the husband, and as to the alleged desertion it was held there was no reasonable evidence that made it fairly a subject of discussion. Held that the respondent was answerable for any costs over and above the sum paid into Court, which was an unusually liberal sum, and order made for payment out of that sum, but order for further taxation refused. Belcher v. Belcher and M'Kenzie, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 52.

Costs—Of Respondent.]—Where the earnings of the petitioner were £2 15s. a week, a judge in Chambers ordered him to pay a lump sum of £25 to meet the costs incurred by the respondent in a suit against her for a divorce. Held that this was a reasonable sum, and as the respondent called no witnesses, the Court refused to make any order for the taxation and payment of costs, notwithstanding that the petition had been dismissed against her. Hayle v. Hayle and Henry, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 59, 65.

Co-respondent's Costs.]—Where no damages can be recovered against the co-respondent, he ought not to be called upon to pay costs. Terry v. Terry, 1 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 78.

Where a husband by his conduct had disentitled himself to a decree for divorce, but obtained a decree for judicial separation, he was held entitled to damages awarded him by a jury and for his costs against the co-respondent. Bathgate v. Bathgate, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 129.

Costs—Of Co-respondent.]—A divorce suit was first heard on issues between the petitioner and the co-respondent, and a verdict found for the petitioner. The suit was then heard as between the petitioner and respondent, without notice to the co-respondent, and a divorce granted. Held that the co-respondent should not pay the costs of the hearing of which he had no notice. Bury v. Bury, 1 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 20, 29; 1 A.J.R. 2.

Co-respondent's Costs—Condoned Adultery.]—One co-respondent (R.) appeared and denied the adultery charged, the other co-respondents not appearing. The dissolution of the marriage was decreed on the ground of the wife's adultery, which had been condoned but was revived by adultery committed subsequently with other persons. Held that R. had to pay the costs of the issue in relation to the charge against him. Detheridge v. Detheridge, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 146; 2 A.L.T., 137.

Costs of Co-respondent.]—Where the conduct of the co-respondent has been such as to give rise to a reasonable suspicion, which induces the petitioner to engage in an attempt to procure a divorce, although no adultery is proved, the co-respondent will be left to pay his own costs. Belcher v. Belcher and M'Kenzie, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 52.

Costs — Of Co-respondent — Reasonable Suspicion.]—A co-respondent requested the petitioner to take his name out of the petition, and offered to pay the costs. Held that this was sufficient to give rise to a reasonable suspicion in the mind of the petitioner that he had committed adultery with the respondent, and the Court, in dismissing the petition as against him, did so without costs. Pyle v. Pyle, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 66.

In Undefended Suit—Evidence of Condonation how Considered.]—Per Molesworth, J.—The Court is bound, in undefended cases, itself to consider the question of condonation before decreeing a dissolution; though not perhaps as between the parties, before sentence of judicial separation. But if it elicits for itself evidence of condonation, before acting upon it, it should definitely attract the attention of a petitioner or a petitioner's counsel to the importance of showing a revival. Casey v. Casey, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 34, 41.

Per Barry, J.—Where the relation of the suitors is so different from that of ordinary litigants, and where collusion may exist, it is prudent and expedient to sift with care the acts and conduct of both parties and not to exclude evidence of condonation, or to refuse to such evidence when admitted its due force and preponderance. Ibid, p. 49.

In Undefended Suits — Difference between Colonial and English Law as to Admissibility of Evidence.]—Per Molesworth, J.—The difference between our law and that of England, as to the admission of parties' evidence, is to be much regarded as to the weight of evidence necessary to satisfy a Court in unopposed cases. Ibid, p. 41.

Of Wife in Unopposed Suit—What Reliance to be placed upon.]—Per Williams, J.; accord Barry, J.—It is unsafe for the Court, in a suit for dissolution of marriage on the ground of cruelty and adultery, to rely upon the sole testimony of the wife, whose interest, feelings, and apprehensions may so naturally warp her judgment; and although the husband or wife may be, for all the purposes of the Act in force in this colony, rendered a competent witness, the evidence of such person in most cases (that is in all not exceptional) demands corroboration, if not of witnesses upon oath, at least of facts and circumstances. And it is dangerous in a degree to allow even a judicial separation upon such testimony; and also at the outset of inquiries of this nature it is incumbent upon the Court to insist on full, substantial, and strict proof, as a guide to future proceedings, and in order to discourage ill-advised and ill-matured applications of the kind. Ibid, p. 47.

Evidence of Marriage–Admission of Respondent.] Where the evidence of the marriage was barely sufficient but the respondent admitted the marriage in his letters, the Court acted upon those admissions and made a decree for dissolution of marriage. Hodgson v. Hodgson, N.C. 24.

Per Barry, J.—The Court acted on the admission of a party to the cause made against his own interest. If it were a question between parties, not husband and wife, as in the case of title to property, the evidence could not be sufficient. Ibid.

Marriage Admitted on Pleadings—Need Not be Proved.]—In a suit for dissolution which is defended, and the marriage is admitted on the pleadings, it is sufficiently established as between the petitioner and respondent, and no evidence need be adduced to prove it. Josephs v. Josephs, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 112.

Of Marriage—Undefended Suit for Divorce.]—In an undefended suit, the Court will not grant a divorce if the marriage be proved by the uncorroborated evidence of the husband or wife alone. Dowling v. Dowling, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 49.

Evidence of Adultery—Venereal Disease.]—During the hearing of an undefended petition for divorce or judicial separation on the ground of the husband's adultery and cruelty, evidence was given by the wife of a statement by the respondent to her, in which he informed her that he had contracted venereal disease, but added that he had done so accidentally and innocently, and without adulterous intercourse. Held, per Barry and Williams, JJ., that, under the circumstances in which the admission was made, it was no proof of adultery. Per Molesworth, J., that, under the circumstances—the respondent not having denied or explained upon oath the imputation when challenged to do so, and there being no reason to suspect collusion—this evidence sufficiently proved adultery. Casey v. Casey, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 34.

Evidence of Adultery.]—Where the sole evidence of adultery is the uncorroborated statement of the petitioner, which is flatly contradicted by the respondent, it is unsafe in the highest degree to act only on the evidence of one of the parties so deeply interested in the case as the petitioner, and which evidence is insufficient to prove adultery. Beck v. Beck, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 199.

Evidence of Adultery and Cruelty.]—The uncorroborated evidence of the petitioner is insufficient to support a charge of adultery or cruelty, when that charge is denied by the respondent. Little v. Little, 4 A.J.R. 143.

Deed of Separation—Effect of.]—The execution by a wife of a deed of separation is neither evidence of condonation of adultery, nor is it a bar to her initiating a suit for judicial separation on the ground of adultery; but, semble, a deed of separation would form an element of importance in a suit for judicial separation, on the ground of cruelty, and, if the petitioner got under such a deed all that she was entitled to, would be regarded in a suit for judicial separation on the ground of adultery. Sutherland v. Sutherland, 8 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 49; 3 A.L.T., 133.

Evidence of Cruelty—Contemporaneous Statement.]—A statement made to a neighbour as to an act of cruelty two or three hours after the act, is not admissible in evidence in a suit for judicial separation, being made too long after the act. Jeffrey v. Jeffrey, 9 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 57.

Corroborative Evidence — Undefended Suit.]—Complaints made by the wife to a third person of her husband's cruelty recenti facto, are admissible as corroborative evidence of the wife's statement in an undefended suit for divorce. Gibson v. Gibson, 4 A.L.T., 110.

On Trial of Issues — Affidavits Verifying Answer.]—The affidavits filed with and verifying the answer cannot be used as evidence on the trial of issues in a divorce suit. Bury v. Bury 1 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 20, 26.

Affidavit to Verify Petition—Cannot be Used as Evidence of Necessary Facts.]—At the hearing of an undefended suit for divorce or judicial separation, the affidavit of the petitioner in divorce filed to verify the petition, cannot be used as evidence of any of the facts necessary to entitle the petitioner to a divorce or judicial separation. Casey v. Casey, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 34.

Evidence of Respondent—Issues between Petitioner and Co-respondent.]—On the trial, in a divorce suit, of issues between the petitioner and co-respondent, the only evidence of adultery was that afforded by the direct statements of the respondent to the effect that she had committed adultery with the co-respondent. Held that such evidence was admissible as against the co-respondent, but that being the evidence of an accomplice, it required to be supported by corroborating circumstances; and that, so supported, it was sufficient to entitle the petitioner to a decree. Bury v. Bury, 1 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 20, 28; 1 A.J.R., 2.

Of One Witness Uncorroborated.] — Quære, whether the evidence of one witness only to an act of adultery, unsupported by corroborating circumstances, would be sufficient upon which to found a decree. Ibid.

Of Respondent—On Issues between Petitioner and Co-respondent.]— Where the respondent leaves a suit for divorce undefended her statements are not admissible as evidence against the co-respondent on issues of fact between the petitioner and co-respondent. Bury v. Bury, 1 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 20; N.C., 29.

Questions Tending to Show that Respondent has been Guilty of Adultery—Act No. 268, Sec. 88.]—Per Barry and Williams, JJ. (dissentiente, Stawell, C.J.):—Sec. 88 of the "Marriage and Matrimonial Causes Statute," No. 268, does not protect the wife, when respondent in a suit for divorce, from being bound to answer questions tending to show that she has been guilty of adultery. Ibid.

Identity of Respondent and Co-respondent.]—The evidence of the petitioner that he has effected service of the petition and citation upon the respondent and co-respondent is, where there is no appearance for respondent or co-respondent, insufficient evidence to identify them. Russell v. Russell, 4 A.J.R., 183.

Refusal of Petitioner to Answer General Question as to Adultery — Effect of Sec. 88 of the "Marriage and Matrimonial Causes Statute 1864."]—A petitioner for dissolution of marriage does not disentitle himself to a decree by availing himself of the protection afforded by Sec. 88 of the "Marriage and Matrimonial Causes Statute 1864," and refusing to answer a general question as to whether he has ever been guilty of adultery since his marriage. The effect of the section is to permit the Court to draw or decline to draw a damnatory inference from such refusal. Cameron v. Cameron, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 105.

Allegation of Date of Adultery — Evidence of Another Date Inadmissible.] — A petition for divorce fixed a precise day as the date on which the adultery alleged took place. Held that evidence of adultery on another day was inadmissible. Pyle v. Pyle, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 66.

Commission to Take Evidence—Domicil—Objections to Jurisdiction.]—A co-respondent in a suit for dissolution of marriage answered and objected that the Court had no jurisdiction over him as he was resident and domiciled in Queensland and most of the acts of adultery alleged took place in New South Wales. The Court granted a commission to examine a witness abroad, notwithstanding the fact that the question of domicil and the objection as to the jurisdiction might render the evidence unnecessary, petitioner to provide for co-respondent's costs of commission. Smith v. Smith, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 65.

Act No. 268, Sec. 91—Evidence Under Commission—Witness in Advanced Stage of Pregnancy.]—A witness resident in or near Melbourne, being in an advanced stage of pregnancy, was examined by commission. Held that the evidence so taken was not admissible as in the ordinary course of events she would recover and be able to give her evidence in the witness box. Fisher v. Fisher, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 64.

Commission to Examine Witnesses when Issued before Suit in Issue.]—Per Higinbotham, J. (in Chambers.)—The rule that witnesses, in a suit for divorce, are not to be examined before the suit is in issue, will be relaxed if circumstances of a special urgency require it. Malpas v. Malpas, 6 A.L.T. 20.

When too Late.]—The intervention of a law-officer under Sec. 65 of the "Marriage and Matrimonial Causes Act," after the decree in a divorce suit has been pronounced but not drawn up, is too late. The words "obtaining a decree," in the section, refer to the pronouncing of the decree, and not the drawing up, which is merely a formal act to be done after the decree is obtained. Bury v. Bury, 1 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 20, 33; 1 A.J.R., 138.

Co-respondent—Damages—Costs.]—Where a husband by his conduct disentitled himself to a decree for divorce, but obtained a decree for judicial separation, he was held entitled to damages awarded him by a jury, and to his costs against the co-respondent. Bathgate v. Bathgate, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 129.

Striking out Claim for.]—See Tyers v. Tyers, ante column 518.

Postponing Registration—Prima facie Title to Alimony.]—After judgment has been given, if it is adverse to the wife, and she can establish a primâ facie case entitling her to alimony, she may apply to the Court to postpone the registration of the decree, and a convenient time may be fixed when the motion for alimony can be entertained; but it is absolutely essential that there should be evidence establishing a primâ facie title to alimony. Terry v. Terry, 1 W. W. & A'B. (I.E. & M.,) 78.

Decree Pronounced by Court not Consisting of Judges who Heard Issues.]—The Full Court, consisting of three Judges, may pronounce a decree for dissolution of marriage, though the Court, as then constituted, does not consist of the same Judges before whom the issues of fact were tried by a jury. Smith v. Smith, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 94.

Where the jury have found for the petitioner the Court will not pronounce a decree until after the first four days of the next term (under rule 25 of the Rules 1861), in order to afford the usual opportunity of a motion for a new trial. Bathgate v. Bathgate, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 129.

Matrimonial and Divorce Rules 1861, R. 59.]—In appeals to the Full Court from a single Judge, notice of the appeal should be both lodged in Court and given to opposite party, as under Act 19 Vict. No. 13. Fowler v. Fowler, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 134.

The Court, sitting in Banco in Term, will not hear an appeal from an order made by a Judge in Chambers in the matrimonial jurisdiction. Fisher v. Fisher, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 68.

But a summons in Chambers in the matrimonial jurisdiction referred to the Full Court is not an appeal to the Full Court under Secs. 104 and 105 of Act No. 268, and may, therefore, be heard by two Judges sitting in Banco in the common law jurisdiction. Smith v. Smith, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 65.

Petition Not Accepted for Purposes of Appeal Only.]—The Court will not accept a petition for dissolution of marriage, for the purpose of permitting an appeal to the Privy Council, where it doubts its jurisdiction to make a decree for dissolution. Moffatt v. Moffatt, 3 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 87.

Notice Should State Grounds.]—A notice of appeal in the divorce jurisdiction should state the grounds of appeal. Bury v. Bury, 1 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 20, 33; 1 A.J.R., 138.

(8) Alimony and Maintenance.

Maintenance—When Wife Deprives Herself of by her Conduct.]—At common law the wife's adultery would be a good plea to an action for necessaries supplied to her, because she has deprived herself of any right to bind her husband for her support; and the same rule should be followed by the Court in its matrimonial jurisdiction, save in exceptional cases, or where the wife has brought a fortune to her husband. Carnaby v. Carnaby, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 195.

Alimony—When Refused.]—Where adultery is proved on the part of a wife, respondent, the granting of alimony should be a very exceptional case, and require strong facts to induce the Court to grant it. Terry v. Terry, 1 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 78.

Wife—When Entitled to Alimony.]—A wife who obtains a decree for dissolution of marriage is entitled to alimony; but a wife, against whom a decree has been pronounced on the ground of adultery, is not entitled to alimony. When she brings property to her husband at the marriage, that is generally returned to her on its dissolution. Maxwell v. Maxwell, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.) 117.

Alimony — When Application for Permanent Alimony may be Made.]— An application for permanent alimony may be made by a wife against whom a decree for divorce has been made, although she has filed no petition for permanent alimony, and she does not state in her answer that any such application will be made. Carnaby v. Carnaby, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 195.

Petition for Permanent Alimony — Judicial Separation.]—Where a decree of judicial separation was made upon a husband's petition for dissolution of marriage, the Court granted permanent alimony, although expressing doubt as to its jurisdiction. Jones v. Jones, 2 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.) 60.

Petition for Alimony Pendente Lite—Practice upon.] — A petition for alimony pendente lite need not be signed; where the wife is the respondent in the main cause and the husband is seeking for divorce, the copy of the petition need not be served personally on the husband, though personal service upon husband is necessary when he is respondent in the main cause; service of a copy of the petition two days after the petition was filed, held to be good service. Fowler v. Fowler, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 126.

The ordinary rules of pleading are to be followed, and no case is to be heard which is not made upon the pleadings. Where children of the marriage were kept by mother, but no case to that effect was raised upon the petition, the Court kept the question of their maintenance distinct from the alimony granted to her, and the alimony was fixed upon the assumption that the father had to maintain them. Sansom v. Sansom, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 147.

Alimony Pendente Lite.]—While a suit was pending by a husband against a wife for divorce on the ground of adultery, the wife presented a petition for alimony. The husband admitted that his net income was £3085 per annum, subject to little variation, and alleged that he had three children approaching an age when advances for outfit would be required, and that he had by agreement allowed and paid his wife £6 a week for maintenance, but that having incurred debts beyond her allowance, payment of them had been demanded from him. Held, that the husband's statement as to the past arrangement as to alimony must be rejected as irrelevant; and that the wife should be awarded alimony at the rate of £480 per annum from the date of the return of the citatiou, payable monthly, with liberty to the husband to deduct payments made by him to, and debts contracted by the wife, since that date. Molesworth v. Molesworth, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 57.

Pendente Lite—Previous Order for Maintenance by Justices.]—Where an order for maintenance had been made by justices the Court refused the wife's application for alimony (she being the petitioner in a divorce suit) when she would at the most be entitled to only a few shillings per week more than allowed in the order. Shoebridge v. Shoebridge, 3 A.J.R., 55.

Pendente Lite—Fluctuating Income.]—For a case where Court takes an average for a fluctuating income, see Smith v. Smith, 3 A.J.R., 62.

Pendente Lite—Practice—Act No. 268—Late Application by Summons for Fuller Answer.]—Where a summons for fuller answers was taken out more than eight days after an answer to a petition by a wife for alimony pendente lite, the Court granted the summons upon petitioner paying the respondent's costs. Hosie v. Hosie, 5 A.J.R., 21.

Alimony—How Fixed.]—Per Stawell, C.J. The proportion of one-fifth of the husband's income is not always to be observed in allowing alimony; the sources from which his income is derived are to be considered. Where that income arises chiefly from trade profits, alimony will be granted at a lower rate. Where a husband earned as a chemist profits of £350 a year, alimony of £1 per week was granted. Pardey v. Pardey, 2 W.W. & A'B. (I.E. & M.,) 58.

Act No. 268, Sec. 71—Deed of Separation.]—Where a deed of separation has been executed providing for the wife, the Court refused to exercise the power of granting alimony conferred by Sec. 71, even where there was a doubt as to whether it could be enforced in case of a decree for dissolution being pronounced through the wife's adultery. Fisher v. Fisher, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 86.

Provision for Wife—Promise to Settle a Sum if She Refrained from Suing.]—A husband, a commercial traveller, who was in the habit of ill-treating his wife, left her and lived with another woman. Having a legacy of £3500 left to him, he promised to settle on her property worth £1100 if she refrained from suing for divorce; but failed to do so, and she filed a petition for dissolution of marriage. The Court granted the petition and ordered the husband to pay the wife the gross sum of £1200, or secure to her an annual sum of £85, at her option. Johnston v. Johnston, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 57.

An Attachment will be Granted for Non-Payment of Arrears due Under a Decree for Alimony Pendente Lite.—Hunter v. Hunter, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 123.

Non-Payment of Alimony—Inability No Excuse for—Attachment How got Rid of.]—Campbell v. Campbell, ante column 65.

When Alimony Payable and How.]—The Court exercises a discretion as to the intervals at which alimony pendente lite is paid. Alimony pendente lite is payable from the date of service, and not from the date of return of the citation, and the Court will fix some place at which it is to be paid. Davies v. Davies, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 124.

The Court has Jurisdiction to Award Alimony Pendents Lite where the Wife is the Respondent in a Suit for Dissolution of Marriage.]—Fowler v. Fowler, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 126.

(9) Custody and Maintenance of, and Access to Children.

Application for Custody and Maintenance—Presumption of Wife's Innocence.]—The wife's innocence is, as in the case of applying for alimony, to be presumed for the purposes of an application for the custody and maintenance of children under Sec. 22 of the "Divorce Act." Jones v. Jones, 1 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 86.

Interim Orders for Custody and Maintenance—Divorce Act, Sec. 22.]—Interim orders for the custody and maintenance of children may be made, where the children have no property, under Sec. 22 of the "Divorce Act." Ibid.

A wife's petition prayed for dissolution of marriage and the custody of the children. The Court refused to decree dissolution, but granted judicial separation, and made a subsequent and separate order for the custody of the children in favour of the wife, without requiring service of notice of a motion for that purpose upon the respondent. Dean v. Dean, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.) 116.

Evidence as to, When Heard.]—The Court will not, at the original hearing in a suit for judicial separation, hear any evidence as to the custody of the children. Application for their custody and as to alimony and costs, should be made in Chambers after the decree. Cawkwell v. Cawkwell, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 69.

Evidence of Wife's Character—Not Raised in Pleadings.]—Semble, that when in a suit for judicial separation the pleadings do not make any charges against the wife's character, the Court, in considering who is entitled to the custody of the children, will not hear any evidence against her character. Ibid.

IV. Maintenance and Protection Orders.

Order for Maintenance—Jurisdiction of Justices of the Peace—Act No. 268, Secs. 32, 33.]—Justice have jurisdiction to attach more property than will suffice for twelve months' maintenance. A wife who had obtained an order for maintenance applied for an order attaching the whole of the husband's property, consisting of mining shares to the value of several thousands of pounds, which were being sold and the proceeds of which were being sent out of the colony, and the justices refused, thinking they had no jurisdiction to attach the whole amount. Rule absolute for a mandamus to compel them to attach all the property. Mitchell v. Mitchell, 5 A.J.R. 44.

Act No. 268, Secs. 30, 31, 32—Jurisdiction of Justices—Order for Seizure of Goods of Husband.]—Justices made an order for maintenance under Secs. 30 and 31, and two months afterwards made an order under Sec. 32, authorising the defendant to seize plaintiff's goods. Defendant seized the goods and plaintiff sued him in trover. Held that the order for seizure of goods under Sec. 32 should have been made on their hearing of the first complaint, and not by a subsequent independent order made afterwards; the justices' power was determined by their making the first order, and the second was without jurisdiction. Judgment for plaintiff. Mitchell v. Wentworth, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 258.

Act No. 268, Secs. 31, 34—Power of Justices to fix a Period.]—The enactments in Act No. 268 do not give justices the power to fix a period during which the wife is to be maintained. Regina v. Smith, ex parte Smith, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 112; 5 A.L.T., 19.

Jurisdiction of Justices as to Enforcing Orders—Act No. 268, Sec. 39.]—Sec. 39 empowers justices to make an order for maintenance, and this order may be enforced at any time afterwards by other justices, and they have power to enforce an order twelve months old, and also to compel payment of the costs of enforcement. In re James Welsh, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 166; 5 A.L.T., 17.

Desertion of Wife.]—So long as the husband is ready to take the wife back, she cannot be considered as deserted, even though he has been guilty of violence, so as to justify the justices in making an order for maintenance. Mackenzie v. Mackenzie, 3 V.R. (L.,) 248; 3 A.J.R., 121.

Act No. 268, Sec. 34—Husband Entitled to Give Evidence.]—Justices made an order for maintenance upon a complaint against a husband under Sec. 34, for deserting his wife and children; the justices refused to allow the husband to be sworn and to give evidence. Held that he was entitled to give evidence, and order quashed. It is for the justices in such a case to be satisfied as to the evidence of the marriage. Reg. v. Pope, Exp. Pope, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 25.

Act No. 268, Sec. 34—Offer at Hearing to Take Wife Back—Cruelty.]—A complaint was made before justices of desertion by a husband, and at the hearing the husband made an offer to take wife back to his house, and support her according to her station in life. The wife complained of several acts of gross cruelty towards her by her husband, and on that account refused to go back to him. The justices made an order for maintenance. Held that the order was bad. Trengrove v. Trengrove, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 27.

Act No. 268, Sec. 31—Offer of a Home—Bona Fides.]—It is for the justices to decide whether an offer of a home made by a husband, against whom an order of maintenance is made, is bonâ fide. Jolly v. Jolly, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 145.

Act No. 268, Secs. 30, 31—Desertion—Offer to Take Wife Bank—Jurisdiction of Justices.]—Per Higinbotham, J. There are three conditions of the jurisdiction to make an order under the Act: (1) Proof of marriage or parentage; (2) The husband or father must be shown to be able to maintain the wife or children; (3) The wife or children must be proved to be without means of support. A husband and wife were living apart by mutual consent, and the wife hearing that the husband was about to leave for Scotland, obtained an order for maintenance on the ground of the desertion. Held that the desertion under the circumstances was not sufficient to support the order, and that if the justices believed the bonâ fide willingness of the husband to take back and maintain the wife, she is no longer without means of support, and the jurisdiction to make the order is gone. Regina v. Collins, ex parte Collins, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 74; 2 A.L.T. 118.

Grounds on which an Order may be Made.]—An order of justices under Sec. 31 of the "Marriage and Matrimonial Causes Statute 1864," for maintenance, which does not state that the husband deserted his wife, but, on the contrary, states that she left him, though for good cause, is a good order, and shows sufficient grounds for awarding maintenance. Moncrieff v. Moncrieff, 5 A.L.T., 192

Matrimonial Causes Statute, No. 268—Secs. 32, 39.]—Money in a bank to the credit of a customer against whom a maintenance order has been given under Sec. 31, is not goods and chattels within the meaning of Sec. 32; and a refusal of a bank manager to give up such moneys is not a disobedience of the order, and punishable under Sec. 39. Curtayne v. Mitchell, 5 A.J.R., 134.

Disobedience—Warrant for Commitment—Personal Service of Order.]—Personal service of an order for maintenance of a wife, and for finding sureties, is not a condition precedent to the issue of a warrant of commitment for disobeying the order. Ex parte M'Evoy, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 424; 2 A.L.T., 125, sub nom. Reg. v. M'Evoy.

Jurisdiction of Justices—Marriage & Matrimonial Causes Statute. Secs. 30, 31, 40—Order.]—H. was summoned before a police magistrate for deserting his wife, and an order was made directing him to pay 15s. a week, and to provide sureties that he would comply with the order for twelve months, in default to be imprisoned. Under sec. 30 of the "Marriage and Matrimonial Causes Statute" (No. 268), justices are empowered to issue summonses against a defendant for desertion, and under Sec. 31 any two justices are empowered to inquire into the matter, and make an order of maintenance, and to require by the same, or a separate order, the defendant to find sureties for compliance, in default of surety being found, the defendant may be committed till compliance. Sec. 40 directs that when such order had been made the justices shall transmit the same to the General Sessions for confirmation, or to be quashed or varied. In H.'s case there were two orders made, one directing payment of 15s. per week, and the finding of sureties, in default imprisonment; the other directing imprisonment. Only the first order was transmitted to General Sessions:—Held, that since the second order might be made by one justice, and since the Act only directed the transmission of orders made by two justices, there was no necessity for the second order to be transmitted; and that, if the defendant objected, he ought to have appealed against the first order. Ex parte Hargreaves, 1 A.J.R., 23.

Order not Transmitted to Clerk of Peace—Conviction for Disobedience—Quashing.]—Since there is no appeal given by Sec. 40 of the "Marriage and Matrimonial Causes Statute 1864" to general sessions from an order of justices for maintenance, the omission to transmit the order to the Clerk of the Peace, as directed by that section, does not render the order a nullity, and the omission is not a ground for quashing a conviction for disobedience of the order. Regina v King, ex parte King, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 256; A.L.T., 23.

But see Reg. v. Justices of Central Bailiwick, ex parte M'Evoy, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 90, 2 A.L.T., 125, where it was held, overruling Reg. v. King, that under Sec. 40 there was an appeal to General Sessions.

Variance as to Name of Complainant between Minute and Order.]—In the minute of an order for maintenance, the complainant was stated to be the police; in the order itself, to be J. S. Held, that the justices had a right to correct the error. Reg. v. Smith, ex parte Smith, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 112; 5 A.L.T., 19.

Protection Order—Wife's Receipts—Act No. 125, Sec. 7.]—Under the will of K., who left his personal property to be distributed according to the "Statute of Distributions," M., a married woman, one his next-of-kin, became entitled to a share. K. died on 8th January, 1861. M. had, on 28th September, 1860, obtained a protection order, under Act No. 125, Sec. 7, protecting her subsequently-acquired money and property against her husband, his creditors, and persons claiming under him. Under these circumstances the administrator of K.'s estate presented a petition, under 24 Vict. No. 112, Sec. 51, for the advice of the Court as to whether he would be justified in paying M.'s share to her personally. Held, that there was no necessity for any consent or release by the husband, and that the money could be paid to M. on her own receipt. In re Kennedy, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 248.

Affidavits should give Full Particulars and Details.]—In applications for the protection of the wife's separate property, it is not enough for the affidavits merely to follow the precise terms of the Act, but they should give particulars and details so fully that the Court may be reasonably satisfied of the facts of the case. Pasmore v. Pasmore, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 56.

Executors Paying Legacy to Married Woman who has obtained a Protection Order.]—Where a testator died domiciled in Victoria, and left a legacy to his married sister, who resided in England, the legatee's husband having deserted her, and she having obtained a protection order under 21 & 22 Vict. cap. 108, Sec. 6. Held, on petition for advice under Sec. 61 of the "Statute of Trusts 1864," that the executors might effectually discharge themselves by paying the legacy to the legatee, and taking her receipt therefor without her husband's consent; provided that the woman had not returned to cohabitation with her husband, and his desertion was continuing and the order had not been discharged or varied. In re Dickason's Trusts, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 238; 4 A.L.T., 22.

V. Husband's Rights and Liabilities.

Husband Insolvent--Protecting Wife's Interest.]—An insolvent, made a defendant only in respect of wife's property, is able to do anything in the suit to protect the wife's interest which she could do if sui juris, the interest not being one of a class which goes to the official assignee of the husband. On a motion by M., the insolvent, for an injunction to restrain trustees from removing certain property comprised in a will the subject matter of the suit, in which his wife was a beneficiary, Held that he had a right to be heard. Waddell v. Patterson, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 133.

Wife a Trustee.]—In equity a husband cannot purchase an interest in a trust estate from his wife—a trustee—and a co-trustee. Hartigan v. O'Shanassy, 3 A.J.R., 5.

Money Possessed by Wife upon her Marriage and Advanced to her Husband.]—A widow possessed of money married again, no settlement being made. She advanced her money to her husband, who expended part of it upon land, which he had verbally promised to give her before marriage. After his death she claimed upon his estate as a creditor for the balance:—Held, that as upon the marriage, in the absence of a settlement, the money became the husband's; the advance of it by her did not make him her debtor. Hutchison v. Hutchison, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 44; 1 A.L.T., 157.

Husband Suing for Surgical Operation upon Wife.]—T. sued a surgeon in trespass for performing a surgical operation upon his wife. Defendant pleaded that the operation was performed by him with the wife's consent. Replication to the plea, that the trespass was to a greater extent than was necessary, and demurrer to the plea for not averring T.'s consent to or ratification of the wife's consent. Held that the plea was bad for not alleging that the surgical operations were necessary for preservation of wife's health or life, and that replication was bad, as omitting to allege that plaintiff did not sue for grievances justified in pleas. Leave to amend. Tate v. Fisher, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 244.

License under "Land Act 1869."]—The interest of a woman as licensee under the "Land Act 1869" is personal property passing to the husband jure mariti on the marriage, but the inchoate right to the fee remains in the wife under the "Married Women's Property Act" (No. 384), Sec. 3. M'Leod v. M'Pherson, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 285; 4 A.L.T., 25.

Credit Given to Wife—Husband Sued Alone.]—Where a tradesman had supplied to a hotel various goods, the invoices being made out in wife's name, and separate bills were drawn upon and accepted by her, the Court held that credit had been given to wife alone, and the plaintiff who sued husband alone was nonsuited. M'Donald v. Lloyd, 3 A.J.R., 111.

Goods Supplied to Wife without Husband's Authority.]—A person who has supplied to a wife, without the husband's express authority, goods which are necessaries, cannot recover against the husband when the husband has supplied the wife with goods sufficient for the support of herself and household; although the husband's published notice of disclaimer of liability for debts incurred in his name did not come to the knowledge of the person so supplying the goods. Lynch v. Bond, 4 A.J.R., 73.

Wife Carrying on a Boarding-House in her Husband's Absence.]—Though a married woman carries on the business of lodginghouse-keeper, she is not to be charged for debts contracted by her, as having separate property, unless it be proved she has made savings; no presumption that she has accumulated savings legitimately arises from the mere fact that she received lodgers in her house. Regina v. Smith, ex parte Couch, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 134.

Where the husband, in the pursuit of his calling, lives at a distance from his wife, he may still be answerable for her debts. Ibid.

Wife Having Separate Estate — "Married Women's Property Act," Sec. 18—Separation.]—A husband is not liable in any case for debts contracted by his wife when the wife is living apart from him, and has a separate income, though very small, under a settlement not illusory, since such income is "property for her own use," within the meaning of the "Married Women's Property Act" (No. 384), Sec. 18. Wisewould v. Kerr, 4 A.J.R., 121.

Separation—Costs of Resisting Suit for Possession of Children—Necessaries.]—A wife living separate from her husband incurred attornies' costs in resisting a proceeding by the husband for possession of the children. Held that the costs so incurred were not "necessaries" so as to render the husband liable for them. Ibid.

Wife Living Separate by Agreement—Maintenance not Paid.—Where a husband and his wife live apart by agreement on the terms that the husband shall allow his wife a periodical allowance for maintenance, the wife has power to pledge his credit if such allowance be not paid. Morgan v. Clements, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 53; 1 A.L.T. 155.

Separation Agreement—Payment of Maintenance—Duty of Husband.]—Under an agreement for separation, in which one of the terms is that the husband shall allow the wife a periodical sum for maintenance, it is the duty of the husband to see that she is furnished with such means of livelihood, without any demand for the payment on her part, and to inform her when and where she may obtain payment. Ibid.

Act No. 384, Sec. 17—Joint Order for Work Done.]—A woman having separate estate, gave with her husband a joint order for work to be done during coverture. Held that the husband and wife might, under Sec. 17 of the Act, be sued together for such work done. Haylock v. Shannon, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 332.

Revocation of Wife's Authority—Must be Express.]—A revocation of the wife's authority to pledge her husband's credit, must be distinct and unequivocal; it is not sufficient to tell her that her credit is stopped at certain places, she must be forbidden to buy anything more on credit. Moubray v. Hodgson, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 286.

Goods Supplied to Wife on Recommendation of Third Person.]—Supplying goods to a married woman on the faith of a recommendation from a third person does not negative that the credit was given to the husband. Ibid.

For Wife's Necessaries—Revocation of Authority to Pledge Credit.]—The implied authority a wife has to pledge her husband's credit may be revoked, and it is unnecessary that such revocation should be communicated to any person but the wife. Stevens v. Sloan, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 83.

Wife's Authority to Pledge Husband's Credit.]—Where there was some evidence that a wife was living and carrying on a separate business apart from her husband, and justices seemed to understand the law as to the subject, and on the evidence concluded that the wife was acting as agent for her husband and had power to bind him, the Court refused to interfere with their decision. Regina v. Panton, ex parte Patterson, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 153.

Wife's Retainer of an Attorney.]—A husband and wife were living apart, the deed of separation providing her with independent means. The wife retained an attorney to recover maintenance from the husband on the husband discontinuing payments under the deed. Held that the retainer must be regarded as the husband's under the circumstances, and order to tax costs as against wife only made upon terms of reserving the right to dispute the retainer. Sievewright v. M'Evoy, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 15.

Contract made by a Wife as to a Lease—Ratification by Husband.]—Whitesides v. Hayes, 3 A.J.R., 32, see post under PRINCIPAL AND AGENT—Rights and Liabilities of Principal to Third Person, &c.—In other cases.

Illegal Distress by Wife.]—A husband is not in the absence of evidence of agency or confirmation of his wife's acts liable for an illegal distress made by the wife upon the husband's tenant. Douglas v. Lewis, 5 A.J.R., 22.

A husband is not liable for an offence against Act No. 227, i.e. sale of spirits by his wife in his absence, he not being licensed. Regina v. M'Queen, ex parte Hall, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 18. See S.C. under LICENSING ACTS—Offences against.

Selling Liquor without a License—Agency of Wife.]—See Hettenbach v. Isley, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 104. Post under LICENSING ACTS—Offences against.

Wrong Committed by Wife—No Separate Estate—No. 384, Sec. 18.]—Under Sec. 18 of the "Married Women's Property Act" (No. 384), a husband is not liable for a slander uttered by his wife, even though the wife have no separate property. Lucas v. Kearney, 4 A.J.R., 19.

VI. DEED OF SEPARATION.

Effect of on Application for Alimony.]—See Fisher v. Fisher, ante column 530, under (8) Alimony.

Effect of, as Evidence in a Suit for Judicial Separation on ground of Cruelty.]—See Sutherland v. Sutherland, ante column 525, under (3) Evidence.

VII. WIFE'S RIGHTS, PROPERTY, AND LIABILITIES.

When Barred or Released — Incapacity.] — Where a wife of a settlor agreed to release her dower to certain lands as a consideration for her husband executing a postnuptial settlement in which the wife took a beneficial interest, of those lands and other lands, and this settlement was set aside as void against creditors. Held that the wife was entitled to the value of her dower, she being at the time of the settlement a feme covert, and without independent professional advice. Shaw v. Salter, 2 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 159.

For facts see S.C., ante column 467.

Act No. 230.]—Semble, per Molesworth, J., that if a woman was married before 1st January, 1837, there is nothing in the Act No. 230 to deprive her of her right to dower; but that if married after that, then the Act does deprive her of dower, as soon as the rule under it is obtained. English v. English, 3 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 170.

Separation by Mutual Consent—Consent of Husband to Sale of Contingent Right to Dower—Act No. 112, Sec. 89.]—Where a husband and wife had separated by mutual consent, and the husband was in the colony and could be served, the Court refused to grant a motion under Sec. 89 of No. 112, to dispense with his consent to a bargain made by the wife for the sale of her contingent right to dower. Bank of Australasia v. Vans, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 146.

Per Molesworth, J.—"Where the husband is in the country and can be served, I do not think I ought to make such an order as that asked for, merely because the husband and wife are separated from each other." Ibid.

Act No. 301, Secs. 66, 149—Act 353, Sec. 9—Limitation of Action against Assurance Fund.]—In an action by a widow to recover damages out of the "Transfer of Land Statute" assurance fund for loss of dower where the cause of action accrued within 15 years, Held that under Sec. 9 of No. 353, she was entitled to the damages, and that Sec. 66 of Act No. 301 did not apply to this case where the husband was seised in fee of Crown land alienated in 1851, but in respect of which he had never become the registered proprietor. Moyle v. Gibbs, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 26; 4 A.L.T., 148.

Wife Joining in a Mortgage by Husband.]—If a wife joins in a mortgage by her husband to bar dower by a deed not clearly indicating her total renouncement of it in his favour, she is entitled to redeem the mortgage. Hoyle v. Edwards, 6 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 48.

See S.C., post under VENDOR AND PURCHASER, and see cases post under TRANSFER OF LAND (STATUTORY)—Dower.

(2) Separate Estate and Rights, and Liabilities Connected with it.

Married Women's Property Act, Sec. 18—Having Property to Her Separate Use.]—In Sec. 18 of the "Married Women's Property Act" the words "property for her separate use" must be taken to include not only property which is made separate property by the Act, but also property which was before the Act recognised by a Court of Equity as held to the separate use of a married woman. Higinbotham, J., dissentiente. Renison v. Keighran, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 133; 6 A.L.T., 51.

Presumption that Property is Separate Estate.]—A woman, married before the "Married Women's Property Act" came into operation, obtained a certificate of title to certain land after the coming into operation of that Act, and thereafter dealt with the land as though it were her separate property. Held that the presumption that the land was her separate property was strong enough to sustain a verdict against her in an action against her on a bill of exchange. Bank of Victoria v. Henderson, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 46.

Husband and Wife Living Apart—What Acts of Husband do not Amount to a Declaration of Trust of Property for Wife.]—T. and his wife executed a deed of separation, which contained no provision for the wife's maintenance. They lived apart for six years, and during that time the wife carried on business as a lodging-house keeper, and fell into debt. The creditor's attorney wrote to T. asking him if he would pay the debt, or prefer proceedings to be taken against the wife in the first instance; and in the latter event if he would undertake not to interfere. T. replied that he had no claim on his wife, on her property, or she on him or his. B., after seeing these letters, advanced money to the wife on bill of sale, under which he eventually seized and sold her effects. T. brought an action for trover of the goods, to which B. pleaded as an equitable plea that on the facts the goods were the wife's separate property, and liable for her debts. Held that the mere fact of T. and his wife living apart for six years did not render the property the wife's separate property; that T.'s letter did not constitute a declaration of trust in favour of the wife, even if it were otherwise capable of being so construed, since the attorney's letter to him was not candid, and stated neither the facts nor the law on the subject properly; that T. did not take the goods subject to a lien in favour of B., since B. had not advanced the money bonâ fide, being aware that T. was alive and his wife living apart from him. Tennant v. Bell, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 46.

Act No. 384, Sec. 5—Husband Lunatic—Wife Carrying on Business.]—A husband became lunatic, and was confined in a lunatic asylum. His wife during the time he was confined in the asylum (1868—1879) carried on the business and became accountable for it, and compounded and paid off the debts which he had contracted. During this time she started a newspaper agency, which gave her ample funds to effect a policy of insurance on her own life. On her husband's recovery he never sought to interfere in the management of the business. Held that she might be accountable for the original stock-in-trade of the business, subject to the husband's liability to her for maintaining the family; but that the newspaper agency was her own separate business and the policy, effected out of the profits of that, was her own separate property. In the Will of Cathery, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 34.

Act No. 384, Secs. 5, 10—Husband Insolvent—Trade Carried on by Wife—Sufficient Evidence as to the Business being Earnings in Business Carried on Apart from Husband.]—See In re Mulcahy, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.) 7, post under INSOLVENCY—SUMMARY JURISDICTION.

Presumption as to Woman having Accumulated Savings from the Fact that she Keeps a Boarding-House.]—No presumption that a married woman has accumulated savings so as to create separate estate arises from the fact she has kept a boarding-house, even in her husband's absence. Regina v. Smith, ex parte Couch, see ante col. 536.

"Married Women's Property Act" (No. 384), Sec. 5—Savings—Fraudulent Conveyance.]—Suit by official assignee of S. against S., his wife, and a society seeking a declaration that certain land belonged to plaintiff, and for redemption from the society as mortgagee. The wife received presents of money from her relatives, S. allowed her weekly money for household expenses, and the wife saved money received from labourers in S.'s employ who boarded with her. 17th October, 1874, S. entered into a contract for the purchase of land, but his wife's name appeared at one time in the contract as the purchaser. The deposit and the first three bills were claimed to have been paid by S. out of his wife's savings; buildings were erected on land, S. generally dealing with persons supplying labour and materials, though his wife contracted with some, and it was alleged that all payments were made out of her money. In October, 1875, to secure an advance of £300 by the defendant society, the vendor of the property transferred it to the society, which procured a certificate of title and executed a defeasance upon payment of the £300 by the wife. The £300 was lodged in a bank to wife's credit, but all passed through S.'s hands by means of her cheques in his favour. A fire occurred on the property, and the insurance money (£100) was paid in part-satisfaction of the advance of £300. S. became insolvent June, 1876. Held that the wife's savings and moneys received from her relatives were not protected against her husband's creditors under Sec. 5 of Act No. 384; and it appearing that husband was heavily embarrassed before the fire and that wife had no property besides those savings, that the transaction of October, 1875, being in effect a conveyance of the equity of redemption to the wife as against her husband, was voluntary under 27 Eliz., cap. 4, intended to defraud creditors under 13 Eliz., c. 5, and void under Act No. 379, Sec. 70, as against plaintiff. Smith v. Smith, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 2.

Wife's Savings and Earnings — Lease — Forfeiture.]—A married woman whose husband was still alive, but had not been living with her for six years, residing in Tasmania, and occasionally visiting her at long intervals, and not furnishing her with money or interfering with her affairs, let lodgings and afterwards took a lease of a publichouse. The Court (under power to draw inferences of fact) presumed from the evidence that by letting the lodgings and keeping the publichouse she had supported herself and her children; that she had made savings and earnings, and therefore was capable of taking a lease of the publichouse, and was liable to a condition of re-entry upon sequestrating her estate. Poole v. Halfey, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 317.

Act No. 384, Sec. 5—"Savings."]—The word "savings" in Sec. 5 is not to be limited to savings out of her separate property, but means savings from all sources lawfully made by a married woman with her husband's consent, e.g., receiving the rents and profits of farming operations carried on upon her husband's land without his interference or control. And, apart from the Act, the husband by such conduct would have constituted himself a trustee for her. Smith v. Hope, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 217; 5 A.L.T., 75.

A married woman may acquire separate estate by savings out of house allowances made to her by her husband. In the Estate of Beaty, 4 A.L.T., 81.

Deposit in Savings Bank—"Married Women's Property Act," Secs. 6, 8, 12, and 18.]—The words "any deposit" in the sixth section of the Act are limited to deposits in savings banks or a post-office mentioned in the commencement of the section, and do not include deposits in a building society. Sec. 8 does not refer to deposits, and a deposit in a building society does not create a "claim upon its funds" within the meaning of that section. Sec. 12 relates to the mode of arranging disputes between husband and wife and their representatives, and not between either husband or wife and third persons. Sec. 18 relates to procedure by or against a married woman having property for her separate use, but does not confer, or purport to confer, on her any rights of property which she did not otherwise possess. Griffiths v. Victorian Permanent Building Society, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 259; 2 A.L.T., 34.

Deposit in Building Society.]—A woman made a deposit at interest with a building society, and afterwards married. No agreement in the nature of a settlement to her separate use was made. Held that the deposit was not separate property within Sec. 6 of the "Married Women's Property Act," and that the husband could recover such moneys though they had been previously repaid to the wife. Ibid.

The same would apply to a similar deposit made by a married woman of money not her separate property. Ibid.

"Married Women's Property Act," Sec. 3—Land under "Land Act 1869."]—The interest of a woman as licensee under the "Land Act 1869" is personal property, passing to her husband on her marriage, but the inchoate right to the fee remains in the wife under the "Married Women's Property Act" No. 384, Sec. 3. M'Leod v. M'Pherson, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 285; 4 A.L.T., 25.

Sec. 10—Lease under "Land Act 1869."]—Semble, that a lease obtained after her marriage by a woman who was licensee under the "Land Act 1869" before her marriage is property coming to her by deed during her marriage under Sec. 10 of the "Married Women's Property Act." C. was before her marriage licensee of land. She married in 1877, and obtained a lease in 1880. C. quarrelled with her husband and left him, and executed a transfer of the lease to the defendant B., her brother. Bill by husband to restrain registration of transfer dismissed. Ibid.

Effect of Sec. 10 of Act No. 384 in Vesting Share of a Married Woman upon an Intestacy.]—Skeeles v. Hughes, ante column 385.

Act No. 384, Sec. 5—"Investment"—Purchase of Land.]—Land comprised in the will of a married woman was land purchased by her and conveyed to her previously to the passing of Act No. 384. It appeared that the purchase money was paid for partly out of her own earnings and partly by an advance from a building society, which advance was paid off by her subsequently to Act No. 384. Held that "investment" in Sec. 5 means laying out of money upon some security or in the purchase of land, and that paying off a debt which had accrued prior to the passing of the Act was not such an "investment," and that she had not the land as her separate property so as to acquire a disposing power over it. In the Will of Buggy, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 66.

Chose in Action—Accommodation Acceptance.]—In March, 1855, P. lent his four accommodation acceptances for £500 each to M. In May, 1855, three were torn up by M. in P.'s presence, and the fourth returned to P., who thereupon gave it to M.'s wife, saying, "Here, little woman, this is your property." Mrs. M. laughingly handed the acceptance back. P., according to M.'s evidence, said, "Keep it for yourself and children; you do not know when you may require it." Mrs. M.'s evidence was —"I was to make use of it for the benefit of myself," and, after a pause, she added, "and for my children." In June, 1855, M. voluntarily sequestrated his estate, and neither schednled the acceptance nor handed it to his official assignee. On 4th July, 1855, the acceptance fell due, was not paid, and it did not appear that steps were taken to demand or enforce payment. On 18th July, 1855, P. died, having appointed the defendant as his executrix, and leaving the bill unpaid in the hands of M.'s wife. In December, 1855, M. obtained his certificate nnder the "Insolvent Act." In 1860, M., being indebted to the plaintiffs in this suit, and likely to come under further obligation to them, indorsed the bill to them as security for the past or any future debt; and M. then incurred a further debt to the plaintiffs. In a suit by the plaintiffs against the executrix of P. to recover the amount of the bill, Held that P.'s words on handing over the acceptance to M.'s wife, established no separate use for the benefit of Mrs. M.; that the acceptance, being without consideration, was simply a chose in action in the wife of M., which might or might not become valuable to M., as P. might or might not be willing to pay it. Clough v. Gray, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 225.

Chose in Action—"Married Women's Property Act," sec. 8.]—Per Molesworth J. (in Chambers). Choses in action to which the wife is entitled, but which the husband has not reduced into possession, are not property to which the wife is "entitled" within the meaning of Sec. 8 of the "Married Women's Property Act," so as to make them separate estate. Griffiths v. Griffiths, 1 A.L.T., 119.

Trustee Appointed to receive Amount of Policy on Husband's Life—"Married Women's Property Act," No. 384, Sec. 14.]—Where a husband insured his life for the benefit of his wife and children, and left a wife, but no children, the Court ordered the appointment of a trustee to receive the amount of the policy from the insurance company. In re Ardagh, 4 A.J.R., 24.

Act No. 384, secs. 10 & 11.]—The combined effect of secs. 10 & 11 of the Act is to give to a married woman the full right of disposition over her separate estate notwithstanding any restraint on anticipation contained in the instrument of gift. Noyes v. Glassford, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 77.

[NOTE, ED.—See, however, Sec. 6 of the Amending Act (No. 736), where the operation of a clause restraining anticipation is restored.]

(c) Dealings With.

Advances by Trustee on Security of the Estate.]—A trustee of a married woman sued her, seeking to charge her estate with certain sums advanced to her by him on the security of the trust estate. After the advances the trustee and his cestui que trust concurred in mortgaging the trust property, and the trustee sought to establish his claim against the equity of redemption. The bill alleged that it was agreed that the trustee was to be paid out of the rents and profits of the estate. Held that since the trustee was only to be paid out of the rents and profits, a sale could not be directed of the estate, and that possession of the estate was to be given up to the trustee, who was to retain the rents and profits in satisfaction of his advances, interest, and costs, subject to the rights of the mortgagee. Michael v. Wakefield, 1 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 136. Semble, per Molesworth, J., that in an ordinary case of a creditor establishing his claim against the separate estate of a femme coverte it is competent to the Court to direct a sale of her estate to satisfy the debt. Ibid.

Charges on Wife's Separate Estate.]—By postnuptial settlement certain land was settled upon trust to pay the rents, &c., to such person as J. D., the wife of the settlor, should appoint, but not by way of anticipation, and in default of appointment to her separate use. In 1858 J. D., after her husband's death, mortgaged her life interest to C. and W. In 1859 J. D. married again, and obtained an advance from the plaintiffs, by which she paid off the first mortgage. C. being dead, W. reconveyed to the trustees of the settlement, and in 1863 J. D. and her second husband mortgaged her life interest to the plaintiffs to secure their advance to her. J. D. repudiated this second mortgage as being opposed to the restraint on anticipation. On bill by the plaintiffs for foreclosnre, Held that the release of the old and the granting of the new security were, from the evidence, one transaction; that the wife purchased by the new deed a benefit to her separate estate without paying the price she stipulated to pay for it, and that she should not be allowed to do so; that the wife was bound by the second deed so far as she had been by the first. Decree made to that effect. Webster v. Yorke, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 294; N.C., 31.

Husband's Power over and Receipt of.]—Plaintiff married a widow with three children and considerable real and personal property. A settlement was executed by which the property was settled upon the wife and her children, with a power of appointment by deed or will, but without power of anticipation, and there was no reversionary interest given to the husband. Plaintiff and his wife had both been publicans, but on the marriage the wife gave up her business and lived apart from her husband's hotel, which he managed, and at which he took most of his meals; but he lived at the house with her and the children and another child which she had by him. Plaintiff, at his wife's request, lent her money for the expenses of her house, laid out money in improving the settled estate, and in the purchase of other property, which was conveyed on the trusts of the settlement, on the understanding that he should be repaid out of the wife's surplus income, and the conveyance contained a recital of actnal payment, though no money passed, and a receipt was endorsed. The wife died leaving a will directing payment of debts and of any liabilities to which she or her separate estate might be alleged to be subject. On bill by plaintiff seeking repayment of the sums advanced, Held per Full Court (reversing Molesworth, J.), that plaintiff was not incapacitated from contracting with his wife in respect of her separate estate; and that he could recover from the trustees of the settlement and of the wife's will the amounts advanced by him, though there had been no contract in writing with regard to them. Watson v. Kyte, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 31.

Receipt of Interest by Husband—Wife's Acquiescence.]—By an indenture of settlement certain moneys were vested in trustees upon trust to invest the same and pay the annual income thereof during the joint lives of A. and her husband to them only, and for such trusts as A. should appoint with a restraint upon anticipation. The agent of the trustees and A.'s husband, the latter of whom had given a mortgage over certain property to the former, made an arrangement by which the annual income was set off against the interest on the mortgage, and this arrangement was acted on for six years, no demand being made by A. for any of the income during that time. A. sued the trustees for the income so set off. The evidence as to whether A. had or had not expressly assented to the arrangement was conflicting. Held that whether A. did or did not expressly assent was immaterial, since she was bound by her acquiescence in what amounted to the virtual receipt by her husband of the interest. Woodward v. Jennings, 1 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 1.

Husband Receiving Rents of Wife's Settled Estate—Acquiescence.]—Where a husband or his agent received rents of property settled to wife's separate use with her consent and knowledge, and during that time she was properly maintained by her husband, and made no protest against payment to husband, or demand for payment to herself, Held that she was not entitled to claim for arrears against her husband's estate. Brown v. Abbott, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 121; 3 A.L.T., 47.

For Costs.]—The estate of a married woman settled to her separate use without power of anticipation cannot be charged in anticipation with costs. Webster v. Yorke, N.C. 31, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 294, 301.

Costs—Suit to Set Aside Transfer to Married Woman.]—In a suit against a married woman and her husband, to set aside a transfer to the woman of certain real estate, the husband, not being a necessary party, had the bill dismissed as against him with costs, but no costs were given against the wife, on the bill succeeding, because she had no separate estate. Shiels v. Drysdale, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 126; 2 A.L.T., 14.

Property with Power to Appoint by Deed or Will.]—A., a widow and the administratrix of her deceased husband (who had died intestate), and entitled to dower as to his real estate, and to a third of his personal estate, being about to contract a second marriage, executed with her intended husband a settlement, whereby she settled the estates he was so possessed of and entitled to, to her sole and separate use, with power of appointment by deed or will, and after marriage, with her husband's consent, gave a letter instructing her bankers to keep separate accounts, and to consider any private overdraft by her on her own account secured by the administration deposits in their hands. At this time two sums of £6000 and £8000 were in deposit on such account, and subsequently various other sums were, from time to time, paid in by her to the same account, and placed at interest with the bank, who allowed her to overdraw her private account on the strength of the arrangement so made. By her will she executed the power of appointment reserved to her by the settlement, and having at the time of her death overdrawn her private account to a considerable amount, the bankers claimed, as against the parties interested under the will, to retain the sums so paid into their hands on account of the administration account, and especially the sums of £6000 and £8000, so deposited with them, in payment of the sums due to them on account of the overdrafts made by her on her private account. On a bill by the bank to enforce their claim, Held by the Full Court, confirming Molesworth, J., that to charge a fund, subject to a general power of appointment by a married woman, with payment of her debts, it is necessary to establish actual fraud against her, and that as there was no evidence of such a concealment of the settlement as would amount to fraud, the bill must be dismissed with costs. On appeal to the Privy Council, Held that the property of a married woman, settled by an ante-nuptial settlement for her separate use for life, with remainder as she should by deed or will appoint, with remainder in failure of appointment to her executors or administrators, is an absolute settlement for her sole and separate use, without restraint on anticipation, and vests in equity the entire corpus in her for all purposes, and that, whether or not the bankers had notice of the settlement (which fact was uncertain) the letter of instruction to them by A. was a valid execution of the rights reserved by her, as regarded the two sums of £6000 and £8000 then in their hands, and in the absence of fraud gave the bankers a lien on those sums for any future overdraft that might be made in accordance with the terms of such letter. The dictum of Lord Justice Turner in the case of Johnson v. Gallagher (3 D. F. & J. 494) as to the liabilty of the separate estate of a married woman for debts contracted with reference to such estate, approved and adopted. The case of Shattock v. Shattock (L.R. 2 Eq. 182) dissented from. The London Chartered Bank of Australia v. Lempriere, 1 V.R. (E.,) 191; 1 A.J.R., 175. Appeal, L.R. 4 P.C., 572, 590, 596.

Woman Living Apart from her Husband and Having Separate Estate.]—C., a married woman living apart from her husband, and having separate estate, was sued for rent before justices, who made an order for payment. Held, on appeal, that the contract having been entered into after the "Married Women's Property Act 1870" (No. 384), it was immaterial when C. was married, and that the Court would not interfere with the decision of the justices as to the sufficiency of the evidence. Counsel v. Love, 3 A.J.R., 34.

"Married Women's Porperty Act" (No. 384), Sec. 18—Liability for Contracts.]—C., a woman, was married in August, 1867, and previous to marriage a deed of settlement containing a clause restraining anticipation was executed by the husband by which certain lands were vested in trustees to secure £5000 in trust for C. Some portions of the lands were sold under a power to that effect, and with the proceeds some shares in a gold mining company were purchased. C. and her husband were sued on a bill of exchange accepted by them jointly. The creditor obtained judgment, and obtained an order under Sec. 208 of the Act No. 274 to attach the shares standing in the name of the trustees. On a rule nisi to set aside the order, Held that Sec. 18 of the Act allowing married women to sue and be sued as femmes soles in civil proceedings, did not impair the position of a woman married before the Act, not being retrospective, and did not apply to the present case, and that the property vested in the trustees could not be attached under Sec. 208 of the "Common Law Procedure Statute" (No. 274), even although the contract on the bill arose after the Act No. 384 was passed. Hutchings v. Cunningham, 3 A.J.R., 64.

Husband Acting as Agent for Wife with Separate Property.]—A husband purchased goods on credit for his wife, who had separate property, without disclosing whether he was buying for himself or as agent. Held, that the vendors might, on proving that the wife was the principal in the matter, maintain an action against her for the price of the goods. M'Intosh v. Tonkin, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 127.

Contract with Husband—Act No. 384, Sec. 18.]—Where a husband agrees to transfer to wife certain property, she undertaking to manage, pay his debts, and send him small weekly payments, and the wife has no separate estate at time of the contract, this is not a contract enforceable by him against her, under Sec. 18 of "Married Women's Property Act 1864." *Bryant v. Mortgage—Deed Ineffectual as a Conveyance—Action on Covenant to Pay.]—An action may be maintained against a married woman upon a covenant to pay contained in a mortgage deed, although the deed not having been acknowledged by her in the manner prescribed by sec. 61 of the "Transfer of Land Statute," and the "Real Property Statute 1864," sec. 71, before a commissioner, is inoperative to convey the mortgaged premises. The intention of the Legislature was not, that the prescribed formalities being omitted should render the deed void as a deed, but should render it ineffectual as a conveyance. Trewhella v. Willison, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 122.

Mortgage by Married Woman—Acknowledgments to Bar Interest.]—Where a married woman seised in fee mortgages her real estate, such mortgage does not change its ownership further than investment indicates. A., a married woman so seised in fee, mortgaged part of it to B., and afterwards married C. A. and C. then mortgaged other part to D. B. and C. were paid off and conveyed to such uses as she should appoint. A. and C. then mortgaged (September 1865) the whole of the estate to E., by deed duly acknowledged by her, subject to redemption by them, or either of them, and subject to a proviso for reconveyance to her in fee, or as she or they should direct. In 1866 A. made a will referring to this deed, leaving the land to her husband, C., and appointing executors. September, 1873, E., by deed, conveyed to such uses as she should appoint, and in default to her in fee. Held that although she never by deed acknowledged subjected her estate to a disposal which would be invalid by her as a married woman, yet the intention to bar her interest need not be shown by recitals in the deed, but might be shown by extraneous evidence, and that deed of September 1, 1865, and the will afforded such evidence; and that devise to husband was effectual. Dodgson v. Clare, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 137.

ILLEGAL ASSOCIATION.

What is Not—Association for Returning Members to Parliament.]—The Victorian Association, as stated by its prospectus, was established for the purpose of seeking out and promoting by all lawful means in its power the return to Parliament of men of liberal and enlarged views, who, by experience, education, and character, were calculated to command the respect and enjoy the confidence of their fellow-colonists; and who would, in their political career, be guided by a tenacious regard for the public welfare rather than by a desire to obtain the temporary approbation of any section of the community. The treasurers of the society sued a member upon the latter's undertaking to subscribe to the funds of the society. Upon special case, Held that the mere probability that illegal means would be used to carry out the objects stated did not render the association illegal; that the member's undertaking was not void; and judgment for the plaintiffs. *Ryan v. If the inebriate seeks to attack the order of committal, or the means by which it was obtained, he must proceed by habeas corpus. Ex parte Burt, 4 A.L.T., 112.

Wards of Court—Withdrawal from Jurisdiction.]—Permission to take wards of Court out of the jurisdiction will not be granted without sufficient reason. Black v. Black, 4 A.J.R., 166.

Costs of Travelling.]—Travelling expenses of infant wards of Court will not be granted out of their estate where there is no necessity for their travelling out of the jurisdiction. Ibid.

Ward of Court—Elopement out of Jurisdiction—Marriage—Contempt—Attachment—Maintenance.]—Motion by the guardians of a ward of Court to bring under the notice of the Court the circumstances of her clandestine marriage with B., and her elopement with him from Victoria to New Zealand, and for an order to secure attendance of B. and protection of infant, and seeking directions as to marriage and the settlement and disposal of infant's property and income thereof, and for her maintenance and guardianship. Held that Court could not entertain questions as to validity of marriage, as parties were not present, or as to the settlement; but Court directed an attachment against B. for contempt, to be executed by the solicitors of the guardians when practicable, and that no further payments should be made out of funds in or towards the maintenance, clothing, or education of the infant, who had eloped from the control of a person sanctioned by the Court. Ware v. Ware, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 233.

Removal of Infant Ward out of Jurisdiction.]—For circumstances in which an application by the mother of an infant ward, with the approval of the other guardian, to remove the infant out of the jurisdiction was referred to the Master, see Cattanach v. M'Kowne, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 213.

Custody of an Illegitimate Infant.]—An infant, H. Ah Kee, was the illegitimate child of Ah Kee and E. W., and had been placed by its mother in the custody of H. Habeas corpus for the delivery up of the infant to E. W. Held that the Court will not interfere in transferring a child from the hands of a person with whom the applicant has deliberately placed it, unless satisfied that it would be for the child's benefit, and that the applicant is a person of good moral character. The Court thinking that the applicant's character was very doubtful upon the evidence, refused to interfere. In re Ah Kee, Ex parte Walker, 3 V.R. (L.,) 38; 3 A.J.R. 33.

Custody of Infant—Mother a Drunkard.]—When a mother of infant children was an habitual drunkard, the Court removed them from her custody and ordered a reference to Master to appoint a guardian. Phair v. Powell, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 264.

Custody — After Father's Death — Mother.]—After the death of an infant's father the claim of the paternal grandfather to the custody of the infant is not superior to that of the mother, though the infant has been left in the custody of the grandfather for six years before the death of the father, leaving the infant in such custody not being an abandonment of the child. Re Sanders, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 10.

Custody of Children on Divorce or Judicial Separation.]—See HUSBAND AND WIFE—JUDICIAL SEPARATION AND DIVORCE.

Sending Out of Jurisdiction for Education.]—The Master's report stated that it was desirable that W., a ward of Court, should be sent to England to one of five or six enumerated schools for education. Held that the Court is loth to send its wards out of the jurisdiction; but that circumstances may induce it to do so, and it appearing that W. had a fortune of only £10,000, and that there were no special circumstances to induce it to break through its general rule, application refused. Ware v. Ware, 3 A.J.R. 11.

Religious Education.]—In dealing with an infant's religion Courts of Equity regard the father's more than the mother's, but in case of an adopted infant they would not interfere with the adopted father's preference, and if the adopted father furnished the means of support would prefer his discretion to wife's. The Court will regard the views of an infant of the age of 14 upon religious matters if definitely formed, but she should be placed for some time in a position where she will be free to exercise her own judgment, and free from intrusive conversations upon religious subjects, and the Master will examine her to ascertain what her views are. In re Pennington, 1 V.L.R. (Eq.,) 97.

Religious Education.]—When an infant states that she has a conscientious objection to attend any but a Roman Catholic establishment the Court will not yield to such an inclination on her part, if there is no strong reason, from the religion of her parents by nature or adoption, for the Courts preferring that religion to any other. Also, if trustees have a voice in the marriage of an infant they ought to have some influence as to the child's forming acquaintances during infancy. In re Pennington, 1 V.L.R. (Eq.,) 343.

Per the Full Court. If the religious impressions produced on an infant's mind are so strong as to make it dangerous to attempt to interfere with them, she should not be in any way coerced, or even persuaded, to alter them. The religion of a sole guardian should be cæteris paribus that in which the infant is to be brought up. In re Pennington, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 49.

On reference to the Master to inquire as to a guardian, and a scheme for the education and maintenance of an infant, he—in deference to what he believed to be an expression of opinion by the Court, and contrary to his own judgment—reported in favour of a sole guardian and schoolmistress, both of whom were of a different religion from that in which the infant had for some years been brought up. A person at whose school the child was, and who had for some years educated her in her own religion excepted to the report, on the ground that the child was attached to her, had strong religious convictions, and had formed friendships at the school. The exceptions were overruled. On appeal to the Full Court against the scheme, but not against the guardian, Held under the special circumstances of the case that the order should be reversed, the report already made set aside, and the question remitted to the Master, to be dealt with under the original order. Ibid.

Religion—How Dealt With.]—The conduct or misconduct of those who have had the custody of an infant should in no way influence the Master or the Court in determining what is to be done for the infant's spiritual welfare. Ibid.

Education—Discretion of Trustees—Interference by Court.]—A testator by will directed the trustees to apply certain income for the maintenance of an infant son "at their discretion." The trustees wished the infant to be sent to a certain school, but the infant, aged 18, wished to go to another. Motion to refer to Master to settle a scheme of education refused, the Court refusing to interfere with trustees' discretion. Flannagan v. Flannagan, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 272.

(2) Maintenance and Advancement.

Past and Future.]—On motion for maintenance where mother, who had been appointed guardian and her second husband had maintained an infant, and it appeared that the mother had no separate property and her second husband was a carpenter earning £150 a year, and that the infant's fortune consisted of certain debentures, of which the annual dividends were £14, and a sum of £69 had accumulated from the dividends, ordered, that the arrears of interest be paid to the mother for past maintenance, and accruing dividends be paid for future maintenance till further order. In re Hamilton, 4 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 95.

Past Maintenance not Allowed out of Corpus where Funds under Control of Court.]—Mitchell v. Tuckett, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 31; post under TRUST AND TRUSTEE—Powers and rights of trustees.

Out of Corpus.]—A testatrix by will left all her real and personal property to trustees upon trust for three infant children, the property to be converted and the proceeds paid to the children when the youngest came of age, and she directed the trustees until conversion to pay the whole of the net income towards the maintenance of the children. The will contained no advancement clause. On motion for liberty for trustees to pay out of corpus a sum in aid of maintenance and a sum of £50 as an apprentice fee for one of the infants, it appearing that the realty was producing a rental of £1 per week, and that each infant's share in the personalty amounted to £250, motion refused. In re Neeson, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 319.

Out of Corpus—To what Age Poor Children Allowed Maintenance.]—Five infants were entitled to £300 each, the income from which was insufficient to maintain them. On motion for allowance from corpus for past and future maintenance, Held that the Court would not in this motion allow the mother anything as for past maintenance out of capital; ordered, that such portion of the capital be allowed for future maintenance until the infants reached the age of eighteen as, with the income from each share, would make up £20 a year to each infant. In re Moylan, 5 A.J.R., 67.

When Estate under Management of Curator.]—Where the estate in which an infant is interested is under the management of the Curator, the Court will make an order for maintenance, and for appointment of a guardian. In re Nimmo, 5 A.J.R., 79.

When not Allowed out of Corpus.]—Where the share to which an infant was entitled under an intestacy was only £159 11s. 9d., the Court refused to break in on the corpus to provide for maintenance. In re Hunt, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 224; 6 A.L.T., 84.

Will—Accumulation till Children came of Age—No Provision for Maintenance.]—Motion for order for trustees to apply income of certain property towards the maintenance of infants. This property was left by will on trust for children on attaining majority, with a direction for accumulation of income during infancy, but with no provision for maintenance. Order made for application of income from personalty for maintenance. In re Gardiner, 5 A.J.R., 153.

Where a testator by his will gave to his widow a life interest in certain property producing a rental of £150 per annum, and in £2000 worth of debentures, and directed the widow to maintain and educate an infant, the Court refused to allow any sum by way of maintenance to the widow. In re Folk's Will, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 171.

Where not Directed in Will—Accounts.]—In a will no maintenance was directed, but property was left in an ambiguous manner, which the Court construed as giving income in equal shares to wife and children, and the corpus to the children in equal shares after wife's death. A., the wife, had been maintaining infants, and had advanced portions out of corpus to those who attained majority, keeping accounts of expenditure and receipts, which had never been objected to by children who were all of age at time of suit. Held that A. was liable to restore the portions of the corpus she had appropriated. Accounts directed as to what each was entitled to, and of what had been expended in maintenance of each. Stevenson v. M'Intyre, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 142.

And see cases post under WILL—Incidents of Devises and Bequests.

Increased Allowance — Reference.]— Where, upon reference, the Master finds an annual allowance for infants, wards of Court, for a definite period, and after that time a larger sum than that fixed upon, was suspended without order, the Court, even though the income had, owing to unexpected circumstances, largely increased, refused to sanction the increased expenditure; but made a further reference to the Master to report as to future allowances. In re M'Whae, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 100; 2 A.L.T. 1.

Who may Apply Income to.]—The administrator of an intestate, dying since the passing of the "Statute of Trusts 1864" (No. 234), is not a trustee within the meaning of Sec. 77, and, therefore, has no power by virtue thereof to apply income to the maintenance of infants. In re Bowman's Trusts, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 124; 2 A.L.T., 13.

Discretion of Trustees.]—The Court will not interfere with the discretion of trustees as to amount of maintenance when such discretion is vested in them by the will. Grant v. Grant, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 314. In the Will of M'Lean, ibid p. 319; post under TRUST AND TRUSTEE—Rights and Powers of Trustees.

Duties of Trustees as to—Maintenance not to be Applied to Payment of Past Debts.]—Green v. Sutherland, 3 A.J.R., 3; post under TRUST AND TRUSTEE—Rights and Powers of Trustees.

Decree Allowing Maintenance for Certain Period—Variation Allowed by Extending Period for Maintenance.]—See Kearney v. Lowry, 1 A.J.R. 95, post under PRACTICE AND PLEADING—IN EQUITY. Decree and Order.

Allowance for a Trousseau.]—Upon an impending marriage of a female ward of Court, whose fortune was worth £12,000, the Court referred it to the Master to inquire whether it would be proper to allow any and what sum not exceeding £250 for the purchase of a trousseau. Ware v. Ware, 6 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 326.

Where a will directed the widow to maintain and educate infants, and contained a power of advancement during minority, the Court refused without evidence of special circumstances to sanction an advancement of £100 for a wedding outfit out of a daughter's share. Sichel v. O'Shannassy, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 208.

Contingent Interest—Breaking into Capital—Practice.]— Where infants are entitled to contingent interests only under a will, the Court will not make an order authorising executor to break into capital, unless notice has been given and all persons interested consent; such consents should be given in open Court, a consent filed and verified by affidavit will not do. In re Hyland, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 169.

Agreement to Serve under "Military and Naval Discipline Act 1870," Sec. 2.]—An infant may, under Sec. 2 of the "Military and Naval Discipline Act 1870," even without his parents' consent, enter into an agreement to serve. In re Hayes, 4 A.J.R. 34. See S.C., ante columns 56, 57.

What Contracts Capable of.]—An engagement by an infant to serve on board a man-of-war under the "Military and Naval Discipline Act 1870," is a contract for the benefit of the infant, and capable of ratification. In re Hayes, 4 A.J.R., 77. See S.C. ante columns 56, 57.

(c) Torts.

Trespass by Infant—Liability of Parent.]—A father is not legally responsible for his son's trespass, unless the relation of principal and agent exists between them. Maudoit v. Ross, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 264, 266; 6 A.L.T., 104.

Who has Better Right to be.]—In a contest between the paternal and maternal uncles of an infant for her guardianship, her property being derived from the maternal side, Held that the maternal uncle had the better right. In re Johnson, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 211.

The jurisdiction of Courts of Equity in the appointment of guardians, arises entirely from property. Ibid.

Who may be—Married Woman.]—Per Molesworth, J., in Chambers.—A married woman cannot be appointed guardian of an infant. Re Ronayne, 6 A.L.T., 33.

Appointment of.]—On an order of the Court referring to the Master to appoint a guardian, the guardian is sufficiently appointed by the Master's report being confirmed.

The order of reference to the Master should also embrace the costs of the application and reference. In re Talbot, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 86.

Appointment of, Without Suit.]—Guardian for infant appointed without suit, where infant's property consisted of real estate in Victoria of the value of £400, and a legacy of about £3000, the guardianship being limited to the real estate. In re Mackay, 1 V.R. (E.,) 17.

Motion for Appointment of Guardian of Person—Guardian "ad litem."]—Where a motion is made by trustees of an infant's property for appointing a guardian of her person, and is opposed, a guardian ad litem is necessary to represent the infant, and the Court will make an order for that purpose instanter. In re Pennington, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 97.

Appointment.]—An orphan child was adopted by P., who, by his will, left property for her, with a trust for her maintenance during infancy. After the death of P. the child was taken possession of by C., a stranger, and retained against the will of the trustees. Motion by C. to be appointed guardian refused. Held that an infant above age of twelve years has no right to choose a guardian, nor to supersede the discretion of the trustees of her property derived under the will of her adoptive father. Ibid.

Guardian of Illegitimate Child.]—Guardian of an illegitimate child, nominated by the father's will, appointed guardian of person and estate by the Court without reference, and allowed commission on receipt of rent. Nixon v. Goldspink, 1 V.R. (E.,) 92; 1 A.J.R., 56.

Infant's Estate in the Hands of Curator.]—Order made on motion appointing mother guardian of infant whose estate was in the hands of the Curator. In re Davey, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 71.

Will Directing Trustees to Apply to Court, if necessary, to be Appointed Guardians—Appointment of Mother.]—Where a will purported to appoint trustees as guardians and directed them to apply to Court, if necessary, to be appointed, the Court made on motion an order, with the consent of the trustees, appointing mother as guardian. In re Will of M'Lean, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 319.

Removal of Mother for Neglect—Increased Allowance of Infant to Support Mother who had made away with her Allowance.]—Motion for removal of mother and to appoint a guardian in her place. An infant under his father's will was allowed £100 a year. It was proved that the mother had been unable to control him or to keep him attending school, and that the infant was ignorant, though thirteen years of age. The mother had an allowance of £200 a year, but she had spent it, and was dependent on what she could get out of the boy's allowance. Order made referring it to Master to approve of a proper person to be appointed guardian in the mother's place, and to inquire and report whether any and what increased allowance should be made to the infant, and having regard to the means of support of the mother, to inquire into the causes of her destitution, and to report whether any and what addition to the allowance for the infant should be made for the relief of the mother. Punch v. Lane, 3 A.J.R. 115.

Appointment of Guardian ad litem.]—See cases post under PRACTICE AND PLEADING—In Equity—Infants.

(6) Rights and Powers in other cases.

Lease of Property—Act 11 Geo. IV. and 1 Will. IV., cap. 65.]—The policy of the 11 Geo. IV. and 1 Will. IV., cap. 65, Sec. 17, is to encourage long building leases to tenants who will improve the infant's property, and at a fixed definite rent covering the entire period of the tenancy. And therefore a lease for five years, made on the following terms, viz., that the guardians should, out of the infant's estate, lay out a sum of money in improvements, and that until such improvements were made, a rent of £80, and after completion of improvements a rent of £160 should be reserved, is not within the policy or design of the Act. In re Dight, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 131.

The words "or other purposes," contained in the clause, ought to be construed, if not as to the powers of the Act, yet in the discretion of the Court, on the principle of ejusdem generis with the antecedents. Ibid.

Petition under Act 11 Geo. IV. and 1 Wil. IV., cap. 65, for Liberty to Lease.]—The meaning of 11 Geo. IV. and 1 Will. IV., c. 65, sec. 17, enabling the Court to authorise leases of infants' land "at the best rent that can be obtained," is that the Court shall exercise a discretion as to the amount of rent, and not delegate the discretion to arbitration. In re Dight, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 139.

Receiver has Power to Grant Leases of Infant's Property.]—Brock v. M'Phail, 1 W. & W. (E)., 12. Post RECEIVER—Powers, &c.

And see generally under RECEIVER.

Partition of Infant's Estate.]—Partition of the share of an infant tenant-in-common should be by commission, and not by a reference to the Master. Beith v. Beith, 2 V.R. (E.,) 110.

Leave to Bid for Desirable Property in which Infant was Interested.]—An infant had a half-interest in some property which was advertised for sale, and which was desirable property. On motion for leave for the infant to bid at the sale, Held that the Court had no power to convert his uninvested personalty, which was sufficient for the purposes of the purchase into freehold, and motion refused. Ware v. Ware, 5 A.J.R. 4.

Release to Trustee—Infant Examining Accounts and Expressing Satisfaction Therewith.]—A testator devised property to a trustee on trust for an infant, directing him to apply part of the rents, &c., in maintenance and education of an infant, and accumulate and invest the residue upon trust for infant on attaining age. The codicil directed that in case M., the trustee, should take reasonable care of the property, and pay off a mortgage on the property, he should not be liable for back rents or otherwise. M. kept down interest on the mortgage, paid for education and maintenance, but did not pay off the mortgage. Shortly before the infant became of age, M. went through some accounts he had kept roughly and the infant expressed satisfaction with them. Two days after the infant came of age he released M. from all liability by a deed which recited the accounts, and a balance found, and by which the property was conveyed to infant. On a suit to set the release aside, Held that the infant was not, under the circumstances, a free agent, though there was no evidence of his being cheated or coerced; that the recitals in the deed as to accounting were stronger than the facts warranted; that the bargain was indistinct, and was actually made before he came of age. Release set aside, and accounts of rents and expenditure ordered. O'Leary v. Mahoney, 5 A.J.R., 41.

Release of Trustee by Cestuisque Trustent on the day of or shortly after Attaining Majority.]—Westwood v. Kidney, 5 A.J.R., 25. Bennett v. Tucker, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 20; 3 A.L.T., 108. See post under TRUST AND TRUSTEE—Rights and Powers of Trustees.

Purchase of Infant's Estate by Next Friend Set Aside.]—Larnach v. Alleyne, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 342; post under TRUST AND TRUSTEE—Rights and Powers of Trustees.

Accumulation of Income—Discretion of Trustees as to Disposition—Motion for Payment of Accumulation on Attaining Majority.]—A testator left real and personal property to trustees on trust for his son, an infant, for life, with remainder to his children; the will directing application of the income to the maintenance of his son during minority, and accumulation of so much as was not needed, and investment without prejudice to the right of the trustees to apply the accumulations in the same way as if it had been just accrued due. Motion on behalf of infant son on attaining majority for payment of accumulations to him, some of the trustees only consenting, refused on the ground that all the trustees had not agreed as to discretion and as to the motion, and that the plaintiff was only contingently entitled. Green v. Nicholson, 5 A.J.R., 131.

Compromises—Next Friend.]—An infant's next friend has no authority to compromise an action brought by the infant by such next friend. The authority of the next friend is limited to prosecuting the action. Glassford v. Murphy, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 123.

Taking Lands of Infant—Special Guardian must be Appointed—"Lands Compensation Statute 1869," Sec. 6.]—A special guardian must be appointed to treat for and convey the lands of an infant. A receiver has no power to sell or convey under Sec. 6 of the Act. Hunter v. Hunter, 4 A.J.R., 24, 65.

Land Taken under "The Lands Compensation Statute 1869" (No. 344), Sec. 6—No. 392 (Amending No. 344), Sec. 4—Special Guardian—Costs.]—Where land of an infant ward of Court is compulsorily taken for the construction of a Government Railway, the Court will appoint a special guardian to treat with the Board of Land and Works in respect of the land so taken; but will not in the same order provide for the costs to be incurred. A separate application with reference thereto, must be made after the receipt of the purchase money. Smith v. Smith, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 233.

Sale of Infants' Property by the Court.]—An administrator of his wife's land, beneficially entitled to one-third thereof, and holding the other two-thirds for his children, mortgaged the whole property to a bank, and expended the money borrowed in improving the property. The bank advanced the money and took the mortgage with notice of the infants' claims. Upon suit by the children for redemption of two-thirds of the property, Held that under such circumstances, although it might be advisable to sell the property, the Court had no power to order a sale against the children's wishes. Droop v. Colonial Bank of Australasia, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 7.

Appearing before Justices—Next Friend—Costs.]—An infant may appear before justices, and may obtain a Rule to prohibit the proceedings, without, in either case, the appointment of a next friend, but in such a case the Court will not allow him the costs of the Rule to prohibit, though it be made absolute. Regina v. Little, ex parte Reynolds, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 124; 4 A.L.T., 4.

An infant cannot be a relator to an information. Attorney-General v. Scholes, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 164, 173.

"Neglected and Criminal Children's Act 1864" (No. 216), Sec. 16—Evidence of Age.]—A child was charged before a magistrate in October, 1865, as a "neglected child," under the Act No. 216. No evidence was given of her age; but the magistrate being of "opinion" that she was under fifteen years of age, convicted her and sentenced her to six hours' imprisonment, and in addition directed her to be sent to the Sunbury Reformatory School. She escaped from the Reformatory, was captured, convicted in July, 1866, of the escape, and sentenced to further detention. In September, 1866, certiorari was applied for to quash the proceedings, on the ground that she was over fifteen in October, 1865, when she was first convicted, and that "no evidence whatsoever" of her age was taken at the first conviction. Held that the application was too late as to the first conviction, more than twelve months having elapsed; and of no avail as to the second, which could not be upset till after the upsetting of the first. In re Brazenall, 3 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 76.

"Neglected and Criminal Children's Act 1864," Sec. 12—Evidence of Age.]—Under the Act No. 216, Sec. 12, the magistrate is not bound to take any evidence at all of the child's age, and he may form his "opinion" of the age of the child where there is no evidence at all—the words "unsatisfactory evidence" including in their scope "no evidence at all." Ibid.

"Neglected and Criminal Children's Act 1864," Sec. 27—Who may Proceed under—Clerk of Petty Sessions.]—The Clerk of Petty Sessions is a proper person to proceed under Sec. 27 of the "Neglected and Criminal Children's Act 1864" to recover arrears in respect of an order made on the complaint of a constable or school superintendent under Sec. 24. Regina v. Justices at Richmond, ex parte Eddin, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 87.

"Marriage and Matrimonial Causes Statute" (No. 268), Sec. 30.]—If a child is withheld from a father who is competent and willing to receive and support it, the father is not liable to have an order for maintenance under Sec. 30 made against him. M'Farland v. M'Farland, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 303.

INFORMATION.

Criminal.]—See CRIMINAL INFORMATION — DEFAMATION—NUISANCE.

Bill and Information.]—See PRACTICE AND PLEADING—In Equity.

INJUNCTION.

I. GENERAL PRINCIPLES.

Consent Order—No Provision for Sealed Writ.]—An order of Court purporting as by consent at once to restrain defendant from an act, and not providing that a writ of injunction under seal shall issue, is an injunction in itself; and to base a contempt on it, no writ under seal need issue. Lane v. Hannah, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 66, 71.

Liability of Principals.]—The object of the insertion in an injunction of the words "servants, agents, and workmen" is to make those persons personally liable to the Court, and the omission of those words will not diminish the responsibility of the principals for the acts of their servants, agents, and workmen. Ibid, p. 72.

Persons consenting to an order of Court that they shall not do an act, will not be allowed to get and retain the profit of such act when done by their servants, and yet escape liability to the Court on the plea that they gave no express directions to do the act. Ibid.

Injunction Against Trustees and Others—Trustees not Chargeable with Wrong Complained of.]—A bill was filed against trustees and others alleging that some of the defendants not trustees had made certain fraudulent misrepresentations by which plaintiffs had been induced to assign to another defendant all their interest in the profits of a certain railway contract, and seeking to set assignment aside, and plaintiffs had obtained an ex parte injunction restraining defendants from receiving any more moneys payable under contract. On motion to dissolve ex parte injunction, Held, that if representations were fraudulent as alleged, there was no ground for injunction against trustees, who were neither directly nor indirectly chargeable with the representations, and injunction dissolved. Evans v. Guthridge, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 2, 35.

Against Person having no Interest in Subject Matter of Suit.]—Where it appeared by an affidavit of a defendant, sought to be enjoined, that he had parted before suit with all his interest in the land in question in the suit, which assertion was not denied by the plaintiffs; motion for injunction dismissed. Newington Freehold G. M. Coy. v. Harris, 3 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 174.

Interpretation of.]—An injunction is not to be interpreted retrospectively, unless its terms clearly require it. Mulcahy v. Walhalla G.M. Coy., 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 103, 110.

Injunctions are not granted with reference to accomplished injuries. Bonshaw Freehold G.M. Coy. v. Prince of Wales Coy., 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 140, 154.

Land Reserved for Public Purposes—Leased to Private Person—No title in Defendants.]—Certain land was, under the "Land Act 1869," reserved for public baths and the convenience of the people of Sandhurst. After being used by the municipal Corporation for such purposes for some time it was leased to M. for building purposes for his own private profit. On an information by the Attorney-General at the relation of a citizen of Sandhurst, seeking to restrain the Council and M. from permitting the land to be used for any other purpose than those for which it had been reserved, Held, on demurrer, that the information did not give any colour of title in the defendants to the land, so as to render such a suit necessary, the legal estate remaining in the Crown and the Council being only its tenants at will. Quære, whether if a case of irreparable mischief had been made out, an information would not lie, if it were shown that such mischief could not be remedied by the Crown resuming possession. Attorney General v. Mayor of Sandhurst, 2 V.R. (E.,) 136; 2 A.J.R., 100.

Interlocutory Injunctions—Question of Title— Although the Court will not decide upon the validity of Crown grants for lands sold during a temporary reservation of lands for sale for public purposes upon an application for an interlocutory injunction in a mining suit, yet it will not grant an injunction at suit of a holder of a mining claim on the lands to restrain the grantees from mining on the land. Parade G.M. Coy. v. Victorian United G.M. Coy., 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 24.

It does not follow, from a party having a legal right, that he may enforce it by injunction. His conduct may in many ways bar him of it, especially where the obtaining of an exparte injunction is stopped without having been heard. Courts of Equity are anxious to require a full disclosure of facts which may become material, and discharge with costs orders improperly obtained, although ultimately the facts disclosed may not be material. It is a question of the general policy of the Court and not of the merits between the parties. A subject upon which Courts are specially anxious for information is the precise time at which plaintiff or his agents became aware of threatened injury. Where the defendant had chartered from plaintiff a ship for use within special limits, and had concluded special negotiations with the plaintiff's agent for a special charter to another place, and the agent, the day before the proposed commencement of the special charter, broke off the negotiations, and obtained an exparte injunction by means of a bill and affidavit setting out the original charter, but omitting to set out negotiations, on motion exparte injunction dissolved with costs. Adelaide Steamship Coy. v. Martin, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 45.

Delay.]—Where bill was filed in December, 1878, answer delivered 1st February, 1879, and motion for injunction brought in July, 1879, injunction refused on the ground of delay in bringing the motion. Chinn v. Thomas, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 188; 1 A.L.T., 26.

Acquiescence.]—Plaintiffs sought an injunction restraining defendants from allowing water from their drive to pass into and flood that of plaintiff's. Held that having regard to the plaintiffs' long acquiescence in defendants' works, against which they did not seem to have remonstrated during much of their progress, and the defendants' outlay, such injunction would not be granted. Broadbent v. Marshall, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 115, 121.

Laches—Acquiescence—Delay.]—Neva Stearine Coy. v. Mowling, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 98; 5 A.L.T., 9. Post under TRADE MARK.

The Court will not disregard, in considering a motion for injunction, a plaintiff's rights because the infringement is small, nor will it consider the public benefit that would accrue from the act sought to be restrained as of paramount importance. Brooks v. The Queen, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 100, 110; 5 A.L.T., 199.

II. IN WHAT CASES GRANTED.

Voluntary Settlement—Insolvency—Action at Law by Trustees.]—X. executed a voluntary settlement of his property upon trustees in favour of certain beneficiaries. In about two years after this his estate was sequestrated and S. appointed official assignee. The trustees brought an action to recover certain dividends received by the assignee from mining shares, part of the insolvent's property. A bill was filed by S. against trustees, to set aside the settlement as fraudulent, and to restrain the action. On motion for injunction, injunction ordered, it appearing that the value of the shares was small in comparison with the rest of the settled property. Note.—A consent decree was afterwards made, setting aside the settlement. Shaw v. Patterson, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 161.

Conflicting Evidence.]—Where, on a motion for an injunction to restrain proceedings at law upon a guarantee, the plaintiff alleged that the guarantee had been obtained by fraud, and the defendant denied any fraud, and the conflict of evidence was such, that even if the suit in equity were proceeded with, the main question would have had to be sent for trial to a jury, and the question could as well be tried in the common law action in the first instance, the injunction was refused. Clarence v. The London and Australian Agency Corporation, 1 A.J.R., 4.

Mortgage—Sale of Equity of Redemption—Action for Balance of Mortgage Money.]—S. mortgaged to a Mrs. Sawyers certain land, and sold the equity of redemption to H. Shortly afterwards Mrs. Sawyers renewed the mortgage. It was not paid off, and the property was sold by the trustees of Mrs. Sawyers' will for less than the mortgage debt. The trustees brought an action at law against S. to recover the amount of arrears. On a bill for an injunction to restrain the action at law, interim injunction granted. Skinner v. Gilmour, 3 A.J.R., 15.

To Stay Ejectment by Mortgagee after Death of Mortgagor—Mortgagor having Conveyed to Plaintiff in Trust for Himself for Life, Remainder in Trust for X.]—C. conveyed land to D. in trust for himself for life, remainder in trust for X. Six years afterwards C. mortgaged to the defendant bank. C. died intestate, owing a large sum for principal and interest. The bank served notice of sale on X., but not on D. The bank sold to T. and obtained judgment against X. in an action of ejectment. D. brought a bill to restrain execution of this judgment, alleging that the sale was collusive, T. being the bank's agent. The bank denied T.'s agency, and that the sale was collusive; and the Court believing it, refused a motion for injunction. Daley v. The Land Mortgage Bank, 3 A.J.R. 71.

Ejectment — Judgment On — Execution for Costs.]—A., the defendant in an action for ejectment, not having the legal estate, defended the action, and the plaintiff (B.) obtained a judgment against him. On injunction motion by A. against B., seeking to restrain execution for costs of action, and to restrain B. from taking possession under his judgment, Held that A. not having the legal estate was not bound to defend the action, and the injunction was refused as to the former part, but injunction granted as to latter on A. giving security for the mesne rents from the date of the judgment in ejectment. Foley v. Samuels, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 72.

To Restrain Ejectment.]—Murphy v. Wadick. See post column 566.

Cross Injunction—In Equity and at Law.]—Plaintiffs since the filing of their bill had obtained an injunction to stay execution in an action of ejectment brought against them by the defendant. Defendant then brought an action against them in respect of trespass. An equitable plea, put in by the plaintiffs, was struck out, and the defendant obtained an interim injunction restraining the plaintiffs from mining pending the action. The plaintiffs then applied for an injunction to restrain the defendant from proceeding with his action of trespass. The Court granted the injunction, so far as to restrain the defendant (plaintiff-at-law) from proceeding to trial of his action at law until further notice, without prejudice to his enjoying the injunction he had obtained at law, as if the order of the Court of Equity had not been made. Australasian G. M. Coy. v. M'Culloch, 4 A.J.R., 32.

To Restrain Execution—Execution Against Company where all the Directors had not Consented to Judgment.]—Several of the directors of a company commenced an action against it to recover certain moneys. The writ was issued on the 10th of June, and on the same day some of the directors consented to judgment being signed against the company for the amount claimed by them. There was a meeting of directors on 10th of June, but nothing was said about the issuing of the writ or signing of judgment to the other director, who was present. Upon this being brought to his knowledge he moved for an injunction to restrain execution, alleging that he was ignorant of the action being commenced, was no party to signing judgment, that the debt was less than the amount claimed, and the company's assets now exceeded its liabilities, and that the action was collusive, and a fraud on the shareholders. Injunction to restrain execution granted. Robinson v. The Melbourne Newspaper Company, 4 A.J.R., 66.

To Restrain Compulsory Sequestration.]—Although it might be disreputable to sequestrate a person's estate in order to prevent him urging his claims, there is nothing to justify the interference of a Court of Equity.—Per Molesworth, J. Merry v. Hawthorn, N.C., 40.

(2) Covenants and Agreements.

In Aid of Specific Performance.]—M. purchased from H., a tenant of defendant, the short unexpired term of his tenancy of a public-house, relying upon a verbal agreement between M. and defendant that defendant would grant M. a lease of the premises for five years from the expiration of the old lease. M. entered into possession and paid rent as under the old lease, and during the currency of the old lease, submitted for four days to the inconvenience of allowing defendant's workmen to enter and effect repairs. At the expiration of the old lease, defendant demanded possession, and being refused, served a notice of his intention to proceed to recover possession under sect. 90 of the "Landlord and Tenant Statute 1864." M. thereupon filed his bill for specific performance of the alleged agreement, and for an injunction to restrain the proceedings for the recovery of possession. Upon motion the injunction was granted, upon an undertaking by M. to observe the terms and covenants of the existing lease, to keep up the license, and to assign if ordered by the Court. Rents to be paid without prejudice to rights, and receipt of rents not to create a tenancy from year to year. Murphy v. Wadick, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 224.

Removal of Bricks from Infant's Land — Digging for Clay.]—Motion for injunction to restrain removal of bricks from infant's land and to restrain digging for clay. A writ of ejectment had been served on the defendant at the plaintiff's suit. Held that the Court will not grant an injunction to prevent removal of bricks already made, or those in course of being made, the clay for which had been severed before notice of the motion, as the bill did not allege any insolvency; but as to digging for clay, as the application was made to protect property pending litigation, and was not properly for protection against waste or trespass, an injunction would be granted to restrain digging for clay. Sutliff v. Jones, 2 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 32.

To Prevent Consequential Damages.]—Consequential damages do not constitute a case for the interference of a Court of Equity. Fisher v. Jacomb, 1 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 91.

To Restrain Sale of Goods Seized.]—A bill is not sustainable for an injunction to restrain an official assignee from selling goods seized, he alleging them to be the property of the insolvent. Ibid.

Interim Injunction for Protecting Property Pending Action — Digging for Clay.]—Where a writ of ejectment had been served on behalf of an infant, and the infant brought a suit to restrain digging for clay on his land for the purpose of making bricks, the Court granted an injunction to protect the property pending the ejectment action. Sutliff v. Jones, 2 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 32. See S.C. ante column 566.

Interlocutory Injunction — Covenant to Account.]—If there is no allegation of the defendant's insolvency the Court will not in a suit where the question between the parties is one of account, interfere by way of interlocutory injunction. Aarons v. Lewis, 3 V.L R. (E.,) 79.

To Restrain Trustees of a Creditor's Deed from Disposing of Property Pending an Action—Suit by Non-Executing Creditors.]—Per Molesworth, J.: —"There is no equity for a person having a demand against another and bringing an action in respect of it to prevent during the pendency of the action the proper disposal of the property in order that something may be left to levy upon at the close of the action." Lord v. Hewitt, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 108.

For facts see S.C. under PRACTICE—In Equity —Demurrer.

Excavating for Brickmaking—Erection of a Fence.]—An obstruction of a street by excavating for brickmaking was proved as to a part of the street over which the plaintiff was held not entitled to a right-of-way, but an obstruction by a fence was proved as to a part of the same street over which the plaintiff was held entitled to a right-of-way. Held that excavation was a proper subject for injunction, but that obstructing by a fence was not, and bill to restrain excavation and obstruction in the whole of the street dismissed with costs. Blyth v. Parlon, 2 V.R. (E.,) 111; 2 A.J.R., 75.

Owners of Property Restraining Removal of Machinery by Occupant.]—On a motion for injunction by owners of property to restrain the removal of machinery, it appeared that T. & Co. were occupiers, and on their becoming insolvent their assignee transferred their interest to defendant. Held that it was doubtful whether plaintiffs could complain of removal of machinery, and if they could they must avail themselves of their remedy at law. Injunction refused. Dickson v. Cane, 3 A.J.R., 114.

In Action at Law after Refusal in Equity.] — An injunction had been refused in the equity side of the Court, and the plaintiff had appealed to the Full Court. While the appeal was still pending plaintiffs brought an action for trespass against the defendants, and applied to the Court in its common law jurisdiction for an injunction to restrain the defendants from mining on the land. The Court granted the injunction, pending the appeal in the Equity suit, the injunction to be dissolved in the event of the appeal being dismissed. Alma Consols Coy. v. Alma Extended Coy., 4 A.J.R., 163.

Mining under Streets—Damage not clearly shown to be caused by.]—Where defendants had been carrying on mining operations under the streets of a municipality, and the surface of those streets had subsided, and application had been made to the defendants by the municipal surveyor to be permitted to inspect the workings, which they had refused, on bill by the municipality for an injunction and inspection, Held that the facts not clearly showing that the subsidence was due to the mining operations of defendants the plaintiffs were not entitled to an injunction, but order for inspection made. Mayor, &c., of Ballarat East v. Victoria United G. M. Coy., 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 10.

Irreparable Injury.]—Damage of undefined extent to public streets, imposing an unlimited liability for repairs, will constitute irreparable injury, to restrain which an injunction may be granted. Ibid; and see under MINING.

Injunction—Sale of Ale—Misrepresentation.]—Where from evidence upon affidavits in support of motion for injunction it appeared that defendant habitually sold at the bar of his public-house ale of an inferior quality to that of plaintiff's manufacture but as plaintiff's ale, but did nothing to invite customers by announcements that he sold plaintiff's ale, or by labels or marks described his ale as plaintiff's ale, an interim injunction ordered. But upon the hearing, no other evidence having been adduced, bill dismissed, the Court being unable to say whether such sales were habitual or were directed by defendant, but thinking that defendant had not been sufficiently careful in preventing mistakes. Degraves v. Whiteman, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 304; 1 A.L.T., 18, 90.

Partnership.] — Defendants had improperly excluded the plaintiff from participating in winding up a partnership, and had issued a circular stating the dissolution and that they intended to carry on the business, and the plaintiff moved for an injunction to restrain them. Injunction granted, but owing to a compromise being contemplated, no special order was made as to the date when it should issue. Boyle v. Willis, 1 A.L.T., 189.

And see S.C. under PARTNERSHIP.

To Restrain Claiming Exclusive Right to a Picture, the Joint Property of Two.]—The plaintiff contributed information and notes, by aid of which the defendant was enabled to paint a picture, in which they were to have a joint property. The defendant claimed the picture as his own, and exhibited it as such. Injunction granted to restrain him. Semble, the specific performance of such an agreement would not have been decreed. Mitchell v. Brown, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 168; 2 A.L.T., 67.

III. PRACTICE RELATING TO.

Cause Directed to Stand Over — Nuisance—Steam Hammer — Conflicting Evidence.]—On a bill for an injunction to restrain an alleged nuisance caused by defendant's steam hammer, the evidence being very conflicting, the Court at the hearing directed the cause to stand over for six months, with liberty to bring an action at law. Lockhead v. Noble, 3 V.L.R. (Eq.,) 131.

See S.P. Cooper v. Dangerfield, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 29, post under NUISANCE—Injunction.

Motion for Injunction—Pendency of a Demurrer by some of Defendants—Position of Non-Demurring Defendants.]—Motion for injunction restraining the transfer of shares in a company by certain non-demurring defendants during the pendency of an appeal on a demurrer, an objection was taken. Held that this motion was an independent motion against the non-demurring defendants only and could not affect the demurring defendants, and vice versa, the allowance of demurrer of the demurring defendants would not affect plaintiff's rights, as against these non-demurring defendants. Objection overruled. Learmonth v. Bailey, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 122.

For facts see S.C. PRINCIPAL AND AGENT.

Motion for After Decree.]—After decree, the Court refused to entertain a motion, in the same suit by defendants, for an injunction to restrain the plaintiffs (assignees of an insolvent), from selling the real estate recovered by them in the suit, before realising all the personal assets of the insolvent. Goodman v. Boulton, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 86, 101.

Service of Notice of Motion.]—Service at defendant's residence before answer of notice of motion for an injunction is sufficient, and such service need not be personal. White v. Mayor, 4 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 43.

When Service of Notice of Motion for should be Made.]—Service of a notice of motion for injunction before service of the bill is irregular. Injunction on such service of notice granted ex parte and plaintiff ordered to pay costs of motion for motion on notice as an abandoned motion. Lumsden v. Dullard, 2 V.R. (E.,) 108.

Where an injunction is moved for upon notice, the Court will not grant a postponement on application of the defendant except when special reasons are alleged, as injury to the defendants or the like. Victoria United Mining Coy. v. Prince of Wales Coy., 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 92.

Cross-Injunction—When Granted.—In granting an interlocutory injunction to restrain the defendants from mining on ground in dispute, the Full Court reversing Molesworth, J., and thinking that the circumstances required it, granted a cross-injunction against the plaintiffs, though their title might have been endangered by not working. Mulcahy v. The Walhalla Gold Mining Coy., 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 103.

Ex parte Injunction.]—A bill by certain shareholders of a company against the managing body of the company, praying an injunction to restrain the company from carrying out an agreement which the bill alleged to be repugnant to the rules of the company, and ultra vires, and invalid and prejudicial to the shareholders of the company, was answered; but the answer did not meet the allegation that the agreement was ultra vires and prejudicial, and an ex parte injunction was granted. Held that this was sufficient to sustain the injunction till the hearing, provided no objection as to misjoinder, want of parties, or other insuperable irregularity lay in the way. Lee v. Robertson, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 374, 386.

Answering Defendants Moving for Dissolution of ex parte Injunction before All have Answered.] An objection that defendants who have answered cannot move to dissolve an ex parte injunction as against themselves till all the other defendants have answered will not be entertained as a preliminary objection to a motion for dissolution by the defendants who have answered; but the Court will consider upon the merits whether the injunction can with justice be dissolved as to some of the defendants until the others have answered. Evans v. Guthridge, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 2, 28.

Ex parte Injunction—Motion to Continue.]—Per Molesworth, J.:—Although the Court will on motion to dissolve ex parte injunctions punish want of candour in obtaining them, it will not so punish persons having obtained injunction for a time determined when applying, on notice, for a continuance of such injunctions. Broadbent v. Marshall, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 115, 121.

Ex parte Injunctions—Motion for Obtaining.] —Per Molesworth, J.:—The rule that all material facts must be brought forward on obtaining an ex parte injunction is a useful one; but care must be taken not to carry it too far, by which publicity would be produced. Lavezzolo v. The Mayor, &c., of Daylesford, 1 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 113, 118.

Interpleader Suit—Service of Bill.]—Before an ex parte injunction will be granted in an interpleader suit service of the bill must be effected on the plaintiff at law whose action is sought to be restrained. Spence v. Coker, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 33.

Practice—Application to Dissolve an Injunction—Questions of Fact and Law to be Tried—"Transfer of Land Statute."]—W., the manager and a director of the A. G.M. Coy. sued it for a debt not due, fraudulently prevented any defence to the action, and obtained judgment. The property of the company was sold under execution at a sheriff's sale, at which W. became the purchaser. This property comprised, inter alia, a mining lease registered under the provisions of Act No. 301 ("Transfer of Land Statute"). W. and others were subsequently convicted of a fraudulent conspiracy to defraud the company. The lease was transferred to W. on the 20th September, 1871, and W. on the same day transferred it to I. D., one of the shareholders in the company, on behalf of himself and other shareholders, brought a bill against W., I., and other defendants, charging that I. paid no consideration for the transfer, and that he purchased with notice of W.'s fraud, and seeking to set aside the sale and I.'s title. An injunction was granted restraining I. from transferring or dealing with the lease. On motion to dissolve, Held that there was a question of fact to be tried in the suit as to the extent of I.'s knowledge of W.'s dealings, and questions of law as to meaning of word "fraud" in Sec. 50 of Act No. 301, and further whether dealings completed with a person before he becomes proprietor under the Act can be protected by the machinery of the Act as to his vendee by making him a proprietor, and at the same instant a transferor; and that the immense power the Act gives to a proprietor of completely barring clear equities presents a reason for Courts of Equity readily interfering by injunction. Motion refused. Davis v. Wekey, 3 V.R. (E.,) 1; 3 A.J.R., 1.

Notice of Motion to Dissolve an Injunction.]—A notice of motion to dissolve an injunction should be directed not only against the writ of injunction, but also against the order of the Court under which the writ was issued. Murphy v. Martin, 1 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 26, 29.

Exparte Injunction — Discharge — Irreparable Injury not Proved.]—In a common law action, if an exparte injunction be obtained under Sec. 242 of the "Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," without a full and correct statement of facts, which show a probability of irreparable damage, such injunction will be set aside. Kidd v. Chibnall, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 488.

Effect of Full Court Granting an Interlocutory Injunction.]—Where the Full Court has overruled a demurrer, and granted an interlocutory injunction in accordance with the relief sought, the Primary Judge has only to do perpetually what the Full Court has done temporarily. Perpetual injunction granted. Davis v. The Queen, 1 V.R. (E.,) 33; 1 A.J.R., 18, 22.

Parties.]—Parties named in an injunction, but not served with the notice of motion to attach for contempt by breach, are not entitled to appear to say that they have not been served. Lane v. Hannah, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 66, 73.

Contempt—Motion to Commit—Amendment.]—On contempt of an order by consent to restrain the defendant from an act, and not providing that a writ of injunction under seal shall issue, a motion to commit "for breach of the injunction issued in this case under the seal of this honourable Court" is wrong in form; but may be amended by substituting for the words "injunction issued in this cause, under the seal of this honourable Court," the words "Order of this Court." Ibid.

Attachment for Breach of Injunction.]—An injunction was granted restraining defendants from mining "under the land comprised in the plaintiff's license." The parcels described the boundary of the land in one direction as "the southern line of the Glenlyon road" and gave metes and bounds, which were inaccurate. On motion for attachment for going beyond the road as actually fenced, Held per Molesworth, J., that any defect in the licensor's title might have been shown on motion for injunction, but not in this motion; that the road meant the road as actually made, and not as on the plans, and that they were liable although the road as fenced was not in accordance with the Government plan, and did not coincide with the measurements, and attachment granted. Held by Full Court, that the plaintiffs were bound to give the best and most accurate description of the land as to which they sought an injunction; that if an injunction order admitted of two constructions the defendants might very properly assume the responsibility of putting their own construction on it. Attachment order set aside. Semble, where an attachment order directs certain sums to be paid within fourteen days, and orders writ to lie in office for fourteen days, it should be read in the alternative. Astley United G. M. Coy. v. Cosmopolitan G. M. Coy., 4 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 96, 105, 117.

Breach of Injunction—Inconvenience no Excuse for.]—The fact that a complete and literal compliance with an injunction would altogether stop the defendants from working, is not an excuse from such compliance; a grave inconvenience of such a kind is a proper ground for moving the Court to modify such injunction; and such a motion may be made by a defendant in contempt for disobedience. Bonshaw Freehold G. M. Coy. v. Prince of Wales Coy., 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 140.

Breach—How Punished.]—Upon an injunction restraining a company from discharging drainage over plaintiffs' land, a bona fide attempt by defendants to carry such drainage over the land under a bargain with plaintiff's tenant of land, by means of wooden channel constructed upon it, so as to do no injury to the soil, though a breach of the injunction, was not visited by the Court with sequestration of the defendants property, but with the costs of an application for such sequestration. Ibid.

Liability to Attachment for Breach—To Whom it Passes.]—Where an injunction is granted against one person and his servants, and that person's interest passes to another, the liability to attachment for breach of the injunction does not pass to that other until he is made a party to the bill, and a new injunction is issued against him. Attorney-General v. Rogers, 1 V.R. (E.,) 132, 138; 1 A.J.R., 120, 149.

Appeal from Interim Injunction — When Granted.]—Under ordinary circumstances the Full Court will decline to interfere with an interim injunction granted by the Primary Judge, his Court being the proper tribunal to determine whether the subject matter of the trial should be protected till the hearing. But where the bill is demurrable, the appeal will be allowed. Band of Hope and Albion Consols v. St. George and Band of Hope United Coy., 1 V.R. (E.,) 183; 1 A.J.R., 174; 2 A.J.R., 127.

Injunction Granted Pending Demurrer—Appeal.]—An injunction ought not to be granted pending the reservation of the decision of the Court upon a demurrer, putting in issue the right of the plaintiff to relief, because such reservation casts a doubt upon the plaintiff's equity. If an injunction be granted in such circumstances by the Primary Judge, the Full Court will entertain an appeal from such Court, even after the injunction has been dissolved by a judgment on the demurrer. Attorney-General v. Scholes, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 164.

Order Protecting Appellant.]—Upon an appeal by a defendant from an interlocutory injunction the Full Court will not make an order, if the appeal is dismissed, protecting the appellant from any loss to which he would be subjected should the plaintiff not ultimately succeed in the suit. Wolfe v. Hart, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 125, 137.

Delay.]—Where, in a trespass action, an injunction had been granted on 6th August, and no steps had since been taken the Court on 9th December dissolved the injunction. Campbell v. Ah Chong, N.C., 68.

Act No. 274, Secs. 240, 242—Claim for on Writ of Summons.]—An order had been made for an injunction, and the affidavit supporting the application did not state that a claim for an injunction was, under the provisions of Act No. 274, sec. 240, endorsed on the writ of summons. Rule absolute to discharge the order. Fowler v. Mackenzie, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 231.

Costs—Of Injunction motion made Costs in the Cause.]—Costs of an injunction motion were reserved by the Primary Judge. On appeal such costs were made costs in the cause, on the ground that the interval between the sittings of the Appeal Court was too long for that Court to deal with them, and such Court ought not to depute to the Primary Judge the carrying out of its opinion. Band of Hope and Albion Consols Coy. v. All Saints Coy., 2 V.R. (E.,) 83, 87; 2 A.J.R., 37, 49.

Costs—Injunction Restraining Action of Ejectment—Answer Admitting Case.]—A bill alleged the grant of a lease of certain premises to defendant, a partnership between plaintiff and defendant, which was dissolved on the terms of plaintiff taking over the assets, including the lease, and that an action of ejectment was brought by defendant against plaintiff as to the premises, and the bill prayed for an injunction restraining the action of ejectment. Defendant, in his answer, admitted that the action was commenced under a misapprehension. Perpetual injunction granted, and defendant ordered to pay costs of suit, it appearing that suit had been defended solely on a question of costs. Miller v. Wood, 3 A.J.R., 13.

Costs—Defendants doing Act Sought to be Enjoined—Motion Dismissed on Technical Objection.]—In a motion for an order restraining defendant from taking an infant plaintiff out of jurisdiction, where the defendant had during the pendency of the motion taken the infant plaintiff to New Zealand, and there was a fatal technical objection to the motion, the motion was dismissed, but without costs on account of the defendant's conduct. Smith v. Blacker, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 1.

Costs — Apportioning.] — Where a plaintiff, seeking a twofold injunction, is clearly wrong as to part of the relief sought, but entitled to the other part, he must pay the costs of the injunction motion, costs not being in such a case apportioned. Foley v. Samuels, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 72.

Costs—Of Injunction Dissolved in Part—Subsequently Made in Full.]—Where an injunction had been dissolved in part, upon the ground of suppression of material facts, and the costs were reserved, and upon the hearing the parties consented to the injunction in full, the Court left all parties to abide their own costs of the motion to dissolve. Attorney-General v. Shire of Wimmera, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 162; 1 A.L.T., 125.

Under Judicature Act—Order L. Rule 6—Undertaking as to Damages.]—An action was brought to recover damages for trespass, the defendant being a tenant to a banking company of a piece of land on which was erected a hoarding. After the determination of the tenancy the place was let to the plaintiff, who posted bills on the hoarding. Application to restrain defendant from pulling down plaintiff's posters granted, the plaintiff undertaking to pay any damages under subsequent order of the Court. Nicholson v. Roff, 6 A.L.T., 97.

INNKEEPER.

Lien—Property not Belonging to Guest—Waiver of Lien.—M., a solicitor, being indebted to an innkeeper for entertainment, left his luggage with the innkeeper including a deed, the property of the plaintiffs. A demand was made by the plaintiff, but the innkeeper G. demanded M.'s authority, and subsequently a demand was made for the whole of the luggage with M.s' authority, when G. set up certain claims on M. for promissory notes to be collected. Held that G. had a lien on the plaintiff's deed enclosed in M.'s luggage, and that the lien had not been waived by the claims set up by G. as a distinct demand was not made for plaintiff's property on the second occasion. Goodyear v. Klemm, 5 A.J.R., 136.

Lien—When Defeated.]—H. resided at an hotel for six weeks, being supplied with board and lodging during that time. He made an agreement with the hotel-keeper to pay him at the rate of £2 per week, and paid for two weeks, but at the end of the sixth week the landlord refused to supply H. any further. There was then a sum of £8 due to the hotel-keeper, who claimed a lien on H.'s goods. The Court held that there was evidence that H. was not a guest at the hotel, but merely a lodger, and that the hotel-keeper had therefore no lien. Regina v. Hinton, Ex parte M'Manus, 6 A.L.T., 12.

The effect of the "Judicature Act 1883" (No. 761) upon the practice in Insolvency is that appeals from the Insolvent Court are to be heard by the Full Court (Sec. 10) and not by the Primary Judge.

I. JURISDICTION.

Insolvency—Primary Judge.]—The jurisdiction of the Primary Judge in Insolvency is not ousted during the sittings of the Appellate Court. In re McManomonie, 1 W.W. & A'B. (I.E. & M.,) 53.

Appeal from Refusal of Certificate.]—The Insolvent Court has no jurisdiction, outside that conferred upon it by Statute, to entertain an appeal from the refusal ot an insolvent's certificate by the Commissioner. In re Bateman, 1 W.W. & A'B. (I.E. & M.,) 35.

Insolvency—13 Eliz., Cap. 5—No. 379, Secs. 6, 7.]—Under Secs. 6 and 7 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871," the Judge of a Court of Insolvency has no power to set aside a settlement as fraudulent under 13 Eliz., Cap. 5. In re Healey, 2 V.R. (I.E. & M.,) 34; 2 A.J.R., 132. Dallimore v. Oriental Bank, 5 A.J.R., 38.

Insolvency—Setting Aside Settlements—"Insolvency Statute 1871," Sec. 70.]—It is doubtful whether a Court of Insolvency has, under the "Insolvency Statute 1871," any jurisdiction to set aside a settlement as void under Sec. 70 of that Act; but if it have such jurisdiction, it must be exercised in a quasi suit to which the beneficiaries under the settlement are parties. In re Healey, 2 V.R. (I.E. & M.,) 34; 2 A.J.R., 132, and Dallimore v. Oriental Bank, 1 V.L.R., (E.,) 13, 28.

To Decide Whether a Deed of Assignment Under Act No. 273 is a Good Defence to Proceedings for Sequestration under Act No. 379.]—The question whether a deed of assignment executed under section 115 of the Act No. 273 is a good defence to proceedings under the Act No. 379, to sequestrate the estate of a debtor for not satisfying a udgment, is a question cognisable only by the Supreme Court, and it is not to be transferred to the Insolvent Court so as to give the Insolvency Judge jurisdiction to deal with a summons to dismiss a debtor's summons. In re M'Donald, 4 A.J.R., 184. Affirmed on appeal, 5 A.J.R., 42.

Issuing Fi. Fa.]—Under Act No. 379, Sec. 18, and the "Equity Practice Statute," No. 242, Sec. 7, the Court of Insolvency has jurisdiction to issue a writ of fi. fa. Slack v. Winder, 5 A.J.R., 72.

Contempt of Court—Warrant of Commitment.]—The mode provided for enforcing orders by the Court of Insolvency for contempt is the same as that possessed by the Supreme Court. It is unnecessary, therefore, that a warrant of the Court of Insolvency committing for contempt should prescribe any term of imprisonment, for if it did the powers of the Court would be interfered with. In re Slack, 2 V.R. (L.,) 64, 135.

Insolvency—Transfer of Proceedings—"Insolvency Statute 1871," Sec. 10—Costs.]—A Judge of an Insolvent Court made an order under Sec. 10 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871," at the request of a majority of creditors, transferring the proceedings to another district. Subsequently he made an ex parte order, at the request of the assignee, directing that no further action should be taken on his former order. On appeal from the second order, Held bad, on the ground that the Judge had first superseded his jurisdiction, and then had assumed jurisdiction on the second order; and order reversed, with costs against the assignee In re Cotton, 6 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 1 A.L.T., 129.

Jurisdiction of Judge as to Reviewing Order Erroneously Made Under Sec. 10 of Act No. 379.]—Where an order under Sec. 10 has been erroneously made, it is open to review by the Judge who made it. In re Clarton, 5 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 47.

Act No. 379, Sec. 36—Jurisdiction of Judge of District Courts.]—The assignment of a district limits the general jurisdiction previously given to him. He has therefore jurisdiction only within the limits assigned to him, and a petition presented to a wrong Judge is therefore coram non judice. No clerk of another Court can have the jurisdiction specially conferred by Sec. 36. Regina v. Poole, 3 V.R. (L.) 181; 3 A.J.R., 79.

Act No. 379, Secs. 9, 38—Jurisdiction of Judge of District Court as to Debtor's Summons.]—Per Noel, J. Under Sec. 9 the Judge of a District Court has no jurisdiction to issue a debtor's summons outside the limits of his district. Sec. 9 limits the exercise of the general jurisdiction to the district in which he is appointed. Bank of Australasia v. Portch, 2 A.L.T., 148.

2. Of Chief Commissioners.

Discretion as to Plan of Distribution—Act No. 17.]—The plan of distribution does not come before the Commissioner under the Act judicially, and he cannot exercise any discretion as to the propriety of its items. Ex parte Bank of Australasia, in re Rutledge, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 6.

"Insolvsnt Act," 18 Vic., No. 11—Appointment of Commissioner Not Gazetted.]—F. was appointed Commissioner of Insolvent Estates in succession to W., but before his appointment had been notified in the Gazette he admitted a proof of debt. Held by Molesworth, J., and affirmed on appeal, that according to Act No. 11 F.'s appointment as soon as he was appointed vested in him full power to admit the proof, even though his appointment was not gazetted. Ex parte Rolfe & Bailey, in re Rutledge, 2 W. & W. (I.E. & M.,) 16.

Test of Jurisdiction—18 Vic. No. 11, Sec. 2.]—Section 2 of the Act gives exclusive jurisdiction to the Geelong Commissioner in cases within his district. Held, that the test of jurisdiction was the residence of the insolvent. On a motion to transfer sequestration from Chief Commissioner's Court to Geelong on ground of convenience, the creditors residing there and the insolvent's property being there, Held, that the circumstances would not give jurisdiction to remove the sequestration from the place of actual residence. In re Calhoun, 2 W. & W. (I.E. & M.,) 81.

Compare Act No. 379, Sec. 5.

Chief Commissioner — Discretion as to Indulgences—Appeal.]—The Chief Commissioner is not such an executive officer of the Court, in respect of what degree of delay and indulgence should be allowed to persons appearing before him, that his discretion may be reviewed in the same way that the discretion of the Master in Equity perhaps might. The Commissioner has judicial functions, in the exercise of which he is independent to a certain extent; and if he decides erroneously, because too hastily, an appeal is the proper remedy. Where, therefore, the commissioner received proof of a debt under circumstances amounting to a surprise upon the official assignee, admitted the debt as proved, and refused to re-open the matter, a petition by the official assignee, praying that the proof might be expunged, and a re-hearing directed, was dismissed with costs. In re Bradley, 1 W.W. & A'B. 18 Vic., No. 11—"Insolvency Statute 1865"—"Supreme Court Rules," Cap. 10, Rule 26.]—An estate of an insolvent at Ballarat was sequestrated after the passing of the "Insolvency Statute 1865," No. 273, and the Geelong Commissioner and official assignee were named in the order for sequestration. At the date of 18 Vic., No. 11, giving jurisdiction to the special Commissioner for the "Geelong Circuit District," Ballarat formed part of that district. Between this date and the passing of the "Insolvency Statute 1865," Ballarat had been withdrawn from the district by proclamation, though the Geelong Commissioner retained his jurisdiction under 18 Vic., No. 11. Held that the "Insolvency Statute 1865," where it refers to the district "forming and being the Geelong Circuit District," must be understood as referring to that district as it existed at the date of that Statute; that the Geelong Commissioner had, therefore, no jurisdiction at Ballarat; and that the order of sequestration was void, and could not be amended under Rule 26 of "Supreme Court Rules," Cap. 10, that rule being confined to cases having parties, and not extending to proceedings in rem. In re Barclay, 3 W. III. The Debtor's Summons.

(1) Who May Obtain and How Obtained.

Secured Creditor—Act No. 379, Sec. 38.]—The words in Sec. 38 "sufficient to support a petition for adjudication" are understood to apply to the amount of the debt, irrespective of the securities held by the creditor applying for the summons, and it is not necessary for a secured creditor, in order to obtain a debtor's summons, either to realise or value his securities, or to offer to give them up, or to have them valued. In re Portch, 7 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 126, 145; 3 A.L.T., 50.

Judge in Chambers—Waiver of Irregularity—No. 379, Sec. 38.]—Under Sec. 38 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871," which provides for the granting by the Court of a debtor's summons, a Judge in Chambers has no power to grant such a summons, but if a summons be granted in Chambers it is not a nullity but irregular only, and the irregularity may be waived, and a debtor who had after notice of such an irregularity proceeded with an application to dismiss the summons was held to have waived the irregularity. In re Fisher, 2 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 26; 2 A.J.R., 130.

NOTE.—As to the present jurisdiction of a Judge in Chambers, see Act No. 411. (Insolvency Amendment,) Sec. 4.

2. Form and Requisites.

"Insolvency Statute 1871," No. 379, Sec. 38—Affidavit of Debt.]—Per Judge Noel. The words in Sec. 38 referring to debtor's summons do not mean that a creditor should prove a debt by his own personal evidence. An objection that the affidavit verifying the particulars was made by a manager of the firm of creditors whilst the creditor himself had only made an affidavit as to the truth of the debt overruled. M'Donald v. Lloyd, 3 A.J.R., 43.

Service.]—Service of a summons for debt was made at a house alleged to be the last known place of abode of the defendant; but it appeared that the complainant, who served the summons, knew that the defendant was not then living at the house, but was in gaol. Held, insufficient service. Regina v. Foster, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 8.

What is Sufficient Service.]—Service of a compared copy of a duplicate debtor's summons is sufficient service upon which to found a rule for sequestration. Re Lyon, 4 A.J.R., 13.

Service.]—No precise rule can be laid down for the service of a debtor's summons. If it be effected by service of a copy the person who is served should be afforded a reasonable time to read the copy and demand to see the original. In re Clarton, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 84.

Service.]—A debtor's summons was served upon a debtor by delivering a copy and showing the original, the person serving keeping the original summons in his possession, and not lodging it according to Insolvency Rules, Rule 14. Held that this was no answer to the order nisi for sequestration for not paying, &c., and that such service was good. In re Crisp, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 1.

Act No. 379, Secs. 37, Sub-sec. 6, 47—Evidence of Service of Debtor's Summons.]—Upon an order nisi for sequestration based upon neglecting to pay a debtor's summons, the only evidence of service of the summons was an order of a District Court Judge refusing an application by the debtor to dismiss the summons, and the debtor's affidavit filed and used on the occasion. Held that this was not sufficient evidence of service within the Act. In re Graham, 4 A.L.T., 168.

Remedy in Respect of Grievance in Connection With Service.]—Where a person is aggrieved with a decision of the Judge of the Court of Insolvency as to the service of a copy of a debtor's summons being sufficient, his remedy is by appeal and not prohibition. Ex parte M. J. Levy, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 271.

Staying Proceedings—When Security Required—"Insolvency Statute, 1871," Sec. 38.]—A motion was made to dismiss a debtor's summons on the ground that no debt was owing, because the alleged debtor was a partner in Mauritius of a firm, which had become insolvent, of which the alleged creditor was aware, and had received a dividend on the estate. The Court (Noel, J.,) held that the question was one which should be sent to the Supreme Court for trial, and directed proceedings on the summons to be stayed under Sec. 38 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871," on the debtor giving security, holding that, as the probability of the debtor's succeeding did not seem so great as that of the creditors' succeeding, it was a proper case for security. De Beer v. Desmazures, 1 A.L.T., 120.

Action Pending—How Far a Bar to Proceedings.]—Per Noel, J.—An action pending between the insolvent as plaintiff and the summoning creditor is no ground for setting aside a debtor's summons. There is no irregularity in issuing a summons to an alleged debtor whose defence would not avail to stay proceedings or to lead to a dismissal. Bank of Australasia v. Portch, 2 A.L.T., 148.

Time Within Which Application to Dismiss Should be Made.]—Per Noel, J.—The time within which a debtor may avail himself of the provision of Sec. 38 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871," enabling him to apply to the Court to dismiss a debtor's summons, is fourteen days from the service thereof. Re Counihan, 4 A.L.T., 83.

Grounds for Setting Aside Summons.]—W., a solicitor, had taken out a debtor's summons against F. for money owing on a judgment for costs. F. moved to set aside the summons on the ground that during the progress of the suit in which the costs were incurred moneys had come to W. with which he neglected to credit F. Held that the Court could not go behind the judgment, and application refused. Woolcott v. Farrell, 3 A.J.R., 63.

Motion to Set Aside.]—A motion to set aside a debtor's summons will not be allowed where the only questions are as to the sufficiency of the facts upon which it was issued, and as to service being or not being effected upon the debtor. Re Lyon, 4 A.J.R., 13.

No objection can be taken that the materials on which the Judge acted were insufficient. Ibid.

Grounds for Setting Aside.]—It is a matter entirely for the discretion of the Judge of the Insolvent Court who granted the summons to say whether efforts had been made to obtain payment of the debt. Having done that and issued the summons the Judge is so far functus officii, and as the summons itself is a preliminary to further inquiries, the absence of reasonable efforts is not a ground for setting it aside. Ibid.

Followed in re Clarton, 5 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 47.

Application to Dismiss—Dismissal of Application—Jurisdiction.]—On an application to dismiss a debtor's summons, an order was made by the Insolvent Court directing the debtor to give security; and, if such security were given, directing a stay of proceedings on the summons; but no provision was made in the event of no security being given, nor were further directions or costs reserved. No security was given within the time limited, and the creditor, on notice to the debtor, obtained an order dismissing the application to dismiss. On appeal by the debtor, Held that, though it would have been well if some provision had been made for the event of no security being given, and if further directions or costs had been reserved, yet the Court had jurisdiction to make the order for dismissal, and appeal dismissed. In re Fisher, 2 V.R. (I.E. & M.,) 26; 2 A.J.R., 130.

Jurisdiction of District Court Judge.]—A District Court Judge has no jurisdiction to issue a debtor's summons out of his own district. Bank of Australasia v. Portch. See ante column 579.

No Original Summons Lodged in Insolvent Court.]—A debtor's summons was set aside by a Judge of an Insolvent Court, on an application of the debtor, made more than fourteen days after the summons was procured, on the ground that no original summons had been lodged in the Court of Insolvency according to the rules. On appeal, Held that it was rightly dismissed. Semble, that the summons was voidable only, not void. In re Lawler, 4 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 8.

What May be Considered on Hearing of Debtor's Summons.] — The only inquiry open is the existence of the debt; whether the sufficiency of the debt is an act of insolvency or not is to be heard at the hearing of the order nisi. In re M'Donald, 4 A.J.R., 184; 5 A.J.R., 42.

(4) Act of Insolvency on Failure to Pay Secure or Compound for Debt.

Act No. 379, Secs. 5, 37, Sub-sec. 6—"Insolvency Rules," 157, 158—Computation of Time—Onus of Proof.]—Rule 158 does not apply to the computation of time prescribed in Sec. 37, Sub-sec. 6, and therefore where an order nisi or sequestration was obtained more than fourteen days after the service of summons, but less than fourteen days, excluding two Sundays and three holidays, which occurred in the interval, the order nisi was made absolute. The onus of proving payment, security or composition for the debt lies on the insolvent; the petitioner has not to prove a negative. In re Crisp, 5 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 1.

IV. The Petitioning Creditor and His Debt.

(1) Who May Petition.

Corporation Petitioning—Affidavit of Truth of Debt—"Insolvency Statute 1865," Secs. 14, 15, and 16.] — An incorporated banking company petitioning for sequestration of the estate of a debtor presented an affidavit made by the assistant manager of the bank of the truth of their debt. Held, per Molesworth, J., that an incorporated company being unable literally to comply with Secs. 14, 15, and 16 of the "Insolvency Statute 1865," which require an affidavit by the petitioning creditor of the truth of his debt, could not be a petitioning creditor for compulsory sequestration, and that there is nothing in the Act otherwise showing an intention that corporations should be petitioning creditors. Held, on appeal, that the sections of the Act in this respect were directory only; that the Judge might exercise his discretion as to whether he should accept the affidavit or not, and that having exercised his discretion the Full Court would not disturb such exercise. In re Lecky, 3 W. W. & A'B. (I.E. & M.,) 42.

Note.—Sec. 22 of Act No. 379, authorises the acts of an agent of any creditor whether corporate or not.

Who May Present Petition—Secured Creditor.]—A secured creditor, who denies that he is secured, cannot petition for sequestration. Before petitioning, a secured creditor must give up his security at the price he puts upon it. Re M'Namara, 10 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 84; 6 A.L.T., 112.

And see cases post under Act of Insolvency—Who May Take Advantage of.

(2) The Debt—Its Nature and Amount.

Act No. 379, Sec. 37.]—A debt due at the time (i.e., of the act of insolvency) might be assigned afterwards to petitioning creditors, so as to form a good petitioning creditor's debt. In re H. S. Smith, 3 A.J.R., 18.

As to Debt on Reviving Order of Sequestration.]—See Ex parte Whits, and in re Butchart, post under Sequestration—Reviving.

Debt of Firm.]—A debt of a firm (i.e., an acceptance given by the firm to a creditor) is a good petitioning creditor's debt as against the separate estate of a partner. In re Gardiner, 4 A.J.R., 6.

Partnership as to Goods to be Remitted by Insolvent Abroad to Other Partner.]—Adolphe O. was a partner in a firm, who was resident in Paris, and sent goods to Melbourne to be sold by the the other member, Adolphus O., resident in Melbourne. Adolphus had purchased goods in Melbourne which were not paid for, and this debt was the debt on which the creditors petitioned. Held by Molesworth, J., that by the deed of partnership Adolphus was limited only to selling goods purchased by Adolphe, and that he had no power to purchase the goods, and sequestration refused. Held, on appeal, that there was evidence of Adolphe having ratified Adolphus' acts, as shewn by H., the attorney sent out by Adolphe to wind up the business, accepting these goods, and that there was a good creditor's debt. In re Adolphe Oppenheimer, 3 A.J.R., 114, 131.

Partnership — Absent Partner Complaining of Dealings Outside Scope of Authority, but Accepting Accounts Based on Them.] —Where Adolphe had complained of the dealings of Adolphus with respect to dealings in goods purchased by Adolphus in Victoria, but accepted what was done so far as to allow the accounts to be settled on the purchases of goods here, and treated the stock purchased as partnership stock, taking the profits of any transaction, Held that a debt incurred in such dealings was as against the firm a good petitioning creditor's debt. In re Oppenheimer and Co., 3 A.J.R., 128.

Interest on — Judgment Debt — Act No. 379, Sec. 37.]—Interest may be included in the debt, and where a Supreme Court judgment debt was at one time less than £50, but the accumulations of interest brought it above that value, it was held to be a good petitioning creditor's debt. In re Wilson, 3 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 95.

County Court Judgmont]—If a judgment in the County Court, although originally not for debt but only for damages, has been sued upon in the Supreme Court and execution issued, it is a good debt within Sec. 37; but a proceeding to obtain execution on a judgment recovered in the County Court on a proceeding for trespass, such judgment having been transferred to the Supreme Court under Sec. 93 of Act No. 345, is not a good debt within Sec. 37. In re Kellacky, ibid., p. 96.

Loan to Partner.]—Money lent to a partner under the "Partnership Act," No. 179, does not constitute a good petitioning creditor's debt. In re Butchart, 2 W. W. & A'B. (I.E. & M.,) 8.

Payment by Sureties.]—A., with two others, became sureties to an insolvent in a joint and several bond, and before the bond was enforced received as security a second mortgage over insolvent's real estate already over mortgaged. A. was sued upon the bond, and paid £200, and valued the security at nothing, and offered to give it up. Held that he was entitled so to value it, and that payment made by him constituted a good petitioning creditor's debt within Sec. 37. In re Inglis, 3 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 100.

Guarantee to Pay a Bill of Costs—No Signed Bill —"Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," Sec. 387.]—A guarantee to pay a third person's bill of costs for over £50 is a good petitioning creditor's debt, although no signed bill has been delivered in accordance with Sec. 387 of the "Common Law Procedure Statute 1865." In re Lawler, 4 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 8.

Act No. 379, Secs. 37, 75, 112—Judgment Debt—Creditor Recovering Judgment]—A creditor petitioned in respect of a judgment debt recovered in an action at law. Held, reversing Molesworth, J., that a judgment creditor is a creditor within Sec. 37, no matter what the cause of action may be, the instant he obtains a judgment, and he is a creditor on a judgment debt then due and owing to him, which would constitute a sufficient petitioning creditor's debt; that it is immaterial whether such judgment is recovered on contract or in tort; that the creditor recovering the judgment must be the same person as the person instituting the proceedings upon which it is recovered. In re Allen, 5 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 25.

Assignment of Debt—Non-joinder of Cestuisque trust.]—Upon an order nisi for sequestration, the act of insolvency alleged was failing to satisfy a judgment obtained by a petitioning creditor. It appeared that the petitioning creditor had assigned the judgment to a bank at a valuation to be agreed upon. Held, that the petitioning creditor had a beneficial interest, being entitled to payment of the valuation sufficient to constitute the judgment a good petitioning creditor's debt, and that it was not necessary to join the bank as beneficial owner with the creditor as trustee for it. In re Dwyer, 5 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 98; 1 A.L.T., 92.

Endorsee of Bill of Exchange Obtaining Judgment on it.]—A creditor who is the holder and endorsee of an overdue bill of exchange at the time of a meeting of creditors at which an act of insolvency is committed, and who subsequently signs judgment in an action on the bill may present a petition. In re John Smith, 7 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 4; 2 A.L.T., 116.

Act No. 379, Sec. 37, Sub-sec. 6—Defendant's Costs—Petitioning Creditor's Debt.]—An insolvent had brought an action in the Supreme Court against the petitioning creditor in which a verdict was returned for the defendant. Held, that the defendant's costs constituted a good petitioning creditor's debt, and the failure to satisfy the debtor's summons founded on that debt was an act of insolvency within Sec. 37, Sub-sec. 6. In re Rangan, 7 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 124.

V. The Act of Insolvency.

Act No. 379, Sec. 37, Sub-sec. 1—Bill of Sale which Debtor was Fraudulently Induced to Execute.] —B. requested L. to advance him money wherewith to pay debts that he owed, and agreed to give him a bill of sale over his stock-in-trade. L. consulted his solicitor, who advised him not to make the advance, owing to rumours of B.'s insolvency. L. then consulted a creditor of B., and in consequence of what passed between them, L. induced B. to execute the bill of sale, but did not advance any money, and had no intention of doing so. The creditor then petitioned the Court to sequestrate B.'s estate upon the ground that he had assigned all his property to L. Held, that B. having been fraudulently induced to sign the bill of sale, that it was a nullity, and the order for sequestration was discharged, although B. had intended to commit an act of insolvency. Re Bankier, 4 A.J.R., 90.

Act No. 379, Sec. 37, Sub-sec. 1.]—It is necessary, in order to constitute an assignment by deed of an insolvent's property upon trust for creditors an act of insolvency, that it should be for the benefit of the creditors generally, and not merely for benefit of scheduled creditors. In re Derham, 1 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 2.

Sec. 37, Sub-secs. 1 & 10.]—And even where the intention was to include all creditors, but some were alleged to have been omitted from the schedule by mistake, held not to constitute an act of insolvency under Sec. 37, Sub-sec. 1, though it might under Sub-sec. 10. In re Haslam, 3 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 10.

And see Port v. London Chartered Bank, 1 V.R. (L.,) 162, post under sub-heading Composition Deeds, as to when a deed is for the benefit of creditors.

Act No. 379, Sec. 37, Sub-secs. 1, 2, and 10, Sec. 71—Assignment for Benefit of Scheduled Creditors and Those of Whom Trustes Approved.] — An assignment in trust for scheduled creditors, and for those whose claims the trustees approved of is not an act of insolvency under Sec. 37, Sub-sec. 1. Such a deed is unfair to creditors, but is not prima facie an act of insolvency under the combined effects of Sec. 37, Sub-Sec. 2 and 10, and Sec. 71. To constitute it such some evidence in addition to the mere contents of the deed is necessary; the insolvent is not to be held as having the view of doing the necessary results of his acts, for it is not necessary that the trustees' discretion should defeat or prefer any creditor. In re Wiedeman, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 32.

Deed of Assignment for the Benefit of Crediters Generally—"Insolvency Statute 1871," Ssc. 37, Sub-sec. 1.] — A deed of assignment which would enable the trustees to prefer some creditors who might thus absorb all the assets is not a deed for the benefit of creditors generally within the meaning of Sub-sec. 1 of Sec. 37 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871," and signing such a deed does not constitute an act of insolvency. In re Ritchie, 8 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 1; 3 A.L.T., 88.

When Creditor Estopped from Taking Advantage of Act of Insolvency under Sub-sec. 1 by Assenting to Deed of Assignment.]—See in re Vail, and in re Wiedeman, post column 596.

Act No. 379, Sec. 37, Sub.-sec. 1—Partners—Deed of Assignment—Sec. 41.]—Per Full Court, affirming Molesworth, J. A petition will lie for the sequestration of the estate of joint debtors whether in partnership or not, under Sec. 37, for an act of insolvency under that section as well as under Sec. 41. Sec. 41 provides for proceedings against single members of partnerships for their acts of insolvency, and has a restriction as to those acts whereby creditors may be delayed or defeated. A firm of partners conveyed to trustees all their joint and separate property (separate furniture and clothing being excepted) upon trust to pay "so far as trustees shall think fit," all rent, wages, and preferential claims, and then to pay the debts of creditors whose names appeared in the schedule, with a proviso that the trustees might upon satisfactory evidence admit as creditors persons having reasonable claims whose names were not in the schedule upon taking the advice thereon of a meeting of creditors. Held, and affirmed on appeal, that though the deed was an assignment of all the property it was not for the benefit of creditors generally, and therefore did not fall within Sec. 37, Sub-sec. 1. In re Thomas and Cowie, 9 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 2; 5 A.L.T., 95.

What Is—No. 273, Sec. 13—Construction.]—The removal of property secretly by a debtor, strongly pressed by his principal creditor, to the houses of friends, addressed to other creditors, is not a "delivery" within the meaning of Sec. 13 of the "Insolvency Statute 1865," No. 273, which will constitute an act of insolvency. The other words ("alienation, transfer," &c.) with which "delivery" is classed, regard transactions purporting to pass property, and the word "delivery" should be similarly restricted in its meaning. In re Johnston, 5 W.W. & A'B. A bill of sale given by a debtor bona fide over all his stock, in order to obtain assistance in difficulty to secure a past debt, and for further advances, is not per se an act of insolvency under Sec. 37, Sub-sec. 2, although such an assignment to secure a past debt only would be an act of insolvency. Jacomb v. Ross, 4 A.J.R., 97.

(c) Departing from Victoria or Absenting Himself.

One of a Firm of Partnsrs.]—Where C.M., one of a firm of partners, consisting of C. and J.M., departed from his dwelling-house and evaded service, &c., the Court, upon an order nisi for sequestration of the estate of the firm,

Where a foreign member of a partnership firm, who had purchased the assets and liabilities of the partnership, had visited Victoria and left the colony for South Australia in a surreptitious manner, under fear of persons appointed to watch him by creditors, through fear of his absconding, Held to be an act of insolvency. In re Oppenheimer and Company, 3 A.J.R., 128.

Single Creditor—Act No. 379, Sec. 37, Sub-secs. 2, 3—"Interpretation Act," No. 22.]—Under the Act No. 22, the word "creditors" in No. 379, Sec. 37, Sub-secs. 2, 3, includes a single creditor; where, therefore, an insolvent leaves Victoria with the intent to hinder, &c., a single creditor, it is an act of insolvency. In re Rickards, 5 A.J.R., 103.

Departure More Than Twelve Months Before Order Nisi—"Insolvency Statute 1871," Sec. 37, Sub-sec. 3.]—A debtor left Victoria more than twelve months before the order nisi, and continued to remain out of Victoria, with intent to defeat and delay his creditors. Held that this constituted an act of insolvency under Sec. 37, Sub-sec. 3, of the "Insolvency Statute 1871." In re Fyson, 6 V.L.R., (I.P. & M.,) 19; 1 A.L.T., 124.

(e) Execution and Not Satisfying.

5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 5.]—A judgment debtor in order to avoid committing an act of insolvency within the meaning of 5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 5, must when called upon to satisfy the debt or point out property to satisfy it, either make such satisfaction or point out property within the circuit district of the Sheriff to whom the writ of execution is addressed. Ex parte Staughton, 1 W. 5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 5—Pointing Out Disposable Property.]—The mere assertion by a judgment debtor required under 5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 5, to "point out disposable property," that he has property, is not a sufficient pointing out; and the person relying upon such an assertion, must not merely prove that such an assertion was made, but must afford evidence of the truth of the assertion itself. Ex parte White, 1 W.W. & A'B. Not Pointing Out Property in Satisfaction of Debt—Joint Debt—28 Vic. No. 273, Sec. 13.]—Where execution is issued against several persons for a joint debt, and one of them is called upon to "point out sufficient disposable property" in satisfaction of the debt, on the construction of the "Insolvency Statute 1865," the property pointed out should be limited to the property of the person who is called upon to point out such "disposable property," and is not to be extended to that of the other joint debtors. In re Drysdale, 3 W.W. & A'B. (I.E. & M.,) 30.

[The corresponding Sec. of No. 379 is Sec. 37, Sub-sec. 8.]

Not Pointing Out Disposable Property—What is a Pointing Out.]—D. was called upon to point out property in satisfaction of a joint execution against himself and his two partners. D. replied that he had no property except a mining lease and certain mining shares, of which he handed a list to the officer. The sheriff made a return of nulla bona, and this return was held good since the Act No. 273 limits the property to that of the person upon whom the demand is made; and semble, that if it were shown on order nisi for sequestration that the mining shares and lease, if put up for sale by the sheriff with such facilities as D. could have given to make a title to the purchaser, would have satisfied the execution, the pointing out would be sufficient. Ibid.

Failure to Point out Property—Who May Execute the Writ—Special Bailiff—15 Vic., No. 10.]—Where the act of insolvency relied on was a failure to point out property to satisfy an execution there was no order for the appointment of a special bailiff who executed the writ of fi. fa. The writ was directed to the Sheriff of B., who by a warrant under his hand directed to "I., my bailiff, and P., pro hac vice," authorising either of them to execute the writ. In the return to the writ P., who had attempted to execute it, described himself as a special bailiff. Held that the clause of 15 Vic., No. 10, "Supreme Court Act," for the appointment of special bailiffs only refers to cases where writs are specially directed to them, and not to the Sheriff, and that the Sheriff may appoint any one to execute the writs addressed to him. In re Knowles, 1 A.J.R., 105.

Tramway—Land Held under "Land Act 1869," for Building Tramways Upon.]—C. being requested to point out sufficient disposable property to satisfy an execution pointed out a tramway and some land held under the "Land Act 1869," under lease for the purpose of building a tramway thereon. The tramway could not be transferred without the consent of C. and of the Board of Land and Works, and C. had commenced proceedings in the Supreme Court to recover it, after the sale under the County Court execution, C. alleging that he had not consented to the sale. Held that whether the tramway could or could not originally be made available to satisfy an execution, C. had by his own act in taking proceedings for its recovery placed it in such a position that it could not be immediately available for that purpose, and order for sequestration made absolute against C. In re Clark, 1 A.J.R., 164.

Failing to Satisfy Execution—Deed of Assignment—No. 273, Part 13, Sec. 13—No. 379, Sec. 2.]—M. executed a deed of assignment under Part 13 of the "Insolvency Statute 1865," No. 273, and after the coming into operation of the "Insolvency Statute 1871," No. 379, failed to satisfy a judgment against him, giving to the officer who was charged with its execution, as his reason for not satisfying it, that he had executed the deed in question. On an order nisi for compulsory sequestration for not satisfying the judgment, Held, per Molesworth, J., that the deed afforded no answer, and rule made absolute. On appeal, Held that the protection afforded by Sec. 13 of No. 273 to a debtor executing such a deed was continued by Sec. 2 of No. 379, and that M. was therefore protected, and order discharged. In re McDonald, 2 V.R. Deed of Assignment Under No. 273, Sec. 115.]—A deed of assignment under No. 273, Sec. 115, is a defence to proceedings under Act No. 379 to sequestrate the estate of a debtor for not satisfying a judgment obtained against him. In re McDonald, 4 A.J.R., 184. Affirmed on appeal, 5 A.J.R., 42.

Act No. 379, Sec. 37, Sub-sec. 8—Demand May be Made wherever Debtor May be Found—Waiver.]—B., an attorney, had recovered a judgment for costs against W. Execution was issued, but no demand was made, the parties understanding that a demand could not be made elsewhere than at insolvent's house. Afterwards a conversation as to a negotiation took place between the sheriff's officer and the insolvent. Held that a demand may be made wherever debtor might be found; that there was no demand made so as to constitute the refusal to pay an act of insolvency, such demand having been subsequently waived. In re Whitesides, 3 A.J.R., 115.

Not Satisfying Judgment—Act No. 379, Sec. 37, Sub-sec. 8—Demand.]—Where, on a demand by sheriff's officer, the insolvent said that the transfer of some property would be completed in a day or two, and she would point out that, and the officer left her without having made a definitive demand, i.e., he had not made a direct intimation that insolvency proceedings would be the consequence of not immediately satisfying the judgment. Order nisi for sequestration discharged. In re Frances Hodgson, 5 A.J.R., 49.

Act No. 379, Sec. 37, Sub-sec. 8—Demand by Sheriff's Officer—Reasonable Time for Satisfying Judgment.]—When a sheriff's officer meets a debtor in the street and demands satisfaction, and receives an answer implying that the debtor has no means, he may make his return immediately; but, if the debtor state that he has means and will pay, the officer is not justified in making a return of nulla bona without affording him a reasonable time for doing so. A debtor was met in the street by the officer, who demanded payment at 10 A.M., and she requested him to meet her at noon, but he declined to go. She went to the sheriff's officer, accompanied by a person who it was alleged had the money, but no tender was made. The return of nulla bona was made 24 hours after the demand. Held, that the duty of satisfying the judgment within a reasonable time was cast upon her, and that she had a reasonable time in which to satisfy it, affirming Molesworth, J. Order made absolute for sequestration. In re Hodgson, 5 A.J.R., 80, 133.

Married Woman—Act No. 384, Sec. 21.]—A married woman, having separate property, was indebted on a judgment recovered by a creditor, and a writ of fi. fa. was issued against the real and personal property of husband and wife, "or either of them," which was returned wholly unsatisfied. Act No. 379, Sec. 37, Sub-sec. 8—Not Satisfying Judgment—No Evidence of Demand.]—On a petition for sequestration for not satisfying a judgment it did not appear from the evidence that there had been a distinct demand for payment by the Sheriff's officer, which had been refused by the debtor. Held that the order nisi should be discharged with costs. In re Willison, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 67.

Act No. 379, Sec. 37, Sub-sec. 8—Demand.]—Where a sheriff's officer made a demand, and then allowed time upon an indefinite promise to pay, and did not renew the demand, Held that there was no demand so as to constitute it an act of insolvency. In re Fenner, 7 V.L.R. "Insolvency Statute 1871," Sec. 37, Sub-sec. 8.]—The non-satisfaction of an execution on a judgment for the defendant's costs of a nonsuit is not an act of insolvency under Sec. 37, Sub-sec. 8, of the "Insolvency Statute 1871." A person entitled to the costs of a nonsuit is in a different position from a trade creditor, and has not the same remedies. In re Hollowood, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 78; 2 A.L.T., 56.

"Insolvency Statute 1871," Sec. 37, Sub-sec. 8—Amount of Judgment.]—It is not necessary in order to constitute an act of insolvency under Sec. 37, Sub-sec. 8, of the "Insolvency Statute 1871," that the judgment which the debtor has not satisfied should be for £50 or over that amount. In re Drouhet, 10 V.L.R. Act No. 379, Sec. 37, Sub-sec. 8—Execution in Supreme Court on County Court Judgment.]—A failure to satisfy an execution issued by the Supreme Court on a County Court judgment is an act of insolvency within Sub-sec. 8 of Sec. 37. In re M'Namara, 10 V.L.R., (I.P. & M.,) 84.

Where a judgment has been signed on a promissory note, and the failure to satisfy the judgment is relied upon as an act of insolvency, it is too late at the hearing of the order nisi to object to the judgment as having been procured by fraud, or that there was no consideration given for the note. In re Lee, 7 V.L.R. Return to Writ.]—See in re White, in re Cahill, post column 602.

Return to Writ, Sec. 37, Sub-sec. 8.]—To a writ of fi. fa. the return was that the defendant had no personal property in the Bailiwick that could be levied upon, but that the defendant had an interest in certain real estate in the Bailiwick, which the Sheriff accordingly advertised for sale, but was unable to sell because of a rule of Court to return the writ before the day advertised for the sale. Held that this was not a return of the writ unsatisfied in whole or in part, and would not support an act of insolvency under the "Insolvency Statute 1871," Sec. 37, Sub-sec. 8. In re Macpherson, 10 V.L.R. Act No. 379, Secs. 37 (Sub-secs. 2, 3, 8,) 41—Partnership.]—A firm of M. & Co. consisted of two members, M. resident in Victoria, M'C. resident in London. A judgment was recovered against both partners, and the sheriff called upon M. to satisfy it, which he failed to do. Held, that under Sec. 41 an intent to defeat and delay creditors is essential, and that a mere omission to satisfy a judgment under Sub-sec. 8 is not sufficient ground, unless it was done to defeat and defraud creditors, for an order under Sec. 41. In re Martin, 5 V.L.R. (g) Consent and Failure to Sequestrate Voluntarily.

Refusal to Sequestrate Estate — "Insolvency Statute 1871," Sec. 37, Sub-sec. 9.]—All creditors, secured as well as unsecured, have a right to notice of, and to be present and take part in the proceedings at, a meeting called for the purpose of considering what shall be done with the estate of a debtor in insolvent circumstances. But though the exclusion of a secured creditor might render the meeting informal, if such exclusion be effected by an agent of the debtor, the debtor will not be allowed to take advantage of this objection to prejudice the right of other creditors to have the estate sequestrated for an act of insolvency, in refusing, at the request of the meeting, to voluntarily sequestrate his estate. In re Clemes and Leach, 2 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 37.

Act No. 379, Sec. 37, Sub-sec. 9.]—A number of creditors met at the debtor's house, asked him to furnish a list of his creditors and their debts, and he did so, mentioning those present and one other not present. The meeting then proceeded with the appointment of a chairman, and passed resolutions, &c., indicating to the debtor the drift of the proceedings for the purposes of the Act, the debtor not objecting. Held to be a good meeting within Sub-sec. 9 of Sec. 37. Order absolute. In re Inglis, 3 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 100.

Meeting of Creditors—Proxies—Act No. 379, Sec. 37, Sub-sec. 9]—The majority of creditors mentioned in Sub-sec. 9 is a majority in number and not in value. A majority of creditors in number passed a resolution that insolvent should put his estate in the Insolvent Court immediately, and the debtor refused to sequestrate. After such resolution and refusal some of the creditors went away, and a majority of the remainder preferred an assignment, which was carried into effect. Held that the resolution could not be neutralised by the change of opinion. Semble, proxies cannot be used at such a meeting, but if they can they must be properly proved. In re Southey, 5 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 4.

Act No. 379, Sec. 37, Sub-sec. 9.]—In order to maintain an act of insolvency under Sub-sec. 9, it must be shown clearly that before the meeting of creditors broke up there was a definite demand for the debtor to sequestrate, and a definite refusal. In re Webster, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 16.

Act No. 379, Sec. 37, Sub-sec. 9—Meeting of Creditors.]—The act of insolvency relied on was that at a meeting of creditors the debtor consented to present a petition for the sequestration of his estate, and that within 48 hours after such consent he did not present such petition. There was no chairman elected, and one creditor asked if the debtor would consent. Held, that all that was required was that creditors must understand that a schedule is to be filed, and that debtor must leave the meeting with the idea that he is bound to file it; that there was no need for a chairman or a resolution, and that the meeting might assent silently to a question asked by a creditor. In re John Smith, 7 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 4; 2 A.L.T., 116.

Giving a Fraudulent Warrant of Attorney—What Is—No. 273, Sec. 13.]—Executing a warrant of attorney in favour of a creditor for the purpose of preventing another creditor from proceeding in an action against the insolvent, is executing a fraudulent warrant of attorney, whereby the insolvent's estate had been or might be affected within the meaning of Sec. 13 of the "Insolvency Statute 1865," and executing such a warrant is an act of insolvency. In re Kerr and Gray, 3 W.W. & A'B. Assignment of Part of Property—Intent—"Insolvency Statute 1871," Sec. 37, Sub-sec. 10.]—An assignment by a man of the whole of his property, or of the whole, with a trifling exception, to one creditor, in satisfaction of, or as security for an antecedent debt, is in itself an act of insolvency, because the necessary consequence of such an assignment is to defeat or delay all the other creditors, and the debtor is deemed to have intended the necessary consequences of his act; and no question is left to the jury whether the assignment were fraudulent within Sec. 37, Sub-sec. 10, of the "Insolvency Statute 1871." But where the assignment does not comprise all, it is by no means a necessary consequence that the other creditors must be defeated or delayed, and the intent is not, and cannot be, presumed as a matter of law, but must be proved as a matter of fact. And even where the assignment does comprise all the property, but there is some new advance made, or agreed to be made, and afterwards made, the legal presumption does not arise, and the intent must then be proved as a matter of fact. Hasker v. Moorhead v. Blackwood v. McMullen, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 160.

(2) Who May Take Advantage of.

Act No. 379, Secs. 37, 39, 47.]—B. and others trading as partners, attended at a meeting of creditors, and B. seconded a resolution for acceptance of an assignment to trustees for creditors; but they did not execute the deed. B. and others were the petitioning creditors. Held that, as the Act under Secs. 37, 39, and 46 did not expressly exclude creditors who had so assented to a deed of assignment from petitioning, and the policy of the Act being to prefer the administration by insolvency to that by trustees outside of it, the order for sequestration based upon the petition of B. and others must be made absolute. In re Eastwood, 5 A.J.R., 61, 62.

Held, overruling Molesworth, J., that where a creditor assents to the execution of an assignment of an insolvent's estate for the benefit of creditors, even though the deed was not signed by any of the creditors, such creditor cannot petition for the sequestration of the insolvent's estate. In re Vail, 1 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 5.

Collusion Between Non-signing Petitioning Creditor and Signing Creditor—Petitioning Creditor Present at Meeting but Not Taking Part in Proceedings—Evidence.]—An insolvent's notice of objections to order for sequestration alleged collusion between the petitioning creditor who had not signed a deed of assignment (the act of insolvency,) and other creditors who had signed it. Quære whether such disentitles the petitioning creditor from obtaining the order. But where a petitioning creditor was present at a meeting of creditors where it was resolved to assign the estate to trustees, he not signing the deed or assenting to or dissenting from the resolution, held that he was not disentitled from taking advantage of the assignment as an act of insolvency. Evidence in support of insolvent's objections is admissible. In re Wiedeman, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 32.

The execution by one member of a firm as trustee of a creditor's deed of assignment does not bind the firm as creditors as a relinquishment of the debt, and will not operate as a bar to proceedings by the firm for sequestration of the assignor's estate. In re Crate, 3 W.W. & A'B. On February 8th a meeting of creditors was held, C. not being present, when a resolution was passed to accept a composition, and this was duly confirmed at a meeting held February 19th. Held, that Secs. 129 and 151, did not provide for a composition being arranged, "notwithstanding proceedings in Insolvency," and order for sequestration made absolute. In re Marie, 3 A.J.R., 6.

The mere convening of a meeting of creditors before the order nisi is no bar, and order for sequestration made absolute. In re Risk, 3 A.J.R., 115.

Debtor's Summons Set Aside After Making of Order Nisi.]—A debtor's summons was served on L. for the payment of £202 2s. 1d, and was neither paid nor compounded for, and no application was made to dismiss the same. Twenty days afterwards an order nisi was made thereon, and a time appointed for its being made absolute. Before that time, however, the summons was set aside. On the order nisi coming on for hearing, Held that there were proper materials for making the order nisi at its date, and that it should be made absolute, notwithstanding that the debtor's summons had been set aside. In re Lawler, 4 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 8.

Proof of Act of Insolvency—Act No. 379, Sec. 37.]—Per Barry, J.—Strict proof of the act of insolvency is required, but the production of the proof is not confined to any stage of the proceedings. In re Hodgson, 5 A.J.R., 133.

Two Orders Nisi—Second Discharged After First Made Absolute.] — Where two orders nisi by different petitioning creditors against the same debtor had been obtained, and the first obtained had been made absolute, the Court refused to make the second absolute also. In re Rigg, 4 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 20.

Valuation of Security—Sequestration of Firm's Estate—5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 39.]—A secured creditor of the separate estate of one partner is not bound in a sequestration of the firm's estate to value his security upon the separate estate, Ex parte Flower, Salting and Co., 1 W. & W. (I.E. & M.,) 143.

Affirmed on appeal to the Privy Council, sub. nom. Rolfe v. Flower, L.R., 1, P.C., 27.

Compare Sec. 37 of Act No. 379.

Valuation of Security—Statement in Petition—Act No. 379, Sec. 37.]—See in re Rowley, in re Harward, in re M'Namara, post column 605.

Second Order Nisi—Costs of Previously Discharged One Not Paid.]—The Court ordered the issue of an order absolute upon an order nisi to be delayed till the costs of a previous order nisi, by the same petitioning creditor, which order had been discharged with costs which had been taxed, were paid. In re Harward, 4 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 65.

Subsequent Order Nisi Not Made Absolute Till Costs of Former One Paid.]—An order nisi obtained by a firm was dismissed with costs on the ground that the petition only showed the debt to be due to two of the members of the firm. A fresh order nisi was thereupon obtained by the two members in question, and the costs of the former order were taxed the day after. After the long vacation which then intervened the second order nisi came on for hearing, and the respondent applied for leave to file objections nunc pro tunc, one of such objections being that the petitioners were indebted to him in a certain sum. Held that this could not be allowed to prevail as a set-off since the amount due might be on a bill not then due or payable, but that before the order nisi could be made absolute the costs of the former order nisi must be paid by the petitioners. In re Fraser, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 20; 1 A.L.T., 118.

Making Order Absolute for Sequestration—What Will be Considered.]—On an application to make absolute an order nisi for sequestration, the Court will not go behind the order, if it be sufficient on its face, to see whether the materials on which it was made were sufficient. In re Fitzpatrick, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 6; 5 A.L.T., 213.

Petition by Executors for Compulsory Sequestration—Who Must Join.]—In a petition for the compulsory sequestration of the estate of a debtor of a testator, all the executors must join. Ex parte Staughton, 1 W.W. & A'B. (I.E. & M.,) 15.

(2) Joint and Separate and of Estate of a Firm.

Sequestration of Partnership Estate by Majority—Separate Estate.]—Quære, per Molesworth, J.—Whether a majority of partners by voluntarily sequestrating the partnership estate sequestrate also the separate estates of the majority. Bates v. Loewe, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 7.

Joint—"Greater Number of Partners"—Firm of Two.]—On an application by a creditor to set aside a voluntary sequestration made by one partner only of a firm of two, on the ground that it was not made on the petition of the "greater number of the partners," Held that the validity of the sequestration depended upon the antecedent consent of the other partner, and could not be rendered valid by his subsequent assent. In re Yorston and Webster, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 96.

Sequestration of Joint Estate is a Sequestration of Separate Estate—Administration.]—Per Chapman, J. On compulsory as on voluntary sequestrations, the joint sequestration of partnership estate is a sequestration of the separate estate of each partner, and there need be no separate order for sequestration of any one of the separate estates. But in administering the estates the joint and separate estates must be kept distinct as to claims on them respectively. In re Turnbull, 1 W. & W. (I.E. & M.,) 105.

Mode of Administering Estate When Separate Estate is Sequestrated as a Consequence of the Sequestration of Joint Estate.]—Per Chapman, J., affirmed on appeal. If the sequestration of separate estates follows as a consequence from the sequestration of the joint estate, the rights of all the several parties under each estate, and the mode of administering the estates, would still be precisely the same as it would be under separate orders of sequestration. Ex parte Flower, Salting and Co., 1 W. & W. (I.E. & M.,) 143.

Joint Debt.]—A man may be made insolvent upon a debt which he and another conjointly owe, and in cases of partnership the creditor is not bound to proceed under Sec. 18 of No. 273, for sequestration of the firm's estate unless he so please. In re Drysdale, 3 W. W. & A'B. (I.E. & M.,) 30.

Sequestration of Separate Estate for Partnership Debt Before Sequestration of Partnership Estate.]—It is no answer to an application for the sequestration of the separate estate of a partner for a partnership debt that no attempt has been made to sequestrate the partnership estate. Re Gardiner, 4 A.J.R., 6.

The Act of Insolvency Committed by One Partner is Sufficient on Which to Base a Petition for the Sequestration of the Firm's Estate.]—In re Martin, and in re Oppenheimer, ante column 605.

In proceedings for the sequestration of a firm's estate the names of the members of the firm should be stated in the petition and order nisi. In re Martin and in re Oppenheimer, post column under sub-heading PETITION.

Petition Must State Act of Insolvency.]—The petition for compulsory sequestration need not be dated; it or the summons must show that there was a return or affidavit from sheriff's officer shewing, in fact, that he could not find any disposable property, and it or the summons must show that the alleged insolvent has been required to satisfy the debt. In re Gibb, 2 W. & W. (I.E. & M.,) 40.

Compare Act 379, Sec. 37.

Petition—Act of Insolvency Must be Stated Fully.]—A petition for compulsory sequestration for an alleged act of insolvency must state precisely the act of insolvency alleged, for the defendant does not necessarily see the affidavit. Therefore a petition which alleged only that a person having a judgment against him has not satisfied the same, or pointed out to the officer disposable property to satisfy the same, and did not allege that he had been required to do so, was held bad. In re Chambers, 1 W. & W. (I.E & M.,) 172.

Compare Act No. 379, Sec. 37.

Petition—Setting Out Non-Payment of Judgment Debt—What Must be Alleged.]—On a rule nisi for compulsory sequestration, the petition, order, and summons alleged that the debtor, having the sentence of a competent Court against him, and being thereunto required by a proper officer, did not satisfy the same, or point out sufficient property to satisfy the same. None of these documents alleged that the officer failed to find sufficient property to satisfy the sentence. Held that the alleged act of insolvency was not sufficiently set forth; leave to amend was refused, and the order discharged without costs. In re Fisher, 1 W.W. & A'B. (I.E. & M.,) 31.

Statement of Act of Insolvency — No. 273, Sec. 13—What Sufficient]—A statement in an order nisi and petition that the debtor had property in Victoria when he failed to satisfy a judgment, or to point out sufficient disposable property to satisfy it, is a sufficient statement of an act of insolvency under Sec. 13 of the "Insolvency Statute 1865," No. 273. In re Murray, 1 V.R. (I.E. & M.,) 8; 1 A.J.R., 113.

Compare Act No. 379, Sec. 37.

Order Nisi—Sufficiency of Statement of Acts of Insolvency—Act No. 379, Secs. 31, 43.]—An order nisi for sequestration which stated the acts of insolvency committed within six months before the petition to be "with intent, &c., having departed out of Victoria, and with intent, &c., having remained out of Victoria, and with intent, &c., having otherwise absented himself," was held to be sufficient, though the last act of insolvency as alleged was held too vague to alone support an order absolute. In re Wolter, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 75.

Form of Petition—Date of Act of Insolvency—Affidavit.]—It is not necessary that the date of an alleged act of insolvency should appear in the petition; it is sufficient if the date appear in the affidavit verifying the petition. Ibid.

Form of Order Nisi—Allegation of Act of Insolvency—"Insolvency Statute 1871," Sec. 43.]—An order nisi for sequestration alleged that the petitioner had been informed and believed that the officer who attempted execution of a judgment, the non-satisfaction of which was the alleged act of insolvency, was the "officer charged with the execution of the judgment," and that by reason of the matters aforesaid the insolvent had committed an act of insolvency by not satisfying a judgment when called upon by the officer charged with the execution thereof to do so. Held, that the act of insolvency was sufficiently set out, under Sec. 43 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871," and that even if it were not the Court would direct an amendment. In re Synnot, 4 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 89.

Order Nisi—Statement of Act of Insolvency—Satisfying Execution.]—An order nisi stated the return of a writ of execution unsatisfied, and then stated that the debtor was called upon to satisfy. An objection thereto, on the ground that the allegations were not made in proper chronological order, overruled. In re Allen, 5 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 25.

Form of Petition—Statement of Act of Insolvency—"Insolvency Statute 1871," Sec. 37, Sub-sec. 8.]—A petition for sequestration stated that execution had been issued against the real and personal estate of the debtor, which was returned unsatisfied, the form of the return being, that "the within-named W. hath not any goods or chattels within any bailiwick whereof I can cause to be made the debt and interest, &c." Held that the return was insufficient, and an act of insolvency under Sec. 37, Sub-sec. 8, of the "Insolvency Statute 1871," was not proved; and order discharged, but, since it was upon a technical objection, without costs. In re White, 6 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 50; 2 A.L.T., 43.

Order Nisi—What must Appear on Face of.]—Where an insolvent had been asked by the sheriff of the western bailiwick to satisfy a judgment, but it did not appear on the face of the order nisi that any demand had been made upon the insolvent in that bailiwick, or that his place of abode was in that bailiwick, Held that it was not necessary that the order should show that the demand was made in the western bailiwick, the principle of omnia rite esse acta applying. In re Symons, 1 A.L.T., 29.

Order Nisi—Form of—Statement of Act of Insolvency—"Insolvency Statute 1871," Sec. 37, Sub-sec. 8]—An order nisi for sequestration, which purported to be based on Sub-sec. 8 of Sec. 37 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871," did not allege execution to be returned unsatisfied in whole or in part, or that the alleged act of insolvency was committed within six months of the petition, or that the debt was unsecured. The order also stated that the petition "was presented to me," without saying to a Judge of the Court of Insolvency. Held bad, and discharged with costs. In re Cahill, 1 A.L.T., 145.

Petition—Act of Insolvency—Judgment Recovered by Two Members of a Firm—Order Nisi Obtained by Firm.]—An order nisi for sequestration was obtained on a petition by the individual members of a firm trading as, &c., the act of insolvency alleged being the failure to satisfy a judgment which was recovered by two members only of the firm on behalf of the firm, but it did not appear in the petition that the judgment was recovered on behalf of the firm. Held that the petition was irregular, and that the order nisi should be discharged with costs. In re Fraser, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 20; 1 A.L.T., 113.

Summons Upon Order Nisi—How Entitled.]—The summons need not be entitled either "In the Supreme Court" or "In Insolvency." In re Fox, 2 W. & W. (I.E. & M.,) 35.

"Insolvency Statute 1865," No. 273, Sec. 20—Heading of Summons.]—Where a summons was headed "In the Supreme Court, &c.," "In the Matter of the Petition, &c.," but was not in the Queen's name and was addressed to no one, Held it was not "a process" under Sec. 20, the summons being insufficient on account of the omission. In re Mackinnon, 6 W.W. & A'B. (I.E. & M.,) 1.

The proceedings should be entitled, "In the Insolvency Court," and not "In the Supreme Court," but the Court allowed an amendment, and there being no other objection, made the order absolute. In re Ryan, 1 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 4.

According to note at p. 83 of 2 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) this decision is incorrectly reported; all that was done was to strike out "In the Supreme Court."

Order Nisi for Sequestration—Heading.]—It is no objection to an order nisi for sequestration that it is not headed in any Court at all. In re Cooper, 2 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 82.

Title of Cause—Up to Order Absolute.]—A case up to the hearing of the order nisi is pending between two Courts, and is not in either until the order is made absolute or discharged, and therefore the proper title is "In the 'Insolvency Statute 1871.'" In re Wolter, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 75.

Address of Petition.]—The petition should be addressed to the Judge by whom the order nisi is made. In re M'Conville, 7 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 17; 2 A.L.T., 156.

Summons—Form of.]—The summons need not recite at length the petition and the order nisi, and may omit the statement as to property, the meaning of a summons being to bring the person served to Court to look to documents referred to in the order nisi, not to accurately describe them. In re Murray, 1 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 8; 1 A.J.R., 113.

Form of Summons—No Allegation of Order to Show Cause.]—At the hearing of an order nisi for sequestration it was objected that the summons served upon the respondent did not show sufficient materials on which to base it, reciting that the Judge and commissioner upon reading the petition and affidavits did place the estate under sequestration, and there was no allegation that the statements in the petition were true. Another objection was that there was no allegation of an order to the respondent to show cause. Held that the statements in the summons were sufficient, for if the Court, upon reading the petition and affidavits had not believed them to be true no order nisi would have been granted, and that since the order nisi contained an order on the insolvent to show cause the summons might be amended by inserting the recital of that order. In re Knowles, 1 A.J.R., 105.

Petition—Signature of—Affidavit in Support.]—A petition set forth three partners as petitioning creditors, two of whom signed, and one as attorney for the third, who was out of the jurisdiction—The affidavit stated the nature of the debt, and that the three were partners—Held sufficient. In re Murray, 1 W. & W. (I.E & M.,) 137.

Petition—Signature of Petitioning Creditor.]—A petition for compulsory sequestration, unsigned by the petitioning creditor, cannot be regarded as a petition at all; and where an order nisi was obtained on such a petition, the Court held that it was not a case for amendment, and the order was discharged as not being supported by a petition. In re Barry, 1 W. & W. (I.E. & M.,) 174.

Compare Sec. 31 of Act No. 379.

Objection to Signature of Petition.]—The Court will not entertain an objection to the signature of the petition where the order nisi for sequestration is correct. In re Ritchie, 8 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 1; 3 A.L.T., 88.

Petition—Certificate of Security for Fees—Signature—5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 15.]—The certificate required by Sec. 15 of 5 Vic., No. 17, that security for fees, &c., has been found, to be endorsed on a petition for compulsory sequestration must be signed by the chief commissioner personally. In re Oliver, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 179.

Order Nisi—Certificate of Security for Costs.]—The order nisi for sequestration need not recite the commissioner's certificate of security for costs or be drawn up on reading it, it is sufficient if the certificate is endorsed on the petition. In re Fawcett, 2 W. & W. (I.E. & M.,) 5.

Security for Costs of Sequestration—28 Vic., No. 273, Sec. 16.]—Where the Commissioner has certified that security for the fees and charges of a sequestration, required by Sec. 16 of No. 273, has been given, the Court will not go behind his certificate to enquire by whom the security has been given. Giving security means promising it to be given, and if given on behalf of the petitioning creditors, it must be presumed to have been by their procuration. In re Phelan, 3 W.W. & A'B. (I.E. & M.,) 1.

Certificate of Security for Costs—Improper a Bar to Jurisdiction Under Sec. 16 of Act No. 273.]—If the certificate of security for costs endorsed on the petition for sequestration be made out in the wrong name, it is an objection to the jurisdiction, and the order nisi for sequestration will be discharged. In re Sandars, 1 V.R. (I.E. & M.,) 1; 1 A.J.R., 38.

Commissioner's Certificate of Security for Costs.]—It is no objection to a petition for compulsory sequestration that the certificate of the commissioner of security for costs bears a date earlier than that of the petition, for the document as a petition must be taken to have existed when the commissioner certified upon it, and the inference should be that one date is erroneous. In re Murray, 1 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 8; 1 A.J.R., 113.

[N.B.—These provisions in 5 Vic., No. 17 and Act No. 273 do not appear to be embodied in Act No. 379.]

Form of Petition—Married Woman's Estate—Separate Property.]—See in re Willison, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 67, post under sub-heading Evidence.

Form of Petition and Affidavit—Act No. 273, Sec. 13—"Having Property in Victoria."]—Held, that on a petition for sequestration the petition and affidavit should, under Sec. 13, run "having at the time of the alleged act of insolvency and now having property in Victoria." Order nisi discharged where the petition did not show this. In re Mackinnon, 6 W.W. & A'B. (I.E. & M.,) 1.

Petition for Sequestration of Partnership Estate—Members of Firm to be Stated in Petition and Order Nisi.]—On an order nisi for sequestration of the estate of "A. O., trading as A. O. and Co." Held, that petition and order nisi should state, as far as is known, who are the members of the firm. Order discharged. In re Oppenheimer, 3 A.J.R., 91.

See S.P., in re Martin, 5 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 13.

Form of Petition—Creditor Holding Security—Act No. 379, Sec. 37.]—The fact of a petitioning creditor not disclosing that he has security for his debt though it may be a reason against making absolute an order nisi for sequestration is no ground for setting aside the sequestration at the instance of the debtor when the order has been made absolute. In re Rowley, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 50.

Petition — Form of — Creditor Holding Mining Shares as Security.]—A petition for sequestration presented by a creditor who holds mining shares as a security for his debt must set a value on them, or if the shares be of no value should state so, and offer to give them up for the benefit of creditors. It is insufficient to state merely that the shares are of no marketable value. In re Harward, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 65.

Where a petitioning creditor in the petition, affidavit and order nisi set out a debt on which a judgment was recovered, alleging that it was not secured, and afterwards stated that he held security which he valued at 1s., Held that the objection as to the petition and order nisi not disclosing security was fatal, and order discharged with costs. In re M'Namara, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 84.

Act No. 379, Sec. 45—Petition—No Prayer for Sequsstration.]—Where an objection was taken to an order nisi that the order did not show jurisdiction, and there was no prayer for sequestration in the petition, Held that the want of the prayer was fatal; that it was included in the objection, and was not technical under Sec. 45. In re Rickards, 5 A.J.R., 103.

Petition—Fatal Mistake—Dismissal.]—A petition, upon which an order nisi was founded, prayed by mistake for the sequestration of the petitioning creditors' estate, and not of that of the alleged insolvent. Held a fatal error; that the objection going to the jurisdiction, it did not come within the clause in "The Supreme Court Rules" giving power of amendment, and that the order nisi must be dismissed. In re Murray, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 137.

Order Nisi—Form.]—It is not a material error in the curial part of an order nisi if it purports to sequestrate the estate until the day when the insolvent was to show cause instead of until otherwise ordered. In re Murray, 1 V.R., (I.E. & M.,) 8; 1 A.J.R., 113.

Form of Order Nisi—Omission of Words.]—Where an order nisi stated that the estate was placed in the hands of the assignee, omitting the words "under sequestration" after the word "placed," Held, that the words omitted were implied, and objection to the form overruled. In re Palmer, 5 A.J.R., 157.

Order Nisi—Copy—By Whom Certified.]—A copy of an order nisi for sequestration should be certified by the chief clerk of the Judge making the order. In re Dunne, 2 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 16.

Order Nisi for Sequestration—Informal Recital.]—An order nisi for sequestration recited that a petition had been presented, but did not say to whom, whether to the Insolvency Court or a Judge of the Supreme Court. The order was signed "Robert Molesworth," but it did not appear who he was, or that any petition had been presented to him. Held that since the order did not show the authority under which it was signed, that authority being a petition properly presented, in the absence of such petition the Court could not amend the order nisi by reciting the petition properly, and therefore must discharge it. In re Cooper, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 82.

Order Nisi—Description of Insolvent.]—Under the "Insolvency Statute 1871," an alleged insolvent may be properly described either by his place of bodily residence or by his place of business. In re Bayldon, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 85.

Order Nisi—Affidavits on which it is Founded.]—If there is nothing wrong on the face of an order nisi the Court will not go behind it to consider whether it was granted on insufficient affidavits. In re Thompson, 7 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 146.

Order Nisi for Sequsstration—Clerical Error—Amendmsnt.] — A clerical error in an order nisi for sequestration, which is not a want of form or omission only, but states something which puts the petitioner out of Court, cannot be amended. In re Reade, 2 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 83.

Where an order nisi omitted the word "within" in the statement "that the said act of insolvency was committed and occurred within six months before the presentation of the said petition," Held, that it could not be amended under Sec. 31 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871." Ibid.

Amendment — "Insolvency Statute 1871," Sec. 31.]—An order nisi for sequestration was made "upon reading the petition of T," but did not state that the petition was addressed to any person. The petition itself, however, was properly addressed and presented. On the hearing, the Court allowed the order to be amended, under Sec. 31 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871," subject to the costs of the amendment, holding that it was a matter not material. In re Johnson, 4 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 69.

Statement of Petitioner's Debt—Variance—Amendment—"Insolvency Statute 1871," Sec. 31.]—A petitioning creditor's debt was alleged to be upon a judgment of the Supreme Court upon two bills of exchange, but turned out to be in fact a judgment entered up on a certificate of a judgment in the County Court. Held, such a variance as the Court could not amend under Sec 31 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871." In re Synnott, 4 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 89.

Order Nisi—Incorrect Statement—Discharge.]—An order nisi for sequestration which stated that the petitioner had been called upon to satisfy debt, was discharged without costs, the Court refusing to amend, although the petition stated correctly that the respondent was called upon. In re Portue, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 93.

Supreme Court in Insolvency Jurisdiction — Amendment—"Supreme Court Rules 1854," Cap. 10, Rule 26.]—The Supreme Court in its insolvency jurisdiction has power to amend pleadings in insolvency under the general power of amendment conferred by the "Supreme Court Rules 1854," Cap. 10, Rule 26. In re Synnot, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 89.

Form of Order Nisi—Amendment.]—An order nisi stating that debtor called a meeting of creditors as under Part 3 of Act No. 379, and that he was requested to surrender his estate under the Statute, is not bad because it does not state under what part of the Statute the estate is to be sequestrated, or because it does state that the meeting was called under Part 3, and is capable of amendment if required. In re Webster, 5 V.L.R., (I.P. & M.,) 16.

Amendment of Order Absolute.]—Where an order absolute for sequestration is sought to be amended, it should be produced before the Court from the custody of the Court of Insolvency, and the amendment made by manually altering the document itself. In re McGillivray, 6 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 40; 1 A.L.T., 202.

Supreme Court in Insolvency Jurisdiction—Amendment of Order Absolute.]—The Court has power to amend an erroneous and impossible date in an order absolute for sequestration, if the matter is entirely between the petitioning creditor and the insolvent; but where a trustee had been appointed, and other parties had acquired rights in the matter since the making of the order, the Court refused to amend, and dismissed the application without prejudice to its renewal, after serving all the parties interested or affected by the amendment. Ibid.

Order for Sequestration—Impossible Date.]—Where an order absolute for sequestration was dated "Thursday, 22nd July," which was an impossible date, and recited an order nisi of 30th July, and a petition of 26th July, Held that the order should be read as of no date, and that parol evidence should be admitted to prove the correct date, viz., 22nd August. Shiels v. Drysdale, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 126; 2 A.L.T., 14.

Petition—Written or Printed.]—It was provided by a rule of Court that all petitions in insolvency should be partly written, partly printed, on paper or parchment. An order nisi for sequestration having been granted on a petition wholly written, Held that the rule was merely directory; and that the petition having been accepted, and the order nisi granted, the Court would not discharge it on this ground alone. In re Cutter and Lever, 1 V.R. (I.E. & M.,) 13.

Affidavit of Debt — What Must be Stated.]—It is not necessary that the affidavit of debt of a petitioning creditor should negative the existence of a security where none exists. In re M'Manomonie, 1 W.W. & A'B. (I.E. & M.,) 53.

Affidavits in Support of Petition—Joint Creditors — One Out of Jurisdiction.]—The affidavit required to be made by each creditor by Sec. 16 of No. 273, in support of a petition for sequestration, if made by one only of two joint creditors, of whom one is out of the jurisdiction, is insufficient; but in such a case, the affidavit of the duly authorised agent of the absent creditor is a sufficient affidavit of such creditor, and may be made on information and belief. In re Phelan, 3 W.W. & A'B. (I.E. & M.,) 1.

See Sec. 22 of Act No. 379.

Affidavits in Support of Petition—Numbering Folios.]—The regulation as to numbering the folios of affidavits in support of a petition for sequestration is to be regarded before making an order nisi, and not as cause against it. In re M'Manomonie, 1 W.W. & A'B. (I.E. & M.,) 53.

Affidavits to support a petition need not be filed before using them to form the basis of an order nisi for sequestration. In re Trevarrow, 2 W. & W. (I.E. & M.,) 84.

Affidavit—Unnoticed Interlineations—7 Vic., No. 19, Sec. 15.]—On an appeal from a decision making absolute an order nisi for compulsory sequestration, Held, dubitante sed non, dissentiente Molesworth, J.—that it was a sufficient ground for reversing the decision and discharging the order nisi, that the affidavit on which it was obtained contained interlineations which had not been "noticed in the margin opposite thereto by the officer or person taking such affidavit." In re Stephenson, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 114.

Affidavits—7 Vic., No. 19, Sec. 15.]—Two of the affidavits, deposing to the act of insolvency, contained erasures which had not been initialled by the commissioner before whom they had been sworn. Held that the facts as to that particular were not essential, and might be found elsewhere. Objection overruled. In re Stephenson distinguished. In re Gherson, 2 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 14.

Affidavits—"Common Law Procedure Stat. 1865," Sec. 379.]—On an objection upon an order nisi for sequestration, that the petitioning creditor's affidavit of debt did not specify the abode as required by Sec. 379, but merely described him as "of Elizabeth-street," Held that Sec. 379 of the "Common Law Procedure Stat." had no reference to affidavits filed in insolvency. In re Haydon, 2 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 34.

[Under Insolvency Rules, Rule 49, the affidavits must conform to Sec. 379 of the "Common Law Procedure Stat."]

Where affidavits and other documents have been made the foundation of any curial act, an objection that they are not folioed according to "Supreme Court Rules," Cap. 10, Rule 7, will not be entertained. In re Fox, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 35.

Affidavit.]—Where the affidavit of petitioning creditors is made by two persons, if they be named in the jurat as having sworn the affidavit, it is not necessary for the jurat to state that they swore it "severally." In re James, 5 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 1.

Affidavit of Debt.]—It is no objection to a petition for compulsory sequestration that the petitioning creditor's affidavit of debt is dated before the petition; all the "Insolvency Statute 1865" provides is, that the petition and affidavit are to be presented together to the Judge. In re Murray, 1 V.R. (I.E. & M.,) 8; 1 A.J.R., 113.

But see Rules (further) Rule 2, and Insolvency Rules, Rule 3.

Affidavit—Title.]—After the order nisi, affidavits used in an insolvency matter are properly headed in the Supreme Court. In re Fraser, 6 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 20; 1 A.L.T., 118.

Service of Summons—"Insolvent Act," 5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 25.]—Sec. 25 of the Act provides that service of the summons to show cause against sequestration shall be made in the same manner as is by law provided for the service of any other summons, provided that if debtor has been absent for forty days from his usual residence, copies of the summons shall be inserted in three successive publications of the Gazette. Held that this means that the summons should in all cases be served on the debtor as far as it can be, according to the usual practice of the Court as to summonses; and that if debtor has been forty days absent the Gazette notice shall be published. Where, after order nisi, an order for substituted service was obtained upon affidavit that insolvent was believed to be in the colony, but as a matter of fact he was not, Held that the order could not be made absolute on such substituted service, but that it should not be discharged. Order made directing substituted service with Gazette advertisements. In re Fox, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 35.

Compare Sec. 44 of Act No. 379.

Advertising Summons—Substituted Service—5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 25.]—On an order nisi for compulsory sequestration, the alleged act of insolvency was that the debtor departed from the colony, or being out of the colony, remained absent therefrom with intent to defeat or delay his creditors. From the affidavits it appeared that he was in another colony, and had probably gone there to defeat or delay his creditors; that, having been forty days absent from his usual residence, the petitioning creditor, without obtaining any order for substituted service, inserted a copy of the summons in one of the Melbourne papers, under 5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 25. Held that such advertisements are only proper when the person to whom they are addressed remains in Victoria, and is evading service within the jurisdiction; and that the advertisements were in this case nugatory; and order nisi for sequestration enlarged, with liberty to the creditor to apply in the meantime for an order for substituted service. In re Smith, 1 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 1.

Compare Sec. 44 of Act No. 379 as to provisions concerning absence from Victoria.

Service—Act 5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 25—How Effected Where Personal Service Impossible—"Common Law Procedure Stat."]—If an alleged insolvent cannot be served personally, he must be served under the provisions of "The Common Law Procedure Stat." or a special order must be obtained. In re Newbigging, 1 W.W. & A'B. (I.E. & M.,) 33.

See Sec. 44 of Act No. 379.

Service of Summons—When Dispensed With.]—Where an alleged insolvent had not been served with the summons, but appeared by counsel at the hearing of the order nisi for sequestration, the Court dispensed with service upon him. In re Brann, 3 W.W. & A'B. (I.E. & M.,) 6.

Service of Order Nisi.]—Office copies of the order nisi, which had been served on respondent, must be certified by the clerk of the Judge of the district in which the order is made. In re Steed, 3 A.J.R., 62.

Order Nisi—Signature of Judge Necessary in Copy for Service—Act No. 379, Sec 44.]—The signature of the Judge who made the order is necessary in the copy for service of an order nisi. In re Hang Hi, 4 A.J.R., 43.

Order Nisi Not Personally Served—Wrong Name.]—If an order nisi for sequestration is not personally served on the debtor, and the debtor's name is incorrectly stated, he may appear as "A.B., wrongly described as C.D.," and take objection to it. In re Wolter, 4V.L.R. (I P. & M.,) 75.

Irregularity in Service—How Waived]—Irregularities in the service may be waived by the debtor's filing objections. In re Harry, 1 W. & W. (I.E. & M.,) 136.

But where the irregularity is relied upon as an objection, the filing of objections is no waiver. In re Newbigging, 1 W.W. & A'B. (I.E. & M.,) 33.

Order Nisi—Service—Proof.]—The debtor is not allowed to call viva voce evidence to prove that service of an order nisi is bad, where such service has been proved by affidavit. In re Clarton, 4 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 84.

Service of Order Nisi where Respondent is Travelling.]—The proper method of serving an order nisi on a person sought to be made insolvent, who is travelling, is not to send telegrams to correspondents in towns where the respondent may happen to be, but to send a person with the order on his track, and with instructions to follow the respondent till he be served. In re Finney, 1 A.L.T., 129.

Affidavit of Service of Order Nisi—Mode of Authenticating Order.]—An affidavit of service of an order nisi for sequestration should state that the order was signed and sealed. It is not sufficient to state the signature of the Judge. In re Passmore, 2 A.L.T., 44.

Affidavit of Service — Substituted Service — Time for Filing Notices of Objections — Act No. 379, Secs. 44, 45]—The affidavit of service of the order nisi should state the means of knowledge that the place mentioned was the last known place of abode or business of the debtor. Orders for substituted service should not fix an absolute time for filing notices of objection without having regard to the time of effecting service of the order nisi, but where service had been effected ten days before the time fixed by the order, it was held sufficient under Sec. 45. In re Hayes, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 98.

An affidavit stating a knocking at the door and no one answering it, without stating also the inference that no adult person was there capable or willing to accept service or at all is insufficient; an affidavit of substituted service should state means of knowledge that the place is the last known place of abode or business. In re Rook, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 107.

Substituted Service—Jurisdiction of Judge of Insolvent Court.]—An order nisi for sequestration had been granted, and the Judge of the Insolvent Court had granted an application for leave to substitute service on the insolvent, who was sworn to have left the colony, at his last place of abode, "L. Street, Carlton." Held, that the Judge had jurisdiction to make the order for substituted service, but that that part of it which described the last place of abode might be treated as surplusage. In re Adolphe Oppenheimer, 3 A.J.R., 94, 95.

Service of Order Nisi—Substituted Service.]—Service of an order nisi under an order for substituted service was effected upon the officer or messenger of the official assignee, who was the only person on the premises, the last known place of business of the insolvent, and who had been resident there for a week. Held that it was good service. In re Riordan, 9 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 1.

Substituted Service of Order Nisi—Motion for—Evidence in Support—"Insolvency Statute 1871," Sec. 44.] — The deposition of the sheriff's officer in support of a motion for an order for substituted service of an order nisi, under Sec. 44 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871," stated that six days after the order nisi was made, he went to the respondent's residence, but found him not at home, and, on making enquiries, ascertained that he was in New South Wales. Held not sufficient materials on which to grant an order for substituted service, the Court requiring more definite information of the respondent's absence from the colony. In re Campbell, 2 A.L.T., 4.

Substituted Service of Order Nisi—Affidavit—"Insolvency Statute 1871," Sec. 44.]—The affidavit of substituted service of an order nisi, under Sec. 44 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871," as to the fact that the insolvent resides on the premises where service was effected, should not be made on information, but on personal knowledge of the fact. In re Thomson, 1 A.L.T., 123.

Substituted Service.]—The order for substituted service must not be made part of the original order nisi. In re Merriman, 4 A.J.R., 31.

Substituted Service—"Insolvency Statute 1871," No. 379, Sec. 44.]—An order for substituted service should direct service at the last known place of abode, and not at any specified address. In re O'Connor, 4 A.J.R., 139.

Substituted Service — Notice of Objections.]—The order for substituted service should be on some person residing at and not being at the last known place of business. Where no time is fixed in the order of substituted service for delivery of objections, notice of objections is not necessary. In re Rickards, 5 A.J.R., 103.

Service of Order Nisi for Sequestration—Order for Substituted Service.] — Orders for substituted service of the order nisi for sequestration ought to specify a time within which notice of objections is to be given, or there should be some order doing so. In re Stewart, 2 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 1.

Order for Substituted Service of Order Nisi—Absolute Time Fixed for Lodging Notice of Objection.]—An order for the substituted service of an order nisi for sequestration, which fixed an absolute time for lodging objections, is not on that ground to be discharged; but it is a matter for consideration by the Court in allowing further time to file objections. In re Wolter, 4 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 75.

Enlargement of Order Nisi—5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 26.]—As a rule orders nisi for compulsory sequestration will not be enlarged "in hopes of a settlement" where the official assignee is not in possession. Good grounds must be shown for such enlargement. In re Keighran, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 8.

See also in re Downie and Murphy, ibid., p. 102.

Compare Sec. 39 of Act No. 379.

Order Nisi—Enlarging.]—The Court refused to enlarge an order nisi for sequestration on the ground that there were accounts pending in the Master's office between the alleged insolvent and the petitioning creditor, by which, when completed, a balance would be shown due from the petitioning creditor; or in default, to allow objections to be filed nunc pro tunc that the alleged insolvent was not indebted to the petitioning creditor, certain judgments on which the order nisi was founded having been obtained by default, owing to the poverty of the alleged insolvent. In re M'Manomonie, 1 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 53.

Order Nisi Not Enlarged—When Insolvency does not Lapse.]—An order nisi which sequestrated an estate till a given day, or "further" order was not enlarged on that day, owing to there being no single Judge sitting. Held, that the order being till "further order," the insolvency did not lapse. Ibid.

Mistake in Order Nisi—Enlargement of Time.]—Where a wrong date was by mistake inserted in the order nisi, making it returnable before it was issued, the Court enlarged the order for a week to serve an amended order, petitioner paying the costs of the day. In re Fenner, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 13; 2 A.L.T., 145.

Act No. 379, Secs. 44, 45, 46.]—Where an order nisi was served so as not to give the respondent the four days, within which to lodge objections, allowed by Sec. 45, the Court enlarged the order for a week, directing the order nisi and the enlarging order to be served in the manner prescribed by Sec. 44. In re Parsons, 7 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 118.

Service of Order Nisi—Enlargement.]—It cannot be presumed that the petitioning creditor has tried every available means to effect service; the power of enlargement is discretionary, and will only be exercised where due diligence has been used. In re McPherson, 1 A.L.T., 92; in re Crofts, 1 A.L.T., 112.

Who Should Serve—Enlargement of Order.]—Per Molesworth, J.—"It is not the duty of the sheriff's officer to serve the order nisi." Writs of fi fa were issued to a sheriff, who issued his warrants on them to his officer, who executed, and they were returned nulla bona. The petitioning creditor's solicitor forwarded to the officer an office copy of the order nisi for service on the insolvent, and the officer, after having failed to effect service, informed the solicitor thereof. An application for an enlargement of the order for fourteen days, in order to effect service of the petition, was refused. In re Doyle, 10 V L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 87.

(c) Notice of intention to oppose petition.

Objections to Order Nisi When Taken—5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 26.]—Preliminary objections to an order nisi, though grave ones, cannot be taken when cause comes to be shown, if they were not taken when an enlargement of the order was, on a previous occasion, opposed. If not taken then they will be deemed waived. In re McMurrey, 1 W. & W. (I.E. & M.,) 103.

Compare Secs. 39, 44, and 45 of Act No. 379.

Act No. 379, Secs. 44, 45—Time within which Notice of Objections to Order Nisi must be Signed—Agent.]—The combined effect of Secs. 44 and 45 is to allow the insolvent a greater time than four days in which to sign objections to the order nisi. Where an order nisi had been granted for sequestration, and the insolvent had left the colony, and an application had been made to sign objections by his agent (H.,) who was acting under a power of attorney which had ceased to be strictly applicable, Held that the insolvent might sign the objections within four days after the application, and failing that, that H., who appeared to be instructed more than any one else to act on insolvent's behalf, might sign objections within the same time. In re Adolphe Oppenheimer, 3 A.J.R., 103.

Notice of Objections—Application to Make Nunc Pro Tunc.]—An application to receive notice of objections, which has been lodged too late, nunc pro tunc can only be granted when there are materials before the Court for it to act upon. In re Clarton, 4 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 84.

Where an order nisi was served so as not to give the respondent the four days within which to lodge the objections allowed by Sec. 45, the Court enlarged the order for a week, directing the order nisi and the enlarging order to be served in the manner prescribed by Sec. 44. In re Parsons, 7 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 118.

As to time for signing objections where an order for substituted service of order nisi has been obtained, see In re Hayes, In re Rickards, In re Stewart, and in re Wolter, ante columns 611, 612, 613.

Filing Objections to Order Nisi—Sunday—"Insolvency Statute 1871," Sec. 45—Enlarging Time.]—When Sunday intervenes it counts in the four days allowed by Sec. 45 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871," for filing objections to an order nisi; but where Sunday does so intervene, and the four days have been allowed to elapse without filing objections, Semble, that the Court will almost, as a matter of course, allow further time for filing objections, if there are affidavits explaining the delay and showing merits. In re Counihan, 8 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 14.

Notice of Objections—Application to File Nunc Pro Tunc—Affidavit of Truth.]—Where there is an application to file nunc pro tunc, a notice of objections to a petition for sequestration, there having been an omission to file such notice at the proper time, the Court requires an affidavit that the objections are true. In re Fitzpatrick, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 6; 5 A.L.T., 213.

When Notice Dispensed With.]—Where the order permitting substituted service did not fix any time within which the notice of objections was to be filed, Molesworth, J., decided to hear the case in a week without requiring such notice. In re Brown, 3 A.J.R., 105.

For circumstances under which the Court will extend the time of filing notice of objections see in re Frazer, 1 A.L.T., 118.

Affidavit of no Intention to Oppose.]—On the hearing of an order nisi for sequestration, where no notice of intention to oppose the rule has been filed under Sec. 45 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871," it is unnecessary for the petitioning creditor to file an affidavit that no such notice has been filed. In re Mowling and Dunkley, 2 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 7.

Filing Objections.]—The Court takes notice of objections filed or otherwise without affidavit, and there is no necessity for an affidavit of the fact that no notice of objections has been filed. In re Klemm, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 105.

Act No. 379, Sec. 45—Signature of Notice of Objections.]—The notice of objections under Sec. 45 must be signed by the insolvent personally, and not by his attorney, but on consent all technical objections were waived. In re McDonald, 1 A.L.T., 112.

Serving Objections Without Signature When Allowed.]—Where personal service of an order nisi has been dispensed with, on the ground that the alleged insolvent has departed from out the jurisdiction, leave will be given to him to serve objections without signature. In re Brann, 3 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 6.

Notice of Objection When Required—"Insolvency Statute 1871," Sec. 45.]—Sec. 45 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871" only requires notice of objection to be given where it is intended to dispute facts, or set up facts by way of avoidance; and does not apply to objections on the face of the proceedings. In re Reade, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 83.

An order nisi omitted the word "within" from the statement that the act of insolvency "occurred within six months before the presentation of the petition." Held that no notice of objection was necessary to entitle the debtor to object to the omission. Ibid.

Act No. 379, Sec. 45—Of What Objections Notice Required—Omission in Jurat of Affidavit.]—An objection that the jurat of the petitioning creditor's affidavit has an important date omitted is a special defence of which notice should be given in the notice of objections under Sec. 45. In re Ryan, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 122; 3 A.L.T., 52.

Summons—Objection to Improper Service—Waiver.]—On an order nisi for compulsory sequestration, filing other objections by the alleged insolvent, operates as a waiver of an objection that the summons has been improperly served. In re Harry, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 136.

Objections for Insufficiency of Service—When not Precluded.]—An alleged insolvent is not debarred from having an order against him discharged on the ground of insufficient service, by the fact that he has filed notice of objection one of which is upon the ground of the irregularity of the proceedings. In re Newbigging, 1 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 33.

The fact that the certificate for costs endorsed on the petition is of security in the matter of an insolvent of another name, constitutes an objection to the jurisdiction, and the service by the insolvent of notice of points to be disputed is not an obstacle to his urging the objection. It is only as to objections to service that such notice has been held a waiver. In re Sanders, 1 V. R. (I. E. & M.,) 1; 1 A.J.R., 38.

Objections by Debtor—Act No. 375, Sec. 45.]—Where, on an order nisi for sequestration, the act of insolvency relied on is the non-satisfaction of an execution, the debtor will not be permitted to impeach the judgment upon which the execution issued. Such an objection should have been set up as a defence to the action at law. In re Morris, 2 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 2.

Form of Order Nisi—Objection to When Sustainable—Act No. 379, Sec. 45.]—An objection that the petitioning creditor's debt is stated in the order nisi as "for goods sold and delivered," instead of as "for money payable for goods sold and delivered," is a mere technical objection, and cannot be sustained. In re Wolter, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 75.

For other objections as to form of petition or order nisi, see in re Murray, ante column 605; in re Palmer, ante column 606; and in re Rickards, ante column 605.

On Making Married Woman Insolvent Under Sec. 218 of "The Bankruptcy Act, 1861—Separate Property.]—On an application under Sec. 218 of "The Bankruptcy Act 1861," 24 and 25 Vic., Cap. 134, to sequestrate the estate of a married woman who had been made insolvent in New South Wales, had afterwards married, and had come to Victoria, it is not sufficient to show that she has separate property in Victoria, without also showing that she has acquired such property before her insolvency, and before contracting the debts upon which she has been made insolvent in New South Wales. In re Dickson, 5 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 4.

Married Woman—Separate Property—Judgment Recovered.]—In a petition for sequestration against a married woman for not satisfying a judgment, the notice of objections stating she had not been asked to satisfy it, it is not necessary to allege that she has separate property. The judgment recovered against her is prima facie evidence that she has separate property. In re Willison, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 67.

But where the order nisi stated that a married woman had property to her separate use, and that execution was returned unsatisfied, and the objections were to the effect that she had not real or personal property in respect of which she could be made insolvent, Held that the judgment was not prima facie evidence, and that petitioning creditor must prove his whole case. In re Cunningham, 5 V.L.R. (I. P.& M.,) 60.

Order Nisi—To Sequestrate Estate of Married Woman—Judgment—Carrying on Business—Evidence of Separate Property.]—An order nisi to sequestrate the estate of a married woman recited that she was "possessed of property within the colony of Victoria for her separate use." The act of insolvency alleged was the not satisfying a judgment, and there was an averment that she carried on business as a licensed victualler. Held that the order nisi need not show how the property was for her separate use, or follow the words of Sec. 21 of the "Married Women's Property Act," since the fact that a judgment had been recovered against her, and that she carried on business, was sufficient prima facie evidence that she had separate property. In re Nelson, 2 A.L.T., 27.

Per Molesworth, J.—If it were necessary, this would be a clear case for amendment. Ibid.

Admissibility of Evidence in Other Proceedings—Under "Insolvency Statute 1871," Sec. 19.]—There is nothing in Sec. 19 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871," to render inadmissible written admissions or statements which have been used in other proceedings—e.g., the examination of one of the creditors in the insolvency proceedings. Re Maley, 4 A.J.R., 7.

Petitioning Creditor's Costs—What are.]—Costs of prosecuting insolvent's son for perjury disallowed as not being petitioning creditors costs within Sec. 17 of Act No. 273. Costs of opposing certificate of investigating insolvent's conduct and dealings, and of appointment of petitioning creditor as trade assignee similarly disallowed. In re Kingsland, 6 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 25; N.C., 39.

Taxation.]—Commissioner ordered to re-tax petitioning creditor's costs in the presence of the insolvent's solicitor unless all parties agreed to their being fixed at a lump sum. Ibid.

Petitioning Creditor's Costs—Act No. 379.]—Per Molesworth, J., "After the order nisi the petitioning creditor must at his own expense prosecute the proceedings, and if the order is made absolute the estate is primarily liable for them. Sec. 151 contains no provisions under which if a composition supersedes the sequestration, these costs could be enforced, so that a majority of creditors if they could act under Sec. 157 against the consent of the petitioning creditors might defeat those inchoate rights." In re Marie, 3 A.J.R., 6.

Of Solicitor—Should be Taxed Before Filing Plan.]—A solicitor charged an insolvent certain costs, but did not show promptitude in taxing and presenting his costs before the plan of distribution was filed, and the assignee refused to pay the balance found due on taxation after the plan was filed. The solicitor entered a caveat against the confirmation of the plan, and in person moved to amend the plan by the insertion of the unpaid balance of his taxed costs. Held, that the solicitor should have ascertained and had his costs taxed with the greatest promptitude, so that his claim should not be a clog upon the filing of the plan, and motion refused. In re Anmer, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,)100.

As to costs of setting aside settlements see ante column 478.

As to costs of trustees and assignees see post under sub-heading TRUSTEES.

Of Petitioning Creditor.]—Where a petitioning creditor had before the order nisi for sequestration been refused inspection of a deed of assignment (the alleged act of insolvency) the Court allowed him his costs under the circumstances, although it discharged the order. In re Haslam, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 10.

Costs of Person Taking Objections.]—An objection, though technical, if fairly taken at the proper time entitles the successful objector to costs. In re Phelan, 3 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 1.

Of Order Nisi—Creditor Obtaining With Notice of Proceedings for Composition.]—Where a creditor obtained an order nisi with notice that a preliminary resolution for composition under Sec. 181 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871," had been passed, the order nisi was dismissed with costs against him. In re White, 2 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 42; 2 A.J.R., 132.

On discharge of an order nisi upon an objection taken by the Court and not by counsel, no order was made as to costs. In re Barry, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 174.

Of Petition and Appeal—Partners Appearing Separately.]—Where a petition was presented for the sequestration of the property of a firm, and the members appeared separately, and offered the same defence and the same notices of opposition, the Full Court varied the order dismissing the petition and order nisi by allowing the members of the firm only one set of costs for the petition, and limited the costs of the appeal in the same way. In re Thomas and Cowie, 9 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 2, 16; 5 A. L. T. 95.

Setting off Against Debt.]—On discharge of an order nisi with costs, the Court will not always set off the costs against the debt. In re Whitesides, 3 A.J.R., 115.

(f) Other Points of Practice.

"Supreme Court Rules," Cap. 10—"Miscellaneous."]—Cap. 10 of the "Supreme Court Rules," headed "Miscellaneous," applies to proceedings in the Insolvency Jurisdiction. In re Stephenson, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 114.

Rules of Court made under the Insolvent Act, No. 273.]—There is nothing in the Act 28 Vic., No. 273, which gives to the rules made under it the effect of an Act of Parliament. They are framed to govern the general practice of the Court, but are not to be made the masters of the Court, and may be relaxed in accordance with the exigencies of the occasion. In re Brann, 3 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 6.

5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 25.]—Where a summons was taken out four days after order nisi for sequestration, Held that that complied with word "forthwith" in Sec. 25 of the Act. In re Trevarrow, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & .M,) 84

[Compare Sec. 21 of Act No. 379.]

Act No. 379, Sec. 29—Signature of Judge—Judicial Notice.]—The Court in its Insolvency Jurisdiction takes judicial notice of the signature of one of its Judges to an order nisi for sequestration, and of the office by virtue of which he signed it. In re Cooper, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 82.

Lapse of Order Nisi—Act No. 379, Sec. 39.]—Semble, per Molesworth, J., the lapse of an order nisi (the order not being discharged) revests the estate in the debtor subject to the right of another creditor taking the order up. In re Ray, 1 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 56.

Order Nisi for Sequestration Abates by Death.]—An order nisi for sequestration abates by the death of the alleged insolvent, and cannot be revived, or otherwise carried on against his representatives, being a proceeding in personam and not in rem. In re Mann, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 103.

Not Satisfying Debtor's Summons—Making Order Absolute.]—Making absolute an order nisi for sequestration where the act of insolvency is not satisfying a debtor's summons, does not affirm the existence of the debt, but the insolvent may afterwards dispute it in the Insolvent Court. In re Counihan, 8 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 14.

Orders — Signing — Judge's Associate.] — An order in insolvency, signed by the associate of a Judge of the Supreme Court, other than the Judge who made the order, is not thereby bad. In re Wolter, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 75.

(4) Reviving Sequestration.

Revivor of Order Nisi—5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 28.]—Where an order nisi lapses through no one appearing on either side when the case is called on it is practically superseded within the meaning of Sec. 28, and no express order for that purpose is necessary to enable a creditor to revive it. In re Butchart, 2 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 8.

For S.P. see in re Von Der Heyde, ibid p. 28.

Where a person takes up an order nisi, based upon sufficient materials in fact, he ought not to be defeated by a defect in the original petition, and in spite of such defect may revive the order nisi. In re Butchart, 2 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 8.

[Compare Sec. 49 of Act No. 379.]

Petition to Revive Sequestration—Service of.]—The original petitioning creditor need not be served with notice of an application under 5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 28, to revive a sequestration. Ex parte White, 1 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 24.

[Compare Sec. 49 of Act No. 379.]

Petition for Revival of Sequestration—What Allegation Necesssary.]—A petition under 5 Vic., No. 171, Sec. 28, for revival of a sequestration, after setting out the debt, and act of bankruptcy, alleged that, though the insolvent appeared, the petitioning creditor colluding with him, made default in appearing, so that the order nisi was, in consequence, superseded, and the petition dismissed. The collusion was not proved. Held that proof of default alone was sufficient without collusion, and that the allegation of collusion was mere surplusage. Ex parte Staughton, 1 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 15.

[Compare Sec. 49 of Act. No. 379.]

Petition for Revival of Sequestration—What Petitioner Must Provs.]—A creditor seeking to revive a sequestration, must prove his own debt to be a good petitioning creditor's debt, and must prove the insolvency in all other respects, save that he need not prove that the original petitioning creditor's debt was a good one. Ex parte Staughton, 1 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 15.

Application to Revive Sequestration—Dismissal when no Bar to Subsequent Application.]—The dismissal of an application by two out of three executors, under 5 Vic. No. 17, Sec. 28, for a revival of a sequestration of the estate of a debt or of their testator, on the ground that two out of three executors could not so apply, is no bar to a subsequent application by another creditor for a revival. Ex parte White, 1 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 24.

[Compare Sec. 49 of Act No. 379.]

When Creditor Seeks to Revive a Sequestration.]—Upon an application to revive a sequestration, it is not necessary that the debt owing to him should have been incurred before the act of insolvency relied on; it is enough if it be incurred prior to the order for sequestration. Ibid.

[Compare Sec. 49 of Act No. 379 as to provisions for reviving a sequestration.]

Nature of Dsbt—Advance to a Partner under Act No. 179.]—B. and J. entered into an agreement by deed, by which J. stipulated to become an anonymous partner, although the business was carried on in the name of B. and Co. J. advanced £500, and stipulated for a share of profits not of losses. He made further advances without any provision as to increased share of profits in reference to these advances. On a petition by J. for revivor of order nisi for sequestration of B.'s estate, Held that the transaction was one in which the original £500 and the subsequent advances could be severed, and that as to these advances he stood in the relation of any other creditor. Order absolute for revivor of sequestration. In re Butchart, 2 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 8.

Voluntary Sequestration — Notice.] — In an application to set aside a voluntary sequestration of a firm's estate made by one partner only of the firm, the official assignee does not represent all parties so as to dispense with the service of notice upon "all the parties," and notice to the assignee is not enough, but must be given to "all the parties" including the party voluntarily sequestrating. In re Yorston and Webster, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 96.

Uncsrtificatsd Insolvent.]—In May, 1858, an insolvent's estate was sequestrated, but the insolvent was described as James B. instead of John B., and no certificate of discharge was obtained. In April, 1865, an order for a second sequestration was made. This second sequestration was set aside on the ground that B. was an uncertificated insolvent at the time of the second sequestration. In re Bryan, 2 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 20.

On What Grounds.]—The Court refused to set aside an order of sequestration on an application alleging that the petition did not value the security, and that it had been fraudulently obtained because the petitioning creditor had only a future contingent debt, being satisfied that the proceedings had been regular, that there had been no undue attempt to catch the judgment of the Court over a party who had no opportunity of defending himself, and that the conduct of the insolvent had been such as to justify the petitioning creditor in regarding him as an absconding debtor. In re Rowley, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 50.

Quære, whether the Court has any, and, if any, in what cases jurisdiction to set aside a sequestration. Ibid.

VII. Composition Deeds and Deeds of Assignment.

[Note.—Deeds of assignment are no longer protective in insolvency, being made acts of insolvency under Act No. 379, Sec. 37, Sub-sec. 1, except that under Sec. 69 a certain protection is given to certain acts and things done.]

Deed of Assignmsnt—Proof of Execution by Trustess—5 Vic. No. 9, Sec. 33.]—R. W. executed a deed of assignment of all his property to trustees for the benefit of all his creditors, under 5 Vic., No. 9, Sec. 33, but it appeared that the attestation clause of the deed as it originally stood ran thus:—"Signed, sealed, and delivered by the said R. W. in the presence of and attested by H. W. F., J.P.;" so that it made no mention of the execution by the trustees in H. W. F's. presence. Nearly a year afterwards the attestation was amended by H. W. F. certifying that he saw the deed executed by the trustees as well as by R. W., at one and the same time. On a rule nisi for compulsory sequestration against R. W. for not satisfying the sentence of a competent Court being thereunto required, the deed of assignment was shown as cause against sequestration. Held, that the principle of expressio unius exclusio alterius applied, and that the execution must be taken to have been as shown by the attestation as it originally stood; that the omission could not be subsequently corrected, and that the subsequent addition did not cure the defect; that the deed must be held not to have been executed and attested in conformity with the Act, and to be invalid, and no excuse for the alleged act of insolvency. In re Woolley, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 81.

Deed of Assignmsnt in Favour of Crsditors—5 Vic., No. 9—7 Vic., No. 19, Sec. 8.]—A deed of assignment in favour of creditors has no validity under 5 Vic., No. 9, until executed by a majority of creditors in number and value, though it may be good at common law the moment it is signed by debtor, and does not protect the assignor under 7 Vic., No. 19, Sec. 8, from being made insolvent until so executed. In re Lawrance, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 45.

5 Vic. No. 17, Sec. 5.]—Where such a deed contains an ultimate trust of possible surplus for the assignor, such assignor has "disposable property" within the meaning of Sec. 5 of No. 17. Ibid.

Deed of Assignmsnt—7 Vic., No. 12, Sec. 8—How Far a Protection Against an Act of Insolvency.]—A deed of assignment in favour of creditors, executed by a majority of creditors in number and value, but not by four-fifths, is a sufficient excuse under Sec. 8 of the Act for not pointing out property to Sheriff levying an execution, and order nisi for sequestration discharged; but concurrence of four-fifths of the creditors is necessary to make the release operative. In re Hall, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 87.

Deed of Assignment—How Far a Protection Against an Act of Insolvency.]—A deed of assignment for the benefit of creditors is not complete until executed by a majority in number and value of the creditors. Such a deed, until so executed, will afford no protection from not pointing out property to the Sheriff levying an execution; and no protection against sequestration following on the act of insolvency will be afforded by the subsequent execution of the deed by the necessary majority. In re Ellis, 3 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 11.

Deed of Assignment—Protection Afforded By.]—A deed of assignment under the "Insolvency Statute 1865," if executed by a bare majority in number and value of the creditors, will afford protection against not pointing out property to satisfy an execution on a judgment obtained before or after the execution of the deed. In re Curle, 3 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. &M.,) 56, 63.

"Insolvency Statute 1865," No. 273, Sec. 115—Deed no Excuse for Not Satisfying Debt on Debtor's Summons.]—On an order nisi for sequestration, a deed of assignment in favour of creditors was relied upon as a defence. The deed contained a clause that no creditor executing should be entitled to a dividend upon a greater sum than trustees should certify to be due. Held that the sole power given to the trustees was bad, and that under Sec. 115 of No. 273, it was not an excuse for not satisfying a debt on a debtor's summons. Order absolute. In re M'Donald, 5 A.J.R., 45.

5 Vic., No. 9, Sec. 37—Where Prior Mortgage Good as Against Deed of Assignment.]—By a deed poll, T. assigned his interest in certain leasehold property to A. to secure a debt of £2000 then owing, and to secure further advances. Within 60 days afterwards T. assigned all his property upon trust for his creditors, the lease being mentioned in the schedule as subject to mortgages, and the deed providing for creditors executing without prejudice to their securities. A. executed, as a creditor, for £1250, but did not do so expressly as without prejudice to his securities. The agents for the trustees sold the property. On bill by A. and his representatives praying for an account and payment or foreclosure, Held that the mortgage was not fraudulent under Sec. 37 of the Act, that section relating to chattels, personal only, and that A.'s execution of the deed was sufficient to protect his security; and that any objection against the validity of the mortgage was one which the trustees could only take personally, and not purchasers from them. Tuckett v. Alexander, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 87.

Deed Executed by One Partner Only, How Far it Binds the Firm.]—The execution, by one member of a firm as trustee, of a deed of assignment for the benefit of creditors, does not bind the firm as creditors, as a relinquishment of the debt, and will not operate as a bar to proceedings by the firm for compulsory sequestration of the assignor's estate. In re Crate, 3 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 13.

Deed of Assignment—Not Executed by a Majority of Creditors—28 Vic., No. 273, Sec. 29.]—A deed of assignment to a trustee for the benefit of creditors, which contains a release of debts, and which is executed by some, but not by a majority of the creditors, is valid under Sec. 29 of the "Insolvency Statute 1865," and the release by some of the creditors is a sufficient consideration. Such a deed will give the trustee a good title to the property assigned as against the official assignee under a subsequent sequestration. Aarons v. Board of Land and Works, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 107.

Act No. 273.]—A deed of assignment in favour of all such creditors as might execute it within 20 days was held not to be a deed of assignment for the benefit of all the creditors within the meaning of the Act. Port v. London Chartered Bank, 1 V.R. (L.,) 162.

And a deed of assignment in favour of creditors is not per se a fraudulent preference. Goodman v. M'Callum, post column 630.

Composition Deeds—General Construction and Operation.]—Where on an order nisi for sequestration in consequence of failing to point out sufficient property to satisfy a judgment, a deed of assignment in favour of creditors, was set up as a defence, Held (1) that the deed lying in the solicitor's office from August 14th until August 25th, and the advertisements properly describing the place where it was, the "Insolvent Act" 5 Vic., No. 17, had been complied with; (2) that it was not necessary that the attestation by a magistrate should be dated; (3) that a provision that the trustees should retain a commission not exceeding five per cent. did not invalidate it, such being protected under Sec. 51 of No. 17 (also under Sec. 62 of No. 273;) (4) that a provision for some creditors not enumerated in the schedule, did not invalidate it under Sec. 115 of Act No. 273, Sec. 118 of the same Act showing that a wilful and material omission only would do so; (5) that a provision that after it had been signed by three-quarters in number and value of the creditors, the majority of creditors might allow furniture and some other payments to the debtor, did not invalidate it; (6) that a provision that after three-fourths in number and value had signed other creditors might be paid, did not invalidate it; (7) that an arbitration clause as to disputed debts coming into effect after the deed was so signed as above was good, and (8) that a provision that each signing creditor should release his debt was not invalid. Order nisi discharged. In re Von Der Heyde, 2 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 28.

Deed of Assignment—Setting Aside—Omission of Assets from Schedule, Act No. 273, Sec. 118.]—An insolvent executed a deed of assignment for the benefit of his creditors under Part 13 of the "Insolvency Statute 1865." Subsequently his estate was compulsorily sequestrated. There was an omission from the schedule to the deed of a sum of £700, which had been secreted by the insolvent. On rule nisi to set aside the deed, Held, reversing Molesworth, J., that the omission from the schedule was a wilful and material non-compliance with the Act within the meaning of Sec. 118 of the "Insolvency Statute 1865;" and that the Judge below should have exercised his discretion in either setting it aside, or depriving the insolvent of all benefit thereunder; and rule made absolute. In re Brann, 3 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 47.

Deed of Assignment—"Insolvency Statute 1865"—Retention of Separate Estate by Debtor.]—A deed of assignment under the "Insolvency Statute 1865" contained a clause, that when executed by four-fifths of the creditors, the debtors, who were partners, might retain their separate real estate, and that the trustees should convey it to them; and that the trustees should be allowed a commission of five per cent. on the gross proceeds realised under the deed. Held, that the insertion of these provisions did not make the deed void. Moss v. Levy, 1 V. R. (L.,) 94; 1 A. J. R., 92.

Deed of Assignment—What Schedule Must Contain.]—The schedule to a deed of assignment under the "Insolvency Statute 1865," by partners should contain all the creditors and all the property, both joint and separate; but an omission in either respect does not necessarily invalidate the deed, or prevent its affording, till set aside, protection against not pointing out property in satisfaction of an execution. In re Curle, 3 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 56.

Deed of Assignment—Wearing Apparel Should be Excepted.]—The debtor's wearing appeal is property excepted from assignment by a deed of assignment under the "Insolvency Statute 1865," as well as omitted from the schedule to the deed. Ibid.

What is a Valid Deed under Sec. 115 of "Insolvency Statute 1865," No. 273.]—In Sec. 115 of Act, No. 273, the word "or" between "conveyance" and "assignment" must be read "and," since an assignment will not pass real estate. A debtor who wishes to take advantage of a deed under that Sec. must convey all his real and personal estate, whether he knows of the property or not; it is not sufficient if an assignment is proved of personalty only, even though the debtor swear that so far as he knows he has no realty. Caro v. Devine, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 258; N.C., 67.

By Partners—Not Noticing Separate Estate, Invalid.]—A deed of assignment purporting to be under Part 13 of the "Insolvency Statute 1865," executed by partners assigning all their estate, but not noticing separate estate or creditors, is not a good deed under the Act. In re Upton and Bowes, 2 V.R. (E.,) 117; 2 A.J.R., 68.

Trustees of Creditor's Deed—Not Estopped by Execution of Invalid Deed] — Trustees of an insolvent who had executed a deed of assignment which was held to be invalid were held not to be estopped by the execution from availing themselves of the invalidity of the deed as against a creditor who had obtained a rule nisi under Sec. 121 of "Insolvency Statute 1865." calling upon them to pay a dividend to him under the deed, but the rule was discharged without costs. Ibid.

Deed of Assignment—Memorial of Registration.]—The memorial of registration of a deed of assignment under the "Insolvency Statute 1865" should be a copy of the entire schedule of property, both real and personal; but the Act is, in this respect, directory only, and non-compliance with its provisions does not render the deed void. But, semble, per Stawell, C.J., that all that the Act requires is that a copy of the schedule, so far as the real estate is concerned, should be registered. In re Curle, 3 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 56, 59, 64.

Deed of Assignment—Registration—Insolvency Statute 1865, Sec. 116.]—The 116th Sec. of the "Insolvency Statute 1865" as to the registration of the schedules of personalty and memorials of realty to deeds of assignment is directory, and not mandatory. Moss v. Levy, 1 V.R. (L.,) 94; 1 A.J.R., 92.

Creditor's Deed—When Valid—Executed by Attorney Under Unregistered Power.]—See Stacpoole v. Glass, 1 V.R. (L.,) 195; 1 A.J.R., 154. Post under POWER OF ATTORNEY.

Trust Deed for Benefit of Creditors—Who May Compel Payment of Dividends Under.]—An assignee for value of a debt due on bills of exchange is an "interested party" within the meaning of the "Insolvency Statute 1865," Sec. 121, so as to be able to compel the trustees of a trust deed for creditors to pay him a dividend. In re Sloman, 1 A.J.R., 110; 1 V.R. (E.,) 129.

Act No. 273, Sec. 121—Dividend Not Payable to a Non-executing Creditor.]—Until a deed of assignment is executed by a majority of the creditors in number and value, it does not become a deed under the Act, and therefore execution of the deed is necessary. A bank was a creditor to the extent of £7000, and they refused to execute a deed of assignment because the trustees only recognised their claim to the extent of £3000. Without the bank there would not be the majority sufficient to constitute the deed a release of debts. Held, per Molesworth, J., that the trustees need not pay the dividend unless the bank executed the deed, but that the signature by the bank should be accompanied by a memorandum limiting its effect to the £3000. Held, on appeal, that the bank was bound to execute, but that the execution was not to be so limited. In re McDonald, 3 A.J.R., 106, 130.

Assignment of Estate to Trustee under 5 Vic., No. 9—Duty of Trustee.]—By an assignment in trust for creditors it was provided that no creditor should be entitled to receive a dividend upon any greater sum than the trustee should certify to be due, and that the trustee should act under the direction of a meeting of creditors as to whether claims should be admitted or not. On rule nisi by a creditor for payment of a dividend on a debt claimed by him, but which the trustee refused to certify, and under direction of a meeting of creditors declined to pay a dividend upon, Held, that it was the duty of the trustee to exercise such a discretion as the deed reposed in him, and rule discharged; but it appearing that its provisions came upon the applicant as a surprise, without costs. Ex parte Nathan, 1 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 107.

Execution—Interest.]—A creditor before taking any benefit of distribution under a creditor's deed of assignment must execute it, but his execution is not a condition precedent to his proving in the Master's office for his debt. Semble, that creditors are entitled to interest on their debts up to the date of payment, the method of distribution being payment of principal and interest of all debts down to date of deed, and then the balance of interest out of the surplus if any. Heape v. Hawthorne, 2 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 76, 87, 89.

Deeds of Assignment—Heading.]—Proceedings as to deeds of assignment under the "Insolvency Statute 1865," are to be headed as heretofore, "In Equity," not "In Insolvency." In re Brann, 3 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 111.

Setting Aside Assignment—Parties.]—Where a bill is filed to set aside a deed altogether, the trustees do not represent the cestui que trustent. Therefore where a suit was brought by the official assignee of a debtor to set aside an assignment for the benefit of all the debtor's creditors, it was held that the trustee did not sufficiently represent the creditors who were necessary parties. Goodman v. M'Callum, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 135, 136.

Creditor's Deed—Not Signed by Majority—Setting Aside—No. 273, Part 13, Sec. 118—No. 379, Sec. 2]—A creditor's deed purporting to be made under Part 13 of the "Insolvency Statute 1865," and executed by the debtor and trustees, was not signed by a majority in number and value of the creditors as required by Part 13 of the Act. On motion to set it aside, Held that the Court had jurisdiction to set the deed aside under Sec. 118 of the "Insolvency Statute 1865," although the deed was not signed by a majority in number and value; and semble, that such a deed is a deed "executed under Part 13" within the meaning of the "Insolvency Statute 1871," Sec. 2. On appeal, Held that since the trustees had executed the deed, as one under Part 13, they were precluded from saying that it was not a statutory deed: and that the Act of 1871 did not repeal Part 13 of the Act of 1865 so as to deprive the Court of jurisdiction under Part 13. In re Knowles, 2 V. R. (I. E. & M.,) 8; 2 A. J. R., 8, 41.

Assignment for Benefit of Creditors—Subsequent Insolvency—Payment of Dividend—"Insolvency Statute 1871," Sec. 69.]—Per Noel, J. An assignment to trustees for the benefit of creditors generally is included in Sec. 69 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871," without any reservation, and is therefore void. In re Finney, 1 A. L. T., 187.

A debtor assigned his property to a trustee for the benefit of his creditors generally, and dividends were paid to some. Three of his creditors refused to agree to the assignment, and more than six months after the assignment sequestrated his estate. Property had been collected and dividends paid under the assignment. Held, per Noel, J., that the assignment was void against the trustee in insolvency, that the undistributed property passed to him, that the trustee in insolvency was entitled to the dividends retained for, but not paid to the dissentient creditors, and to money subsequently collected for the payment of further dividends, and that the creditors who had executed the deed could prove on the estate for the balance of their debts. Ibid.

Deed of Assignment—How Far a Defence to Action at Law.]—To an action on a bill of exchange the defendants pleaded a deed of assignment to trustees for the benefit of creditors, in bar. The deed was executed by four-fifths in number and value of the defendant's creditors as required by the "Insolvency Statute 1865," and contained a clause empowering "any meeting of creditors called and convened as aforesaid to give any direction respecting the household furniture and other household effects," of each of the assignors; and "also to give any directions respecting any allowance" to the assignors out of their "property or business." Held, on demurrer, that though this clause might give rise to difficulties and embarrass the trustees, yet it did not invalidate the deed, and that the plea was good. Levy v. Katzenstein, 3 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 80.

Assignment for Benefit of Creditors—Effect of at Law.]—A debtor who assigns all his property to trustees for the benefit of his creditors on the faith of an agreement on their part that the debts due to them should be suspended, if not extinguished, cannot afterwards be sued by those creditors for these debts. Goldsbrough v. M'Culloch, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 113, 124.

Deed of Assignment—Operation at Common Law—Proof.]—A deed of assignment, though not good under the "Insolvency Statute," may be good at common law, and sufficient to pass the property comprised in it, and such a deed, as a conveyance at common law, may be proved without producing the attesting justice. White v. Young, 1 V.R. (L.,) 188; 1 A.J.R., 151.

Deed of Assignment—Consideration—Construction and Operation at Law—Execution by Creditors.]—A memorandum of agreement was signed by B., by which he made S. a trustee for his creditors as set out in the document. Two of the creditors who had not signed this document brought an action to recover from S., as garnishee, the value of the money which B. had handed over to S. Held that the deed was not without consideration, and therefore good, and that the deed being without an express or implied condition that it should not take effect until a certain number of creditors signed it, it took effect immediately upon its execution by the debtor and the majority of the creditors who had executed it. Rule absolute to enter verdict for S. Davey v. Schurmann, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 188.

Execution Against Land—Who Entitled to Proceeds.]—B., a County Court bailiff, seized under execution the land of a judgment debtor. After seizure and before sale, he received information by informal notice of the sequestration of the judgment debtor's estate and of S.'s appointment as his official assignee. B. sold the property and paid out of the proceeds £32 to the landlord for rent, and paid the rest into Court. S. sued B. to recover the £32 as paid by the defendant in his own wrong. There was a verdict for B. On rule nisi for a new trial or to enter verdict for plaintiff, Held that B.'s act was not analagous to the payment of debts by an executor de son tort, and was not similarly protected; that B. paid the debt without due authority, and which the official assignee himself could not have paid until the landlord had taken proper proceedings under the insolvent law. Rule absolute to enter verdict for plaintiff for £32. Simpson v. Burrowes, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 150.

What Constitutes—5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 8.]—M bought goods from Y. on "sale or return," and for shipment to O., with the understanding that, if not sold there, they might be returned to Y. within a reasonable time. M. insured the goods for the voyage to O. On the way they were totally lost, and M. recovered a verdict for their value from the insurance company. M. and Y. agreed that Y. should receive the amount of the policy from the company, in discharge of M.'s debt to him for the goods. M.'s debt to Y. would thus have been paid in full. There were then other creditors of M., who sequestrated his estate within 60 days of the arrangement, and C. was appointed his assignee. On an interpleader summons a feigned issue was tried between C. and Y. as to their right to the amount of the policy, and the Judge directed the jury that the transaction between M. and Y. was void under 5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 8, as a preference to Y. over M.'s other then existing creditors. Upon appeal, held that the direction was right. Per Stawell, C.J., and Barry, J.—No question of intent arises under the 8th Sec; and per Stawell, C.J.—If the payment or delivery be within 60 days, it seems irresistible that it has the effect of preferring. Younghusband v. Courtney, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 55.

Fraudulent Preference—5 Vic., No. 17., Sec. 73.]—Regina v. Wallis, see post under Offences by Insolvent.

Assignment for Benefit of Creditors—Sequestration—Acts 5 Vic., No. 9, 5 Vic., No. 17, Secs. 5, 6, and 8.]—By indenture dated 13th July, 1861, H. assigned all his real and personal estate to trustees for the benefit of all his creditors. On the 17th July, H. became insolvent, and the plaintiff was appointed official assignee. On the latter day the requisites of 5 Vic., No. 9, as to the deed of assignment to creditors had not been complied with. The official assignee filed a bill against the trustees of the deed only, alleging it to be if valid at common law yet fraudulent and void in equity as against himself, and praying for a declaration to that effect, and a reconveyance by the trustees to himself. Held, on demurrer, that the deed was not a fraudulent alienation or transfer within 5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 5; that on the facts stated in the bill it could not be inferred that the deed was either an alienation without consideration within Sec. 6, or an alienation having the effect of preferring one existing creditor to another under Sec. 8. Goodman v. M'Callum, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 135.

What is Not — Assignee Retaining Contract Moneys to Which Others were Entitled—Act 5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 8.]—H. contracted to erect buildings at the Melbourne Hospital, and applied to A. and Co. for assistance in the shape of cash and materials, which A. and Co. by writing agreed to give, in consideration of H. giving orders duly acknowledged by the treasurer to receive the contract monies. H gave a note which was acted on to the treasurer to pay to A. and Co. the contract monies. H. became insolvent, and J, his official assignee, took up and finished the contracts, and received £170 more than he had expended. Action by A. and Co. against J. for money had and received. Held, that J. received the money and held it subject to the arrangement between H. and A. and Co., and that he was in no better position than H. would have been, and that the case did not fall under the Act 5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 8, as a fraudulent preference. Anderson v. Jacomb, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 269.

Inadequate Consideration.]—When the consideration for a conveyance, executed within sixty days preceding an order for sequestration of the grantor's estate, is the release of a debt due by the grantor to the grantee, such conveyance is a "preferring" of the releasing creditor within the meaning of 5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 8. Jacomb v. Donovan. 1 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 66.

Where C. under a conveyance executed on the 17th July, 1863, conveyed his equity of redemption in real estate to D., for an inadequate consideration and under suspicious circumstances, and on the 30th day of the same month an order nisi was made for the sequestration of C.'s estate, and the consideration was the release of a debt due by C. to D., on bill by the official assignee of C.'s estate to set aside the conveyance, Held, that the conveyance was fraudulent and void, both at common law, and under 13 Eliz., Cap. 5., the dealing showing embarrassment of the grantor, near approach of insolvency, a connection between the parties and inadequacy of price, and therefore raising a strong suspicion of fraud. Ibid.

[The corresponding Sec. of Act No. 379 is Sec. 71.]

Transfer of Bills of Exchange Within Sixty Days of Sequestration—Pressure—5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 8.] —S., in 1860, borrowed £1500 from W., and gave him a warrant of attorney and bond for the amount. Judgment was never entered up on the warrant of attorney, but a writ was issued by W., and by arrangement judgment was signed in the action. W.'s agent, by dint of threats and pressure, in January 1862, obtained certain payments in cash and two bills of exchange from S., who then absconded, and within sixty days of the transaction his estate was sequestrated. His assignee sought to recover the proceeds of the bills of exchange from W., contending that the mere transfer of them was void under Sec. 8 of No. 17., by the mere fact, that it was made within sixty days next preceding the sequestration, and that W. was preferred to other then existing creditors, even though there were no question of fraud or intent. The jury found for the defendant; and found specifically that the transfer was made by S. bona fide. On rule nisi to enter a verdict for the assignee, Held, that the transfer not being voluntary, it was not void under Sec. 8 of 5 Vic., No. 17; and rule nisi discharged. Courtney v. Wilson, 1 W. W. & A'B (L.,) 110.

What Constitutes.]—W. assigned all his property to a creditor in consideration for a sum of money which was paid, but immediately returned to the creditor, who shortly afterwards sold nearly all the property by auction, and bought it in himself. W.'s estate was shortly afterwards compulsorily sequestrated; but the official assignee made no demand for the property assigned, nor did he, before action, indicate, in any way, an intention to treat the transaction as a fraudulent preference. On action by the official assignee in trover and upon money counts for the proceeds of the part of the property sold, Held that there was evidence to go to the jury of a fraudulent preference, but that the defendant (creditor) was entitled to succeed on the plea of "Not Guilty" since the transfer was made by the debtor while fully competent to make it, and it could not be affected by relation back; and that W. was entitled to be fairly informed of the assignee's intention to dispute the assignment, although a formal demand by the assignee was not essential; and judgment for the plaintiff on the count in trover without costs. Simson v. Mitchell, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 114.

"Insolvency Statute 1865" (No. 273,) Sec. 31 —Pre-existing Debt—Bill of Sale.]—N. and K. were traders in partnership, and on 3rd December, 1866, executed a bill of sale to plaintiff of certain scheduled chattels, to secure payment of £702 of which £150 was advanced at the time, the balance being a then existing debt. Default was made in payment, and the plaintiff D. took possession of goods comprised in the bill of sale. N. and K. voluntarily sequestrated their estate on 26th January, 1867, and the defendant S. was appointed official assignee. The defendant claimed the whole of the property taken by plaintiff, and by agreement the chattels were sold and the proceeds placed in a bank to await the issue of the suit. Suit by D. against S. to test the ownership of the proceeds, Held that though the bill of sale was executed bona fide and not to prefer D. to the other creditors, yet it was void by Sec. 31 of Act No. 273. but only so far as it was a security for a pre-existing debt, and not as to the £150 then advanced. Bank of Australasia v. Harris (15 Moo P.C. 97,) and Nunes v. Carter (L.R. 1 P.C. 342,) commented on. Douglass v. Simson, 6 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 32.

"Insolvency Statute 1865" (No. 273,) Sec. 31.] —A payment within 60 days of insolvency is not void under the Statute, unless evidence of facts is adduced, showing that such a payment was fraudulent as well as preferential. W. was indebted to S. and other creditors, and, being pressed by S., gave an order to A., who was entrusted with W.'s wool for sale directing him to pay S. out of the proceeds a certain amount. W. became insolvent within 60 days, and did not contemplate insolvency when he gave the order. S. had instructed his solicitor to proceed against W. on an overdue acceptance, and under this pressure W. made the order. Held that the order for payment given to W. was not a fraudulent preference within Sec. 31 of the Act No. 273, although preferential. Douglass v. Simson overruled. Bank of Australasia v. Harris, 15 Moo P.C.C. 97, Nunes v. Carter, L.R. 1 P.C., 347, followed. Sheldrick v. Aitken, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 59.

What is a Fraudulent Preference.]—Per Stawell, C. J. "A transfer spontaneously made by a person being insolvent out of the usual course of business to secure or pay a creditor without receiving a sufficient consideration is a fraudulent preference." Cohen v. M'Gee, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 543, 553.

Transfer of Goods Within Three Months of Insolvency—"Insolvency Statute 1871," Secs. 71, 72, Sub-sec. 3.] — Within four days before his insolvency, a debtor transferred all his available assets to his creditors in consideration of debts due to them upon bills of exchange. Held, per Molesworth, J., that although the debts were of a class which the debtor was specially bound to pay, and (irrespectively of the Act) would be morally justified in paying preferentially, the payment was within the mischief of the first part of Sec. 71, and did not come within the protection of Sub-section 3 of Sec. 72, and an order was made for the re-payment. In re Maley, 4 A.J.R., 7.

Assignment of Part of Property Under Pressure.]—Where a debtor had assigned a considerable part of his property to a creditor under pressure of threats of a criminal prosecution against the debtor, Held that this did not invalidate the transfer, and that it would not have done so even had there been an actual agreement to stifle a prosecution, since the property had clearly passed. Hasker v. Moorhead, v. Blackwood, v. M'Mullen, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 160.

A bill of sale given under the above circumstances as security for a promissory note before its maturity, the note itself having been given under the same pressure, was held not to constitute a fraudulent preference. Ibid.

Payment Under Pressure is Not.]—A payment resulting from pressure, as for a debt due, is not a fraudulent preference, though upon the verge of insolvency, or the person paying may be partly influenced by a wish to prefer. In re Schlieff, 6 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 51; 2 A.L.T., 55.

Assignment Good as to Part and Bad as to Part.] A debtor executed an assignment of the greater part of his stock-in-trade to a creditor who was not pressing him in trust to sell and pay the two creditors rateably. The consideration was a trifling further advance from the creditor who was not pressing, and forbearance to sue, and obtaining forbearance to sue from the creditor who was pressing. The jury found that the assignment was a fraudulent preference as regards the creditor who was not pressing, and the Court held that the pressure by the other creditor made the assignment good as regards his debt. Held that the assignment could be treated as good in part and bad in part, and be upheld so far as it provided for the payment of one debt, though invalid so far as related to the other debt. Cohen v. M'Gee, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 543.

Bill of Sale — Antecedent Debt and Present Advance.]—N., a trader, being indebted to M. & Co. in £946 12s., on the 30th December, 1869, assigned by bill of sale all his stock-in-trade and available assets to M. & Co., to secure their antecedent debt and a present advance of £350, of which £120 was immediately returned to one of the firm of M. & Co., in payment of of a private debt owed him by N. On the 13th January, 1870, M. & Co. took possession under their bill of sale, and sold for £1094 19s. 4d. N. was also largely indebted to other creditors. On the 14th January, 1870, N. voluntarily sequestrated his estate. On bill by the official assignee of N. to set aside the bill of sale as fraudulent, and as having the effect of preferring M. & Co., Held, that the bill of sale was not void, and that the transaction did not amount to a fraudulent preference, and bill dismissed, but without costs. Shaw v. Solomon, 1 V.R. (E.,) 153; 1 A.J.R., 139.

A bill of sale given by a debtor bona fide over all his stock in order to obtain assistance in difficulty for a past debt, and for further advances is not a fraudulent preference although it must if acted upon necessarily prevent him from carrying on his trade, the circumstances showing that it was not "spontaneous" on the part of the debtor. The true question is not whether the deed stops the trader's business, but whether it makes him insolvent and unable to pay his creditor in the ordinary way. Jacomb v. Ross, 4 A.J.R., 44, 97.

And see the same case for consideration of what is a "past debt."

And see S.P., in re Mathieson, 3 A.J.R., 92, post under CERTIFICATE OF DISCHARGE—When Granted or Refused.

Giving security for a debt is not to be considered fraudulent, merely because such debt is not presently payable. Simson v. Guthrie, 4 A.J.R., 123, 182.

M., who was indebted to G. upon bills falling due on March 3rd, on the 1st of March obtained cheques from G. to take them up, and gave in return a promissory note due on April 4th. Held, that G. was entitled to credit for the cheques given on March 1st, though a bill to secure the amount was then current. Ibid.

Judgment by Consent Improperly Obtained.]—A judgment improperly signed operates prejudicially against the estate of the debtor, and may be set aside. Where, therefore, H. was indebted to A. for a loan, and had promised at the time of the loan to allow A. to sign judgment against him, but before judgment was signed H. gave A. acceptances for the amount of the loan, and during the currency of the loan A. signed judgment against H., who thereupon sequestrated his estate. Held that, since A. took H.'s acceptance that amounted to a suspension of the promise by H. during their currency, the judgment was improperly signed and might be set aside by the assignee of H.'s estate as a fraud on the creditors' Andrews v. Harley, 1 V.R. (L.,) 127; 1 A.J.R., 122.

Judgment by Consent Improperly Obtained.]—K., to assist W., gave his guarantees to certain persons for the re-payment of the price of goods to be delivered to W., who, by this means, obtained goods to the value of £500. K. also advanced to W. £100. Afterwards W. requested K. to guarantee him to a further amount of £360. At this time the price of the goods delivered to W., and the £100 advanced by K., remained unpaid. K. consented to give the further guarantee if W. consented to his obtaining a judgment against him. W. agreed, and a writ, accompanied by particulars of demand, was issued against W. and served. The particulars of demand were for money lent, money paid, money had and received, and interest. On the day the writ was issued W. signed a consent to a Judge's order for entering up judgment. K. then gave his further guarantee, and signed judgment, and issued execution. Under the execution K. received £856 10s. 6d. Twenty-five days afterwards W. voluntarily sequestrated his estate, and three months afterwards his official assignee took out a summons to set aside the judgment and execution. Held, that so far as the claim was for money lent, the judgment and execution were good; but that, as far as the rest of the claim was concerned, K. should refund what he had recovered to the assignee; that the judgment was good; but that the execution, so far as the excess over the amount of money lent was concerned, should be set aside, K., by retaining such excess, committing a fraud upon the general body of creditors. Kyte v. Williams, 1 V.R. (L.,) 129; 1 A.J.R., 122.

X. Property of the Insolvent and the Assignee's Title Thereto.

(1.) What Property Passes to the Assignee, and Subject to What he Takes—Generally.

Act 5 Vic. No. 17, Sec. 8—Assignee Retaining Contract Moneys to Which Others were Entitled.]—H. had contracts for erections at the hospital, Melbourne, and applied to A. and Co. for assistance in the shape of cash and materials, which A. and Co., by writing, agreed to give on consideration of H. giving orders duly acknowledged by the treasurer to receive the contract moneys. A note directing the treasurer to pay to A. and Co. was given by H., and acted upon. H. became insolvent, and J., his official assignee took up the contracts and finished them, and he received £170 more than he had expended. Action by A. and Co. against J. for money had and received. Held that J. received the money under, and held it subject to the arrangement between H. and A. and Co., and he was in no better position than H. would have been, and that the case did not fall under the Act 5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 8, as a fraudulent preference. Anderson v Jacomb, 2 W. & W. Act 5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 53—Money under a Will to Which Insolvent has a Contingent Claim.]—Where insolvent was interested in a sum of money in England under a will payable at the death of his mother, Held that it passed to official assignee, not so as to entitle him to sue in England for it, but so that he should notice it in the plan of distribution in such a way as to leave it open for him to say afterwards that he was mistaken as to its being an available claim. Ex parte Bank of Australasia, in re Flower, 2 W. & W. Payment of a Dividend—Property Acquired by Insolvent Before Discharge—No Interference by First Assignee—Payment of Money to Vendor Before Discharge—Second Insolvency—Rights of First and Second Assignees.]—H. was insolvent in 1861, and J. was appointed assignee, and paid a dividend of 3s. in the £. H. saved money and paid £200 as part of the purchase money of certain land in April, 1867. H. obtained his certificate of discharge under the first insolvency. J. had not interfered. H. settled the land by voluntary settlement upon trustees on trust for wife and children, April, 1868. H. became insolvent again March, 1871, S. being appointed assignee. The settled land was brought under the Act No. 301, and a certificate issued to J. subject to the rights of the settlement, December, 1870. On bill by S. against the trustees of settlement and J. to set aside the settlement as void, and to redeem J., Held by Molesworth, J., and affirmed by Full Court on appeal, that J. was entitled to be paid out of the settled lands, the settlement having been set aside, a sum not exceeding £200 to be spent in satisfying the creditors under first insolvency. Shaw v. Scott, 3 A.J.R., 16, 128; and see Goodman v. Boulton, post column 651.

Wrongful Sale by Lessor—Assignee's Remedy.]—A bank (lessor) distrained upon a tenant's goods for arrears of rent, and put up the goods seized for sale by auction at which sale a clerk bought as agent for the bank. On the next day the tenant's estate was sequestrated, and shortly afterwards the bank resold. In an action by the official assignee against the bank, Held, per Stawell, C.J., and Holroyd, J. (dissentiente Higinbotham, J.) that the sale was void, as the auctioneer as agent for the bank sold to the clerk as agent for the bank, and that the provisions of the Act No. 379 made it the duty of the assignee to distribute the insolvent's property, and therefore gave him the right of possession; that trover was the proper remedy, and the measure of damages was the value of the goods and not the amount realised by the wrongful sale. Davey v. Bank of New South Wales,, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 252; 5 A.L.T., 35.

Policies of Life Assurance.]—A. voluntarily assigned to B. a policy of assurance on A.'s life for £1000, and B. executed a declaration of trust thereof in favour of A.'s wife and children. A., more than two years subsequently, voluntarily sequestrated his estate and afterwards died. The amount payable under the policy was £1029. Held, that the settlement was not protected by Sec. 37 of the "Life Assurance Companies Act 1873," No. 474, and that A.'s trustee in insolvency was entitled to restrain B. from suing on the policy. But A.'s personal representative would be entitled as against the trustee to £1000 of the policy money. Davey v. Pein, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 169; 5 A.L.T., 128.

Insolvency Within Two years of Gift—Act No. 379, Sec. 70.]—A husband at the time perfectly solvent made a gift of £1000 to his wife. For this gift there was meritorious but not a valuable consideration, and the matter was perfectly fair and honest, and in no sense a fraud on anybody. The wife treated the money as hers, and laid it out in the purchase of land. Held, that the husband becoming insolvent within two years of the gift, the gift came within Sec. 70 of Act No. 379, and was void as against the trustee who had a right to follow it into its investments. Cohen v. Lintz, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 149.

In July M.'s estate was sequestrated, and H. was appointed official assignee. H. sued M'E., in trover and for money had and received. Held that M., having assigned his property in consideration of a bye-gone debt, the assignment was invalid as against H., but that the sale to M'E. before insolvency as to a bona-fide purchaser for value without notice gave M'E. a good title to the goods; and that, though H. failed in trover, yet he might maintain his count for money had and received, and so recover the value of the goods. *Halfey v. Assignee—Appointment of—5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 58—7 Vic., No. 19, Sec. 12.]—Where L. was the official assignee of an estate, and M. was appointed generally as official assignee in his stead under 7 Vic., No. 19, Sec. 12, Held that such general appointment was inoperative under 5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 58, and that a further order vesting the estate was necessary. In re Bryan, ex parte Moore, 2 W. W.& A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 23.

Appointment of Assignee—Power to Rescind.]—The Chief Justice makes the appointment of official assignees, as the person appointed under Act. 7 Vic., No. 19, Sec. 12, and not in his judicial capacity, and it is doubtful whether the Chief Justice or the Court has power to rescind an appointment; but, at any rate, it cannot be done unless all parties concerned have been heard. In re Bowman, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 27.

Appointment of Assignee—When Objection Should be Taken To.]—The due appointment of a person named as official assignee in an order nisi cannot be questioned in opposing a motion to make absolute the order. The matter of the appointment should be brought forward afterwards. If the order appoints an assignee not properly qualified as an assignee, it may be quashed; but the improper appointment is not a ground on which the application to make absolute the order can be opposed. In re Brann, 3 W. W. & A'B. (I.E. & M.,) 6.

Appointment of New Assignee——Affidavit, Who Must Make.]—The affidavit made in support of an application for the appointment of an official assignee in place of the original one who had resigned, must be made by the solicitor of the applicant; an affidavit made by his managing clerk will not do. In re Potter, 6 A.L.T., 90.

Appointment of New Assignee.]—A new assignee of a particular insolvent estate may be appointed in place of one deceased by any Judge sitting in Court, but not in Chambers. In re Sinclair, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 81; 6 A.L.T., 79.

Appointment of New Trustee—Application, How Made.]—An application for the appointment of a new trustee of an insolvent estate, under Sec. 57 of 5 Vic., No. 17, instead of an official assignee whose appointment was erroneous, should be made either on notice to such assignee, or with his concurrence. In re Rucker, 1 W. W. & A'B. (I.E. & M.,) 39.

Confirmation of.]—The confirmation by the Court of the election of a new trustee, under 5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 57, need not be at the next sitting of the Court. Ibid.

Order Confirming Appointment of Trustee—Authentication of.]—An order under Sec. 60 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871" is sufficiently authenticated by the seal of the Court, without proof of the signature of the chief clerk. Such an order is no proof of sequestration or of the facts of which an order of sequestration is evidence. Regina v. Prendergast, 4 A.J.R. 79.

And such order operates merely as an unimpeachable transfer of the estate from the assignee to the trustee. Ibid.

Election of Trustee—"Insolvency Statute 1871"—Secs. 55, 60—Order Confirming—Conclusive Evidence.]—An order confirming the election or appointment of a trustee in insolvency under Sec. 60, is conclusive evidence of his due appointment, although the meeting for his election was, in fact, held after the time prescribed by the rules, and although he never accepted the office as prescribed by Sec. 55 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871" (No. 379.) Shiels v. Drysdale, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 126; 2 A.L.T., 14.

An appeal will lie from the order of a Judge of the Court of Insolvency under Sec. 55 of the Act No. 379, confirming the appointment of a trustee. In re Mackay, 2 V.R. (I.E. & M.,) 22; 2 A.J.R., 130.

Meeting to Elect a Trustee—Notice of—Act 5 Vic. No. 17, Sec 86.]—Where notice of a meeting under 5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 86, fixed the date for Monday, 8th April, and Monday actually fell on the 9th, the notice was held a nullity. In re Brown, 3 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 5.

[Compare Sec. 53 of Act No. 379.]

Election of Trustee—Meeting of Creditors—Rule 57—"Insolvency Statute 1871," Secs. 13, 53.]—Rule 67 of the "Insolvent Court Rules," framed under the "Insolvency Statute 1871," Sec. 13, which specifies the time within which meetings of creditors to appoint a trustee must be held is directory only, and in certain circumstances such a meeting may be held although the time limited by the rule may have expired. In re Cotton, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 33; 1 A.L.T., 190.

A meeting of creditors was called under Sec. 53 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871." D. was proposed as trustee, but on the largest creditor voting against him, such creditor's proof of debt was objected to, and the meeting adjourned until the proof of debt should be decided upon. During the adjournment the Judge of the district Insolvent Court made an order transferring the proceedings to another district, and then made another order that no further proceeding should be taken on his first order, which second order was rescinded on appeal. Before the appeal the adjourned meeting was held, no trustee was appointed, and the meeting closed. After the appeal a meeting was held in the new district under Sec. 53 of the Act, and a trustee appointed. Held, that the last meeting was properly held. Ibid.

Meeting to Elect Trustee—Informal Proof of Debts—Adjournment—Rules of Court of Insolvency, Rule 66.]—Per Noel, J. Under Rule 66, of the Rules of the Court of Insolvency the chief clerk may grant an adjournment of a general meeting to enable creditors who have filed informal proofs of debt to amend their affidavits. Re M'Inerny, 4 A.L.T., 16.

Trustee — Removal — Appointment of Fresh Trustee—No. 379, Secs. 53, 56, 59.]—M. executed a voluntary assignment for the benefit of all his creditors, and for this act of insolvency his estate was sequestrated, and the trustee of the deed was, under Sec. 59 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871," appointed trustee of the estate instead of an assignee. Held, on appeal against confirmation of this appointment, that the trustee could only be removed under Sec. 56 of the Act, which enumerates the grounds upon which a trustee may be removed as misconduct, &c., and that the creditors could not under Sec. 53 appoint a trustee in his place. In re Mackay, 2 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 22; 2 A.J.R., 130.

[NOTE.—As to Sec. 59, see No. 411, Sec. 2, repealing Sec. 59.]

Removal of Trustee—Act No. 379, Sec. 56.]—If the trustee resists the wishes of the creditors properly conveyed his punishment should be his removal under Sec. 56. In re Mackay, 3 A.J.R., 10.

And see S.C., post column 645.

Removal of Trustee.]—Per Noel, J. Where a trustee was in difficulties, and had gone to England, not saying when he intended to return, Held, that his absence for such a time, and to such a distant place, being likely to interfere with the proper administration of the estate, this was a sufficient ground for removing him, and meeting for the election of a new trustee directed. In re Rogers, 1 A.L.T., 180.

Removal of Insolvent Trustee—Act No. 379, Secs. 56, 90.]—See post under TRUST AND TRUSTEE — Devolution and Removal from Office.

Resignation of Trustee—Act. No. 379, Sec. 57.] Noel, J., made an order granting leave to a trustee to resign on the ground of ill-health and going to England, and for the election of a new trustee in his place. In re M'Lennan, 2 A.L.T., 112.

(2) Their Powers and Rights.

Sequestration—Effect of Order of as Bstwesn Assignee and Insolvent—"Insolvency Act," 5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 53.]—The effect of an order absolute under the Act as between the official assignee and the insolvent conclusively vests the property in such assignee, and makes him a representative of the insolvent, though it may be open to third persons to dispute the fact of insolvency and the validity of the order by a defence specially directed to these points. Shaw v. Salter, 2 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 159, 162.

And see as to property passing to trustee or assignee, ante column 635.

Vesting of Estate in Assignee—Act No. 379, Secs. 53, 58, 60—Rules 62, 131—Partners—Joint and Several Estates.]—C. and H. were in partnership, and their estate was placed in sequestration in the hands of an official assignee. At a meeting of creditors E. was duly appointed trustee of the joint estate, and afterwards meetings were held as in the insolvent estates of each of the insolvents, and J. was appointed trustee of them respectively, Held that the joint and several estates vested in the assignee and afterwards in E., and that the order confirming J.'s appointment as trustee of the separate estates was bad. In re Curtain and Healey, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 109; 1 A.L.T., 93.

Compelling Trustees to Transfer.]—The Supreme Court sitting in Insolvency has no power to compel the trustees of a company, whose estate has been sequestrated under 11 Vic., No. 19, to transfer to the official assignee the real and personal estate of the company vested in them as such trustees. In re the Provident Institute of Victoria, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 175.

Powers of Assignee—Suit Pending for Administration.]—Where a suit was pending for the administration of an estate seeking a declaration that creditors (mortgagees) were entitled to claim as specialty creditors, and the administratrix after bill filed sequestrated the estate, and a decree had been made in the suit, Held that the order for sequestration made the assignee a mere hand to collect the personal assets and distribute them as the Court of Equity directed him. Australian Trust Company v. Webster, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 99, 106.

Powers—Release of Equity of Redemption to Mortgagee—"Insolvency Statute 1865," No. 273, Secs. 27, 71.]—A release of an insolvent's equity of redemption is not prima-facie beyond the scope of an official assignee's authority, and Sec. 27 of Act No. 273 clearly contemplates the exercise of such authority; such a transaction is not a sale within the meaning of Sec. 71, requiring notice under that section. Per Privy Council, reversing Molesworth, J., and the Full Court reported 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 190. Melbourne Banking Corporation v. Brougham, L.R., 4 App. Cases, 156.

[Act No. 379, Sec. 62, substantially follows Sec. 27 of Act. No. 273, and Sec. 67 follows Sec. 71 of Act No. 273.]

Abandoning Contracts.]—The word "abandon" in Sec. 84 of 5 Vic., No. 17, is not necessarily to be read as "rescind," and an official assignee who "abandons" a contract under that Sec. does not necessarily render invalid securities given for carrying on such contract, or payment under them; and the holder of such securities is not rendered incapable of suing on them by such "abandonment." Ex parte Gessner, 1 W. & W. (I.E. & M.,) 183.

Control by Assignee of ooks, Papers, &c., of Insolvent.]—Molesworth, J., made an order directing that all the papers, &c., which came into the possession of the assignee, should be delivered to his associate, with liberty for the petitioning creditors and the insolvent to examine them. In re Oppenheimer, 3 A.J.R. 117.

Summary Procedure to Recover Debts—Act No. 379, Sec. 94.]—Per Molesworth, J., the language of Sec. 94 is general, without exception for difficult and complex cases. Where therefore a debtor had paid £59 to a creditor to induce him to enter into a composition by means of a veiled transaction through friends, the Court held upon a subsequent insolvency of the debtor that the trustee might recover under Sec. 94 the amount so paid in fraud of the other creditors. In re Jobson, 5 A.J.R., 154.

Per Noel, J. "Where the trustee invokes the Court's aid to compel payment of debts due to the estate, the terms of Sec. 94 are obligatory and upon adequate materials being presented to it, the Court ought to make the order." In re Marie, 3 A.J.R., 63.

Assignee—Lending Part of Estate—No Right to Sue for Money Lent.]—Where an assignee lends part of the estate, a thing which he has no right to do, the money cannot be said to retain its character, forming no longer a part of the estate, and there is no privity between the estate and the borrower. An official assignee therefore cannot sue on a count in common form for money lent by him as official assignee. Webster v. Bank of Victoria, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 375.

Title of Assignee to Sue.]—In an action by an official assignee to recover moneys paid by way of fraudulent preference, it is not necessary for the assignee, in order to sue, to prove that no trustee has been appointed (in which case he would be superseded,) or to prove that he has obtained the sanction of a Judge or of the creditors to bring the action. Simson v. Guthrie, 4 A.J.R., 123.

Setting Aside Sale—Right of Assignee to Sue—Sequestration of Testator's Estate—Devastavit by Executors—"Insolvency Statute 1871" (No. 379,) Secs. 35, 69, 75, 98, 100.]—A testator M. was largely indebted at the time of his death, his executors overlooking this allowed the widow to remain in possession of a hotel belonging to the testator and the stock-in-trade which she sold off. The executors then sequestrated the estate under Sec. 35 of the Act, and plaintiff was appointed official assignee. In a suit by plaintiff against executors and widow, Held that an official assignee represented creditors in defeating conveyances void under Sec. 69, and that official assignee was the successor of the executors in this case, and creditors being disabled from suing executors at law under combined effect of Secs. 35, 75, and 100, the sequestration would defeat a just liability if assignee did not represent creditors; that the suit by plaintiff was maintainable and that he might recover amount of devastavit for benefit of creditors. Hasker v. M'Millan, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 217, 1 A.L.T., 45.

Assignee's Remuneration—Verbal Assessment of Official Assignee's Compensation—5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 51.]—A commissioner verbally assessed an assignee's compensation at a certain sum, and the assignee filed a plan of distribution, claiming that allowance. No objection to the plan was made on ground of allowance, though objections were made on other grounds. The commissioner afterwards made a verbal order for payment of the sum allowed. On rule nisi requiring assignee to pay back the sum Held that under Sec. 51 of the Act the commissioner had a judical discretion subject to the review of the Court, that the order being verbal was inoperative and the receipt of money under it unwarrantable. Rule made absolute. Ex parte Bank of Australasia. In re Rutledge, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 6.

[Compare Sec. 54 of Act No. 379.]

The Appellate Court has jurisdiction to review the discretion of the commissioner in matters of an official assignee's compensation under Sec. 51 of the Act, and reduced the amount of compensation allowed by the commissioner. Ibid at p. 33.

The Court, however, pays great deference to the commissioner's views. Ibid at p. 41.

Petition to Review the Assessment of Assignee's Compensation.]—A petitioner presenting such a petition should allege in the corpus of his petition that he is a creditor and should furnish evidence of the fact. Such a petitioner need not sign the petition. Ex parte Bank of Australasia. In re Rutledge, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 41.

Remuneration—Act 5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 51—Improper Charges by Assignee.]—A sum of £1 10s. paid to the accountant of the official assignee for preparing plan of distribution charged against the estate is improper, and a fee of 1s. claimed for "filing plan of distribution" is an improper fee. Ex parte Bank of Australasia. In re Flower, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 47.

(3.) Their Duties and Liabilities,

Duties of Trustee — Act No. 379 Sec. 122 — Filing Accounts.]—Sec. 122 does not imply that trustee should file a statement of how the estate has been collected and realised, it only relates to disbursement and distribution; the application and disposal is to be shown under certain heads, costs, and charges, commission, preferential payments and dividends, and he is not required to add a negative statement that there had been no other disbursements under these heads, or that no portion of the estate remained unrealised. In re Dallimore, 3 A.J.R., 12.

Discretion of Assignee as to Examination of Insolvent—Act No. 273, Sec. 87.]—The exercise of the power of summoning an insolvent under Sec. 87 of the Act for the examination of the insolvent rests solely in the assignee's discretion, and the Court has no jurisdiction to compel him to summon the insolvent for examination. In re Ireland, 6 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 5.

Duties of Trustee—Act No. 379, Sec. 67—Making Dividend and Realising the Property.]—For circumstances under which a trustee was not considered to have acted negligently in realising assets and accepting tenders, see in re Lefebvre, 3 A.J.R., 5.

Control of Trustee by General Meeting and Committee of Inspection—Act 379, Secs. 53, 56, 67, 78, 132.]—Secs. 78 and 132 do not give either the general meeting or the committee a voice in selecting a solicitor for the purpose of examination of the insolvent under Sec. 132, but leave it to the sole discretion of the trustee; the trustee, however, should not resist the wishes of the creditors properly conveyed, if he should do so the proper punishment should be his removal under Sec. 56. Under Sec. 67 the control of the general meeting is like that of the committee under Sec. 53, but in cases of conflict that of the committee prevails under Sec. 67. This control does not refer to the examination of insolvent. Order by District Court Judge that trustee should employ a solicitor named by creditors set aside. In re Mackay, 3 A.J.R., 10.

Control of Trustee by Creditors—Act No. 379, Sec. 67.]—Per Noel, J. Where a meeting of creditors passes a resolution which does not further the interests of the general body of creditors, the trustee is not bound to carry it out. In re Lempriere, 3 A.L.T., 20.

Control of Trustee by Creditors—Act No. 379, Sec. 67.]—Per Noel, J. Where the Court sees that there have been irregularities in the proceedings of a meeting at which a resolution was passed, it will not compel the trustee to carry out such resolution. In re Thomson, 2 A.L.T., 108.

Position of Trustee Under Sec. 133.]—Per Noel, J. Under Sec. 133 the trustee appears as agent for the creditors, and not as agent for the insolvent, and therefore a solicitor claiming a lien on insolvent's documents cannot refuse to produce them under Sec. 133. In re M'Kay and Bell, 3 A.J.R., 98.

Trustee's Duty as to After Acquired Property—Act No. 379, Sec. 147.]—Per Molesworth, J. If an insolvent becomes entitled to property which is in the hands of a third person claiming adversely to the insolvent, it is, I think, the duty of the assignee to get possession of it without regard to Sec. 147. In re Mulcahy, 5 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 7.

For facts see S.C., post column 650.

Petition for Advice—Act No. 379, Sec. 81.]—Noel, J., gave advice upon a petition under Sec. 81 to a trustee as to his duty in following the resolutions passed at a general meeting of creditors. In re Lempriere, 3 A.L.T., 20.

Duty of Assignee Opposing Proof of Debt—Act 5 Vic., No. 17, Secs. 56, 59.]—An official assignee opposing a proof of debt must act on his own personal and independent discretion, and not on that of others. He must exercise the same common sense and careful discretion that a man exercises in his own concerns, and must employ a solicitor on his own responsibility. When so acting and unsuccessful, he may be exonerated in some degree by a regular meeting of creditors; but if there were no regular meeting, or if the consent of the creditors were otherwise obtained, it then becomes a question simply whether he exercised a real and reasonable discretion in the litigation in which he has been unsuccessful. In re Harper, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 86.

[Compare Secs. 78 and 123 of Act No. 379.]

Duty of Assignee in Realising Estate.]—The assignee should not sell in a lump the debts due to an estate for he is not to do his duties only as to what is of no trouble to him, and divest himself of all the rest by such sale, and yet to have a percentage on the whole of the sum realised. In the account and plan of distribution of an estate the assignee should state the outstanding assets, and if there be none should show that such is the case. Ibid.

[But see now Sec. 83, Sub-sec. 6 of Act No. 379.]

Liability of Assignee—Wilful Default.]—Where machinery and chemicals belonging to an insolvent were sold in lots, and at comparative undervalue, the Court held on the balance of the evidence that the assignees were not to be charged with wilful default. In re Kingsland, 6 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 25; N.C., 39.

Liability of Assignee in Taking out Warrant—Act No. 379, Sec. 63.]—An official assignee is only liable for the improper issue of a warrant or for anything done under a warrant improperly issued, and his position is not analogous to that of a sheriff. Where an assignee's bailiff was entrusted with a warrant to seize insolvent's goods, and seized goods belonging to the insolvent's brother, Held there being no evidence of ratification that the assignee was not liable. Willett v. Turner, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 294.

Liability of Official Assignee of Occupant Under 6 Vic., No. 7, Sec. 67, and 8 Vic., No. 12, Sec. 19, to be Rated as the "Person Occupying."]—See Goodman v. Mayor of Melbourne, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 4, post under RATES—Persons Liable.

Protection Afforded to Assignee by Sec. 89 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871"—Costs.]—Where a landlord and a mortgagee by bill of sale claimed goods of a person who had become insolvent, the one under a distress for sale and the other under the bill of sale, and the assignee by arrangement with the claimant under the bill of sale sold the goods, and paid the amount of the landlord's distress into a bank under Sec. 89 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871," as money to which he made no claim, and paid the overplus, less his commission, to the claimant under the bill of sale, on suit by the landlord for the money under Sec. 17 of the Statute a decision was given against him, but on appeal Held that to entitle the official assignee to the protection of Sec. 89 of the Statute he should have paid the whole of the proceeds into the bank, leaving the claimants to claim against it, instead of paying one and leaving the other to claim against a deposit representing his demand only, and the assignee was ordered to pay all the landlord's costs in the Court of Insolvency and on appeal. In re Sweeney, ex parte Diggins, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 1.

Liability of Trustss or Assignee as to Chattels Taksn by Him—Act No. 379, Sec. 17.]—Cain v. Allen, in re Thompson, in re Acock, in re Maley, post columns 649, 650.

Liability—Costs of Official Assignee Incurred in Opposing a Claim—Plan of Distribution—Act 5 Vic., No. 17, Secs. 56, 59.]—The official assignee of a firm having seized goods which were in a store with other goods, and apparently in the order and disposition of the firm, was sued by another firm, claiming all the goods in the store under an assignment. In the action the verdict was against him as to some of the goods, and he had to pay the costs of both parties, but he succeeded in reducing the claim of the plaintiff so as to give a balance to the advantage of the estate by his defence of the action. The plaintiffs in addition proved as creditors on the estate. The assignee having inserted in the plan of distribution the costs paid by him in the action for both sides, Held that the assignee as a defendant in the action and not a plaintiff was not to blame, and that he was entitled to insert such costs in the plan. In re Yorston and Webster, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 133.

[Compare Sec. 78 of Act No. 379.]

Costs of Assignes Rssisting Proof of Debt—Plan of Distribution.]—A plan of distribution was filed but not confirmed, and before confirmation a fresh creditor claimed to prove, but was successfully resisted by the assignee, who incurred £12 costs in so doing. Having included all the assets in the plan of distribution, he had no fund from which to reimburse himself, and so applied to have the plan amended by inserting the costs so incurred. The Court granted the application, but intimated that it would have been better to have had the plan of distribution confirmed, and any fresh applicant should then only have been allowed to re-open the plan upon terms of paying all parties' costs, whether such applicant succeeded or not. In re Roden, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 95.

Liability of Assigness—Costs of Unsuccesssful Litigation.]—Where an official assignee embarked in litigation, under circumstances which, to the Court, seemed to show that reasonable pains were taken before embarking in such litigation, in regard to a large sum (£4000), and where the assignee had not called a meeting of creditors to sanction his proceedings under Sec. 61 of the Insolvent Act, 5 Vic., No. 17, then in force, but it appeared that the creditors against whom proceedings were instituted would have outvoted other creditors in point of value, the assignee's costs of unsuccessful litigation were allowed. Ex parte Bank of Australasia, in re Rutledge, 2 W. &. W. (I. E. & M.,) 57.

[Compare provisions of Act No. 379, Sec. 78.]

When Assignees Entitled to Costs.]—Costs of an equity suit instituted by assignees to set aside a voluntary settlement as fraudulent, and assignee's costs of motions made in the suit by the insolvent, and refused with costs, were allowed to assignees. In re Kingsland, 6 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 25; N. C. 39.

And see Woodward v Jennings, ante column 244.

XII. Distribution of the Estate.

Duties of Assignees—Plan of Distribution—Amendment—5 Vic., No. 17, Secs. 87, 90.]—Motion under Sec. 90 of 5 Vic., No 17. A trustee (now assignee) had filed his account and plan of distribution within three months of his appointment, Sec. 87 of the Act providing that he should do so "not later than six months" after his appointment. After the account and plan were filed, but before confirmation, creditors in England filed a caveat against confirmation, and gave notice of motion to re-open and amend them by the insertion of their debt and dividend. The motion called upon the trustee, "and also upon the parties whose interest might be affected thereby," to show cause why the plans should not be amended. Held that every creditor had a right to notice and to appear; but that when the Court sees peculiar difficulties or circumstances to justify it, service may be dispensed with, and that a plan of distribution is not to be opened after the six months prescribed by the Statute for its filing unless the applicant pays every farthing of the costs. In re Miller, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 77.

Note.—On a subsequent day, notice having been given, and no creditor opposing, the order was made as applied for, the costs being divided between the first applicant and others who had then entitled themselves to, and did apply.

[Compare Sec. 122 of Act No. 379, and Rule 85.]

Plan of Distribution.]—There is no authority to direct the filing of a further plan of distribution in an insolvent estate. Any subsequent distribution which may be necessary must be effected by the alteration of the plan, the Court having power to direct an alteration of an existing, but not the filing of a second, plan. Ex parte Flower, Salting, and Company, 3 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 36.

[Compare Sec. 122 of Act No. 379.]

The assignee is, under the provisions of Act No. 273, bound to insert a proved debt in the plan of distribution. In re Kingsland, 6 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 25; N. C., 39.

Status of Petitioner Reviewing Plan of Distribution—5 Vic., No. 17, Secs. 87-90.]—Objections against the locus standi of a creditor appearing as such on plan of distribution to impugn the right of another creditor to be placed on the plan, even though the petitioning creditor had not proved his own debt, overruled. Ex parte Bank of Australasia. In re Rutledge, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 57.

[Compare Secs. 122 and 123 of Act No. 379.]

Right of Creditor to Dividend Pending Appeal.]—Per Stawell, C. J. The Court has, pending an appeal to the Privy Council, no power to restrain the official assignee from paying a dividend under the plan, he must act on his own judgment. Ex parte Rolfe and Bailey, in re Rutledge, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 51, 56.

XIII. Summary Jurisdiction to Try Right to Chattels Taken by Assignee.

Trying the Title to the Property—"Insolvency Statute 1871," Sec. 17—Practice.]—D. applied under Sec. 17 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871" for the payment of the value of certain goods sold by the trustees in insolvency of A. D. omitted from his notice of motion the note in form No. 58, which states notice of opposition to be necessary, and the counsel for the trustee objected that D. could not be heard owing to this omission. D. therefore objected that the trustee could not be heard, as he had given no notice of opposition under Rule 4 of the Rules of 4th October, 1871. The Judge allowed D.'s objection, and heard the case ex parte, and made an order as asked by D. On appeal Held that, since D. also was in default, the Judge ought not to have proceeded ex parte, and order reversed without prejudice to a new application. In re Acock, 2 V. R. (I. E. & M.,) 45; 2 A.J.R., 133.

Summary Jurisdiction Under "Insolvency Statute 1871," Sec. 17.]—Shortly before his insolvency a debtor gave an order to an auctioneer to sell the debtor's furniture, and with the proceeds to pay certain creditors. The official assignee of the debtor moved under Sec. 17 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871," to set the transaction aside as a fraudulent preference. Sec. 17 provided that the Court might decide the right of property in any chattels upon the application of the assignee, trustee, or any person claiming to be entitled thereto. The Court held that the transaction was a fraudulent preference, and the creditors who had received the proceeds of sale appealed. Upon appeal, Held that Sec. 17 of the Act did not apply to such a case, and that the Court below had no summary jurisdiction in the case under that Sec, and appeal allowed. In re Maley, 4 A.J.R., 49.

Per Noel, J. The word "value" in Sec. 17 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871," which confers jurisdiction upon the Insolvent Court to order delivery up to a trustee of goods alleged to belong to the estate, provided that their value do not exceed £250, means the price which can be obtained for the goods; and in the case of pawned goods would not be determined by the amount advanced upon them. Cain v. Allen, 4 A.J.R., 130.

Sec. 17 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871" does not apply to actions of trover, and Insolvent Courts have no jurisdiction under this Sec. in actions of this nature, and a plea in an action of trover that the value of the goods sought to be recovered was less than £250, was held bad on demurrer. Ibid. See S.P. In re W. R. Thompson, 5 A.J.R., 3.

The summary jurisdiction of the Court as to property in chattels under Sec. 17 arises only where the goods remain specifically at the date of sequestration; the Sec. only applies where the assignee might have claimed the chattels, but where that is the case, the summary jurisdiction applies only as to such goods converted by the creditor before they are claimed by the assignee. In re W. R. Thompson, 5 A.J.R., 3, 4.

Act No. 379, Secs. 17, 147—After Acquired Property—Husband and Wife.]—An assignee by motion under Sec. 17 applied for an order for delivery up of certain stock-in-trade of an uncertificated insolvent as after acquired property. The Judge of the Court of Insolvency made an order. After the sequestration £100 was given to the wife by her sister. The husband and wife carried on the same business as before, he driving the cart, taking orders, etc., and getting no wages, she made purchases, paid rent, &c., and had her name painted over the door. Held, that the whole was a scheme by the insolvent to carry on business in his wife's name, and that there was not sufficient evidence to prove that it was carried on apart from her husband under Sec. 5 of the "Married Women's Property Statute." Order affirmed notwithstanding that no direction was given to assignee as required by Sec. 147. Per Molesworth, J. "If an insolvent becomes entitled to property which is in the hands of a third person claiming adversely to the insolvent, it is, I think, the duty of the assignee to get possession of it without regard to Sec. 147." In re Mulcahy, 5 V.L.R. Married Woman—Suit by Under Sec. 17 of No. 379, to Recover Property Seized by Assignee—Next Friend—"Insolvency Rules," Rule 29—"Married Women's Property Act," Sec. 18.]—A married woman who applies, under Sec. 17 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871," for property seized by her husband's (an insolvent) assignee as being her separate property, need not have a next friend in making the application. By virtue of Sec. 18 of the "Married Women's Property Act," she is for this purpose a feme sole, and Rule 29 of the "Insolvency Rules" of April, 1871, does not apply to her. In re Summers, ex parte Hasker, 10 V.L.R. XIV. The Insolvent, His Rights and Liabilities.

Balance in the Hands of Assignee—Return to Insolvent—Indemnity—5 Vic., No. 17.] — The assets in an insolvent estate exceeded the liabilities, and all the creditors who had proved had been paid in full, but some of the scheduled creditors had not proved. Four years had elapsed, and an order was made ordering the balance, all but a specified sum sufficient to liquidate the debts of the scheduled creditors who had not proved, to be paid to the insolvent, and this was duly advertised. No creditors came forward, and upon these facts the Court ordered the entire balance in the hands of the assignee, to be paid to the insolvent on terms of his indemnifying the assignee, and undertaking to satisfy the creditors who had not proved should they thereafter do so. In re Milner, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 177.

[Compare the provisions of Sec. 103 of Act No. 379.]

5 Vic., No. 17—Payment to Insolvent of Surplus.]—A motion was made for an order on the assignee to pay over surplus after payment of scheduled debts. Held, that it was not conformable with the Act to make such an order, but that official assignee might file a plan disposing of the surplus, and hand it over to the insolvent if the plan were not objected to. In re Dickson, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 63.

[Compare the provisions of Sec. 103 of Act No. 379.]

Settlement Set Aside to Pay Creditors—Balance Left—Second Insolvency.]—A voluntary settlement was set aside in May, 1868, and the settled property applied to paying creditors. There was a balance left, and subsequently the settlor again became insolvent. Application by assignees under second insolvency that balance should be paid to them by assignees under first insolvency. The insolvent, who had a life interest under the settlement, and all other beneficiaries consented. The Court though stating that it had no power to protect the assignees of the first insolvency against any creditor who had not proved under that insolvency, or persons having any subsequent lien on the surplus since such protection could only be afforded under an application under the first insolveny to alter the plan of distribution, ordered the balance to be paid over upon the parties concerned consenting, and upon a satisfactory indemnity being given. Goodman v. Boulton, 3 A.J.R., 2.

Capacity of Insolvent to Sue.]—As regards causes of action accruing after insolvency and before the discharge the insolvent is the agent of the assignee; he contracts for his (the assignee's) benefit, and so long as the assignee does not interfere he may sue on such contracts. An attorney may sue for services rendered after insolvency and before discharge. Madden v. Hetherington, 3 V.R. (L.,) 68; 3 A.J.R, 41.

And see Fancey v. North Hurdfield Company, post column 656; and Buisson v. Warburton, post column 657.

Uncertificated Insolvent Carrying on Business—5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 100.]—B., an uncertificated insolvent in 1858, entered into a speculation with his brother J. B., and stipulated for payment to himself of a salary and payment of a part of profits to his wife and children. Subsequently the business was carried on in the same fashion in the form of a partnership between B. (the elder, father of the insolvent) and H. A creditor, the Bank of Victoria, applied for an order under Sec. 100 of Act No. 17 for B.'s imprisonment, the affidavits showing that the business was really that of insolvent and had assets to the value of £20,000, the answering affidavits alleging that the debts of the partnership amounted to £32,000, primarily chargeable on the assets. Ordered that B. be imprisoned until satisfaction of the debt due to the Bank, the execution of the order to be stayed provided B. paid a sum of £500 every six months' in satisfaction of the debt, the Court treating B. as a person of considerable capacity for making money, and who had succeeded in accumulating a large trading capital. Affirmed on appeal. In re Bateman, 6 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 15, N.C. 27.

After Acquired Property—Uncertificated Insolvent—Act No. 379, Sec. 73.]—The after acquired property of an uncertificated insolvent excepting only the profits of his daily labour necessary for his subsistence is vested in his assignee, but towards third parties until the official assignees intervene or displace him, he assumes with respect to such property the position of agent, and he may transfer such property so as to give a good title to the transferee in the absence of interference by his official assignees. Sartori v. Laby, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 329, 5 A.L.T., 100.

Lapse of Order Nisi—Act No. 379, Sec. 39.]—Semble per Molesworth, J. The lapse of an order nisi (the order not being discharged) revests the estate in the debtor subject to the rights of another creditor taking the order up. In re Ray, 1 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 56.

Contempt of Court—"Insolvency Statute 1871," Sec. 126—Habeas Corpus.]—Though the Court of Insolvency has jurisdiction under Sec. 126, of the "Insolvency Statute 1871," to commit an insolvent for contempt in disobeying an order to pay in money belonging to the estate which the insolvent has received, the Supreme will, on habeas corpus, examine the evidence and receive affidavits to ascertain whether these facts, on which the warrant purports to have been based, in fact existed; and in order to enable the Court of Insolvency to commit the insolvent for breach of such an order it must be shewn that he had the money still under his control at the time he was ordered to pay it over. Re Gray, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 241.

Act No. 379, Secs. 7, 126.]—Sec. 7 relates to the insolvent estate which reaches the hands of the assignees, not property in the hands of the insolvent or any other person which ought to have reached their hands. Sec. 126 provides for a summary remedy as to any property which he is known to have and withholds. A debtor left Victoria taking with him certain moneys which he spent partly in Victoria, partly elsewhere, and in his absence his estate was sequestrated. An order made by the Judge of the Court of Insolvency ordering him to repay the money to the assignees based on Sec. 7 of the Act was set aside as bad. In re Rowley, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 12.

Committing for Contempt in Not Dslivering up Goods to Assignss—Act No. 379, Sso. 126.]—Per Noel, J., a rule nisi for commitment is the proper remedy where an insolvent refuses to deliver up possession to the official assignee, and in such a proceeding the Judge of the Court has jurisdiction to decide whether there is any evidence to support the bona fides of a claim set up by a third party (the insolvent's wife) to the property. In re Mundhang, 1 A.L.T., 56.

Arrest of Insolvent—"Insolvency Statute 1871," No. 379, Sec. 127.]—The mere pendency of an insolvency is not in general a sufficient ground for the issue of a warrant under Sec. 127 of the Act No. 379, for the arrest of the debtor; it must be shown that there is some examination or other specific proceeding, which the insolvent intends to defeat by going abroad. In re Knarston, 4 A.J.R., 160.

Arrest of Insolvent Undsr Sec. 127—Bail-bonds.] Quære, whether a Judge of a Court of Insolvency has jurisdiction to take a bail-bond from a debtor arrested under Sec. 127 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871." Ibid.

How Far Sequsstration a Stay to Suits in Equity —5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 31.]—The Act 5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 31, providing that all proceedings in any action pending, shall, upon sequestration of the defendant's estate, be stayed, has never been held to extend to proceedings in equity; and the Court is not to be deprived of any portion of its jurisdiction by intendment merely, or by anything short of express words. Fairbairn v. Clarke, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 333.

T. mortgaged lands to a company, and died intestate. The widow administered, and the company brought an administration suit praying for a sale and a declaration that if the lands were insufficient they might rank as specialty creditors on the general assets for the deficiency. Pending the suit the widow sequestrated the estate under 5 Vic., No. 17. Held that there was nothing in Act 5 Vic., No. 17, to deprive the Supreme Court of its jurisdiction to take the accounts and nothing to transfer the suit to the Insolvent Court, although if the object of the suit had been to recover a lump sum the suit should have been stayed and the plaintiff be left to prove for his debt and costs. Australian Trust Company v. Webster, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 148.

Where M. was made a party to a suit in respect only of his wife's property, and after suit his estate was sequestrated, Held that he could do anything to protect his wife's interest which she could if sui juris, such interest not being of a class which passed to the official assignee of her husband. Waddell v. Patterson, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 133.

Right of Insolvent to Sue—5 Vic, No. 17, Secs. 2, 11, 33, 53, 54—Judgmsnt Recovered in Action.]—A recovered a judgment against B., and issued execution on it. A. became insolvent under 5 Vic., No. 17, in 1858. B. purchased lands in 1863. Suit by A. to have purchase declared fraudulent and void as against him, and to have B. declared a trustee of lands so as to give effect to the judgment. Held that A. not having obtained his certificate could not maintain suit: that although a right of action pending does not upon sequestration pass to the assignee, yet when judgment has been recovered and the right of action turned into a debt that debt passed to the assignee under Secs. 2, 11 and 53, and issuing execution was not within the meaning of the words "continuing an action" in Sec. 33. Solly v. Atkinson, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 323.

Right to Sue—Suit to Free Land of Trusts of a Settlsment.]—The fact that a man is an uncertificated insolvent shortly before his purchase of certain land is no bar to a suit by him to have the land conveyed freed from the trusts of a marriage settlement. Mason v. Sawyers, 2 V.R. (E.,) 36; 2 A.J.R., 21.

"Insolvency Stat. 1871," No. 379, Sec. 77— "Actions."]—The word "actions" in Sec. 77 of the "Insolvency Stat. 1871" does not include suits in equity, so as to entitle the assignee to six weeks' notice to make his election to proceed with the suit, or have it dismissed; but the Court will not make an order without giving the assignee formal notice. Willison v Warburton, 4 A.J.R., 66.

Insolvency of Plaintiff—"Insolvency Stat. 1871," No. 379, Sec. 77—Motion to Dismiss.]—Where a suit becomes defective by insolvency of plaintiff the defendant should call upon assignee to elect, and, if he elect to discontinue, should then bring motion to dismiss. On application being made to assignee who did not reply, the Court ordered that bill be dismissed if assignee did not take steps to continue within eight days. Prigg v. Johnstone, 5 V.L.R. (Eq.,) 311.

Abatement or Continuance of Suit on Insolvency of Parties—"Insolvency Statute 1871," No. 379, Secs. 77, 78.]—Where a sole plaintiff in a suit becomes insolvent, on the analogy of Secs. 77 and 78 of the "Insolvency Stat. 1871," providing for action at law, a notice by the defendant, calling upon his assignee to take up or discontinue the suit, should be served at least six weeks before the motion is heard. Wood v. Gordon, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 37; 1 A.L.T., 127.

Abatement or Continuance of Suit on Insolvency of Parties—Suit to Enforce a Pecuniary Liability Against Defendant—Trustee Cannot be Made a Party.]—Although trustees of insolvents may be made parties to partnership suits, pending against the insolvents, in which property is to be administered, there is no provision in the "Insolvency Stat. 1871," Secs. 62-65, for making a trustee party to a suit to enforce a pecuniary liability of the insolvent. Such liabilities are to be enforced by the creditors proving. England v. Moore, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 48; 1 A.L.T., 158.

"Insolvency Stat. 1871" No. 379, Sec. 75—Insolvency of Defendant.]—A suit was set down as defended, and a decree was asked upon affidavits verifying bill. Before the hearing, the defendant became insolvent. Held that the Court could not take judicial notice of the insolvency. Quære, whether a suit is rendered defective by insolvency of defendant. A decree was made as prayed. M'Carthy v. Ryan, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 136.

Insolvent Cannot Set Aside Verdict Made After Sequestration.]—A verdict was entered in an action against an insolvent, who did not appear, and whose estate had been sequestrated three days before trial. On motion to set aside the verdict, Held that the insolvent had no claim to be heard, his estate having vested in the assignee. Kyte v. Mahoney, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.) 6.

Insolvency of a Joint Defendant.]—If one of several joint defendants becomes insolvent after action brought, the action may proceed against the other defendants, the proceedings as to the other defendants not being stayed by Sec. 75 of the "Insolvency Stat. 1871." Ex parte Welsh, 4 V.L.R. Damages.]—A plaintiff is not entitled to recover damages for a period prior to his insolvency in respect of a claim partly covering such period. And where a jury in a County Court had given damages generally upon a claim partly covering a period before insolvency, Held that damages being awarded generally, the Court could not sever them; and an appeal was allowed and the case directed to be re-heard. Mouatt v. Saunders, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 439.

Action of Trespass.] — Held, following the principle of Madden v. Hetherington, post column 657, that an uncertificated insolvent in possession of a residence area can sue for trespass in respect thereof as agent for the assignee, the insolvency being no bar to such proceedings. Fancey v. North Hurdsfield Company, 8 V.L.R. (M.,) 5; 3 A.L.T., 89.

Money Paid into Court to Abide Result.]—S. commenced an action against A. to recover the amount of a promissory note. On 10th March A. obtained an order to defend, on condition that he paid into Court £50 within seven days, which was duly done. S. declared in the action on 29th March, and on the 27th April signed judgment by default for want of a plea. On 1st May a summons was served on A.'s attorney to show cause why the £50 should not be paid to S. The summons was not opposed, and on 3rd May an order was made for payment, and the money taken out the same day. This was done in ignorance of the fact that on 1st May, after the summons was taken out, but before its return, A. had obtained an order for sequestration of his estate. In an action by A.'s assignee for the £50, Held that at the date of the sequestration the action S. v. A. was determined, and that, as regarded the £50, A.'s assignee had no interest in it. Goodman v. Strachan, 2 A.J.R., 63.

Judgment Signed After Sequestration—"Insolvency Stat. 1865," No. 273, Sec 37—Moving to Set Aside within a Reasonable Time.]—A plaintiff in an action obtained a verdict, and shortly afterwards the defendant became insolvent. After the sequestration judgment was signed, and a writ of ca. sa. issued. The official assignee within a week of the time he had heard of judgment being signed, applied in Chambers to set aside the judgment, which the Judge refused, although he set aside the ca. sa. On rule nisi, Held that the judgment, being bad under Sec. 37 of Act No. 273, must go, and that the official assignee had applied within a reasonable time. Proudfoot v. Mackenzie, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 144.

Summoning Assignee to Show Cause why Action Should Not be Continued—Act No. 379, Sec. 75.]—A summons was issued calling upon the assignee of an insolvent defendant to show cause why the action should not be continued against him. The declaration was on promissory notes and for breach of agreement whereby defendant purchased plaintiff's share in a partnership business, defendant to pay the promissory notes and half the amount of profits up to a certain time; breach non-payment of the half profits. Per Barry, J. (in Chambers)—the amount could be proved against the estate, and it was not one of the exceptional cases provided for by the latter part of Sec. 75. Summons dismissed. Christie v. Thomson, 1 A.L.T., 54.

Joint Obligors on a Covenant—Insolvency of One.]—P. sued E. and his wife on a covenant. To the declaration it was pleaded that E. became insolvent, and his estate was sequestrated before the cause of action accrued. Held that under Sec. 144 of Act No. 379 the plea was a good plea. Patterson v. Evans, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 143.

Stay of Proceedings—Act No. 379, Sec. 75.]—An appeal upon a debtor's summons is not a proceeding in a suit or action, so that a voluntary sequestration is not a bar to such an appeal under Sec. 75. In re Portich, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 126, 142; 3 A.L.T., 50.

After executors have sequestrated the estate of their testator under Sec. 35 of the Act No. 379, the creditors are barred by Sec. 75 from suing them for a devastavit. Hasker v. MacMillan, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 217; 1 A.L.T., 45. See ante column 643.

Insolvent Attorney—Action for Services.]—As regards causes of action arising after the insolvency and before the discharge, the insolvent is the agent of the assignee; he contracts for his benefit, and, so long as the assignee does not interfere, may sue on these contracts. To an indebitatus assumpsit for work and labour as an attorney it was pleaded that the work was done after the plaintiff had become insolvent, and before he got his discharge. Demurrer to plea allowed. Madden v. Hetherington, 3 V.R. (L.,) 68; 3 A.J.R., 41.

Insolvency Abroad — Residence — Domicil.] — Where a person resident in another colony becomes insolvent, if his residence does not amount to a domicil in that colony, his title to sue on a contract made, and to be performed out of the jurisdiction of such colony is not divested. *Buisson v. After commitment G.'s estate was sequestrated. On motion for writ of habeas corpus, Held that there are several grounds for imprisonment under Act No. 284, Sec. 3, and that G. was not imprisoned under execution of any judgment of the Court, but for a fraud upon his creditor, treated in a summary way under Sec. 3 of Act No. 284, and that his insolvency was no reason for his release. A writ of foreign attachment was issued, and an order made attaching, under Sec. 224 of Act No. 274, the property of E., one of two joint debtors. A verdict was found for plaintiff, but E.'s estate was sequestrated before judgment signed. A suggestion under Sec. 212 of Act No. 274 was entered and judgment signed. Held, on summons by E. and his assignee to set aside suggestion and judgment, that, there being no evidence of facts equivalent to payment, no levy or lodging money, the property attached passed to the assignee. Summons allowed. Lauratet v. M'Cracken, 3 V.R. (L.,) 41; 3 A.J.R., 35.

On Execution—Winding-up Order Under Act 409 —"Insolvency Stat." No. 379, Sec. 74.]—The plaintiffs recovered a judgment against the defendant company, and execution was issued, and the sheriff sold the property of the company. Three days afterwards the company was wound up, and the clerk of the Court of Mines, in whom the property is vested under Sec. 70 of Act 409, served the sheriff with notice of his claims. Held on interpleader that the winding-up order was not a sequestration within the meaning of Sec. 74 of Act No. 379, and that the proceeds belonged to the plaintiffs as execution creditors. Oriental Bank v. Wattle Gully Company, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 28.

Effect of Voluntary Sequestration on Proof of Debts.] Where mortgagees brought an administration suit seeking a declaration that they were entitled to rank as specialty creditors on the general assets for any deficiency in realising their security, and the administratrix sequestrated the estate after suit brought, Held that the sequestration did not deprive them of their right as specialty creditors. Australian Trust Company v. Webster, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 148.

XVI. Proof of Debts.

Proof by Corporation—5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 39.]—Sec. 39 of the Act does not require that the affidavit should be made by the creditor himself; it is sufficient if a person appointed an attorney under power of the corporation file such affidavit. A bank whose head office was in London, appointed F. as attorney, under power to prove and appoint any person to prove in Victoria a debt due to bank from any insolvent. F. by deed appointed S. his attorney, and in his name as attorney, to prove any debt in Victoria due to bank. Held that S.'s proof was a good proof for the bank. Ex parte Knox, in re Rutledge and Bank of Australasia, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 65.

[Note.—Secs. 22 and 104 of Act No 379 give full authority to the agent of any creditor, corporate or not.]

Judgment Debt—Judgment When Reviewed.]—The Court cannot review the judgment upon which is founded a debt which a judgment creditor seeks to prove, except upon the grounds of an equitable defence, or of collusion between the insolvent and the creditor in obtaining the judgment, the latter being a ground which it is open to a creditor to raise, but not to the insolvent himself. Ex parte Gregory, 1 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 57.

Set-Off.] — Per Molesworth, J.—"A proof cannot be met by way of set off by the receipt of payment of another debt by way of fraudulent preference." The case involved the consideration of circumstances under which a succession of advances and repayments had taken place between the insolvent and his mother and of other family arrangements. In re Groves, 6 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 36; N.C., 42.

See S.P., Courtney v. King, 1 V.R. (L.,) 70; 1 A.J.R., 86.

Set-Off—Rule 26—Costs.]—Where an insolvent wishes to set off a claim against a proof of debt, and so reduce the proof, he must give notice thereof as required by Rule 26. Upon motion in the Court of Insolvency to expunge a proof of debt, the application was dismissed with costs against the insolvent. On appeal, the Court dismissed the appeal with costs, confirming the order. In re Hickinbotham, 5 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 101; 1 A.L.T., 84.

When Proof Rejected.]—Proof of a debt will be rejected where the claim has been presented after a delay altogether uncalled for, where the persons interested in its admission have never mentioned its existence, although their attention has at various times and places been directed to it, where such persons differ on important points as to the nature of the debt and the securities which were given for it, and where the documentary evidence contradicts the assumption of bona fides and reality. On the facts of this case the proof of debt was disallowed, but on appeal the Full Court took a different view of the facts and allowed the proof. In re Georgeson, 1 A.J.R., 114, 139.

Objection Disallowed—Appeal Not Taken in Time.] Where an objection to a proof of debt was taken before the Commissioner, viz., the interlineation in the jurat making the affidavit bad, which objection was a good one, but was disallowed by the Commissioner, and the insolvent did not appeal, Held that he would not be allowed to avail himself of the same objection as ground for a rule to expunge the proof of debt, his proper remedy being by appeal from the allowance of the proof. Ex parte Usher, 2 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 3; 2 A.J.R., 37.

[See Rule 56 of "Insolvency Rules."]

Where the assignee has allowed the proof of debt ignoring all informalities, the person whose debt is allowed is to be treated as a creditor till the proof is set aside. In re Marie, 3 A.J.R., 63.

Expunging Proof.]—Where a creditor at the time he proved had sold property over which he held security, and then proved for the balance of his claim, and after proof the purchaser objected to the title of part of the property, and the creditor rescinded the sale, and then advertised that part of the property for sale, Held that the creditor had not proved for the particular sum which was due to him, and proof expunged. In re Mowling and Dunkley, 2 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 7. Ex parte Usher, 2 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 3; 2 A.J.R., 37.

Expunging, Rejecting or Reducing Debt Proved—"Insolvency Rules," Rule 56.]—Under Rule 56 of the rules of the Court of Insolvency an application to vary or reverse the decision of the trustee or assignee in respect of a proof must be made to the Court of Insolvency within fourteen days of the receipt of the notice of allowance or disallowance of proof. In re Johnston, 3 A.L.T., 136.

Per Noel, J. The rule should be read thus, "Application may be made to the Court within fourteen days having been preceded by notice of motion." Ibid.

Opposing Proof.]—An insolvent is not debarred from opposing a proof of debt by the fact that there is no probability of there being a surplus in his estate. Ex parte Usher, 2 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 3; 2 A.J.R., 37.

"Insolvency Stat. 1871," Sections 37, 106, 120—Rules 54, 55, 58—Forms, 10, 11—Valuation of Security—Neglect of Assignee to File Proof.]—By Sec. 37 of the "Insolvency Stat. 1871" the petitioning creditor is required to value his security, and Sec. 120 requires all creditors proving to value their securities. Rule 58 of the Insolvency Rules, and forms 10 and 11 of the petitioning creditor's affidavit, require the valuation to be in the proof. Where no valuation of securities or any offer to surrender them was included in the affidavit of a bank, which was a petitioning creditor, and there were several mistakes in the affidavit, Held that the affidavit of proof was totally wrong. By Sec. 106 of the Act the assignee should make a list of all creditors who have proved, and file the proof in Court. By Rules 54 and 55 the assignee should, with all speed, reject or admit proof, in writing, and within four days file it with the chief clerk as rejected or admitted. Where the assignee had omitted to file a proof as admitted or rejected, and had done nothing with the proof but keep it, Held that it did not affect the creditor. In re Farrell, 4 A.J.R., 101.

Petitioning Creditor—Objection to Status of When Taken.]—The objection to the status of the petitioning creditor must be insisted upon at the examination in the Insolvent Court, it is too late to take the objection during the subsequent proceedings in equity. Ibid.

One Assignee Making Arrangement as to Proof—Act No. 379, Sec. 106—How Far Second Assignee Bound.]—A creditor filed a proof of debt. This was objected to, but was "admitted subject to adjustment," an adjustment was made by the assignee as to the amount, but neither the original or amended proof was endorsed as allowed or rejected under rule 54, nor filed. Held, affirming Molesworth, J., that the arrangement was nugatory, and that the subsequent assignee could impeach it. In re Bayldon, 5 A.J.R., 163; 1 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 10.

Act No. 379, Sec. 104—Proof by Insolvent as Attorney Under Power.]—Per Noel, J. An insolvent cannot prove on his own estate under a power of attorney from another creditor. In re Jansen, 1 A.L.T., 78.

Landlord of Deceased Insolvent — Proving for Rent.]—A landlord sought to prove for, at a general meeting of creditors, three months' rent due from a deceased insolvent. Held, per Quinlan, J., that the landlord had a right to appear at the meeting, and vote as a creditor, as, although he was to be paid in full, that was a matter touching the distribution of the estate, and did not deprive him of his status as a creditor, and of the right to vote at a general meeting. Re Trump, 6 A.L.T., 2.

Particulars must be furnished by a creditor seeking to prove a debt. Ibid.

Meeting Under Sec. 53 of the "Insolvency Stat., 1871"—Objection to Proof by Creditor—When Taken.]—Per Noel, J. An objection to the affidavit of a proof of debt of another creditor may be taken by any creditor at a meeting held under Sec. 53 of the "Insolvency Stat. 1871," at any time before the creditor whose proof is objected to has signed the resolution. Re Snell, 6 A.L.T., 61.

Per Noel, J. The object of objecting to the proof of a creditor is to prevent his voting. Voting is the signing the resolution. Therefore objections may be taken at any time before the creditor signs the resolution. Ibid.

The right to be present at a meeting does not include the right to vote. Ibid.

Secured Creditor—Valuation of Security—Act 5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 39—Bargain Between Secured Creditor and Official Assignee.]—Under Sec. 39 of 5 Vic., No. 17, any affidavit to give the right of election must have been preceded by a dispute as to the value, or the creditor must have been brought to understand that he was valuing at the risk of having his valuation adopted by the assignee. O. was an insolvent. L. was a mortgagee of O.'s land. After some dispute as to the right to elect, O. valued the security at £200. The official assignee afterwards sold it for £300, and paid £200 to L. as for the security, receiving his receipt as "being payment of value of security upon proof." Held that as L. did not understand that the taking the money was a discharge of the security, that his acceptance thereof and his receipt therefor did not under the circumstances constitute a contract such as a Court of Equity should enforce. Semble, that a bargain between L. and the official assignee to the effect that if L. would value at £200 so as to give the official assignee the profits of a percentage on the excess if he sold or the option of election, the official assignee would undertake the trouble of attempting a sale, would be, if proved by the evidence, contrary to the policy of the Act. Laing v. Laidlaw, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 13.

Secured Creditor — Assignee's Plan of Distribution.] — In the plan of distribution filed by the assignee a creditor, M'L., holding a security, was entered among the list of creditors, and as entitled to a dividend of £968; but in a subsequent part of plan, under the heading "Unrealised Assets," there was inserted the following item:—"Dividend set aside for M'L.'s claim, for which it is supposed security is held equal to £968." Held that the plan must be amended by describing the dividend payable to M'L., not as payable absolutely, but only upon the contingency of her valuing her security, and proving for the balance. Ex parte Bank of Australia, in re Rutledge, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 57.

Creditor Holding Security—Valuing Security—Act No. 273, Sec. 81.]—A creditor obtained the security of a bill of sale over an insolvent's furniture, and claimed a lien on deeds deposited. Afterwards the creditor and the official assignee arranged that the deeds should be given up and the furniture sold. The furniture was sold and realised £80 short of the creditor's debt, and the creditor sought to prove for this deficiency, which proof the Commissioner refused. Held, by Molesworth, J., and affirmed on appeal, that the proof was properly rejected, that it was not competent for the creditor and the assignee to arrange between themselves, that there should be no affidavit of valuation of the debt, but that the assignee should sell by auction, and consider the price realised as the value of the security. In re Kingsland, 6 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 10; N.C., 33.

[NOTE.—Sec. 120 of Act. No. 379 does not deprive a creditor realising his security of his right to prove.]

Proof by Secured Creditor of Separate Estate Against Joint Estate.]—Ex parte Flower, Salting and Company, see post column 666.

Secured Creditor—Insolvency Rules—Rule 59—Different Securities for the Same Debt.]—A creditor held different securities, bills, and real property for the same debt. He valued them separately, and by so doing there was in the realisation found to be an excess on the one security, and a deficiency on the other, Held that the assignee was only entitled to the excess over the aggregate value of the security. In re Bayldon, 1 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 10, 15, 16.

Rule 59 is not ultra vires. The language of the English and the Victorian Acts is not so different as to justify the Court in saying that what can be done under the one cannot also be done under the other. S.C. 5 A.J.R., 163, 1 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 14, 15.

Landlord Claiming Preferentially—5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 41.]—Sec. 41 does not mean that every landlord shall be paid six months' rent as a preferential claim, but such landlords only as the section deprives of the right of distress. In re Brown, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 93.

Landlord of Deceased Tenant Proving for Rent.]—Re Trump, ante column 662.

Payment of Rent to Landlord by Sheriff's Officer.]—Where B. a bailiff out of the proceeds of sale of a judgment debtor's land paid (after notice of sequestration) a sum of money, as rent due, to the landlord, Held that B.'s payment was not protected, and that the official assignee could not have paid himself till the landlord had taken proper proceedings under the insolvent law. Simpson v Burrowes, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 150, see S.C., ante column 629.

Act No. 379, Sec. 108—Distress.]—The provisions of Sec. 108 do not apply to a case of two lessees as joint tenants where distress has been made on the goods of both, and one subsequently sequestrates his estate. Quære whether goods of a tenant passing under a bill of sale are protected under Sec. 108 upon his subsequent insolvency. Officer v. Haynes, ante column 381.

Sec. 108 is for the protection of general creditors against the superior powers of landlords, and does not vary the rights of landlords and mortgagees. In re Sweeney, ex parte Diggins, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 1, 6.

For facts see S.C., ante column 381.

Under Sec. 108 a landlord who has distrained before sequestration cannot after insolvency sell under the distress. In re Nicol and Payroux, ante columns 381, 382.

Act No. 379, Sec. 108—Lien of Landlord—Insolvency of Tenant.]—Where a landlord has distrained but has not sold the goods seized prior to the sequestration, he can only prove as a creditor for any excess of rent in arrear over three months; he has no lien, that being destroyed by Sec. 108, but he has a preferential claim on the insolvent estate for arrears not exceeding three months before distribution amongst the general creditors. Davey v. Bank of New South Wales, 9 V.L.R., 252, 262; 5 A.L.T., 85.

Specialty Creditor.]—A specialty creditor, whose security consists of a mortgage of land not worth the whole of the mortgage debt, has, under the insolvency law, no priority over simple contract creditors for the excess of the specialty debt over the value of the land mortgaged. In re Taylor, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 127.

And see cases ante column 659 for effect of sequestration upon proof of special debt.

Partners—Act No. 379, Secs. 45, 110—Grant of Certificate in Joint Estate.]—Three partners had received certificates of discharge on their joint estate, but not on their separate estate. Two of the partners, A. and B., attempted to prove on the estate of C. for the sum of £4000, balance of £5000 for purchase of one half of their interest in a certain patent. Held that the purchase money was a recoverable debt at the time of sequestration, and that A. and B. were entitled to prove on C.'s estate for the amount, and that the application was not too late, Sec. 110 providing for proof at any time before final distribution. In re Brown, Stansfeld and Company, 3 A.J.R., 19.

Act No. 379, Sec. 112—Surety.]—Per Noel, J, Sec. 112 does not enable a surety who has not paid the debt due by the insolvent, and the principal debtor, to prove, and under such circumstances a surety cannot prove. In re Hyams, 5 A.L.T., 112.

Proof by Corporation—5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 39.]—Knox, ex parte in re Rutledge and Bank of Australasia, ante column 660.

Creditor Not Executing Deed of Assignment.]—A creditor who has not executed a deed of assignment can take no benefit of distribution under it; but his executing it is not a condition precedent to his proving in the Master's office for his debt. Heape v. Hawthorne, 2 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 76, 89.

(3) Debts Provable and Proof of Particular Debts.

Proof by Secured Creditor of Separate Estate Against Joint Estate—Valuation of Security.]—A secured creditor of the separate estate of a partner of a firm where there have been separate sequestrations of the joint and separate estates, upon proving against the joint estate, is not bound to value his security upon the separate estate, for if it were so there would be two cases before the Court at once, and the security required by the Act (5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 39,) to be valued by the creditor, is only such security as he may happen to have against the estate upon which he seeks to prove. Ex parte Flower, Salting and Co, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 143.

Affirmed on appeal to the Privy Council, sub. nom. Rolfe and the Bank of Australasia v. Flower, Salting & Co., L.R., 1 P.C., 27.

[Compare Sec. 100 of Act No. 379.]

Per the Privy Council—The Act 5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 39, does not destroy the distinction between the joint and separate estate of an insolvent, so as to compel a creditor holding a mortgage security on the separate estate to estimate and deduct its value before he can be allowed to prove against the joint estate. Ibid.

The English law of Bankruptcy, which allows a joint creditor, though holding a security on the separate estate, to prove against the joint estate without giving up his security, prevails in Victoria, and is not altered or varied by the insolvent acts of that colony. Ibid.

Secured Creditors.]—C. and B. proved a debt for £2662, being the unsatisfied portion of a judgment debt recovered by them. C. and B. had a mortgage over the insolvent's property to secure the debt which had been assigned to a bank, and the equity of redemption of which had been purchased from the official assignee by the bank. Held that the mortgage was a security for the debt and proof of debt expunged. In re Dallimore, 5 A.J.R., 1.

Purchase Money—Part Payment—Abandonment.]—K. agreed to buy a farm from G., to be paid for in part by K.'s acceptance. K. became insolvent, and G. claimed to prove for the amount of the acceptance. The official assignee rejected the proof on the ground, among others, that he had repudiated the agreement. Held, on appeal from the Chief Commissioner who allowed the proof, that the official assignee by "abandoning," under 5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 84, an agreement made by the insolvent for the purchase of land does not destroy the consideration for a bill accepted by the insolvent as part payment, and that the drawer of such a bill is entitled to prove on the estate for the amount of the bill. Ex parte Gessner, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 183.

Judgment Debt—Proof Of.]—Ex parte Gregory, see ante column 660.

Bills of Exchange.]—S. and M. drew a bill for £3000 upon P., which he accepted. S. and M. endorsed to C. and Co., who gave value for the bill. P. got the proceeds. The bill fell due 10th March, 1860, and was dishonoured, and P.'s estate was subsequently in that month sequestrated. S. and M. paid £2145 in discharge of the bill. Held that under Sec. 37 of Act 5 Vic., No. 17, S. and M. were entitled to prove on P.'s estate for the £2145. In re Pascoe, 2 W. W. & a'B. (I. E. & M.,) 17.

Bills of Exchange—Act No. 379, Sec. 112.]—Bills lodged for collection with a bank (a creditor) should be valued as a security, not for their full value, unless it was expected they would all be paid; current bills discounted with the Bank, on which the insolvent is not primarily liable, should not be proved as debts, but as a contingent liability under Sec. 112 of the Act No. 379. In re Bayldon, 5 A.J.R. 163, 1 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 10.

Bills of Exchange, &c.—Act No. 273, Sec. 101—Void Securities.]—C.'s estate was sequestrated, and at the time he was seeking to obtain his certificate of discharge he gave certain bills of exchange to a creditor to induce him to withdraw his opposition to the granting of the certificate. Held, affirming Molesworth, J., that such bills were not provable on C.'s second insolvency being void under Sec. 101 as founded upon an illegal consideration. In re Cunningham, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.) 1.

Bill of Exchange—Notice of Dishonour Not Given to the Trustees.]—L. drew and endorsed a bill of exchange in favour of A. L. afterwards assigned his estate to trustees by a creditor's deed, upon trust for his creditors. The bill was subsequently dishonoured, and A., without giving notice of dishonour to L. or the trustees, sought to prove on the estate in respect of the bill. Held that notice of dishonour should have been given to the trustees, and that A. could not prove. In re Levy, 2 V.R. (E.,) 33; 2 A.J.R., 11.

Act No. 379, Sec. 112—Preferential Payment to Creditors—Recovery by Assignee.]—W. and Co. received shortly before sequestration of an insolvent's estate a payment which the official assignee considered preferential, and for which he sued W. and Co. A verdict was recovered for £680 for damages and costs. Judge Noel refused to admit proof by W. and Co. of this £680 as a debt against the estate. Held, per Molesworth, J., on appeal, that this sum was a "debt or liability" within the meaning of Sec. 112 of Act No. 379, and that W. and Co. were entitled to prove against the estate as for this sum of £680. In re John Walker, 3 A.J.R. 55, 89.

Act No. 379, Sec. 112.]—A creditor received from the debtor a sum of money to induce him to enter into a composition, and under the composition had received three bills of exchange from the debtor who became insolvent before the third bill was paid. Held that the creditor was not entitled to prove for this third bill. In re Jobson, 5 A.J.R., 154.

G. was committed for refusing to pay a debt upon a fraud summons. Held that such a debt was not provable in insolvency. In re Geary, 5 A.J.R., 173.

And per Stawell, C. J., the non-compliance with an order directing payment of maintenance under the "Marriage and Matrimonial Causes Stat.," No. 268, is an offence and not a debt. In re Harris, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 47; 1 A.L.T., 153.

Damages in Action for Breach of Contract—Act No. 379, Secs. 75, 112.]—Where A. agreed to purchase from B. his share in a certain business, A. paying certain promissory notes and half profits up to a certain time, and A. broke the agreement by failing to pay the half profits, Held, per Barry, J. (in Chambers) that the amount of the half profits was provable against the estate. Christie v. Thomson, 1 A.L.T., 54.

Act No. 379, Sec. 113—"Preferential Claim"—Wages as "Workman."]—Where R. worked as a tailor for the insolvent by the "piece," being under no stipulation to continue to work for him or to forbear to work for another, Held that a claim for wages by R. was not a "preferential claim" within Sec. 113 as being the wages of a "workman not exceeding four months;" "four months' wages" means payment for labour measured by the time employed. In re Murray, 5 A.J.R., 3.

Composition—Bargain with Creditor.]—At a meeting of creditors, which terminated without anything definite being done, a creditor S. acted as chairman. An arrangement was then made, by which S. guaranteed to pay a composition of 10s. in the £, on his being paid his own debt in full, and a deed of composition was signed by creditors other than S. The fact of S.'s being the guarantor was known to the creditors, and he, S., made no statement calculated to mislead them as to the payment of his debt in full. Held that S. was entitled to prove his debt in full. In re Hickinbotham, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 101; 1 A.L.T., 84.

XVII. Mutual Credit and Set-off.

Set-off—New Trial.]—M., who was indebted to G. upon bills falling due on 3rd March, obtained, on the 1st of that month, cheques from G. to take up the bills, and in return gave G. a promissory note due 4th April. On 3rd March G. gave M. a cheque for a further amount, and in return received a bill accepted by one B. On 5th March M. obtained a further sum of £500 from G., in return for which he gave G. a document whereby he transferred to him certain sheep for sale, in consideration for past advances, and the present advance of £500, the proceeds of the sale of the sheep to be applied in liquidating the past advances, and other balances between the parties. B.'s bill was, on 8th March, discovered to be a forgery, and M., on the following day, gave G. another document, ante-dated as for 5th March, whereby he transferred to G. other sheep and cattle for sale, the proceeds of the sale to be applied in liquidating the past advances, and the other balances. The proceeds of the sale were more than sufficient for the purpose, and a balance was left in favour of M., who, on the 18th of March, voluntarily sequestrated his estate.

His assignee sued G. to recover the value of the stock as having been assigned in fraudulent preference, and recovered a verdict. On rule for a new trial, or to enter a verdict for G., Held that G. was entitled to set-off the sum advanced on 1st March, in addition to a sum of £500 which had been allowed him on the first trial, and as this set-off was greater than the assignee's claim under a count for money received to the use of M., to which it was applicable, the damages recovered by the assignee must be reduced by the amount of such set-off, and that G. would have to prove on the estate for the balance, and rule made that unless the assignee consented to have the damages reduced accordingly, a new trial should be allowed. Simson v. Guthrie, 4 A.J.R., 123, 182.

Act No. 379, Sec. 119—Bank Discounting Bill Not Due at Time of Sequestration.]—A sum of £175 stood to insolvent's credit at the bank. The insolvents had accepted a bill of exchange, and the bank having discounted it, claimed a set-off against the £175 in respect of the bill, although the bill was not due at the time of sequestration. Held that the set-off claimed was good, being a mutual credit within the meaning of Sec. 119. In re Morris and M'Murray, 5 A.J.R., 157. Affirmed on appeal at page 185.

Act No. 379, Sec. 119—Set-Off—When Allowed.]—To an order nisi obtained for not satisfying a judgment debt, the respondent objected that the petitioner was indebted to him in a certain amount, which he claimed to set off against the judgment. Held that words of the objection did not preclude the possibility that the set-off might be for a bill not then due or payable, and that the objection did not properly raise the facts and could not prevail. Sec. 119 of Act No. 379 only applies to proof of debts, and no set-off against a petitioning creditor can be entertained which accrues due after the petition has been received. In re Fraser, 6 V.L.R. Act No. 379, Sec. 154, Sub-sec. 3—Non-delivery Up of Books.]—It is no excuse for an insolvent to allege as a ground for not delivering up his books to the assignee, that they are in the custody of another person. In re Hearty, 1 A.L.T., 160.

Act No. 379, Sec. 154, Sub-sec. 2—Non-Delivery Up of Property.]—Where a husband did not deliver up property—furniture used in his house and purchased partly with his own money and partly with his wife's—and there was evidence of an intent to make it appear that the wife was solely entitled to the property, the Court held that it was an offence under Sec. 154, Sub-sec. 2, but, considering the wife's colour of title, did not punish it by imprisonment. In re Oppenheimer, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 26.

Act No. 379, Sec. 154, Sub-Sec. 4—Concealment of Property.]—"His property" in Sec. 154, Sub-sec. 4 may be read as the property of the estate after sequestration, and must be taken to mean what was his property but has become the property of the assignee. T., in September, 1876, assigned to trustees in favour of creditors. On 5th October, 1877, a rule nisi was obtained for sequestration of his estate, which was made absolute on 18th October. On 8th October the concealment took place. Held that T. had been guilty of an offence under the Act, Sec. 154, Sub-sec. 4, the assignment being void as an act of insolvency at the time of the order nisi. Conviction affirmed. Regina v. Tempest, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 329.

Act No. 379, Sec. 154, Sub-sec. 4—Concealing Property.]—Per Noel, J. The offence of concealing property under Sec. 154, Sub-sec. 4, means doing something, and a mere non-disclosure of assets is insufficient. In re Dunphy, 3 A.L.T., 28.

Act No. 379, Sec. 154, Sub-sec. 14—Obtaining Property on Credit by False Pretences.]—Per Molesworth, J. "It is not enough to say that a man tells his creditors lies; the lies must, I think, be to inquiries distinctly made, so that the man knows he obtains goods on credit in reliance upon the truth of his answers, the supposed truth of his answers must be the motive of the creditor parting with his goods. In re Goldsmith, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 18, 24

Act No. 379, Sec. 154, Sub-sec. 15.]—Where an insolvent within four months of sequestration of his estate bought goods on one day on credit at a long date, and then sold them clandestinely immediately afterwards at a less price, for the purpose of meeting bills which were coming due, Held it was an offence within the meaning of unlawfully disposing of goods otherwise than in the ordinary way of business within Sec. 154, Sub-sec. 15 of the Act. Regina v. Morris, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 99.

False Representation Within "Insolvency Statute 1871," Sec. 154, Sub-sec. 16.]—A false representation of his affairs made by an insolvent whereby he induced a creditor to renew certain bills upon being paid a sum of money, does not constitute an offence by the insolvent under No. 379, Sec. 154, Sub-sec. 16, which prohibits an insolvent making any false representation or committing any other fraud, for the purpose of obtaining the consent of his creditors, or any of them, to an agreement with reference to his affairs or his insolvency or liquidation. In re Stocks, 4 A.J.R., 173.

"Insolvency Statute 1871," Secs. 68, Sub-sec. 2, 154, Sub-sec. 16—Making False Representations.]—Per Molesworth, J.—The offence of making false representations for the purpose of obtaining the consent of his creditors to any agreement with reference to his affairs, or his insolvency or liquidation, under Sec. 154, Sub-sec. 16, of the Act 379, has reference to agreements between the insolvent and his creditors for composition, &c., not concessions of furniture, under Sec. 68, Sub-sec. 2, of the Act—such concessions are not agreements with insolvents at all. In re Aarons, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 56; 2 A.L.T., 28.

"Insolvency Stat. 1871," No. 379, Secs. 150, 156—Absconding with Property.]—R.'s estate was sequestrated on 30th September. On 23rd September R. left Melbourne, carrying with him property exceeding £20 in value, and being at that time heavily indebted, R. was convicted upon a criminal information for an offence under Sec. 156 of the Act. Held that Sec. 156 applied both to persons whose estates were sequestrated as well as to persons whose estates were liquidated under Sec. 150. Conviction affirmed. Regina v. Rosenwax, 3 A.J.R., 28.

Act No. 379, Sec. 156—Absconding with Property—Sufficiency of Warrant.]—A warrant recited that insolvent within four months of the commencement of liquidation did feloniously quit New Zealand and take property, &c., but did not state that the property was the insolvent's or divisible among his creditors. Held that it sufficiently disclosed an offence under Sec. 156. In re Fishenden, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 143; see S.C., ante column 455.

Contracting a Debt Fraudulently by Means of a False Pretence—5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 73.]—An insolvent had deposited with him a blank acceptance, given to another person for another purpose. He fraudulently filled up the acceptance as a bill to himself, and discounted it. Held that this came under the Act 5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 73, defining acts of fraudulent insolvency, and was within the letter of the clause referring to contracting a debt fraudulently by means of a false pretence. In re Thomas, 1 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 40.

[Compare Sec. 157, Sub-sec. 1, of Act No. 379.]

Contracting Debts by Means of False Pretences.]—An objection that an insolvent has contracted debts by means of false pretences and misrepresentations ought to allege the nature of the particular false representation by which credit has been fraudulently obtained; and the evidence in support of such a charge ought to be the same as would sustain an information for obtaining goods by false pretences. Mere exaggeration of the value of property does not amount to proving the offence, nor does stating that he was doing a very good business, or that at the time when a change of management occurred in his business it had improved his prospects. A false statement made by one partner is not proof against the other, unless made with his concurrence. In re Walters, 3 W. W. & A'B. (I.E. & M.,) 14.

Obtaining Credit Under False Pretences—Act No. 379, Sec. 157—Refers to Others Besides Insolvent.]—The words "any person" in Sec. 157 are not necessarily limited to a person who has sequestrated his estate. P. falsely represented to H. that he had mortgage security over some land. On the faith of this he bought from H. four lots of cattle at different times, the purchase money being secured by bills; the bills for the first three lots were met, but the bills for the fourth lot were not met. P. was convicted under Sec. 157. Held there was evidence of the false pretences to go to a jury and conviction affirmed. Regina v. Poole, 3 V.R. (L.,) 181; 3 A.J.R., 79.

Obtaining Credit by False Pretences—Act No. 379, Sec. 157, Sub-sec. 1.]—Obtaining credit is not the same as "obtaining property on credit," but it is the postponement of payment that an insolvent must obtain by false pretences to constitute an offence within the Statute. In re Hearty, 1 A.L.T., 160.

Fraudulent Insolvency—Fraudulent Preference—5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 73.]—The alienation and intention which Section 73 makes criminal is an alienation of property with intent to defraud the whole body of creditors, whereby the insolvent takes from the creditors generally any property which is theirs, and is in fact guilty of stealing of an aggravated kind, and is not an alienation having only the effect of preferring one creditor to another. Regina v. Wallis, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 315.

[This as a criminal offence is not found in Act No. 379, but only as an offence, on account of which the certificate may be refused. Sec. 138, Sub-sec. 13.]

W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 40.

[This section does not seem to be embodied in Act. No. 379, but compare provisions of Sec. 133.]

Fraudulent and culpably negligent conduct in an insolvent, either before or after sequestration is not an offence under the Act No. 379. If the Judge's warrant for imprisonment for several offences set out any one offence which is insufficient to warrant it, the whole warrant is bad. In re Rowley, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 8.

Fraudulent Insolvency—Warrant—When Invalid.]—Where a sequestration took place under 5 Vic., No. 17, before the passing of the "Insolvency Stat., 1865," No. 273, and the Chief Commissioner had deemed the insolvent guilty of fraudulent insolvency, and committed him to custody, the warrant of committal reciting the commitment to be under No. 273, Held that the defect was fatal, and insolvent discharged. In re Kilby, 2 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 27.

Reporting for Punishment under "Insolvency Stat. 1865," Sec. 104.]—The report of the commissioner reporting the refusal of certificate to an insolvent, and reporting the insolvent for punishment under Sec. 104 of the "Insolvency Stat. 1875," set out the grounds of refusal of the certificate, but did not specify the grounds on which the insolvent was reported for punishment. Held that the omission did not entitle the insolvent to be acquitted, but only to have the report sent back to the commissioner for further particulars. In re Smith, 1 V.R. Commitment—Act No. 379, Secs. 15, 73, 154.]—Per Noel, J. Under Sec. 15 the Court of Insolvency is not controlled by Act No. 267, and notwithstanding Sec. 73 may commit an insolvent on an information charging more than one offence under Sec. 154. In re Ah Louey, 1 A.L.T., 77.

XIX. Discharge and Release from Sequestration.

1. The Certificate of Discharge.

(a) When granted, refused, or suspended.

When Granted or Refused—Act 28 Vic., No. 273.]—S.'s estate was sequestrated October, 1866. He engaged extensively in mining speculations, and had lost money on them. In his inventory of assets he omitted to notice scrip deposited with creditors, but he referred to its existence by describing these creditors as secured. He had paid calls on shares even when in embarrassed circumstances, and his accounts, though not kept in a regular mercantile form, showed what shares he had, when sold and acquired, at what prices, and the income and outgoings, Held that dealing in mining shares was not gambling; that his omission in the inventory of assets, though irregular, was, when accompanied by the reference to the existence of the scrip, not dishonest; that his dealings had not shown fraudulent preference; and that his accounts were sufficient. Certificate of Discharge allowed. In re Schuhkrafft, 4 W. W. & A'B. (I.E & M.,) 1

[N.B.—Compare Sub-secs. 1 and 5 of Act 379, Sec. 138.]

Ground for Refusing Certificate—Act No. 273—Not Keeping Accounts.]—The failure by an illiterate man, in a small way of business, to keep accounts is not a ground for refusing him his certificate. In re Smith, 1 A.J.R., 105.

Act No. 379, Sec. 138, Sub-sec. 1—Not Keeping Accounts.]—Per Noel, J. An insolvent who keeps in his books no account of a large debt due by him, and persists in such omission, is guilty under Sub-sec. 1 of failure to keep proper accounts. Certificate suspended for two years. In re Dunphy, 3 A.L.T., 28.

Act No. 273—Not Keeping Reasonable Accounts.]—When a retail butcher kept accounts of the goods sold by him, but not of his receipts or expenditure, Held that he had not kept reasonable accounts; that reasonable accounts need not be formally correct or technical, but should be such as to enable a trader, or any one entitled to know, to understand such trader's position; and that not keeping reasonable accounts, though not a ground for withholding his certificate, was a ground for its suspension. In re Bell, 1 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 2; 1 A.J.R., 38, 55.

Act No. 379, Sec. 138, Sub-sec. 1—Not Keeping Proper Accounts.] — Semble, It should be regarded as an offence under Sub-sec. 1, when an insolvent, having proper books, hands them over to trustees of a deed of assignment or purchasers from them, so as to hinder or hamper creditors wanting them in insolvency inquiries. In re Michael, 5 A.J.R., 64,

Not Keeping Reasonable Accounts.]—An insolvent handed his business over to his wife, compounded with his creditors, except a bank, to which he gave a bill in full for his debt, and burned his books. Held, per Molesworth, J., that this constituted the offence of not keeping reasonable accounts of receipts and payments. Re Farrell, 4 A.J.R., 101.

Per Molesworth, J.—Keeping does not mean merely making reasonable entries and then destroying them, but includes preserving them so long as they may be material for creditors. Ibid.

Act No. 379, Sec. 138, Sub-secs. 1, 3, 9.]—An insolvent was a mining speculator and publican, and kept a register of the shares and a day book, showing the amount taken at the hotel, but no other accounts. All amounts received were paid into his bank, and all payments were by cheque. Held that it was not an offence under Sub-sec. 1, an insolvent not being bound to keep books which are not ordinarily kept by persons of his trade or business. Quære, whether putting a creditor to an unreasonable expense by a frivolous defence to the order nisi for sequestration comes within

Sub-sec. 3. Although Sec. 73 would avoid the payment by the debtor of a certain amount off an account to a creditor after sequestration as between such paid creditor and others unpaid, yet such payment is not a violation of any provision of the Act within Sub-sec. 9. In re Kershaw, 1 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 44.

Act No. 379, Sec. 138, Sub-sec. 1.]—An insolvent entered into an extensive speculation of running omnibuses, which he subsequently sold. The only accounts he kept were bank passes, cheque books, receipts and vouchers. Held that these were not sufficient to supply the want of account books as to his stock-in-trade, payments and outgoings, his business and the sale of it. In re Arnold, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 39.

Act No. 379, Sec. 138, Sub-sec. 1 — Not Keeping Accounts.]—The offence of not keeping accounts is one which should be punished severely, since accounts operate as an important check on fraud. Where, therefore, an insolvent, a barrister, speculated in various matters, including land, and kept no accounts of such speculations, his certificate was suspended for one year. In re Dwyer, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 29.

Act No. 379, Sec. 138, Sub-sec. 1 — Not Keeping Reasonable Accounts.] — An insolvent, a merchant, who had carried on a very extensive business, kept a bookkeeper, and books well kept so far as it suited him to have them kept. Among other accounts in the books was a "private account," in which he mixed moneys, the separate property of his wife, with money of his own, but there was no account in the books showing the state of accounts between his wife and himself. The insolvent had various complicated transactions with his brother, business and accommodation bills, selling and re-selling property; but no accounts of such dealings appeared in the books. There were, moreover, no entries in the books in connection with the extensive purchases and sales of shares in an insurance company, or of a purchase of, and payment of deposit on, real estate. Held that the insolvent had not kept reasonable accounts or entries of his receipts and payments; that the omission was not attributable to ignorance or carelessness, so as to be sufficiently punished by suspending the insolvent's certificate, and certificate absolutely refused. In re M'Donald, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 45; 2 A.L.T., 31.

On What Grounds Suspended or Refused—Not Keeping Accounts—"Insolvency Statuts 1871," Sec. 138 Sub-sec. 1.]—The magnitude of the offence of not keeping accounts, within the meaning of Sub-sec. 1, of Sec. 138 of the "Insolvency Stat. 1871," consists in its probably being a concealment of fraud, and the punishment should be regulated accordingly. Where, therefore, an insolvent had omitted to make entries of two amounts, received on the winding-up of his business, but there was no evidence of any intention to conceal the receipt, Held that his certificate should be suspended only, not absolutely refused. In re Schlieff, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 51; 2 A.L.T., 55.

Not Keeping Accounts—"Insolvency Stat. 1871" Sec. 138, Sub-sec. 1.]—A bank account kept by a bank for a customer is not a sufficient account to comply with the provisions of Sec. 138, Sub-sec. 1, of the "Insolvency Stat. 1871," as to keeping reasonable accounts. In re Monaghan, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. &M.,) 9; 6 A.L.T., 1.

The omission to keep accounts where there is no intention of fraudulent concealment is adequately punished by suspension, not refusal, of a certificate. Ibid.

Frivolous and Inequitable Defence — Act No. 379, Sec. 138, Sub-sec. 3.] — L., being admittedly indebted to a large extent to the petitioning creditors, took various technical objections to the debtor summons, which were overruled in the Insolvent Court, and again upon appeal to the Supreme Court. Some of the objections were repeated by him in opposing the sequestration of his estate. Held, by the Judge of the Insolvent Court, that the debtor summons was a proceeding under Sec. 138, and that L. had been guilty of raising a frivolous defence thereto, putting the petitioning creditors to vexatious expense, though his conduct had not been fraudulent; but under exceptional circumstances, L. not having been fairly treated by the petitioning creditors, certificate only suspended for three months. In re Lyon, 4 A.J.R., 108.

Frivolous and Inequitable Defence.]—Where a creditor brought an action in breach of an agreement that the debtor should be allowed to carry on his business, and that the creditor would not sue on certain bills if a guarantee for others were given, and the debtor, in order to gain time to make further arrangements, pleaded to the actions, Held, per Judge Noel, that this did not constitute a frivolous and inequitable defence. Re Mathieson, 3 A.J.R., 92.

Per Judge Noel. Where a debtor having no honest object to attain, but solely to harass a creditor, puts in sham or useless pleas, he does that which this clause of the section is intended to prevent and punish. But not so where just exception may be taken to the proceedings of the creditor. There a pleading which gives the debtor time is not within the section, although there may be no substantial defence at law. Ibid.

Act No. 379, Secs. 136, 138, Sub-sec. 3—Frivolous or Inequitable Defence.]—A creditor sued an insolvent for an overdraft, claiming in all £26,000, and recovered about £24,000. Held, in the absence of evidence to explain the failure in recovering the whole amount claimed, and in regard to the £2000 which the creditor failed to recover being a considerable sum, this was not a frivolous or inequitable defence within the meaning of Sec. 138, Sub-sec. 3, even though the main line of defence was frivolous. In re Wright and Higgins, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 7; 2 A.L.T., 144.

Act No. 379, Sec. 138, Sub-sec. 3—Frivolous Defence.]—See in re Kershaw, ante column 675.

Frivolous and Unjustifiable Defence—"Insolvency Stat. 1871," Sec. 138, Sub-sec. 3.]—Insolvent was employed to select under the Land Acts 1862 and 1865 as a hired agent for R., who gave him the money to pay the fees, and afterwards paid the rent and for all improvements, and held possession from the time of selection. When the lease was issued R. asked insolvent to transfer for £50 in pursuance of the agreement, but insolvent refused, and raised the defence that he had selected for himself, being provided with the money by a deceased friend. Held, per Noel, J., that this was a frivolous and unjustifiable defence within the meaning of Sec. 138, Sub-sec. 3, of the "Insolvency Stat., 1871." In re M'Grath, 1 A.L.T., 132.

Good grounds of defence are not merely such grounds as would be available as a defence in a court of justice, but grounds which to an honourable man would afford a moral justification for the defence. Ibid.

Act No. 379, Sec. 138, Sub-sec. 4—Wilfully Delaying Sequestration.]—Per Noel, J.—Proof of mere sequestration or shrinking from the ordeal of the Court is not sufficient under Sub-sec. 4, nor is a foolish and ill-advised persistency in avoiding sequestration, but a designed and preconcerted postponement of sequestration is what the Sub-sec. contemplates. In re Mathieson, 3 A.J.R., 92.

Act 7 Vic., No. 19, Sec. 18—Gambling.]—The fact that an insolvent has been a deep, and, having regard to his position in life, an improvident rash gambler, is no ground for refusing him his certificate under 7 Vic., No. 19, Sec. 18, for having, "by habits of gambling diminished his means of payment," if he has not on the whole been a loser by his gambling. In re Davies, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 5.

[Compare Act No. 379, Sec. 138, Sub-sec. 5.]

Dealing in mining shares is not the offence of gambling within Sec. 138, Sub-sec. 5, of Act No. 379. In re Schuhkrafft, ante column 673.

Act No. 379, Sec. 138, Sub-sec. 7—Carrying on Trade with Fictitious Capital.]—Where an insolvent, knowing the very uncertain, not to say bankrupt, state of his affairs, continued to order large consignments, and raise money on bills of lading, &c., and thus with inadequate capital, traded on speculative consignments of goods purchased on credit, and with the advances made thereon from time to time, paid for previous purchases made in a similar manner, Held that this did not constitute the offence of carrying on trade by means of fictitious capital. In re Oppenheimer, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 26.

Carrying on Trade by Means of Fictitious Capital.]—Per Molesworth, J. The offence of carrying on trade by means of fictitious capital would be committed by trading on accommodation acceptances, disposing interpreters to put upon the words in question a sense including participators in the former offences as accessories. In re Bryant, 4 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 7, 11.

Where an insolvent began business without capital and in debt; never was solvent from commencement to close; kept afloat by transactions which, while they furnished supplies from day to day, left him always in debt; had no real capital to meet his liabilities; borrowed money continually to avert difficulties as they thickened; and used his wife's money to eke out the paucity of his own, Held, Per Judge Noel, that he had committed the offence of carrying on trade by means of fictitious capital. In re M'Donald, 1 A.L.T., 185.

"Fictitious" does not mean feigned or falsely described, but unreal; that which seems, and is not. Ibid.

Carrying on Trade by Means of Fictitious Capital.] Per Noel, J. "I cannot hold that the considering of bad debts as good ones is carrying on trade by means of fictitious capital within the meaning of the "Insolvency Stat. 1871," Sec. 138, Sub-sec. 7. In re Martin, 2 A.L.T., 48.

Act No. 379, Sec. 138, Sub-sec. 7—Carrying on Trade With Fictitious Capital.]—Where the insolvent entered into a contract with the Government without funds, relying upon funds to be supplied by a bank which was to participate in the profits, receiving the payments made by the Government, Held that this was trading with "fictitious capital," and certificate suspended for one year. In re Wright and Higgins, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 7; 2 A.L.T., 144.

"Insolvency Stat. 1871," Sec. 138—Carrying on Trade with Fictitious Capital.]—A., an accountant and commission agent, broker, &c., carried on his business by means of fictitious capital. Held, per Molesworth, J., that he was not a "trader" within the meaning of the "Insolvency Stat. 1871," Act No. 379, Sec. 138, Sub-sec. 7, so as to constitute this an offence against the Act. In re Aarons, 6 V.L.R (I. P. & M.,) 56; 2 A.L.T., 28.

Objections to Grant of—Trading with Fictitious Capital—What is—"Insolvency Stat, 1871," Sec. 138, Sub-sec. 7.]—To constitute the offence of trading with fictitious capital, within the meaning of Sec. 138, Sub-sec. 7, of the "Insolvency Stat. 1871," it must be shown that the insolvent has made some false statement, or acted in some way so as to produce a false opinion about his capital. In re Monaghan, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 9; 6 A.L.T., 1

Not Disclosing Property—7 Vic., No. 19, Secs. 18, 19.]—An insolvent filed his schedule, suppressing the ownership of the greater portion of his property, introducing a fictitious statement as to debts, and admitting that he owed the debt for which he was sued. When a messenger of insolvency called upon him in order to take possession of his goods, he represented that the goods belonged to a woman with whom he was co-habiting, and to whom he had made an assignment of such goods. The insolvent afterwards in the Insolvent Court disclosed what was his property fully and fairly, and confessed his dishonesty. Held that he had perpetrated an offence under Sec. 18 of the Act, and was liable to punishment under Sec. 19. In re Pogonowski, 1 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 29.

7 Vic., No. 19, Sec. 18.]—An insolvent's non-disclosure of the acquisition of property by him when he has remained within the jurisdiction continuously from sequestration to the application for his certificate, is no ground for the refusal of such certificate; but secus, when he acquires property while out of the jurisdiction and does not inform the assignee. In re Tyrer, 4 V.L.R. Contracting Debts Without Intending to Pay—Act No. 273, Sec. 103.]—B. started in business without any capital at all, under the auspices of a firm to which he gave a bond to cover advances. The firm advanced goods to him, and he in turn gave accommodation acceptances to the firm, some of them in blank, which were filled up to a larger amount than he expected. This led to his insolvency. Held, per Molesworth, J., that the question was to be regarded on the general liability of sureties relying on the solvency of their principals, and that in that aspect B. had not contracted debts "without intending to pay, &c.," within the meaning of Sec. 103, Act No. 273. On appeal Held that the debt of a person accepting an accommodation acceptance arises as soon as the bill is accepted, and that the solvency of the person accommodated cannot affect the ability to pay of the accommodation acceptor; and that B. had so contracted debts within the meaning of Sec. 103. Certificate refused. In re Bryant 4 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 7.

Certificate When Suspended or Refused—Recklessly Contracting Debts.]—Contracting debts without any reasonable expectation of payment under the "Insolvency Stat., 1865," relates to the particular debt, and not to debts generally; when the debt is contracted the debtor must have no reasonable expectation of paying it; and he is not liable as coming under the Act in contracting debts under such circumstances that he has no reasonable expectation of paying all. In a great many cases the line of demarcation between inability to pay all debts and the inability to pay a particular debt is very fine, and a person who contracts a debt when he certainly cannot pay all his debts should be subject to some penalty as regards the grant of his certificate. When H. had contracted debts when he could not pay all his debts, but he had not purchased goods to sell at a sacrifice, and the creditors to whom he was indebted at the time of his insolvency were persons with whom he had dealt for some time, and to whom he had made payments from time to time, and no large purchases were made on the eve of insolvency, but, on the contrary, when some creditors sought orders he had refused to accept their goods; and there was no imputation that he had appropriated assets in favour of a particular creditor, and for some months preceding his insolvency there had been sickness in his family, owing to which he had incurred considerable expense; Held that the total refusal of H.'s certificate would be too severe a punishment, and that a suspension for six months would meet the case. In re Hill, 1 A.J.R., 172.

Disposing of Property, Whilst Indebted, Otherwise than bona fide, and for a Valuable Consideration.]—The insolvent was sole executrix and universal devisee and legatee of her husband, P. S., wh was at his death a partner in a firm. The insolvent sued the surviving partner for accounts, and a decree was made ordering him to pay the insolvent £2000. A few months later B. sued the insolvent as executrix of her husband to establish a sub-partnership with him in P. S's. firm, and for payment of the share of the sum recovered from the partner, and other partnership moneys received by her. Insolvent defended the suit, which was in March, 1862, registered as a lis pendens. On 23rd January, 1863, immediately before the marriage of her daughter, insolvent executed a settlement of all her real estate on the daughter, including that which was vested in her by her husband's will. The property was conveyed to the daughter's separate use without power of anticipation, and the husband took no interest. On 7th October, 1863, a decree was made in the suit by B. against insolvent, declaring B. entitled, as a partner in P. S's. firm, to a half share of the partnership property, and directing an account with costs against the insolvent up to the decree. There was no evidence that the trustees of the settlement had entered into possession of any part of the settled property, or that the daughter had received any of the rents, and it appeared that the insolvent had remained in possession of one of the houses settled, and had paid no rent to the trustees or the daughter. Evidence was given by the insolvent of a promise to her husband shortly before his death that she would execute a settlement on her daughter when she should marry. She admitted that she had not communicated this promise to her daughter or her husband until the settlement was actually being prepared. On the 28th November, 1863, the insolvent voluntarily sequestrated her estate. On appeal from the Chief Commissioner granting her her certificate, Held by the primary Judge and confirmed on appeal, that the insolvent was indebted to B. at the date of the settlement, though proof of the debt was not then established; that under the circumstances the settlement was not bona fide, but colourable, and could not be supported by the consideration of marriage; and that the certificate should be refused on the ground that the insolvent being indebted had unjustifiably disposed of property otherwise than bona fide, and for valuable consideration. In re Solomon, 1 W. Withholding the Certificate.]—Per Molesworth, J. For the purpose of withholding a certificate, assignments between the members of a family on the eve of the insolvency of the assignor, not publicly visible, and the details of which are very improbable, should generally be held fraudulent, although sworn by the assignor and assignees to have been honestly effected, in such a way that no decided falsehood can be detected in their testimony. Improperly Appropriating Moneys Deposited with Insolvent as Agent.]—In order to justify the refusal of an insolvent's certificate for having improperly appropriated moneys deposited with him as an agent, he must be an agent in the sense in which that word is used in popular parlance, or there must be a series of continuous transactions. He must come rather under the character of a trustee, if within the Act at all, than that of an agent, and the best test to distinguish between a trustee and an ordinary debtor is to inquire—was it the duty of the insolvent to have kept the moneys deposited with him so ear-marked and distinguished from his own, as that in the event of the death of the depositor his moneys could be readily recognised? or was the insolvent warranted by all the previous transactions between himself and the depositor in receiving the money, and treating himself merely as an ordinary debtor for the amount? In re Nantes, 1 W. & W. Appropriating Moneys Entrusted to Him as Agent—7 Vict., No. 19, Sec. 18.]—C., an insolvent, received moneys from B., and signed a receipt as follows: "Received from B. £220 sterling, to be invested at interest on good and approved securities on his account, for periods not exceeding two years from date.—C. C. lent out this money on bills, drawn by and payable to himself personally, and did not disclose his character as agent in any transaction. In his schedule also he treated the money as a loan to himself, and entered B. as an ordinary creditor. Held, that he had appropriated to his own use money entrusted to him as agent, and under 7 Vict., No. 19, Sec. 18, should rightly be refused his certificate. In re Christophers, 1 W. & W. Appropriating Property Entrusted to the Insolvent as Agent or Trustee Only—7 Vict., No. 19, Sec. 18.]—P., an auctioneer, being entrusted by his customers with property for sale, sold it and paid the proceeds into his general banking account. Although frequently requested to do so, he neglected to render account sales, or to pay over the proceeds. In the course of his business his account gradually diminished, and he eventually became insolvent. The Commissioner held that he had "expended for his own benefit, or appropriated to his own use trust funds or other property, of which he had the charge or disposition as trustee or as an agent only," and refused his certificate. Upon appeal to a Judge, Held that to satisfy 7 Vict., No. 19, Sec. 18, there must be something of a special fiduciary character in the agency—some special duty to be fulfilled—so as to take it out of the ordinary duty imposed upon every trader of meeting his engagements; that auctioneers' employers must be taken to deal with them in their general characters as traders, without relying on any fiduciary character, beyond the general duty of finally paying what is due to their employers—a duty common to all traders; and that this particular instance was not the irregularity contemplated by the Act. Upon appeal to the Full Court, Held, that the words "agent only" in the section mean an agent without an interest; that an auctioneer employed simply to sell is an "agent only;" that there is no material difference between his appropriation of the proceeds and his appropriation of the property; and that the decision of the Commissioner should be upheld. In re Perry, 1 W. & W. Where Refused—Misappropriation of Money—No. 379, Sec. 138, Sub-sec. 12.]—Per Noel, J. When an insolvent has been proved to have committed the offence of misappropriating money of which he was in charge as a trustee or agent, under Sec. 138 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871," the facts that the creditor has sustained but little injury, owing to the smallness of the amount, and that there has been a subsequent arrangement between them, that the money should be considered as a loan, do not relieve the insolvent so as to entitle him to his certificate. In re Scott, 4 A.J.R. 50, 65.

Unlawfully Expending Moneys Received as Agent—Culpably Negligent Conduct—"Insolvency Stat. 1871," Sec. 138, Sub-sec. 12.]—An insolvent, whose firm were agents for a bank to sell certain property, had to account to the firm's principal for the proceeds, and failed to pay over about £2000 owing to a mistake on the part of the bookkeeper. Held, per Noel, J., that this did not amount to the offence of unlawfully expending moneys received as agents within the meaning of the "Insolvency Stat. 1871," Sec. 138, Sub-sec. 12, since unlawfully there means dishonestly, and there was no evidence of dishonesty, but that it did amount to culpably negligent conduct, and the certificate was ordered to be suspended for twelve months. In re Martin, 2 A.L.T., 48.

Ground for Refusal—Unlawfully Appropriating Money Entrustsd to Insolvent—"Insolvency Stat. 1871," Sec. 138, Sub-sec. 12.]—A broker was in the habit of effecting insurancea with various companies for the Government. Such policies were issued by the companies in exchange for the broker's I.O.U. for the premiums, which were subsequently received by him from the Government, and paid by him to the companies. He received certain premiums from the Government which he did not pay over to the companies, who, on his becoming insolvent, opposed the grant of his certificate on the ground that he had misappropriated money entrusted to him as a trustee or agent only. Held, that he had not charge of the premiums aa a "trustee, agent, factor, or broker," within the meaning of Sec. 138, Sub-aec. 12, of the "Insolvency Stat. 1871." In re Aarons, 6 V.L.R. Being indebted to his brother in a sum of £100, H. paid him thia sum on May 25th, 1860, shortly before his insolvency by a cheque on a bank, where he had already an overdraft. In his evidence H. stated that the money was his brother's, but gave no evidence that it was intrusted to him by his brother for any specific purpose. H. also admitted that, on May 21st, he "found himself surrounded by difficulties." Held, that the payment to his brother was an unjust preference and fraudulent as regarded the other creditors. In re Handasyde, 1 W. & W. Fraudulsnt Prsfsrsncs—"Insolvency Stat. 1865," No. 273, Sec. 103.]—J. C., being heavily indebted to a bank, on the 20th of March, 1870, gave C. a bill for £2,000. On March 23rd, J.

C. made a statement to the bank of his assets and liabilities, omitting in the latter the bill to C., and a number of debts to members of his family. On the 30th of May, 1870, J. C. made an agreement with one A. for the sale of his farm and farming-stock and plant, and took bills for £8,000 from A. He conveyed to A. on the 4th of June, 1870, but there was no change of apparent ownership. The bank and C. had executions against him, and to satisfy them he gave C. the bill before mentioned, and offered to give the bank security over the property conveyed to A., undertaking to obtain A.'s concurrence. On the 16th of July he voluntarily sequestrated his estate. The chief commissioner refused to grant J. C. his certificate, and bound him to attend for punishment if awarded. After the sequestration A. and C. gave up the farm and stock, and the bills to the official assignee. On appeal from the decision of the commissioner, Held, that giving an unjust preference to A. and C. was not a ground for punishment, that since the claims of A. and C. had not been paid, there was no fraudulent preference as regarded them; that the charge of fraudulent conveyance to A. and C., though verbally sustainable, was cured as to punishment by the transactions with the assignee; that making statements to mislead a creditor and obtain further credit is not a firm ground for refusing a certificate or for punishment; that filing a schedule containing untrue statements is not making a "false or fraudulent entry in any book of account or other document" within the meaning of Act No. 273, Sec. 103, and is not a ground for punishment, but appeal dismissed, with costs. In re Cobain, 4 A.J.R., 31.

Misconduct—7 Vic., No. 19, Secs. 17 and 18.]—The grant of certificates of discharge to insolvent partners was opposed on the ground that the partners had been guilty of misconduct. Held per Molesworth, J., that it was not necessary to bring home misconduct definitely to each partner, and that the "misconduct" referred to in the 17th section of the Act is not limited to cases enumerated in the 18th section. Certificates suspended for 12 months. On appeal per Barry, J., and Williams, J., Stawell, C. J., dissentiente, that "misconduct" in Sec. 17 is not to be limited to cases enumerated in Sec. 18, or necessarily to trade before insolvency, or to insolvent's conduct as a trader, and it is not absolutely necessary to show that "misconduct" produced the insolvency. When Granted or Refused—5 Vic., No. 17, Secs. 65, 66—7 Vic., No. 19, Sec. 17.]—In 1861 B. voluntarily sequestrated his estate, and an official assignee was appointed. B's. liabilities exceeded £300, and his assets were under £20. The first and only meeting of his creditors was convened in April, 1861; but neither the insolvent nor any creditor attended, no debts were proved on the estate, and for years afterwards nothing was done in the estate. In 1867 B's. father died in Tasmania, leaving him property worth about £6000. He went twice to Tasmania about the property, reduced some of it to money, paid such of his creditors as he knew, in full, and advertised for and discovered others, whom he also paid, without communicating with the official assignee. He then called upon the official assignee and informed him what he had done, and offered to pay him a small sum if he would assist him to get his certificate. To this the assignee agreed; but, on discovering the large amount of B's. property, put in a claim for commission on the whole, and on being refused such commission, opposed, instead of assisted, B. in obtaining his certificate. Held, affirming Molesworth, J., that the non-attendance at the meeting of creditors by B., who "could not afford to come to Melbourne," and who was never requested definitely to attend, was not a ground for refusing or suspending his certificate within Sec. 65 of No. 17; that his going to Tasmania with intent to return was not a removing out of the jurisdiction of the Court, within Sec. 66 of No 17; that refusing to assist the assignee in realising his after acquired property did not constitute an offence; and, reversing Molesworth, J., that taking upon himself the payment of his debts and administration of his own estate did not constitute general misconduct within the meaning of No. 19, Sec. 17. In re Babtie, 5 W. 7 Vic., No. 19, Sec. 17—Evidence of Misconduct.] —In 1854 a partnership estate was sequestrated, and at the second meeting of creditors, the partners were examined by the chief commissioner as to their dealings with the estate, and generally as to their own conduct. One of the partners, T., deposed to having removed some property of the firm for his own use without the knowledge of the others, and to the assignment by him of a lease, the property of the partnership, for no consideration. Twenty-three years afterwards T. applied for his certificate, and put in affidavits as to his conduct since the last sequestration, and was examined generally by the chief commissioner, who refused the certificate on the grounds appearing in the deposition of the partners, and the observations of the former commissioner. On appeal the decision was affirmed, but on appeal to the Full Court, Held, that the only evidence admissible was that of T. himself, and that the acts disclosed by his evidence did not justify a refusal of the certificate, and appeal allowed. In re Tyrer, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 12.

Ground for Refusal—"Insolvency Stat. 1871," Sec. 139.]—Sec. 139 of the "Insolvency Stat. 1871," is intended to deal with misconduct not distinctly specified in the Act. The words of the Sec., "Conduct fraudulent, or culpably negligent," constitute two distinct offences, and though the same act may be both, distinct convictions should be expressed, not a conviction for both in the conjunctive. Convictions under the Sec. should state what the misconduct is, and whether fraud or culpable negligence. In re Hearty, 6 V.L.R., (I. P. & M.,) 37; 1 A.L.T., 191.

Culpably Negligent Conduct—Act No. 379, Sec. 139.] — Where an insolvent had allowed a debt to accumulate to the extent of £80,000 for which he only had security to the extent of £10,000, had omitted to inform himself of the state of the affairs of his firm in London, and had allowed moneys to the extent of £2000 to remain unpaid to a principal to whom he had to account, through a mistake of his bookkeeper, Held, per Noel, J., that he was guilty of culpably negligent conduct, and his certificate was suspended for twelve months. In re Martin, 2 A.L.T., 48.

"Salting" Invoices.]—B. bought goods for considerably less than their market value, and shipped them to his agent on "sale and return," invoicing them at very nearly their market value. The invoice was as from himself, and on his own account, and did not in any way mention the vendor. On this invoice he obtained an advance upon security of the bill of lading of the goods from his bankers. B. subsequently became insolvent, and the chief commissioner refused him his certificate on the ground that he had "salted" the invoice. On appeal, Held, that there being no deception and no actual fraud, such "salting" was no ground for refusing the certificate. In re Brown, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 180.

Leaving the Colony—7 Vic., No. 19, Sec. 18.]—The fact that the insolvent after sequestration, and without the leave of his creditors or the Court, has left the colony, and had not returned when the application for the certificate was made, is a sufficient ground for the refusal of his certificate. In re Hewitt, 1 W. W & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 38.

On What Grounds Refused.]—As to the conduct for which a certificate should be withheld the Court is not limited to the enumeration in the Act 7 Vic., No. 19. In re Thomas, 1 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.) 40.

When Granted or Refused—False Answer.]—A false answer by an insolvent in an examination in opposition to the granting of his certificate will not subject him to the refusal of the certificate. In re Mason, 3 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 28.

Ground for Refusing Certificate—28 Vic., No. 273—Untrue Statements.]—An untrue statement by an insolvent in reference to his property, which is not calculated to defraud his creditors, is not a ground for refusing his certificate. In re Smith, 1 A.J.R., 105.

Making False Entries in a Book or Document—"Insolvency Statute, 1871," Sec. 154, Sub-sec. 10.]—A creditor, who was dissatisfied with the position of affairs between himself and his debtor, owing to the large amount owing, requested him to furnish an account of his assets and liabilities. The debtor did so, and made out a false balance-sheet, which considerably understated his debts, in order to conceal the state of his affairs. Held that this balance-sheet handed to a particular creditor, was not a "document relating to the affairs" of the debtor within Sec. 154, Sub-sec. 10, of the "Insolvency Statute, 1871," and that on the subsequent insolvency of the debtor he is not liable to have his certificate refused under that section for having made such a balance-sheet. In re Clapham, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 18; 6 A.L.T. 15.

Per Molesworth, J. A balance-sheet so handed to a particular creditor is not a document within the section in question, which relates to account books generally representing insolvent's affairs, to which his creditors generally should be able to resort for information or evidence in the proceedings in insolvency. Ibid.

Grounds for Refusal—Filing Schedule—Informing Assignee of Place of Residence or Business Insolvency—Rules, Rule 6.] — The non-filing by a debtor of the schedule required by Rule 6 of the Rules of the Court of Insolvency, and the omission by him to keep the assignee informed of his place of residence or business, are not to be regarded as grounds for refusing him his certificate In re Millikin, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. and M.,) 71.

Neglecting to File Schedule Within a Week of Compulsory Sequestration.]—Per Noel, J. A previous voluntary sequestration, in which a certificate had not been granted, is not a sufficient ground for neglecting to file a schedule within a week of a subsequent compulsory sequestration as required by Rule 6, of the Rules under the "Insolvency Statute,1871," Re Miller, 4 A.J.R., 122.

Objections to—Indictable Offence—Proof.]—Per Noel, J. If indictable offences be charged against an insolvent as a ground of objection to his receiving his certificate, clear proof will be required of such offence. In re Hearty, 1 A.L.T., 160.

Suspending.]—So far as the jurisdiction of the Insolvent Court goes there is no class of cases in which a certificate may not be suspended in which there is power to refuse it. In re Hill, 1 A.J.R., 172.

Discretion of Commissioner as to the Condition of Paying a Dividend.]—Under the "Insolvency Stat. 1875," No. 273, the commissioner may at his discretion impose the payment of a dividend by the insolvent as a condition precedent to granting him his certificate. In re Bowie, 3 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 17.

And see for a similar decision, in re Bates, 2 A.J.R., 48.

Act No. 379, Sec. 136—Dividends Less than 7s. in the £.]—The amount available for distribution out of which the dividend is payable as sanctioned by the Court is the excess of assets over trustee's expenses and preferential claims, and where this amount was sufficient for a dividend of barely 5s. in the £, and the Court could find no extenuating circumstances in the neglect of the trustees in realising the property, the Court refused the certificate. In re Lefebvre, 3 A.J.R., 5.

How Dividend Calculated — "Insolvency Stat. 1871," Sec. 136.]—Per Noel, J. The dividend of seven shillings in the £ required by Sec. 136 of the "Insolvency Stat. 1871," as a condition of obtaining a certificate must be exclusive of the ordinary cost of managing the estate, though extraordinary expenditure in such management would be an excuse for paying a less dividend if the insolvent is able to show that he is not responsible for such extraordinary expenditure, and had not by his negligence or misconduct rendered it necessary. Re Frankel, 4 A.J.R., 134.

When Condition Dispensed With.]—If an estate, which is assigned for the benefit of creditors, be sufficient at the time of the assignment to pay seven shillings in the £, the fact that it was reduced below that amount by one of the agreeing creditors withdrawing and throwing the estate into Court, is not sufficient ground for refusing the insolvent his certificate, or for refusing to dispense with the certificate as against such creditor. In re Stocks, 4 A.J.R., 173.

Dispensing with Condition in Sec. 136 of No. 379.]—Per Molesworth, J. An affidavit disclosing depreciation to an enormous extent of an insolvent's mining stock, his inability to realise on his stock being unsaleable, forfeiture of part through non-payment of calls, and his stock being sold when the market was very low, after sequestration, affords good reasons for dispensing with the condition as to payment of 7s. in the £. In re Kershaw, 1 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 44.

Where the causes assigned were purchases in real property which suffered severe depreciation, which insolvent could not foresee or bear up against, Noel, J., held them sufficient reasons for dispensing with the condition. In re Dwyer, 3 A.L.T., 39.

Dispensing With Payment of Dividend—Act No. 379, Secs. 129, 136.]—Where a consent by a vast majority of creditors had been given accepting a composition of 5s. in the £, Held that, although it might furnish good materials for an order under Sec. 129, it furnished no grounds for a Judge to dispense with the condition in Sec. 136. In re Dixon, 5 A.J.R., 171.

When Condition Not Dispensed With.]—An insolvent who has lived extravagantly upon his wife's means as if he himself had property, and having contracted debts, should not be relieved from paying 7s. in the £ before obtaining his certificate, although his embarrassments have arisen from having voluntarily revived old debts. In re Cunningham, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 9.

Payment of Dividend—What will not Excuse from—"Insolvency Stat. 1871," Sec. 136.]—An insolvent will not be excused from payment of the dividend of 7s. in the £ required by Sec. 136 of the "Insolvency Stat. 1871," before obtaining his certificate on a general allegation that his losses arose from bad debts, from losses on fixtures on several changes of his place of business, and from his store having been broken into and robbed of cash and goods. In re Millikin, 4 V.L.R.. (I. P. & M.,) 71.

In order to support an application for the dispensation of the payment of 7s. in the £, an affidavit stating general depreciation of property is not sufficient; it should give statements as to losses upon particular properties, and show that they were not attributable to recklessness or gross improvidence. In re Arnold, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 39.

Act Not 379, Sec. 136—When Condition not Dispensed With.]—Where a firm of insolvents entered into a Government contract relying upon a bank to provide the funds, the bank participating in the profits, and the bank afterwards failed, Held that the inability to pay 7s. in the £ arose from circumstances for which they should be held responsible, and unconditional certificate refused. In re Wright and Higgins, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 7; 2 A.L.T., 144.

When Condition not Dispensed with—Incurring Bad Debts and Mismanaging Business.]—Incurring bad debts or giving injudicious credit is such a management of business as to justify creditors in insisting that the condition of paying 7s. in the £ should not be dispensed with. In re Martin, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 119.

Dispensing with Dividend of 7s. in the £—"Insolvency Statute, 1871," Sec. 136] Per Noel J. Where there is only one creditor in the estate, and he opposes the application for a certificate, the Court will consider his conduct, e.g., sleeping on his rights, as well as the insolvent's in deciding as to whether the condition of paying 7s. in the £, required by Sec. 136 of the "Insolvency Statute, 1871," is to be dispensed with or not. In re Crichton, 2 A.L.T., 24.

When Condition Not Dispensed With—Act No. 379, Secs. 69, 136.]—The fact that the insolvent had by a deed of assignment, for the benefit of all his creditors, divested himself of all his property before the sequestration, even where the creditors knew of the assignment, and gave no notice to trustees that they would treat it as an act of insolvency under Sec. 69, does not afford a reason for dispensing with the condition in Sec. 136. In re Michael, 5 A.J.R., 64.

Dispensing with Dividend of 7s. in the £—Fraudulent Preference.]—An insolvent, who was being sued by a creditor, disposed of all his available assets, and paid all his other creditors in full, and stopped the one suing him by voluntarily sequestrating his estate. Held that he had no legal excuse for not paying the dividend of 7s. in the £, and that that condition must be fulfilled before he obtained his certificate. In re Heath, 8 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 10; 4 A.L.T., 81.

Payment of Dividend of 7s. in the £—When not Dispensed With.]—Loss on a contract from dry weather or from flood, or losses of cattle by poisoning, or loss through a bank stopping credit, will not justify the Court in dispensing with the payment of the dividend of 7s. in the £ required by Sec. 136 of the "Insolvency Stat. 1871," before an insolvent obtains his certificate. In re Monaghan, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 9; 6 A.L.T., 1.

Applying for Grant of Without Payment of Dividend of 7s. in the £—Onus of Proof.]—The right to a certificate without paying seven shillings in the pound is to persons who fail from circumstances for which they cannot justly be held responsible, and the onus of proof that he has failed from such circumstances with some accuracy as to details of losses should lie on the insolvent. In re Dyte, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 42, 47.

Insolvent Appearing for Default in Applying for Certificate—"Insolvency Statute 1871," Sec. 146.] —Per Noel, J. An insolvent who has been compelled to come before the Court under Sec. 146 of the "Insolvency Stat. 1871," and apply for a certificate in order that the Judge might either grant or refuse the certificate and punish the insolvent, is not bound to to file the same affidavit showing why his estate had not paid seven shillings in the £, as has to be filed by an insolvent who voluntarily applies for a certificate, and the Court may grant an unconditional certificate notwithstanding. Re Frankel, 4 A.J.R., 140.

The mere fact that an insolvent has not paid the required dividend of 7s. in the £ is not a ground for permanently refusing him a certificate; but it is for suspending it, and the insolvent may apply again for his certificate after having paid the dividend, or having discovered fresh grounds for dispensing with such payment. In re Dwyer, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 29; 1 A.L.T., 174.

Application for Certificate—How Made.]—An application to the Court for a certificate of discharge under the rider to 10 Vic., No. 14, should be by rule nisi served on the official assignee. In re Connell, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 182.

[Under Rule 35 of Rules 1871 it should be made by motion.]

Application For—What Facts Should be Verified.] —Upon motion for the grant of a certificate under the rider to 10 Vic., No. 14, the consent of the creditors, and the fact that the parties consenting are all the creditors, should be verified by the affidavit of the solicitor of the insolvent, and not by the insolvent himself. In re Handasyde, 1 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 62.

Such an application may be by rule nisi to the official assignee or notice to him, or there may be a consent by the official assignee duly verified, but a single day's notice to him is not sufficient. Ibid.

[But see now Sec. 135 of Act No, 379, and the Rules 91-100.]

Application for—7 Vic., No. 19.]—Under the Act 7 Vic., No 19, there is no limitation as to the time within which applications for certificates may be made. In re Tyrer, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 12, 17.

[But see Sec. 135 of Act No. 379.]

Application for—When Heard, "Insolvency Statute, 1871," Sec. 133.]—There is nothing to prevent a certificate application being heard, pending the examination of witnesses under Sec. 133. In re Were, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 43; 2 A.L.T., 30.

Application for Certificate—Renewal after Payment of Dividend.]—Per Noel, J. When the Court has refused to dispense with the condition of paying seven shillings in the £, required by Sec. 136 of the "Insolvency Statute, 1871," the insolvent may renew his application and obtain a certificate without notice to the opposing creditors, under Sec. 135, when he has paid the requisite dividend. Re Spencer, 1 A.L.T., 176.

Application for—One Application Refused—"Insolvency Statute, 1871," Sec. 136.]—Per Noel J. Where the application of an insolvent for a certificate, alleging that the estate will pay a dividend of 7s. in the £, as required by Sec. 136 of the "Insolvency Statute, 1871," has been refused because the required dividend has not been proved, the decision of the Court is final, and no second application, if such dividend have not in the meantime been paid, will be entertained, but the remedy (if any) must be by appeal. Re M'Kay, 4 A.J.R., 131.

It is discretionary with the Judge of the Insolvent Court to decide in what order he shall take the application for the certificate under Sec. 135, and the application for dispensing with the condition under Sec. 136; but he should only make one order on the subject. In re Dixon, 5 A.J.R., 171.

Act No. 379, Sections 135, 136.]—Per Noel, J. The refusal of a certificate is final, and can only be got rid of by an appeal to the higher Court. In re Murphy, 1 A.L.T., 71.

Followed by Noel, J, as to the refusal to dispense with the condition of payment of 7s. in the £ under Sec. 136. In re Wood, Ibid p. 72.

Per Noel, J. The Court of Insolvency has no jurisdiction to reconsider its decision as to dispensing with the condition in Sec. 136 of Act No. 379, unless the Court of Appeal has remitted the question to it, and given the insolvent liberty to apply. In re Hearty, 2 A.L.T., 112.

In an appeal against a refusal of a certificate the dispensation with the payment is considered as a matter per se, and if the appeal is allowed on general grounds, the Court leaves the question of dispensation to a future application to the Court below. In re Arnold, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 39, 44.

Act No. 379, Sec. 136—Dispensing with Payment of 7s. in the £—Practice—Affidavits—Jurisdiction of Court of Insolvency.]—The order of proceedings should be that the Judge of the Court of Insolvency should first decide if a certificate should be granted at all, and if he decides in the affirmative he should inquire if the estate will pay 7s. in the £, and if that is answered in the negative, should inquire as to reasons to dispense. The Judge refused an application to dispense with the payment on the ground that the affidavits were insufficient without stating how they were insufficient or giving an opportunity of supplying the deficiency. Held that the Judge had a right to manage the routine practice of his Court, and that the Court of Appeal would not entertain further affidavits, but the order was set aside because it did not decide whether a certificate should or should not be granted, apart from dispensing with the payment of 7s. in the £, and it was declared that the affidavits disclosed no good ground for dispensing with the condition of paying 7s. in the £ without prejudice to a renewed application. In re Gale, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 1; 2 A.L.T., 115.

Per Noel, J., on a review of in re Dixon, in re Arnold, in re Dwyer, and in re Gale. "A refusal to dispense is not a refusal of the certificate notwithstanding the words at the beginning of Sec. 136: That although there is to be one order inasmuch as the application for a certificate is twofold, there must be a distinct decision on each branch of the application to be embodied in the order as two distinct decisions; the decision respecting the remission of the dividend is not final. Semble, that re M'Kay, re Wood, and re Hearty were wrongly decided, and I think that the jurisdiction of this Court to re-hear final decisions has not been pronounced upon, but the decision under Sec. 136 has been determined to be a different decision from that under Sec. 135 to be not final, and for that reason open to renewed application by the insolvent with further affidavits." In re Dwyer, 3 A.L.T., 39.

Jurisdiction to Re-hear Application for Certificate.]—Courts of insolvency have jurisdiction to re-hear application for certificate of discharge upon which they have already adjudicated. In re Murphy, 4 A.L.T., 93.

Insolvency—Re-hearing Application for a Certificate.]—Held, reversing Molesworth, J., that a judge of a Court of Insolvency is at liberty, if he thinks fit, to re-hear an application for a certificate. In re Murphy, 8 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 15; 4 A.L.T, 75.

Insolvency—Postponing Application for Certificate.]—Semble that a Judge of an Insolvent Court has a discretion to postpone the hearing of an application for a certificate. In re Millikin, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 71.

Powers of Commissioner—Act No. 273, Sec. 102.] Although the Act gives persons interested in the granting or refusing of a certificate of discharge the right to be heard, it does not disable the commissioner from dealing with the case, if no one wishes to be heard; and in such a case he has jurisdiction to refuse a certificate, but the commissioner should state his reasons for refusal in a specific form, and give the insolvent the opportunity of answering them. The Court then expressed its concurrence with the commissioner upon the evidence, and affirmed the refusal. In re Marshall, 6 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 4.

[Compare Sec. 135 of Act No. 379.]

Refusal in one District—Transfer of Proceedings—"Insolvency Stat. 1871," Sec. 10—Jurisdiction of District to Which Proceedings Removed.]—A person's estate was sequestrated in one district, and his application for a certificate refused by the Judge of that district, but leave was given to renew the application. Pending the renewed application an order was obtained, under Sec. 10 of the "Insolvency Stat. 1871," by the creditors, transferring the proceedings to another district. Held, that the judge of the district to which the proceedings were transferred had jurisdiction to entertain the renewed application. In re Hinneberg, 8 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 7; 3 A.L.T., 133.

Signing the Certificate—Commissoner of Insolvent Estatss.]—It is entirely within the discretion of the commissioner of insolvent estates whether he will sign a certificate of discharge or not, and the Court cannot interfere in the matter. In re Guthrie, 8 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 4.

Suspension—Appealing from Ultimats Grant—7 Vic., No. 19.]—The suspension of an insolvent's certificate is a decision, and the proper time for appealing against such decision, either by the insolvent contending that his certificate should not be suspended, or by the creditors against the ultimate grant of such certificate, is at the Court held next after the suspension, and if no appeal be then made the certificate will at the expiration of the period of suspension issue as of course. In re Murray, 2 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 11; 2 A.J.R., 71.

[But see Sec. 12 of Act No. 379 as to time for appeal.]

Where Appeal Liss—From Decision Dispensing With Dividend—"Insolvency Stat. 1871," Sec. 136.] —The words "in the opinion of the Judge," in Sec. 136 of the "Insolvency Stat. 1871," do not exempt decisions of the Judge of an Insolvent Court dispensing with the payment of the required dividend under that section from liability to appeal. Re Dyte, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 42, 47.

Appsal—Deposit—"Insolvsncy Stat. 1871," Sec 12.]—The provision for deposit under Sec. 12 of the "Insolvency Stat. 1871," does not apply as to any appeal about a certificate. In re Dyte, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 42, 47.

See also S.P., in re Goldsmith, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 18, 21, where the Judge in addition to refusing the certificate sentenced to imprisonment.

Appsal to Full Court—Questions on.]—On an appeal to the Full Court from the decision of the Primary Judge, made upon appeal to him from the decision of a Court of Insolvency, granting or refusing a certificate of discharge, the Court will only entertain the questions raised by the notice of appeal, and will not allow objections taken and decided in the Court below to be opened up without notice. In re Aarons, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 56.

Appsal From Decision Disallowing—Preliminary Objsction Overruled—Court Will Not Enter into Merits.]—On an application to compel an insolvent to apply for his certificate the Court of Insolvency overruled a preliminary objection to the sufficiency of a notice of objection, and proceeded to hear the case, and, thinking the objection, of which notice had been given, was proved, refused the certificate. On appeal to the Supreme Court the preliminary objection was held well founded, and the appeal allowed, but the Court refused, on such appeal, to go into the question as to whether the certificate should be granted or not, holding that it would only place the parties in the position in which they were before the irregular notice was served, and before the insolvent was brought before the Court. In re Caulfield, 10 V.L.R. I. P. & M.,) 73; 6 A.L.T., 58.

Opposing Certificate Before Commissioner.]—As there are no pleadings required before the commissioner, neither the insolvent nor those who oppose the application for his certificate ought to be held very strictly to the precise form of the issues; but it ought to be required, and it is sufficient, that the insolvent be apprised substantially of the grounds for opposing his certificate. In re Perry, 1 W & W. (I. E. & M.,) 150.

[See now "Insolvency Rules," Rule 93.]

Practics—Notics of Opposition to Grant of Certificats—Rule 93.]—The notice of opposition in Rule 93 should be served seven clear days before the meeting of creditors, and such notice should state shortly and with reasonable certainty the grounds of opposition—a notice that insolvent had given creditors a fraudulent preference, contracted debts, &c., held bad. In re Dixon, 5 A.J.R., 171.

After service of the notice of opposition Noel, J., allowed an objection to be added. In re Mathieson, 3 A.J.R., 92.

Irregular Notice of Opposition to Certificats—Adjournmsnt — Rule 93.] — Where a creditor, under Rule 93 of the rules of the Court of Insolvency of 25th April, 1871, had filed within in the prescribed time a notice of opposition to a certificate, and the notice was improperly drawn, and did not disclose any offence, Judge Noel refused to adjourn the certificate, application to enable fresh notice to be given. Re M'Grane, 1 A.L.T., 120.

Act No. 379, Sec. 135—Grounds of Opposition.]—If the statement of grounds of opposition to a certificate are vague, the creditor should amend such statement before the Judge of the Insolvency Court, or otherwise he will not be allowed to urge such objections on appeal. In re Kershaw, 1 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 44.

Affidavit of Opposing Creditor Against Certificate —Where Insufficient.]—Upon an appeal from the decision of a Judge of an Insolvent Court, suspending a certificate of discharge for eighteen months, and directing that it should then issue upon the payment of a certain dividend, it appeared that the affidavit of the opposing creditor, a bank, was in the wrong form, being an affidavit as for an individual instead of for a banking company, Held, that the affidavit was insufficient, and that the bank having no status as an opposing creditor, the certificate must issue upon payment of the dividend. In re Farrell, 4 A.J.R., 101.

Who May Oppose Application—Creditor Whose Debt was Incurred as the Price of not Opposing Certificate.]—An insolvent incurred a debt to a creditor in order to buy off the creditor's opposition to his certificate, and before a second insolvency renewed the debt, proof of which was not opposed on the second insolvency, Held that the status of such creditor on an application by the insolvent for a certificate could not be impeached, but that the manner in which such creditor acted might be regarded. In re Cunningham, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. and M.,) 9.

Who May Oppose Application.]—A creditor, who has not proved has no right to be heard against the grant of a certificate of discharge to an insolvent. In re Ditchburne, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 49.

Per Molesworth, J. "I do not think that Sec. 136 limits the provisions for creditors to those who have proved, though until they have proved they cannot get a dividend. In re Farrell, 4 A.J.R., 101.

Objections to Certificate.]—In objections to certificates, unless the insolvent is likely to be misled, the exactness of pleadings is not required. In re Aarons, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 56.

Objections to Grant of—Vagueness.]—It is too vague an objection to the grant of an insolvent's certificate, that the general conduct of the firm, of which he was a member, was "calculated and intended to deceive the creditors of the said firm as to the true position of the said firm." In re Walters, 3 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 14.

Objections to Grant of—Obtaining Credit by False Representations — Evidence — "Insolvency Stat. 1871," Sec. 154, Sub-sec. 13.]—In order to support an objection to a grant of a certificate, under Sec. 154, Sub-sec. 13, of the "Insolvency Stat. 1871," that the insolvent obtained credit by means of false representations, it must be shown distinctly that the credit was obtained by means of such false representations. In re Clapham, 10 V.L.R (I. P. & M.,) 18; 6 A.L.T., 15.

Objections to Grant of—Notice of Objections Must Specify Charge—"Insolvency Stat. 1871," Sec. 138, Sub-sec. 12.]—A notice of objections to the grant of an insolvent's certificate must state with reasonable certaintly what the objections are. If the objection relied on be that under Sec. 138, Sub-sec. 12, of the "Insolvency Stat. 1871," of unlawfully expending trust property, the notice must specify the nature of the property dealt with, the name of the owner, and the time when the act complained of was committed. It is insufficient if the notice merely states the offence in the precise words of the statute. In re Caulfield, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 73; 6 A.L.T., 58.

Compulsory Application for Certificate—Act No. 379, Sec. 146—Rules 93, 101—Objections.]—An insolvent was examined under Sec. 132 of Act No. 379, and the examination was adjourned and never concluded. He and others were examined under Sec. 133. After six months the assignee proceeded under Sec. 146 to compel him to appear for his certificate, and served him five days before the time with notice of objections. Held, that Rule 93, prescribing seven days' notice only applied to voluntary applications for a certificate made by the insolvent, and not to proceedings under Sec. 146, which supposes written objections to be delivered before the day of hearing, and further hearing after adjournment, and that as insolvent had not applied for an adjournment the objection as to service was properly overruled. In re Goldsmith, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 18, 23.

Objections To—Petition Presented in Wrong District.]—Semble that it is not a good objection to the grant of a certificate of discharge, that the order sequestrating the estate was bad, through the petition for voluntary sequestration not having been presented to the chief clerk of the proper district. In re Heath, 8 V.L.R. (I P & M.,) 10.

Examination of Witnesses on Oath by Commissioner—"Insolvency Stat. 1865," Sec. 102.]—The commissioner, though not expressly authorised by the "Insolvency Stat. 1865," has power to examine witnesses upon oath at a certificate meeting under Sec. 102 of the statute. In re Bell, 1 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 2; 1 A.J.R., 38.

[Compare Sec. 135 of Act No. 379.]

"Insolvency Stat.," No. 379, Sec. 135—Examination of Insolvent.]—On an application for a certificate of discharge the Court has no power to direct the insolvent to attend for purposes of examination; he must, if necessary, be summoned to the Insolvent Court. In re G. J. Johnson, 5 A.J.R., 1.

Evidence — Examination of Insolvent.] — An Insolvent cannot be compelled to submit to examination, but he may be examined as a witness in an application for the grant of a certificate, and where the Judge of the Court of Insolvency refused to allow him to be examined, the Supreme Court received an affidavit of his own explaining his conduct. In re Arnold, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 39.

Examination of Witnessss—Depositions of Insolvent—Refusal of Certificate—Sentence to Imprisonment—Act No. 379, Secs. 132, 133.]—An Insolvent had been examined under Sec. 132, and he and other witnesses were examined under Sec. 133. Held that the insolvent's depositions under both sections were admissible in support of a refusal of certificate, but that in the criminal case (i.e., the sentence to imprisonment,) the evidence of others under Sec. 133 was not admissible. In re Goldsmith, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 18, 23.

Evidence of Insolvent's Wife—Examining Wife when Husband may not be Examined.]—Semble, that when, by the practice of the Insolvent Court, an insolvent cannot be examined upon his certificate application, his wife also cannot be examined. In re Oppenheimer, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 26.

Per Barry J.—An insolvent upon his certificate application may make a statement in explanation of anything which has arisen on which a criminal charge might be founded, but he may not be examined. In re Aarons, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 56, 71, 75.

Per Higinbotham, J.—"I am inclined to think that an insolvent has a legal right to be examined on oath at his certificate meeting." Ibid, p. 76.

Application for Certificate—Insolvent Not to be Examined.]—Per Noel, J. An insolvent is not a competent witness, either for or against himself, at his certificate application. In re Jones, 2 A.L.T., 58.

Act No. 379, Secs. 132, 133, 135—Examination of Insolvent—Evidence on Appeal.]—In an application for a certificate the insolvent may be examined on his own behalf, but cannot be compelled to be examined. Where an insolvent refused to be examined, and then on the appeal sought to put in an affidavit, Held that the Court of Appeal could not hear further evidence. In re Paterson, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 14; 3 A.L.T., 4.

Lapsed Certificate—Certificate Granted in Wrong Name.]—The estate of John B. was sequestrated, but in the sequestration and all proceedings under it he was described as James B. In 1859 the commissioner granted a certificate of discharge, but this certificate lapsed through no application being made to confirm it. The insolvent subsequently applied de novo for a certificate, which was granted, Held on appeal that the lapsed certificate was inoperative to prevent the insolvent getting another certificate, quære as to the effect of granting a certificate in the insolvent estate of James B. to John B. by his right name. In re Bryan, exparte Moore, 2 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 23.

Confirmation—7 Vic., No. 19, Sec. 17.]—Where the chief commissioner grants a certificate under 7 Vic., No. 19, Sec. 17, he must bring it into Court for confirmation; but not so where he suspends or refuses a certificate, the bringing the matter into Court being then cast on the party dissatisfied with the decision. In re Klein, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 139.

Delay in Presenting for Confirmation—Practice.]—Where a certificate of discharge was granted November, 1861, and no application was made for its confirmation until March, 1863, the Court refused to make the order nunc pro tunc, but required the insolvent to apply again for his certificate. In re Kelly, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 4.

Where a certificate was granted in November, 1859, but the certificate itself was never signed or confirmed, an application in May, 1865, for confirmation as of that date (1865) refused. In re Bryan, 2 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 15.

Presenting for Allowance—"Insolvency Stat. 1865," Sec. 105.]—The certificate of discharge must under Sec. 105 of the "Insolvency Stat. 1865," be presented for allowance at the next sitting of the Supreme Court in its insolvency jurisdiction, after its oral grant by the commissioner. In re Usher, 2 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 1.

[Compare Sec. 149 of Act No. 379.]

"Insolvency Stat. 1871," No. 379, Sec. 149—Confirming Certificate Granted in 1856.]—An application was made to confirm a certificate granted in 1856, but not signed by the then commissioner, Held that Sec. 149 only referred to certificates which had been signed, and that the certificate must be signed by the then commissioner. In re Maplestone, 3 A.J.R., 127.

Absence of Assignee.]—Where a certificate had been granted many years ago, but had not been confirmed, the Court required an affidavit that assignee was absent from the colony. In re Duncan and Morrison, 5 A.J.R., 5.

Confirmation—Act No. 273, Sec. 105—No. 379, Sec. 149.]—Sec. 149 of Act No. 379 only applies to the confirmation of certificates granted prior to that time. Where B.'s certificate was sequestrated in 1869, and a certificate of discharge was granted after Act No. 379, and not presented for confirmation under Sec. 105 of Act No. 273, Held that the proper course was to obtain a new certificate, and have it duly confirmed according to the provisions of the former statute. In re Bowman, 3 V.L.R., (I. P. & M.,) 104.

Confirmation—Notice—"Insolvency Stat. 1871," Sec. 149.]—Notice of an application under Sec. 149 of the "Insolvency Stat. 1871," for the confirmation of a certificate granted under the old law, should be served upon the continuing members of the old firms who were creditors, and upon all other creditors who can be found. In re Finlayson, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 82.

Application for Confirmation of Certificate—"Insolvency Stat. 1871," Sec. 149—Service of Notice.]—On an application in 1882 under Sec. 149 of the "Insolvency Stat. 1871," for confirmation of a certificate granted in 1858, notice of the application was required to be served on a bank, a creditor for a large amount, but not on all the creditors. In re Guthrie, 8 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 4.

Confirmation—Notice of Motion for—"Insolvency Statute 1871," Sec. 149.]—Notice of a motion under Sec. 149 of the "Insolvency Stat. 1871," for confirmation of a certificate may be given by post where the creditors reside at long distances from Melbourne. In re Byrnes, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 5.

Application for Confirmation Nunc Pro Tunc—Affidavit Explaining Delay.]—An insolvent in applying for a confirmation of his certificate nunc pro tunc, made an affidavit that he had not applied for confirmation before because he was advised that it was unnecessary. The Court required an affidavit stating who the adviser was. Upon this affidavit being filed the Court directed its associate to write to the person named, who did not reply. The Court then accepted the excuse. In re Sinclair, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 81.

Application for Confirmation Nunc Pro Tunc—Notice of.]—In an application for the confirmation of a certificate nunc pro tunc, notice of the application must be served on the official assignee. Ibid.

Application for Confirmation Nunc Pro Tunc—Solicitor's Affidavit.]—On such application the affidavit of appointment of the official assignee, and of the creditors who have proved must be made by the applicant's solicitor. An affidavit by his solicitor's managing clerk is insufficient. Ibid.

Release from Two Sequestrations.]—An insolvent's estate had been sequestrated in November, 1861, under which he had obtained his discharge, and his estate was again sequestrated 4th May, 1864. The whole of the debts in each sequestration having been paid in full, and surplus of assets having been handed over to insolvent, who had obtained his certificate under the 2nd Insolvency, and advertisements having been duly inserted, the Court made an order releasing the estate from both sequestrations. In re King, 2 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 33.

Suspending Certificate—7 Vic., No. 19, Secs. 17, 18.]—Section 18 of Act No. 19 provides that the certificate "shall be suspended or refused where insolvent shall have taken the benefit of the Insolvent Act at any time within three years previously." A. became insolvent in 1857, and neglected to get his discharge; he embarked in trade and sequestrated his estate a second time in 1858. In March, 1863, he obtained his certificate of discharge from the first sequestration, and applied for a discharge from second sequestration, but Commissioner suspended it until three years from the obtaining of the 1st certificate. Held on appeal that the Commissioner might have refused or suspended, but that having suspended the suspension authorized under Sec. 17 of the Act is for one year only. Order of suspension varied accordingly. In re Christie, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 31.

Compelling Insolvent to Apply for Certificate—"Insolvency Rules" 93, 103.]—Applications under Sec. 146 of the "Insolvency Statute, 1871," to compel an insolvent to apply for his certificate are regulated by Rule 103 of the "Insolvency Rules" of April, 1871, and the order of procedure prescribed by that rule must be strictly adhered to. Rule 93 has no application to these proceedings. In re Caulfield, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 73; 6 A.L.T., 58.

How Effected—5 Vic., No. 17—"Insolvency Stat. 1865," No. 273, Sec. 42.]—B.'s estate was sequestrated July, 1865. B. applied by petition for release of his estate from sequestration, alleging consent by the petitioning and other creditors. No attempt had been made to effect a composition under Sec. 42 of the "Insolvency Stat. 1865." Held that the "Insolvent Act," 5 Vic., No. 17, does not contemplate any other means of releasing an estate than that provided by Sec. 42 of Act No. 273. Application refused. In re Barwick, 2 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 35.

[Sec. 129 of Act No. 379 corresponds with Sec. 42 of Act No. 273.]

Where Granted—5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 86.]—An estate will not be released from sequestration under Sec. 86 of 5 Vic., No. 17, where the affidavits do not show an exact compliance with the statute; and the affidavits should follow the words of the Act, and show compliance with it in fact, and not by inference. In re Turpin, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 9.

See also in re Stampe, ibid 10.

[Compare Act No. 379, Sec, 129.]

5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 86—Release from Sequestration.]—An application for release of estate from sequestration consequent upon a composition with creditors under Sec. 86 of the Act should be supported by the certificate of the creditors themselves accepting the composition, and a certificate of the attorney authorised to appear on their behalf is not sufficient. In re Perry, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 86.

The application should further be supported by the affidavit, not only of the insolvent himself, but also of the solicitor verifying several facts to warrant the application being granted. Ibid.

Quære whether the provisions of this sec. are available after the refusal of a certificate. Ibid.

Application for under Sec. 42 of the "Insolvency Statute 1865."]—Applications under Sec. 42 of the "Insolvency Stat 1865," for the release of an estate from sequestration must be based upon the affidavit of a solicitor, stating all the debts proved, names of creditors and amounts, distinguishing those who have accepted the composition. In re Scallan, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 2.

[Compare Sec. 129 of Act No. 379.]

Order When Made.]—Where there had been a mistake made in advertising a meeting for the acceptance of a composition upon which it was sought to obtain a release from sequestration, the meeting having been advertised for the eighth of the month, which was a Sunday, instead of the ninth, but the meeting was held upon the ninth, the Court refused to make an order for release. In re Brown, 3 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 5.

Rule 47—Posting Letters Containing Notice o. Application to Creditors.]—Per Noel, J. Rule 47 of the Rules of the Court of Insolvency of 25th April, 1871, does not render the affidavit of a person who posted letters containing notices of an intention to apply for an order for the release of an estate from sequestration, a material part of the application for the order, but when service is denied it makes it sufficient evidence of the letters having been duly posted. In re Bailliere, 2 A.L.T., 57.

Application for—Service of Notice upon Agent of Absent Creditor—Rule 105.]—Per Noel, J. Rule 105 of the Rules of the Court of Insolvency of 25th April, 1871, requires service upon the agent of a creditor absent from Victoria of a notice to apply for a release of an estate from sequestration, but the Court may dispense with service if there be no agent, and such dispensation need not be procured by a formal motion and order. The rule means that the Court may, in its discretion, release the estate without notice to the absent creditor having been given if the Court is satisfied that the creditor has no agent here. The insolvent's allegation upon oath that no such agent exists is sufficient. Ibid.

Who may Vote at Meetings to Release Insolvent.]—Per Molesworth, J.—At a meeting in an insolvent estate (at which a composition of 6d. in the £ was accepted) the votes of no creditors should be received, but of those who have proved their debts. In re McTavish, 2 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 26.

It is necessary that creditors should have proved their debts before they can accept a composition under 5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 86, and an acceptance and confirmation by scheduled creditors, who have not proved, is ineffectual, and will not entitle the insolvent to obtain a release of his estate from sequestration. In re Rowland, 5 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. and M.,) 2.

Semble, that a composition may be accepted, and the estate released from sequestration, in cases where there has been but one meeting of creditors, there being expressions in the Act 5 Vic., No. 17, which refer to cases where only one such meeting is required. Ibid.

Insolvency Statute, 1865, Secs. 42, 130.]—Where there are no creditors, any of whose debts amount to £50, so that under Sec. 130 of the "Insolvency Statute, 1865," creditors cannot be reckoned in number, a majority in value is sufficient to release an estate from sequestration under Sec. 42, but such creditors must prove their debts, otherwise they are not creditors within Sec. 42. In re Knoebel, 1 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 10; 1 A.J.R., 144.

[Compare Secs. 129 of Act No. 379.]

Application for—5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 86—Evidence.]—On a motion, under Sec. 86 of 5 Vic., No 17, for the release of an insolvent's estate from sequestration, where a composition has been accepted by the creditors, the Court requires evidence that the debts of the creditors who have accepted the composition, were properly proved, i.e., at a meeting of creditors. In re Motherwell, 8 V.L.R. (I. P. and M.,) 6.

Majority of Creditors — Act No. 273, Sec. 129.]—Where there is a debt admitted to proof, but as to which proof there is an appeal pending, the creditors claiming such debt must be counted in the majority; but if the proof is expunged, another application must be made to the Court for the release of the estate. In re Dallimore, 5 A.J.R., 1.

Only those creditors who have proved can be regarded in the majority, and where only one creditor has proved, such one is not considered as a majority. In re Curley, 5 A.J.R., 5.

Majority—One Person Holding Proxies for two Creditors—Such Person Cannot Split Himself Into Two Capacities.]—In re Schlieff, post column 170.

Where Court May Grant—Act No. 273, Secs. 40, 41, 42—No Meeting of Creditors Accepting—One Dissentient Creditor.]—After sequestration the creditors held a meeting, at which debts were proved, and afterwards all the creditors, according to individual agreement, except one, signed and executed a document accepting a composition requesting the release of the estate. Held that there was no jurisdiction to release if any creditor dissented, the majority could only bind at a meeting, when the matter might be discussed. In re Falla, 5 A.J.R., 62.

Composition.]—Per Noel, J. The acceptance of a composition is valid, if it be a fair one for all the creditors, though the majority may wish to promote the interests of the debtor. In re Bailliere, 2 A.L.T., 57.

"Insolvency Stat. 1871," Sec. 121.]—Sec. 121 of the "Insolvency Stat. 1871" relates to the acceptance of the composition from the estate, as it is after the deduction of preferential payments. Ibid.

Consent of Three-fourths in Number and Value of Creditors—Preferential Creditors.]—Per Noel, J. With some doubt I hold that preferential payments by the assignee will not affect the validity of the consent of three-fourths in number and value of the concurrent creditors to an application for the release of an estate from sequestration. Ibid.

Previous Informal Composition — Consent of Creditors.]—Where an insolvent had on a prior occasion petitioned for liquidation of his affairs by composition arrangement, but the proceedings had been irregular and abortive, Held, per Noel, J., that the proceedings being abortive his liability on his debts continued, and an acceptance of a composition by his creditors in insolvency was not an acceptance by three-fourths in number and value of his creditors, but that if the previous creditors had been paid the consent of three-fourths in number and value of the creditors under his insolvency was alone requisite. In re Bailliere, 2 A.L.T. 57.

Composition Accepted by Three-fourths of Proving Creditors—Effect on Dissentients.]—Where an insolvent has made an offer of composition embracing all the creditors who have proved, and such offer is accepted by three-fourths in number and value of such creditors, and the estate has been released from sequestration by the Court of Insolvency under Sec. 129 of the "Insolvency Stat. 1871," the dissentient creditors are bound by such acceptance. Connell v. Carroll, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 169; 6 A.L.T., 55.

Quære, whether creditors who have not proved would be bound in such case. Ibid.

When Granted—Act No. 273, Sec. 42—Composition With Creditors.]—Where assets in an estate were under £100, and only one meeting had been held at which an offer of composition had been accepted, the Court made an order releasing estate from sequestration. In re Leete, 6 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 36; N.C., 42.

[Compare Sec. 129 of Act No. 379.]

"Insolvency Stat. 1871, No. 379, Secs. 39, 129, 94—Costs.]—Per Judge Noel. If the requirements of Sec. 129 and Rule 105 which must be read with that section have been complied with, the Court will make the order for release, and will not go into extraneous matter respecting the conduct of the insolvent or the management of the estate, but where the liquidating debtor had opposed the creditors opposing the release at every step, and put them to unnecessary expense, such creditors were allowed their full costs. In re Marie, 3 A.J.R., 63.

Objections on Ground of Misconduct Towards Creditors—Costs of Sequestration.]—Where, on an application for the release of an estate from sequestration under Sec. 129 of the "Insolvency Stat. 1871," the requirements of the Section and Rule 105 have been complied with, the insolvent is entitled to an order, and objections as to alleged misconduct on the part of the insolvent towards his creditors should not be entertained, because the Court has no discretion to refuse the application on such grounds. But where the circumstances are special, the petitioning creditor will be allowed his costs of the sequestration as a condition for granting the order, because an unconditional order of release would have the effect of depriving him of the benefit Sec. 40 of the Act gives him of getting his costs out of the estate. Per Noel, J. Re Risk, 4 A.J.R., 25.

Act No. 379, Sec. 129.]—Per Noel, J. The terms of Sec. 129 are obligatory upon a Judge to release the estate from sequestration if the provisions of the section are complied with, and the Judge has no discretion in the matter under such circumstances to refuse on the ground of the dividend not being the largest possible, or want of bona fides in the majority of creditors. In re Blood, 4 A.L.T., 184.

Who May Obtain—Executors—"Insolvency Stat. 1865," Secs. 42, 43.]—A release of an estate from sequestration cannot be obtained under Sec. 42 of the "Insolvency Stat. 1865," on the acceptance by the creditors of a composition, by the executors of a deceased insolvent, since Secs. 42 and 43 of the Act do not apply after the death of an insolvent. In re Scallan, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 2.

(3) The Effect of Discharge or Release.

Effect of Discharge under Insolvent Laws in New South Wales Upon a Judgment Recovered in Victoria.]—G. brought an action on a judgment recovered in Victoria against K. K. pleaded that he was domiciled in New South Wales, that G. caused a memorial of the judgment to be filed in the Supreme Court of New South Wales, and K's. estate was sequestrated under the insolvent laws of New South Wales; that G. held as security for his debt the licence of a station in New South Wales, and mortgage of stock thereon, and that valuing these securities he proved and received dividends on the difference between the value and the amount of the debt retaining the securities, and that K. received his certificate of discharge in New South Wales. The locus contractus was not stated in any of the pleadings. Held, on demurrer to the plea, that it could not be presumed that the contract was made in New South Wales, but that without deciding any question of international law, G. having voluntarily submitted to the laws of New South Wales, and having taken proceedings under the insolvent law of that country had discharged the defendant from the debt upon which this action was based. Judgment for defendant. Glass v. Keogh, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 189.

"Insolvency Stat." No. 379, Secs. 129, 131.]—Where W. made a voluntary settlement of land in August, 1874, and became insolvent in February, 1875, and obtained his certificate of discharge in August, 1875, Held, that the effect of Secs. 129, 131 of Act No. 379, was to put him into position of owner of the land if the voluntary settlement were out of the way. Moss v. Williamson, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 221.

Effect of Release—Act No. 379, Sec. 131.]—To a declaration defendant pleaded in bar sequestration of the estate after the accrual of the cause of action, and before the date of the writ. Plaintiff replied that after the issue of the writ the estate was released from insolvency under Sec 129. Held that the case was in principle the same as that of an administrator, the release and letters of administration relating back when they were obtained but not before. Judgment for defendant. Hodgson v. M'Caughan, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 292.

Act No. 273, Sec. 43—Effect of Release from Sequestration.]—J. became insolvent December, 1870. In June, 1872, he was convicted of felony, completing his sentence in February, 1877. In August, 1881, his estate was released from sequestration by his creditors under Sec. 42 of Act No. 273. Quære, per Williams, J., how far Sec. 43 of Act No. 273 had the effect of wiping out the sequestration, so as to vest in the Crown by relation back and under the forfeiture for felony, an interest which the Insolvent had not at the time of the felony. Johnson v. Kelly, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 97; 3 A.L.T., 41.

XX. Examination of Insolvent and Witnesses.

Insolvency Statute, No. 273, Sec. 87—Examination of Insolvent after Certificate of Discharge—Official Assignee's Discretion—Costs.]—A creditor moved for an order to compel an official assignee to apply under Sec. 87 for an order for insolvent's examination after he had obtained his certificate. Held that the power of discretion rested solely with the assignee, and that the Court had no jurisdiction. Motion refused, but without costs, the assignee not having answered fully enough as to his having exercised a discretion. In re Ireland, 6 W. W. & a'B. (I. E. & M.,) 5.

[Compare Sec. 132 of Act No. 379.]

Act No. 379, Sec. 132.]—Per Noel, J. Where an insolvent has been examined by the trustee, the Court will not allow him to be examined at the same sitting by individual creditors. In re Longstaff, 1 A.L.T., 8.

But (per Noel, J.) where a trustee (also a creditor) stands aloof from the examination, a creditor may examine the insolvent. In re Marks, 1 A.L.T., 96.

See also cases ante columns 700, 701.

Insolvent not Appearing at Adjourned Examination.]—Per Noel J. Where an insolvent does not appear at an adjourned examination, the Court will further adjourn and direct a warrant to be made out for the apprehension of the insolvent, allowing it to lie in the office until the date of the adjournment, when the insolvent must file accounts and appear in Court. In re Young, 1 A.L.T., 78.

Examination of Insolvent—Discretion of Trustee—Powers of General Meeting and Committee of Inspection to Appoint a Solicitor for Purpose of—Act No. 379, Secs. 53, 56, 67, 78, 132.]—Secs. 78 and 132 do not give either the general meeting, or the committee a voice in selecting a solicitor for the purposes of examination, but leave it to the sole discretion of the trustee, but the trustee should not resist the wishes of the creditors properly conveyed, if he should do so, the proper punishment should be his removal under Sec. 56. Under Sec. 67 the control of a general meeting is like that of the committee under Sec. 53, but in cases of conflict, that of the committee prevails under Sec. 67. This control does not refer to the examination of the insolvent, which is not within the meaning of Sec. 53. Order by District Court Judge that the trustee should employ a solicitor named by creditors set aside. In re Mackay, 3 A.J.R., 10.

"Insolvency Stat. 1871," No. 379, Sec. 133—Examination of Insolvent—Production of Documents—Solicitor's Lien.]—Per Noel, J. Under Sec. 133 the trustee appears as agent for the creditors, and not as agent for the insolvent, and therefore a solicitor who claims a lien on the insolvent's documents for costs in an equity suit cannot refuse to produce documents on a summons by the trustee to produce them for examination of the insolvent's dealings. In re M'Kay and Bell, 3 A.J.R., 98.

Fees—"Insolvency Stat. 1865," Schedule 2.]—Schedule 2 of the "Insolvency Stat. 1865" imposing a fee "of 4d. a folio" for every examination taken at the hearing only refers to examinations in the Insolvent Court on the hearing of a rule for the compulsory sequestration of an estate. In re Green, 1 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 6; 1 A.J.R., 104.

XXI. Liquidation by Arrangement.

Act No. 379, Sec. 150, Sub-secs. 4-6, Sec. 152.]—The registration by the clerk of resolutions passed at a meeting of creditors is, under Sec. 150, Sub-secs. 4-6, and Sec. 152, conclusive evidence, in the absence of fraud, that the resolutions were duly passed, and the requisitions of the Act complied with. In re Bateman, 1 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 52.

After resolutions were passed and a trustee appointed, a creditor gave notice to the Judge of the Court of Insolvency of a motion to set aside the registration, and, pending that motion, moved to restrain the trustee from paying a dividend; the Judge refused the motion to restrain. Held that he was right. Ibid.

XXII. Composition with Creditors.

Meeting of Creditors—Majority.]—An insolvent's estate was sequestrated under the Act 5 Vic., No. 17, Sec. 86, and at a meeting of creditors held to accept a composition of 5s. in the £, one person, J., attended as a proxy for the only two creditors who had proved, and J., as representing debtor A., moved the resolution, and, as representing B., seconded it. Held that J. could not in this way be split into two separate capacities so as to constitute a majority. Application for release of estate refused. In re Schlieff, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 18.

How Far Resolutions Passed Under Secs. 129 and 151 of Act No. 379, a Bar to an Order Nisi for Sequestration.]—In re Marie, ante column 597.

Act No. 379, Secs. 151, 152.]—From Sec. 151 it appears that the statement of assets and debts by the debtor as required in Sub-division 2 is in fact the foundation of the proceedings, and so far as the Act is concerned the only material for deciding who are entitled to vote or ascertaining majorities, and such statement requires to be verified as the Act provides in order for the proceedings to be valid. In re Dane, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 19.

Objections to the validity of the proceedings at creditors' meetings may be taken by a solicitor to a creditor, even though the solicitor is not entitled to vote. Ibid.

Registration of Resolution.]—Registration need not be effected personally by the debtor's solicitor; it may be done by the debtor himself or by the solicitor's clerk. Ibid.

Registration of Resolution—Act No. 379, Sec. 152.]—Where a resolution had been registered in great haste before objections could be reasonably filed, and the debtor did not call the attention of the chief clerk to the fact that the date of verification of the statement required in Sub-section 2 of Sec. 151, was subsequent to that of the first meeting, the Court held that such amounted to fraud within the meaning of Sec. 152, and cancelled the registration. Ibid.

Quære, whether registration properly obtained would be conclusive so as to prevent a review by the Judge promptly sought as to the irregularity of the statement not being sworn. Ibid.

"Insolvency Stat. 1871," No. 379, Sec. 151—Court of Insolvency Rules 109, 110, 123—Confirmation—Registration—Filing.]—Where at a meeting of creditors a resolution was passed accepting a composition, which was filed and registered, and a week afterwards a resolution was passed confirming the previous resolution, but this second resolution, though filed with the chief clerk, was not registered by him, Held, on a suit by a creditor for dissolution of partnership, and accounts as against defendants who had made the composition, that such composition was invalid, and could not be set up against plaintiff who had not been entered as a creditor in the statement submitted at the first meeting of creditors. England v. Moore, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 135.

Priority—Sequestration.]—On 25th October a resolution was duly passed under Sec. 151 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871" by three-fourths of the creditors of W., accepting a composition. On 28th October a creditor, with notice of the resolution, obtained a judgment against W., and on the same day issued a fi. fa., which was returned unsatisfied, and on the 1st November obtained an order nisi for sequestration. On hearing the order, Held that the proceedings for composition had priority, and the order nisi discharged, and since the creditor had notice of the resolution before he obtained the order nisi, with costs. In re White, 2 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 42; 2 A.J.R., 132.

XXIII. Meetings of Creditors.

Question Arising at Meeting of Creditors—Duty of Chief Clerk—"Insolvency Statute, 1871," Rule 18.] —Per Noel, J., Rule 18 is imperative upon the chief clerk, and he is bound to refer a question arising at a meeting of creditors to the Judge when required so to do by either party, and for that purpose should adjourn the meeting. Re Reuter, 4 A.J.R., 143.

XXIV. APPEAL.

(1) From Chief Commissioner and Courts of Insolvency.

From Chief Commissioner.]—There is no appeal from the Chief Commissioner of Insolvent Estates direct to the Full Court sitting as a Court of Appeal. In re Pascoe, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 121.

[Compare Sec. 12 of Act No. 379.]

Where Appeal Lies—From Appointment of Trustee—No. 379, Secs. 12, 55.]—An appeal will lie to the Supreme Court from an order of a judge of a Court of Insolvency under Sec. 55 of the "Insolvency Stat. 1871," confirming the appointment of a trustee, since by Sec. 12 of the Act it is intended that every order of such Judge may be appealed from. In re Mackay, 2 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 22; 2 A.J.R., 130.

When Appeal Lies—Transfer of Proceedings—From Order in Chambers of a District Judge.]—An order was made under Sec. 10 of No. 379 for transfer of proceedings from District Court to Melbourne Court of Insolvency. Some time afterwards the assignee applied to District Judge in Chambers to rescind the order as made upon insufficient materials, which application was refused. Held that an appeal lay from such order in Chambers, but appeal dismissed with costs on ground of the assignee's failing to apply within a reasonable time. In re Clarton, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 47.

Where it Lies—Act No. 379, Sec. 12—Application for Certificate—Time of Hearing.]—An irregularity in the action of the Judge of an Insolvent Court as to the time of hearing an application for a certificate is not a ground of appeal to the Supreme Court. In re Were, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 43; 2 A.L.T., 30.

Where Appeal Lies—Refusal to allow Insolvent to be Examined on Certificate Proceedings.]—An appeal lies from a refusal to allow an insolvent to be examined on certificate proceedings. In re Aarons, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 56; 2 A.L.T., 51. In re Patterson, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 14; 3 A.L.T., 4.

There is no jurisdiction to hear an appeal on a certificate except the jurisdiction created by Statute. In re Bateman, ante column 577.

Discretion of Judge as to Accepting Affidavit of an Insolvent.]—Per Molesworth, J. "Subjects of such a kind are so discretionary upon facts which cannot be satisfactorily conveyed to a Court of Appeal, that I should be slow to entertain them." In re Michael, 5 A.J.R., 64.

Where Appeal Lies—Act No. 379, Sec. 12—Order of Judge after Expiry of Term of Office.]—An appeal will not be entertained against an order from a Judge of the Insolvency Court unless such order be drawn up. Semble, no such order can be drawn by an acting Judge after his term of office has expired. In re Murphy, 1 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 50.

Act No. 379, Sec. 38, Rule 16—Service of Debtor Summons — Appeal or Prohibition.] — Where a person is aggrieved with a decision of the Judge of the Court of Insolvency as to service of a copy of a debtor's summons being sufficient, his remedy is by appeal, and the Supreme Court will not grant a prohibition in respect of defect in the service. Ex parte M. S. Levy, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 271.

From Court of Insolvency—Question of Fact.]—Where there is evidence on which the Judge of an Insolvent Court might reasonably find a certain fact, the Supreme Court will not on appeal disturb his finding. In re Summers, ex parte Hasker, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 78.

From Chief Commissioner—Refusal to Grant Certificate—When Appeal Must be Made—7 Vic., No. 19, Sec. 20.]—When the Chief Commissioner of Insolvent Estates has refused a certificate, and the insolvent desires to appeal to the Court, he must do so at its next sittings, and the Court will not allow him to appeal at a later sitting on the ground of surprise. In re Greenlaw, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 7.

Appeal from Chief Commissioner—Time—7 Vic., No. 19, Sec. 20.]—The time to which the intending appellant must look under Sec. 20 of 7 Vic., No. 19, as the one from which to date "the next sitting of the Court," in appeal, is the time when the Chief Commissioner pronounces his decision, granting, suspending or refusing the certificate; and if the appeal be not made, or saved at "the next sitting," it is lost. In re Klein, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 139.

[But see now Sec. 12 of Act No. 379.]

From Chief Commissioner—Initiation of Appeal.]—After the refusal by the Chief Commissioner of a certificate the "next sitting of the Court" was three days after such refusal. On the day of such sitting the insolvent's counsel did not "complain or appeal," but merely mentioned the case to the Court, and obtained an enlargement till the following "next sitting of the Court." Held, that there being no particular mode prescribed by the Act (7 Vic., No. 19, Sec. 20) for commencing an appeal, it is a sufficient initiation of the appeal to give the Court jurisdiction, for counsel at the next sitting of the Court merely to mention the intention to appeal, and ask, and obtain an enlargement till a subsequent sitting, and, that, on such a course being taken, the Court is sufficiently seized of the "complaint or appeal" to be enabled to adjourn it to a subsequent day. In re Wilson, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 141.

Time for Hearing Appeals—Rules 1871, Rule 1.]—Notices of application to the Supreme Court in its Insolvent jurisdiction should be made before 3 p.m. to make them good for the day, otherwise they will be deemed to be made on the following day. In re Rowley, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 12.

Where the notice of appeal was served upon the respondent (assignee) personally, and upon the assignee's solicitor after 3 o'clock. Held to be good service notwithstanding Sec. 420 of Act No. 274, for there were no provisions limiting time for service upon the respondent. In re Goldsmith, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 18, 21.

Setting Down Appeal—Rules of 10th February, 1871.]—Where an insolvent gave due notice of appeal from an order refusing his certificate, but failed from poverty to set the appeal down for hearing within seven days as required by Rule 1 of the Rules of the Supreme Court in Insolvency of 10th February, 1871. Held that the appeal was too late, and the Court refused to hear it. In re M'Intyre, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 80; 2 A.L.T., 76.

Per Molesworth, J.—If some notice had been given to the opposing creditor that an application to hear the appeal would be made, I should have considered it. Ibid.

Deposit—Refusal of Certificate and Sentence to Imprisonment—Act No. 379, Sec. 12.—The provision in Sec. 12 as to lodging a deposit upon an appeal to the Primary Judge does not apply to an order refusing a certificate, even though the Judge of the Insolvent Court, in addition to the refusal, sentence the insolvent to imprisonment. In re Goldsmith, 5 V.L.R., (I. P & M.,) 18, 21.

See S.P., in re Dyte, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 424, ante column 697.

Service of Notice of Appeal—"Insolvency Stat.," No. 379, Sec, 12.]—Service of notice of appeal to the solicitor of the opposite party who had acted for him in the Insolvent Court, is good service under Sec. 12. In re Dallimore, 5 A.J.R., 1.

See S.P., in re Cotton, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 24; 1 A.L.T., 129.

From Court of Insolvency—Security for Costs—"Insolvency Stat. 1871," Sec. 12.]—On appeals from a Court of Insolvency under Sec. 12 of the "Insolvency Stat. 1871," the £20 deposit required by way of security for costs is rightly paid into the Court of Insolvency from which the appeal is brought. In re Nichol and Payroux, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 81.

Sending Case Back for Evidence.]—In an appeal from a Court of Insolvency, the case may be sent back to such court for further evidence. Ibid.

The directions in Sec. 12 of Act No. 379 as to forwarding the evidence, are only applicable to cases in which there is evidence. In re Mackay, 2 V.L.R. (I. E. & M.,) 22; 2 A.J.R., 130.

Act No. 379, Sec. 12—Remitting Case for Restatement.]—Where a case on appeal from a District Judge was vaguely stated, Held that the Court of Appeal had power to remit it for re-statement. In re Ruddock, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 51.

Appeal—Practice on.]—Semble, that on an appeal against the refusal of an insolvent's certificate it is strictly the practice for the appellant's counsel to open, and the counsel for the respondent to reply, and for the Court then to pronounce judgment. Where the appellant's counsel had been taken by surprise the Court allowed the appellant's counsel to reply. In re Perry, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 150.

Appeal from Refusal of a Certificate—Practice—Taking Evidence on Appeal.] — On an appeal from the refusal of a certificate by the Commissioner under Act No. 273, there were no notes of the evidence taken before the Commissioner in consequence of his refusing to take them, and the Court having no power to make the Commissioner take such notes, re-heard the case and took evidence, upon which the appeal was allowed, and the certificate granted. In re Green, 1 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 6; 1 A.J.R., 104.

Power to take Evidence on Appeal—"Evidence Stat., 1865," Sec. 45—"Insolvency Stat., 1871."]—A certificate of discharge had been granted to an insolvent by the Judge of the Insolvent Court. At the application the Judge refused to allow the insolvent to be examined. The insolvent appealed against an order by Molesworth, J., suspending the order of discharge, and asked the Court to take evidence. Held that the Appeal Court could not examine witnesses as it was not a Court of re-hearing In re Aarons, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 56; 2 A.L.T., 51.

And see S.P., In re Patterson, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 14; 3 A.L.T., 4.

Practice on Appeal—Judge of Insolvent Court not Forwarding Reasons.]—On an appeal from an order of a Judge of the Court of Insolvency rescinding a previous order whereby he directed a transfer of proceedings from one district to another, the Judge had not forwarded his reasons for his decision, though the clerk of the Court had been written to for the Judge's reasons. Held that the appeal could not proceed unless the Judge forwarded his reasons, and case adjourned to enable him to do so. In re Cottenham, 1 A.L.T., 119.

Act No. 379, Secs. 12, 13—Appeal on Debtor's Summons—Insolvency Rules 1, 48—Papers—Affidavits—Certified Copies—Act No. 197, Secs. 20, 25.]—In an appeal on a debtor's summons from a District Court of Insolvency, the summons and affidavits were not before the Appellate Court, and the hearing was in consequence adjourned.

On a summons for a mandamus to bring them before the Court, Held that, under Rule 1, the words, "papers in the estate," include all papers connected with the matter in the custody of the chief clerk, whether strictly records or not; and that therefore they may be removed without a special order as required by Rule 48. Semble, at any rate affidavits are not proceedings "of" the Court within the meaning of Rule 48. Papers so forwarded through the post by registered letter are still constructively in the possession of the Court of Insolvency, which is one Court through the whole colony; that under Secs. 20 and 25 of Act No. 197, the appellant is not bound to procure certified copies of the original papers. Mandamus granted. In re Portch, 7 V.L.R., (I. P. & M.,) 126; 3 A.L.T., 50.

Costs of Appeal.—Where the law and practice as to debtor's summonses seemed very vague and unsettled, and one party appealed unsuccessfully, the Court allowed for his confusion, and did not visit him with costs of the appeal. In re Fisher, 2 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 26, 33; 2 A.J.R., 130.

Where an appeal against an interlocutory order was made by way of motion, in which the appellant succeeded, and after the final order was made by the Judge of the Insolvent Court, the appellant appealed against this order, which was substantially the same as the interlocutory order, the Court of Appeal only allowed the successful appellant one set of costs. In re Healey, 2 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 34, 41; 2 A.J.R., 132.

Appeal Against Order Refusing to Expunge Proof of Debt.]—Appeal dismissed with costs. In re Hickinbotham, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 101; 1 A.L.T., 84., see S.C., ante column 660.

Appeal Against Refusal of Certificate.] —Molesworth, J., said he thought he had no jurisdiction to grant costs; at all events he would not exercise it. In re Stocks, 4 A.J.R., 173.

And see in re Clarton, ante column 713; and, in re Cotton, ante column 578, for other cases where appeal was dismissed with costs.

(2) From Primary Judge.

To Full Court.]—An appeal will lie to the Full Court from a decision of the Primary Judge upon an appeal to him from a decision of a Judge of an Insolvent Court. In re Aarons, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 56.

Appeal From Primary Judge in the Matter of a Certificate—Practice.]—On appeal from the Primary Judge in the matter of an insolvent's certificate, all the grounds adduced against him before the Commissioner are open in the Court of Appeal, although all of those grounds were not relied upon before the Judge before whom the matter came in the first instance, on appeal; and the insolvent ought to hold himself prepared to meet the whole of the case made against him. In re Perry, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 150.

Practice on Appeal—What Questions May be Raised.]—The Full Court as a Court of Appeal only entertains questions raised in the notice of appeal, and will not allow objections taken and decided in the Court below to be opened up without notice. In re Aarons, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 56, 59.

Notice—19 Vic., No. 13, Sec. 5.]—A notice of appeal, under 19 Vic., No. 13, Sec. 5, which stated, in the words of the Act, that the grounds on which it was intended that the appeal should be made, were those briefly and distinctly set forth in the petition for appeal, though it did not in itself specify any grounds of appeal, was held sufficient. Ex parte Gessner, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 183.

INSTRUMENTS AND SECURITIES STATUTE.

Interpretation and Construction — Sec. 98 — "Specialty."]—The word "specialty" in Sec. 98 of the "Instruments and Securities Statute, 1864," must be read as applying merely to deeds ejusdem generis with conveyances and mortgages. Stacpoole v. Glass, 1 V.R. (L.,) 195; 1 A.J.R., 154.

For other decisions on "Instruments and Securities Statute," see BILLS OF EXCHANGE, BILLS OF SALE, INSURANCE, GUARANTEE, MORTGAGE, LIEN, LIMITATIONS, STATUTE OF, and as to sections which enact the provisions of the "Statute of Frauds," see under CONTRACT, SALE, SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE, and VENDOR AND PURCHASER.

INSURANCE.

(A) Fire.

1. Description of Property and Interest Insured.

Omission of Material Fact—Knowledge of Insurers' Agent.]—J. wishing to insure his premises employed as his agent D., the agent of the insurers. The agent surveyed the premises, prepared and signed the proposal, and in doing so omitted a material fact as to the premises insured. D. was aware of this fact, but he, as the agent of the insurers, accepted the proposal, received the premium, and signed and gave J. an interim receipt, upon which a policy was issued. The premises were destroyed by fire, and J. sued on the policy. Held that the omission was made by D. as J.'s agent, but that the fact that D. was also the insurers' agent did not remove the effect of D.'s omission as J.'s agent; but that D., being at the time he accepted the proposal and received the premium as the agent of the insurers aware of the omitted fact, the insurers were bound by his knowledge, and were liable on the policy notwithstanding the omission. Jones v. Queen Insurance Company, 2 V.R. (L.,) 127; 2 A.J.R., 69.

Condition to Inform Company of Change in Nature of Occupancy.] — Where a building which was insured was described as a "farm-house," and the column for the name of the occupants was left blank, and there were no occupants at the time of the insurance being effected, and from then up to the loss, Held that this was no breach of a condition to inform the company of any change in the nature of the occupancy. London and Lancashire Insurance Company v. Honey, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 7.

Chattel—Insurable Interest.]—Semble, that a legal interest in a chattel is not necessary to create an insurable interest in a person insuring the chattel; an equitable assignment based upon a loan or advance being sufficient. Either "a right in the property or a right derivable out of some contract about the property, which in either case may be lost upon some contingency affecting the possession or enjoyment of the party," is sufficient, according to the authorities, to constitute an insurable interest. Johnson v. Union Fire Insurance Company of New Zealand, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 154, 161; 6 A.L.T., 50.

(2) In other Cases.

Condition in Receipt Form—By Whom to be Performed.]—A receipt for the renewal of a premium of a fire insurance given by an agent contained the following condition:—"This temporary receipt has the full force of the company's policy (and is subject to its conditions) for fourteen days only from the date of issue; but on expiry of that time none other than the head office receipt will be acknowledged by the company." Held that the condition referred rather to the duty of the agent than to acts to be performed by the insured, in order to enable him to recover, and having paid the premium to a duly constituted agent, the insured could not be deprived of his right to recover by the condition. Moore v. Halfey, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 400; 5 A.L.T., 129.

Condition on Policy—Construction.]—A policy of fire insurance provided "that from the date of these presents and until the 28th day of February, 1871 inclusively, and no longer," the company should be liable to pay for damages caused by fire. A condition was endorsed on it as follows—"On bespeaking policies, all persons shall pay the premium to the next half-yearly day, and from thence for one more year, at least, or shall make a deposit for the same, and shall, so long as the managers agree to accept the same, make all future payments annually at the said office within fifteen days after the day limited by their respective policies, upon forfeiture of the benefit thereof." A fire occurred after the 28th of February, but before the expiration of the fifteen days mentioned in the condition. Held that the expression in the condition, "upon forfeiture of the benefit thereof," did not imply a continuance of the risk, in the face of the express declaration in the policy that the risk should last "no longer" than February 28th, and that the company was not liable. Connell v. the Scottish Commercial Insurance Company, 4 A.J.R., 168, 185.

Condition for Forfeiture if Action Not Brought Within Three Months After Rejection of Claim.]—G. sued on a policy, the 13th clause of which provided that, if the claim were not brought within three months after fire, or if made and rejected an action were not brought within three months after rejection, all benefit should be forfeited. The company pleaded that claim was rejected, and action was not brought within the three months. Judgment for the defendant. Demurrer to plea overruled. Grieve v. Northern Assurance Company, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 443.

Inserting Name of Persons for Whose Benefit Insurance is Made—"Instruments and Securities Statute 1864," Sec. 46.]—A policy of fire insurance on a personal chattel is not within Sec. 46 of the "Instruments and Securities Statute 1864," and need not therefore have inserted in it the name of the person for whose benefit it is made. Johnson v. Union Fire Insurance Company of New Zealand, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 154, 161; 6 A.L.T., 50.

Condition that False Statement Vitiates Policy—Practice—Direction to Jury—Burden of Proof.]—An action was brought upon a fire insurance policy which contained a condition that a false statement or declaration would vitiate it. The pleas averred that the plaintiff made a declaration which was false to his knowledge. Semble that the Judge should have told the jury that, notwithstanding the statement in the pleas, it was not material that the plaintiff should have known the statement to have been false; that the plaintiff should in respect of this statement be held as responsible as if he had asserted what he knew to be untrue, and the onus of proof that the statement is true or false is shifted on to the plaintiff. Meagher v. London and Lancashire Fire Insurance Company, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 390.

Conditions Endorsed on Policy—Construction—Alteration of Premises—Degree of Risk—Reduction of Damages.]—To an action on a policy of insurance against fire on goods it was pleaded that there was an alteration by erection of a stage, scenery, &c., by which "the degree of risk" was increased, and an additional premium required, and not allowed by endorsement, and that there was an alteration in the nature of the occupation by which an additional premium was required, and not allowed by endorsement. The alteration in the occupation was that from an hotelkeeper to that of the keeper of an hotel where theatrical performances were allowed. There was a verdict for plaintiff, and part of the damages assessed were in respect of a moveable floor, which the defendant, under a policy effected by the owner of the house, had reinstated after the plaintiff's term had expired or been determined. On leave reserved to enter a verdict for defendant on either plea, or to reduce the damages by the value of the moveable floor, Held that the language of the conditions being ambiguous since it was the language of the company must be taken most strongly against them; that though the chances of a fire might be rendered greater by the addition (owing to the increased space) still the degree of risk was not increased; that the change in the nature of the occupation was not to a more hazardous class, and that the damages should not be reduced by the value of the moveable floor. Zeplin v. Anderson, 4 A.J.R., 146.

Condition — Condition Precedent to Sue.]—A policy of fire insurance contained a condition that in the event of any difference arising in the adjustment of a loss, the amount (if any,) to be paid should be referred to arbitration, as therein provided. The company did not dispute the amount due, but repudiated any liability on the ground that the policy was void, owing to the concealment of material facts on the part of the insured. Held that an adjustment was a condition precedent to the right to sue. London and Lancashire Insurance Company v. Honey, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 7.

Alteration of Policy — Notice — Knowledge of Assured.]—A fire policy contained a clause that the assured should give notice in writing to the company previous to a loss occurring, "if anything occurred on the premises insured, or on those adjacent thereto, within the knowledge of the assured, after an assurance has been effected whereby the risk in which the company is interested shall in any way be increased, and have such alterations allowed by endorsement, and in default of such notice and endorsement the policy will be void." The insured, after the risk attached, and before loss, introduced gasoline on his premises, whereby the risk was increased; but gasoline was a new substance, the dangerous character of which was unknown to the insurers, the insured, and the general public. Held that the question of knowledge did not arise, and only had reference to what occurred on the adjacent premises; and that th insured could not recover for the loss. Hillerman v. National Insurance Company, 1 V.R. (L.,) 155; 1 A.J.R., 134.

Covsnant to Insure—"The Landlord and Tenant Statuts 1864," Sec. 15.]—It is still very material for landlords to enforce the insurance being in thiernames, although "The Landlord and Tenant Statute 1864," No. 192, Sec. 15, much diminishes the probability of their suffering by the opposite. Per Molesworth, J. Gutheil v. Delaney, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 13; 3 A.L.T., 91.

Covenant to Insure—Name of Insurer.]—G., a lessee under covenant with his lessors, S. and D., to insure the demised premises in the name of his lessors, obtained a policy in the name of "G. as lessor in terms of the lease granted by S. and D. as lessees." Held, an insurance in the name of G., the lessee, in spite of the blunder in transposing the names of lessor and lessee, the policy showing that the insurance company understood it as in compliance with the covenant in the lease. Ibid.

Covenant to Insure—Relief Against Breach.]—Where a lessee under a covenant to insure the demised premises in the names of his lessors had without fraud or gross negligence insured in his own name, relief against the breach was granted under the "Real Property Statute 1864," No. 213, Sec. 218, on the terms of the lessee paying the cost of Police Court proceedings to evict him, and all the costs of the suit. Ibid.

Concealment of Material Fact.]—An omission to fill in any answer to the question in a proposal whether the insured had ever been a claimant upon any fire insurance company (the insured having, in fact, been so) is not a concealment of a material fact which would vitiate the policy. London and Lancashire Insurance Company v. Honey, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 7.

Reinstatement of Partially-destroyed Premises—Second Fire—Liability of Insurer.]—S. insured his house with a company, and, during the currency of the policy a fire occurred on the premises, which were partially destroyed. The company elected to re-instate, and expended a considerable sum in so doing; but, before completion, a second fire occurred, also during the currency of the policy, and totally destroyed the house. In an action on the policy, the company claimed to deduct the amount expended in re-instatement from the value of the policy. Held that they were not entitled so to do, but must make good the loss occasioned by the second fire up to the amount insured by the policy. Smith v. Colonial Mutual Fire Insurance Company, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 200.

Liability for Fencing Pulled Down to Prevent Fire Spreading—Fixtures.]—A policy of insurance against fire contained the following condition:—"The directors, or any other persons on behalf of the company, in case of any fire breaking out, may break into or pull down any house or building, and take or carry away any goods, merchandise, or other effects belonging to the assured, and use all their power, and all proper ways and means, for the most speedy extinguishing of such fire, and securing any house or building, goods, merchandise, and effects, the company paying the damage which shall be done thereby, or their rateable proportion thereof." H. insured his shops under the policy, and a fire having broken out and destroyed the shops, the company rebuilt them; but H. sued for further damages, on the ground that the company had, through the firemen, pulled down certain fencing for the purpose of stopping the fire from spreading, and that they were liable for shelves and counters which had been burnt, and which H. contended were fixtures, and should be included in an insurance on the buildings. Held that the shelves and counters were not fixtures, but merely trade fixtures, and that to entitle H. to recover for the fencing, he must show that the company had either authorised some person to pull it down, or recognised the act afterwards; and that, there being no authorisation or recognition, H. could not recover. Harding v. National Insurance Company, 2 A.J.R., 67.

Policy on Goods—What May be Recovered for—Moveable Floor.]—Where a moveable floor which had been supplied by the company under a policy effected by the owner of the house had been reinstated by the company after the expiration or determination of the plaintiff's term, and was burned, the plaintiff was held entitled to recover its value in an action on a policy against fire on goods in the house. Zeplin v. Anderson, 4 A.J.R., 146.

Person with Limited Interest in Chattel Insured—Amount Recoverable.]—A person insuring a chattel, and having only a limited interest, must, if he insure to the full value, intend to insure the entire interest at the time he effects the insurance, otherwise he would recover more than an indemnity for his own loss, and he would not be liable to the other parties for the balance. The contract being one of indemnity there is no legal principle which forbids the insured to enter into a contract to protect the insurable interests of other persons interested, provided he intends so to protect them at the time of the contract. But if even without instructions or without its being known for whom he is a trustee, or where the interests of others are contingent only, a person having a limited interest who insures for the full value intending to protect the vested or contingent interests of others, the contract will be valid, and if the chattel is wholly destroyed the value of the whole must be made good, and the insured will hold the surplus after applying so much as will cover his own interest as a trustee for those whose interest he intended to protect. Johnson v. Union Fire Insurance Company of New Zealand, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 154, 161, 162; 6 A.L.T., 50.

(B) Life.

1. Assignment Mortgage and Gifts of Policies.

Assignment—"Life Assurance Companies Act 1873," No. 474, Secs. 39, 40, Sched. 12—Equitable Assignment Before the Act.]—D., in 1869, being indebted to the plaintiffs, deposited a policy effected on his life, and agreed to assign it to them on request as security. In July, 1874, D. signed a memorandum endorsed on the policy to the effect that he transferred all his right, title, &c., in the policy to the plaintiffs, but such memorandum was not in the form prescribed in the schedule to the Act No. 474. After D.'s death the plaintiffs applied to the insurance company for payment, which they were willing to make with the consent of D.'s administratrix, which consent she refused to give. Bill by plaintiffs. Held that the Act No. 474 was not retrospective, and that though the memorandum on the transfer being informal under the Act was not sufficient to pass the quasi legal estate in the policy, yet the equitable rights acquired by plaintiffs before the Act were not affected. Ettershank v. Dunne, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 99.

Assignment—How Affected by "Life Insurance Companies Act 1873."]—Prior to the "Life Insurance Companies Act 1873," No. 474, policies of life insurance were regarded as choses in action assignable in equity, and an assignee of one took only the rights of the assignor, and was subject to all equities against him without having notice of them; and that Act does not take such policies of insurance out of the general principles applicable to choses in action. Evans v. Stevenson, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 108; 3 A.L.T., 93, 130.

Per Molesworth, J., Semble, that Secs. 39 and 40 only provide for the protection of insurance companies from confusion of claims of ownership of moneys payable by them, but not for adjusting the rights in those moneys as between transferor and transferee. Ibid, at p. 115; 3 A.L.T., 93.

Mortgage of Policy—Act No. 474, Secs. 39—Death by Assured's Own Hand—Notice of Assignment.]—W. insured his life for £2000, and on the policy was endorsed the following condition:—"In the event of the assured dying by his or her own act (sane or insane) . . . . this policy shall become void and of no effect except as to the extent of any bonâ fide interest which at the time of such death shall be vested in any other person or persons for his, her, or their own benefit for a sufficient pecuniary or other consideration, upon satisfactory proof of the creation, existence, and extent of such interest; provided that notice of such interest shall have been received by the company within fourteen days of the date of its inception, and provided that such notice shall have been given before the death of the assured." W. being indebted to the defendant bank, assigned the policy by an assignment in the statutory form given in Sch. 12 to Act No. 474, on August 16th, 1876, and the assignment was registered on September 6th, but there was evidence pointing to the fact that the policy, with the endorsed assignment, was lodged for registration on August 28th. Later in August, 1876, W. mortgaged certain land to the bank. W. was, on June 7th, 1877, found dead by a gunshot wound, the evidence pointing to the fact of suicide. Letters passed between the bank and the insurance company, the company disputing its liability to the bank on the ground of the fourteen days' notice mentioned in the condition not having been given. Subsequently the bank and company effected a compromise by which the company were to purchase the mortgaged land for £1170, and the bank was to surrender the policy for the sum of £1293—these two sums making up the whole of W.'s indebtedness to the bank. Suit by W.'s representative, seeking to make the bank liable as mortgagee for the full value of the policy (£2000,) and seeking accounts as on that basis. Held, per Molesworth, J., and affirmed on appeal, that the bank was entitled to make the best of its securities, and to enforce them in such order as it might think fit, and was not bound to enter into litigation with the company to enforce the recovery of the policy moneys. Semble, per Molesworth, J., that it was the bank's duty as mortgagee to take care that the fourteen days' notice was given. Held, per the Full Court, that the notice required in the condition was a notice, not of the ostensible but of the real interest, in order to avoid a forfeiture in the event of suicide, and that the statutory notice given under Sec. 39 of the Act was not such a notice; that, in fact, the notice required by the policy was not given; and that in such a case the bank as mortgagee was not under any obligation as to the mortgagor to give the notice required in the policy. Walpole v. the Colonial Bank, 10 V.L.R., (E.,) 315, 325, 327, 329; 6 A.L.T., 147.

2. Actions on Policies.

Who May Sue—Policy Payable to Third Party.]—In a policy of insurance made by deed poll, and reciting that B. had agreed to effect a policy on his life, and to pay premiums, it was witnessed that the society would pay to M. the sum assured. M. sued on the policy. Held that being a deed poll, and it being ambiguous with whom the society covenanted, it must be construed as being a covenant with the person to whom the money was payable, and that M. might sue upon it in his own name. Moss v. Legal and General Life Assurance Society, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 315.

When Maintainable—Untrue Statement.]—In a proposal for life assurance the question, "Have any of your near relatives died of consumption, or been afflicted with insanity?" was answered, "No; all still living;" and at the end of the proposal there was a declaration by the assured that the above statements were true in every respect, and he thereby agreed that the declaration should be the basis and should form part of the contract between him and the company. It was proved that a brother of the assured had died of temporary insanity, and that the assured was aware of it when he signed the declaration. Held, per Stawell, C. J., and Barry, J. (dissentiente Williams, J.) that the statement was calculated to mislead on a material matter, the statement "all still living," though not in answer to a question, being material, and having been proved to be untrue within the knowledge of the applicant, the policy was invalid. Graham v. Wright, 3 V.R. (L.,) 79; 3 A.J.R., 49.

3. Persons Entitled under Policies.

Persons Entitled under "Life Assurance Companies Act 1873," Sec. 37.]—Semble, per Molesworth, J. The persons entitled to the £1000 protected by Sec. 37 of the "Life Assurance Companies Act 1873," in the event of the insolvency of the insured, are his next of kin. Davey v. Pein, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 306, 308; 6 A.L.T., 131.

(c) Marine.

I. Policies.

1. Re-insurance.

Action Against Re-insurer—Matters of Defence.]—The re-insurer is entitled to make the same defence to an action brought against him on the second policy as the original insurers might on the first policy. The practice of inserting a provision in policies of re-assurance that the re-assured shall only be obliged to produce evidence of payment of the loss, and the re-assurer will be bound to refund it, confirms this principle. Universal Marine Insurance Company v. Miller, 3 W.W. & A'B., (L.,) 139.

Followed in National Marine Insurance Company v. Halfey, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 226; where the Court had brought to its notice a recent case decided otherwise by the Supreme Court of New South Wales.

Condition that Insurer should not be Liable for Total Loss unless Estimated Value of Repairs exceeds the Declared Value.]—Action on policy of re-insurance valued at £4000, with a proviso that the plaintiff company would not be liable as for a total loss unless the estimated value of ship's repairs exceeded her value in the policy, and there were general averments of total loss by perils insured against and performance of conditions precedent. The pleas by the defendant company were that there had been no total loss and no notice of abandonment. The plaintiff company recovered a verdict. Held that the fact that the repairs exceeded the declared value was contained in the general averment of all conditions precedent, and that this fact should have been specially traversed, and that plaintiffs were not called upon to prove it. National Marine Insurance Company of South Australia v. Australian Alliance Insurance Company, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 426; 1 A.L.T., 99.

2. Valued Policy.

What is or is Not.]—A policy was effected on freight, and the interim insurance (cover) note contained the words "have this day insured the sum of £400 on freight." No policy was drawn out, but the parties rested content with the cover note. Held that this was an open and not a valued policy. Ross v. Adelaide Insurance Company, 1 V.R. (L.,) 232; 1 A.J.R., 170.

Cost of Repairs—Position of Jury.]—In estimating the costs of repairs of a stranded ship under a valued policy only making underwriters liable when the cost of repairs exceeds the declared value, the jury alone are in a position to enter into the question of the costs, and for that purpose may accept the highest estimate of a witness for the plaintiff against the opposing evidence of defendant's witnesses if they place the greatest reliance upon the skill and judgment of such witness. Corr v. Standard Fire and Marine Insurance Company, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 504, 528, 529, 531.

3. Construction and Duration of.

Of Re-insurance—"Valued at £6000, Insured Only for £4000."]—A company effected a re-insurance upon a vessel with A. and others. In the proposal the company stated, "valued at £6000, insured only for £4000," and also set out the amount re-insured in various other offices. The vessel had originally been insured with the company by the mortgagors of the vessel, and it eventually turned out that the mortgagee had unknown to the company insured the ship in another office. No policy was issued by the company in the original insurance with the mortgagor, or on the re-insurance with A. and others. In an action by the company upon a loss to recover from A. and others the amount reinsured by them, Held that the words "insured only for £4000" referred to the risk which had been taken by the company, and part of which they applied to A. and others to re-insure; that their being placed in collocation with the value was merely to show the risk the company retained, and that they were not intended as a warranty that no other insurances existed upon the vessel, and judgment for the company. Pacific Insurance Company v. Anderson, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 61.

Affirmed on appeal to Privy Council, N.C., 37; 21 L.T. (N.S.,) 408.

Description of Goods Insured — Specific — "Horses."]—In a policy of marine assurance on horses, the horses were insured for a bulk sum, and were warranted free of jettison and mortality and free of particular average unless occasioned by the ship being burnt, sunk, or stranded. Twenty-six of the horses died on the voyage, and the insured sued for payment on the policy. Held that "horses" was a specific and not a generic description, and that the insured, therefore, could not sue on the policy unless all the horses died. Lempriere v. Miller, 2 V.R. (L.,) 26; 2 A.J.R., 18.

On Merchandise per Ship or Ships—Election—Declaring on what Ship.]—Where a policy of insurance is made upon merchandise per ship or ships from one place to another for a certain period, it is the duty of the assured, before he can recover for a loss, to elect or determine to which of several ships the risk shall attach, if not before the ship in respect of which he seeks to recover sails, at anyrate before any loss is known. Such election must be by express words, or by an act, and under such circumstances as to show that the matter has been irrevocably determined, though such election need not be communicated to the underwriters. A usage, however, that the assured must, before loss, declare his election to the underwriters, is reasonable, and consistent with such a contract. Anderson v. United Insurance Company, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 129.

Time Policy—Permission in Writing to go to an Open Roadstead—Several Visits—Ambiguity—Parol Evidence.]—A ship was insured under a time policy, which was voidable if open roadsteads should be visited without permission in writing of the insurers. The insured obtained permission in writing to visit two ports, and as to the latter of which there was a latent ambiguity in the description, it not being clear whether the permission extended only to that port or to the whole of an island near which it was situated, such port not being itself an open roadstead, though a port in the island was. The ship visited the port in question in the island, was driven away by stress of weather, came back and left again twice, once for water and once for provisions, on each occasion for the men engaged in cutting down the timber which was to form the cargo. On the visit for provisions to one of the ports mentioned in the permission she was wrecked. Held that parol evidence was admissible to explain the latent ambiguity in the permission as to what place was intended, and that it was competent for the insured to revisit the prohibited port if compelled to leave it before the business there was completed, and that the insured could recover. Wright v. Imperial Marine Assurance Company, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 334; 2 A.L.T., 65.

Quære, whether such a permission under a time policy has the effect of excepting the port to which the permission extends from the prohibition for the remainder of the term of the policy. Ibid.

II. Risks Insured Against and Amount Recoverable.

Policy Under Seal—Declaration of Interest Not Under Seal Covering a Lesser Risk.]—P., by his agents, effected a floating policy of insurance under seal over goods "to be shipped at and from Melbourne to port or ports in New Zealand, as interest might appear to be declared on shipments." By an unsealed instrument P.'s agents declared as on an amount of £462 10s. per Goldseeker to Hokitika, sea risks only; and on another part of the instrument, unsealed, completing the agreement, it was declared that "Risk was to cease on arrival at outer anchorage." There was a lower rate of insurance to the outer anchorage at H. than at the wharf, and the "G." was lost between the anchorage and the wharf. In an action by P. against the insurance company, Held, in answer to the plaintiff's contention, that the two unsealed documents, comprising the agreement as to declaration of interest, could not operate as an alteration of the policy under seal; that, unless the declaration of interest was accepted such as it was, there was no policy at all; that the plaintiff must accept the declaration as a whole; and, taken as a whole, the declaration of interest only covered the lesser risk, so that quâcunque viâ the plaintiff must fail. Pizzey v. Southern Insurance Company, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 125.

Horses and Fodder in One Policy—Consumption of Fodder Before Loss.]—Horses and fodder were insured in one policy and the horses had to be jettisoned. Before the time of the loss a large part of the fodder had been consumed. Held that the insurers were not liable for the amount of such fodder. Warren v. Swiss Lloyd's Insurance Company, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 397; 5 A.L.T., 123.

Evidence of Usage—Deck Cargo.]—Per Higinbotham J. Where a usage to carry horses on deck is proved, the insured may carry any number on deck consistent with the safety of the ship. Per Williams, J. The evidence to rebut the primâ facie presumption that goods are to be carried in the hold should be very conclusive. Ibid.

III. Interest of Assured.

What is Sufficient Interest in a Charter Party Agreement.]—S. chartered a ship for a voyage from Melbourne to London by an agreement which provided that freight should be paid at the lump sum of £2700, £500 cash, the remainder to be secured by bills of lading to the satisfaction of the master, and in the event of the same not amounting to the required sum the balance should be paid by the plaintiff before the ship left Melbourne; and after the payment of the £500 should the amount of freight as per bills of lading exceed the balance (£2200) the master was to give to S. an order on the owners for the surplus. The £500 was paid, and the amount of freight as per bills amounted to £2809, and the master gave an order for £609. S. insured his interest in the agreement for £500 as against total loss, but the bill alleged that the defendants inserted in the policy by mistake and contrary to the terms of proposal the additional condition of "by total loss of ship only." The ship took fire on the voyage and the total freight earned was insufficient to leave any balance in plaintiff's favour. On a bill for rectification of the policy, Held on demurrer by the full Court, reversing Molesworth, J., that the plaintiff had an insurable interest. Solomon v. Miller, 2 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 135, 140.

What is Sufficient—Where Insurer has Assigned Charter-party as Security.] — W. chartered a vessel, and assigned the charter-party as security to his agent for advances made by the agent to W. Whatever was recovered on the charter-party was to be set off against the advances; if more were recovered, the balance would be paid to W.; if less, W. would still be indebted to the agent. Held that, as between a quasi mortgagor and mortgagee, W. had an insurable interest, since the property was in him absolutely in the first instance, and he had transferred it to the agent only as security, leaving in himself an interest or equity, which was insurable. Ross v. Adelaide Insurance Company, 1 V.R. (L.,) 232; 1 A.J.R., 170.

IV. Warranties.

Position of Ship—"At Sea."]—A ship having departed from Grafton, a port situated on the Clarence River, forty miles within the bar, her owner, on the 12th November, insured her from Grafton to Melbourne, and a cover note was as follows:—"F. has this day insured the sum of £200 on hull, &c., per Sarah, from Grafton to Melbourne, extension of time policy expiring 15th November, vessel being at sea, in terms of proposal." As a matter of fact the vessel did not cross the bar till December 23rd. The owner sued on the policy upon a subsequent total loss. Held that the words "at sea," meant that the vessel had left Grafton, and that the owner could recover on the policy. Fisher v. Adelaide Insurance Company, 2 V.R. (L.,) 90; 2 A.J.R., 61.

V. Abandonment.

Notice of Loss—New Trial.]—Following a dictum of Lord Ellenbrough in Parmenter v. Todhunter (1 Camp., 541) the Court made absolute a rule nisi for a new trial where it appeared that the opinion of the jury had not been taken as to whether the word "abandonment" was used or not in a verbal notice of loss given by the owners of a wrecked ship to the agents of the insurance company. Clough v. Salier, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 232.

Notice of Abandonment—Taking Possession—Valued Policy—Total or Partial Loss.]—Although insurers may take possession of an abandoned ship for repairs only, provided they avow the purpose for which they take her, and having repaired her properly and sufficiently may then compel the owners to take her back—notwithstanding due notice of abandonment having been given—yet they are bound to complete the repairs effectually and within a reasonable time; if they do not it is as if they had not repaired at all, and their act in taking possession would be strong evidence of an acceptance of abandonment; they cannot even by proper repairs if insufficient convert a total into a partial loss. Corr v. Standard Fire and Marine Insurance Company, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 504, 530.

Notice of—Valued Policy—Repairs Exceeding Declared Value — Constructive Total Loss.]—A clause in a valued policy provided that in case of damage the insurers should not be liable as for a total loss unless the estimated cost of repairing such damage should exceed the declared value of the ship. Held that such clause did not affect the right of the assured to abandon in the case of a constructive total loss, the rights to abandon and to recover after abandonment being distinguishable, and the actual value of the ship when repaired and not the value in the policy is to be regarded in considering whether abandonment is justified. Ibid, pp. 504, 538.

Notice of Abandonment—Who May Give—Position of Assured.]—Semble, the master of a ship has no power to give the underwriters notice of abandonment, but quære, whether an agent of the assured who effected the policy is authorised to give such notice, but the assured are allowed a reasonable time after receiving notice of the loss, and sufficient information to form a judgment to decide whether they will give notice of abandonment. Ibid, pp. 532, 536.

VI. Deviation.

What Is.]—An insurance was effected on goods, on a voyage from Melbourne to Java, with liberty to call in at King George's Sound, or Perth—not at both. The crew were shipped for Sumbawa, not for Java, and the ship was cleared for Java, via King George's Sound, having goods on board for Perth. One of the partners in the firm insuring the goods appeared on board at the Port Phillip Heads. On the pretext of having left the register behind, the master put into King George's Sound, although it was not necessary to go there for such a purpose, and on leaving Perth, the partner on board told the master to go to Tin Sing. They then touched at various places in Australia and elsewhere. Semble, that this was a deviation. Moore v. Graham, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 229.

VII. Premiums.

Interim Receipt for Premium—Where it Renders Insurer Liable.]—Where an insurance company gave an insurance broker an interim receipt for the premium of insurance, which receipt purported to have the effect of a policy until the policy was issued, and the premium was not, in fact, paid; but it was proved that the company was in the habit of giving credit to brokers, Held that the liability of the company was complete. Moore v. Graham, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 229.

VIII. Barratry.

When a Bar to Action on Policy.]—A barratrous abandonment of the voyage by the master, instigated by a member of the firm owning goods insured for the voyage, although the intention to commit such barratry was not manifested, and could not be determined till a date after the date of an order nisi sequestrating the firm's estate, will debar the official assignee of the firm from recovering the amount insured. Moore v. Graham, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 229.

Action for Loss by—Who May and Who May Not Maintain.]—The assignee of an insolvent firm cannot maintain an action upon a contract of insurance effected by the firm where the loss, the subject of the action, was caused by barratry of the master, who was instigated thereto by a partner in the firm. Ibid, p., 232.

IX. Actions on Policies.

Action—Plea—When Bad.]—A marine policy contained a clause as follows:—"Claims for losses or average to be payable by the company at three months after settlement of the same." On action by the insured the declaration averred, inter alia, "That all conditions had been fulfilled, and all things happened to enable the plaintiffs to be paid." The defendants pleaded "That three months after settlement of the claim of the plaintiffs for the said alleged loss had not elapsed before suit." Held, on demurrer, that it was bad, for not stating affirmatively the settlement, or facts dispensing with the settlement; and judgment for plaintiffs. Clough v. Hopkins, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 55.

Action on Policy—Declaration—Exceptions to Liability.]—If, in a policy of insurance, the exceptions to the company's liability form a substantial part of the contract, a declaration on the policy must negative the exceptions. Osborne v. Southern Insurance Company, 1 A.J.R, 160.

"Burning"—Question for Jury.]—In an action on a policy of insurance upon goods loaded on a ship for a voyage free from average unless general, or the ship be "burnt, sunk, or stranded," it appeared that part of the goods had been damaged by spontaneous combustion, and that part of the ship bore marks of burning. Held that the question whether the ship was "burnt" was one for the jury. Service v. Mercantile Marine Insurance Company of South Australia, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 436.

INTEREST.

On Judgment.]—A defendant having obtained leave to appeal to the Privy Council on paying into Court the amount of the judgment and one year's interest, the appeal was kept pending for two and a-half years, and then allowed to lapse for want of prosecution. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to issue execution for the interest which had accrued from the expiration of the year for which it had been paid into Court till the date of the arrival of the certificate from the Privy Council that the appeal had lapsed. Smart v. O'Callaghan, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 448.

INTERPLEADER.

In What Cases—Shareholder in a Company—Suit to Compel Registration.]—The benefits of interpleader are confined to cases where actions have actually been commenced against the stakeholder, or legal proceedings have been threatened by adverse parties, and do not extend to a case where the plaintiff only has proceeded against a company, and where all that the other party claiming to interplead had done was to write to the manager of company requesting him not to deal with the shares. Eddy v. Working Miners' Gold Mining Company, 2 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 110.

"Common Law Procedure Statute," Sec. 189—Defendant Taking an Indemnity From a Claimant.]—S. had goods deposited for custody in his bonded stores. The first purchasers of the goods failed, and then the vendor served upon S. a notice to stop delivery, containing also an undertaking to indemnify S. S. did not reject the indemnity within a reasonable time. An ultimate purchaser sued S. for the goods. Held that S. was not, under the circumstances, entitled to an interpleader order. Smythers v. Stewart, 5 A.J.R., 139.

Interpleader Summons—"Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," No. 267, Sec 121.]—C. obtained a justice's order, October 30th, for payment of money owing him by B., and G., a constable, seized B.'s goods under a warrant to execute the order, and sold them. B. had, on October 19th, executed a bill of sale of these goods to McG., and McG. claimed the proceeds of the goods from G. G. then took out an interpleader summons. The justices in petty sessions awarded that C. should pay McG. the value of the goods. Held, on appeal, that Sec. 121 makes the constable a stakeholder, but that as soon as he voluntarily parts with the goods he ceases to be a stakeholder, and that the justices should have dismissed the summons. Appeal allowed. Summons below dismissed. Cousens v. McGee, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 29.

Summary Determination—Largeness of Amount—"Common Law Procedure Statute 1865."]—The "Common Law Procedure Statute 1865" is silent as to the amount on which the jurisdiction of the Judge upon an interpleader summons in Chambers to determine the matter on its merits in a summary way depends, and no definite limit is fixed. The matter is one for the discretion of the Judge, and that having been exercised the Court will not interfere unless it appears clearly that the Judge was mistaken or misled. Carter v. Sternberg, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 33; 5 A.L.T, 176.

Interpleader Summons Before Justices—Nearest Court—Act No. 565, Sec. 15—How Nearness of Access Determined.]—Regina v. Kavanagh, ex parte Comrie, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 179; 2 A.L.T., 7, post under JUSTICE OF PEACE—Procedure on Summary Jurisdiction.

Amendment—Consent Order—Mistake.]—In an interpleader summons an order was made by consent that "the Sheriff do withdraw from possession," and that J., the trustee under a deed of settlement made by the execution debtor (M.,) should be allowed his claim. It appeared that the words "that the claimant's claim be allowed" were not noticed by the town agent of W.'s solicitor—W. being the execution creditor. W. brought a bill in equity seeking to set the deed aside when the order was set up by the answer as a defence. On a summons to amend the order by striking out the words "that the claimant's claim be allowed," Held that as both parties saw the order and consented to it, and as a considerable time elapsed before the application was made for amendment, the application could not be allowed; that no amendment to the effect "without prejudice to any equity suit" could be allowed, as the equity suit did not appear to be in the contemplation of both parties. Williamson v. M'Ravey, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 150; 3 A.L.T., 5.

Motion to Put Matter in Course of Inquiry—Payment into Court—Costs.]—B. effected an insurance on his life in the office of the plaintiff society, and deposited it with a bank to secure an overdraft, and subsequently, by indenture, assigned it to C. and D., subject to the claim of the bank. Notice of this assignment was given to the insurance society. The bank also gave notice of its claim. B. died, and the defendant (his executrix) received the policy from the bank, but the bank refused to release their claim. The defendant then brought an action on the policy against the insurance society, when the insurance society instituted an interpleader suit after paying amount of policy moneys into Court, and obtained an ex parte injunction. Upon motion to put matter in course of inquiry for payment of plaintiff's costs, and for leave to pay in interest on the amount of the policy moneys which had been claimed by the defendant executrix in her action, Held that this was the proper course, but that interest should have been paid in with the principal; and though the insurance society was entitled to its general costs, it was not under the circumstances entitled to its costs for the injunction or for the motion. Australian Mutual Provident Society v. Broadbent, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 138.
